U.S. Congress.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

Congressional Record

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 76th CONGRESS
FIRST SESSION

VOLUME 84—PART 4

MARCH 30, 1939, TO APRIL 21, 1939
(PAGES 3503 TO 4640)

FEDERAL WORKS AGENCY
LIBRARY

UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE, WASHINGTON, 1939

AUTHENTICATED
U.S. GOVERNMENT
INFORMATION
GPO

Congressional Record

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 76TH CONGRESS
FIRST SESSION

VOLUME 84—PART 4

MARCH 30, 1939, TO APRIL 21, 1939
(PAGES 3503 TO 4610)

26590

Law
J
11
.R5

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

Congressional Record

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 76th CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION

SENATE

THURSDAY, MARCH 30, 1939

(Legislative day of Tuesday, March 28, 1939)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

The Chaplain, Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O God who spakest in the past unto our fathers at sundry times and in divers manners, who in these latter days still speaks, and whose word endures while all things change and pass away, reveal Thyself in the world about us, in the beauty of spring, in the mystery of earth and sky, in the silence of the lonely hills, and in every sacrament of Nature. Speak to us through Thine incarnate Word, revealing the glory of the Father full of grace and truth, teaching judgment to the meek, whispering divine secrets to the pure in heart, and entering in at lowly doors to fill the house with music and the chambers of discontent with peace.

Bless every citizen of our beloved country, those who serve conspicuously, those in life's quiet corners, even those who sometimes serve though they only seem to stand and wait, and help us all so to learn the lesson of the passion of our Lord that His word in us may become a prophecy of the fulfillment of God's love. We ask it in our Saviour's name and for His sake. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. BARKLEY, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Tuesday, March 28, 1939, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States submitting nominations were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. MINTON. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Bridges	Clark, Idaho	George
Andrews	Brown	Clark, Mo.	Gerry
Ashurst	Bulow	Connally	Gillette
Austin	Burke	Danaher	Glass
Bankhead	Byrd	Davis	Green
Barkley	Byrnes	Donahey	Guffey
Bilbo	Capper	Downey	Gurney
Bone	Caraway	Ellender	Harrison
Borah	Chavez	Frazier	Hatch
Hayden	Lundeen	Pittman	Taft
Herring	McKellar	Radcliffe	Thomas, Okla.
Holman	McNary	Reed	Thomas, Utah
Hughes	Maloney	Reynolds	Townsend
Johnson, Calif.	Miller	Russell	Truman
Johnson, Colo.	Minton	Schwartz	Tydings
King	Murray	Schwellenbach	Vandenberg
La Follette	Neely	Sheppard	Wagner
Lee	Norris	Shipstead	Wheeler
Lodge	O'Mahoney	Smathers	White
Logan	Overton	Smith	Wiley
Lucas	Pepper	Stewart

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HOLT] is detained from the Senate because of illness in his family.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN], and the Senator from New York [Mr. MEAD] are detained on important public business.

The Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS], and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] are unavoidably detained.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce that my colleague the junior Senator from Vermont [Mr. GIBSON] is necessarily absent.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-three Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

ANNIVERSARY OF BIRTH OF ROGER Q. MILLS

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, today is the one hundred and seventh anniversary of the birth of the late Senator Roger Q. Mills, of Texas, and his fellow townsmen and Texans generally are today holding a celebration in Corsicana, his home town.

I simply desire to make a brief reference to Senator Mills and his career.

Roger Q. Mills was for many years a Member of the House of Representatives, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of that body and author of the famous Mills bill of the early nineties. As a Member of the House Mr. Mills was one of the most prominent Democrats in the United States. Later he served one term in the United States Senate and distinguished himself here by his great ability and by his eminent and outstanding services. At the end of that term he retired to his estate at Corsicana, Tex., and spent in retirement the remaining years of a long and useful life. I simply desire to pay my tribute to his memory, to his character as a citizen, to his distinguished service, and to his ability as a public servant.

ESTIMATES OF APPROPRIATIONS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate communications from the President of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, estimates and supplemental estimates of appropriations, which, with the accompanying papers, were severally referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed, as follows:

For the Treasury Department, fiscal year 1939, amounting to $276,000 (S. Doc. No. 53);

For the Interior Department, fiscal year 1939, amounting to $9,115,000 (S. Doc. No. 52);

For the several executive departments and independent offices, to pay claims for damages to privately owned property, in the sum of $6,432.57, which have been considered and adjusted in accordance with law and requiring appropriations for their payment (S. Doc. No. 47);

For the payment of judgment rendered against the Government by the district court in Connecticut, amounting to $5,000 (S. Doc. No. 48);

For the payment of claim for damages by collision or damages incident to the operation of vessels of the Coast Guard, amounting to $866 (S. Doc. No. 49);

For the payment of list of judgments rendered by the Court of Claims, amounting to $36,707.18 (S. Doc. No. 50); and

For the payment of claims allowed by the General Accounting Office, in the sum of $90,065.21, under appropriations the balances of which have been carried to the surplus fund under the provisions of law (S. Doc. No. 51).

AMENDMENT OF ACT ESTABLISHING THE BUREAU OF ANIMAL INDUSTRY

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Acting Secretary of Agriculture, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation further to amend an act entitled "An act for the establishment of a Bureau of Animal Industry, to prevent the exportation of diseased cattle, and to provide means for the suppression and extirpation of pleuropneumonia and other contagious diseases among domestic animals," which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

LANDS AT FORMER FORT ARMISTEAD MILITARY RESERVATION

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Administrator of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation making inapplicable certain reversionary provisions in the act of March 4, 1923 (42 Stat. 1450), and a certain deed executed by the Secretary of War, in the matter of a lease to be entered into by the United States for the use of a part of the former Fort Armistead Military Reservation for air navigation purposes, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following joint resolution of the Legislature of Nevada, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency:

Memorializing Congress to enact such laws as will make provision for the exercise of some latitude or degree of discretion in reduction of certain obligations of borrowers from Federal farm banks

Whereas many farmers who have been able to qualify for loans from Federal farm banks under the provisions of the Federal law have been beset with drought, low prices, and other unexpected conditions that have made compliance with the terms of such loans impossible; and

Whereas as a result thereof many mortgages have been foreclosed, the borrowers losing their property, and the Government suffering a corresponding loss in the difference between the amount due and the amount realized; and

Whereas it was the purpose of the act authorizing loans by Federal farm banks to enable farmers and stockmen to retain their property and work out their salvation without loss to the Government; and

Whereas in a great percentage of cases where these mortgages have been foreclosed, the sales under foreclosure have been made to other parties for sums which might have been provided by the borrower, in order to reinstate his indebtedness or to have a remission of a portion of the indebtedness and retain his property; and

Whereas it is apparent that at the present time the Federal farm banks have no authority to reduce or scale this indebtedness: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly and the Senate of the State of Nevada, That Congress be memorialized to enact such legislation as may be necessary to give the Federal farm banks in the various districts a latitude of discretion within which they may settle, scale, or reduce the mortgage obligation of borrowers in appropriate cases to the extent that the purpose of the act creating these banks may be put into practical application; and be it further

Resolved, That our Senators and Representative in Washington be urged to use all honorable means to carry out the intent of this resolution for the benefit of thousands of home owners who are threatened with a loss of labor and effort of a lifetime; and be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of state of the State of Nevada be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to transmit properly certified copies of this resolution to our Senators and Representative in Washington and to the President of the United States Senate and to the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following joint resolution of the Legislature of Nevada, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads:

Assembly Joint Resolution 10

Memorializing Congress to restore to the State of Nevada the maximum allotment of funds heretofore appropriated for the construction of Federal-aid highways

Whereas the Congress of the United States did, in the Federal Appropriation Act of 1938, cut from the appropriation for 1940, of funds allotted to the State of Nevada for the construction of public highways, the sum of $934,580; and

Whereas Federal funds so allotted must be matched by State funds at the ratio of 86.0:13.99; and, therefore, because of said reduced Federal appropriation, approximately $1,200,000 less will be available to be expended by the State of Nevada for the construction of necessary portions of the State highway system; and

Whereas it is common knowledge that the availability of good roads and highways is essential not only for general economic welfare but also for the national defense; and

Whereas the President of the United States has proposed to the Congress an emergency defense program, and the House of Representatives of the Congress has passed a bill incorporating said program, and making an appropriation for the fulfillment thereof, in the sum of more than half a billion dollars, because it is believed that in Europe today "conditions are more volcanic than in 1914"; and

Whereas since by proclamation of the President of the United States, the Governor of the State of Nevada, and the mayor of Carson City, the current week has been set aside and designated as National Defense Week, the occasion is opportune for urging the construction of better roads to link together all sections of the country for greater national protection: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and Assembly of the State of Nevada jointly, That the State of Nevada does hereby memorialize the Congress of the United States to amend or modify its appropriations for 1940 to restore to the State of Nevada the full and maximum amount of the allotment heretofore appropriated for the construction of public highways in the State of Nevada through and with Federal aid and thereby to increase the appropriation for such purpose for 1940 by the sum of $934,580; and be it further

Resolved, That our Senators in the United States Senate and our Representative in Congress be requested to use all proper efforts to bring about the passage of legislation covering the matter above referred to; and be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of state of Nevada be, and he hereby is, directed to transmit properly certified copies of this resolution to the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives in Congress, and to each of our Senators and our Representative in Congress.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following joint resolution of the Legislature of Minnesota, which was referred to the Committee on Claims:

Joint Resolution 13

Joint resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States to repay certain funds exacted from the citizens of the State of Minnesota under the Agricultural Adjustment Act

Whereas the Congress of the United States, in session assembled in the year 1933, passed an act known as the Agricultural Adjustment Act, by which act the citizens of the State of Minnesota, as well as of other States, were required to and did contribute money on certain products raised by them for the purposes of the said Agricultural Adjustment Act; and

Whereas during the time that the said act was in force and effect there was paid into the internal-revenue department of the State of Minnesota by the citizens of said State the sum of $56,320,154.32, including a levy on wheat of $45,803,652.29, on hogs of $9,378,758.61, and on field corn of $30,653.89, making the total sum of $55,213,064.79, and various other sums on several other items, totaling in all $56,320,154.32; and

Whereas these sums above mentioned were exacted from the tillers of the soil of the State of Minnesota; and

Whereas although said act was declared unconstitutional and invalid by the Supreme Court of the United States no refundment whatsoever has been made or provided for to reimburse the citizens of the State of Minnesota and there being no means by which the amounts contributed by the various citizens of the State affected by the act in question can be ascertained; and

Whereas all of the citizens of the State of Minnesota will be substantially repaid if provision be made by the Congress of the United States to return to the treasury of the State of Minnesota the sums of money so exacted from the citizens of the State of Minnesota as hereinbefore set forth; and

Whereas the State of Minnesota has, under the Federal income-tax laws of the United States, contributed to the Federal Government the sum of $500,000,000, a sum far larger than the appropriations of the State of Minnesota for State government operation since the income-tax law went into effect, to wit, since 1915; and

Whereas the citizens of the State have, in the final analysis, borne the burden not only of the income taxes imposed by law but did further bear the burden of paying the taxes and moneys exacted from them under the provisions of the said Agricultural Adjustment Act: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate of the State of Minnesota (the house of representatives concurring therein), That the Congress of the United States appropriate the sum of at least $25,000,000 from the huge sums exacted from the citizens of the State of Minnesota under the said invalid act, the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and repay to the people of the State of Minnesota at least said sum of $25,000,000 by turning over said amount to the State treasury of the State of Minnesota and in this manner, either directly or indirectly benefit the citizens of the State of Minnesota, as it is right and proper that they should be benefited on account of the payments made by them as hereinbefore explained, payments that they were forced to make under an act of the Congress of the United States which the Supreme Court of the United States later declared to be unconstitutional; be it further

Resolved, That the Legislature of the State of Minnesota memorialize the Congress of the United States to make such provisions for repayment of said sum to the citizens of the State of Minnesota, the appropriation so provided for by the Congress of the United States to be used in relieving the financial distress of the State of Minnesota; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this petition be sent to the Honorable JOHN NANCE GARNER, President of the United States Senate, and to the Honorable WILLIAM BANKHEAD, Speaker of the House of Representatives, and to the Honorable HENRIK SHIPSTEAD and to the Honorable ERNEST LUNDEEN, United States Senators from the State of Minnesota, and to all of the Congressmen representing the State of Minnesota in Congress.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of Georgia, which was ordered to lie on the table:

Whereas the General Assembly of Georgia has never ratified the first 10 amendments to the Constitution of the United States of America, commonly known as the Bill of Rights; and

Whereas the said first 10 amendments to the Federal Constitution are fundamental and restrict certain powers of the National Government; and

Whereas it is fitting and proper that the Journals of Congress show that the people of Georgia, through their general assembly, are in sympathy with the Bill of Rights of the Federal Constitution: Therefore be it

Resolved by the senate (the house of representatives concurring), That the first 10 amendments to the United States Constitution be, and the same are hereby, ratified; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be dispatched to the Clerk of the United States House of Representatives and to the Secretary of the United States Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a cablegram from the speaker of the House of Representatives of Puerto Rico, which was ordered to lie on the table, as follows:

SAN JUAN, P. R., March 28, 1939.

Hon. JOHN N. GARNER,
President of the Senate, Washington, D. C.:

The House of Representatives of Puerto Rico unanimously resolved yesterday to convey our gratitude to Senator KING for announcing that he would ask for reconsideration of sugar bill passed by upper House when he learned that the same will make still more serious the situation of our greatly impaired Puerto Rican finances. The house of representatives, over which I preside, likewise resolved to appeal to spirit of justice of all Members of upper House, and trust that final action will be in accord with spirit of justice that characterize Nation in which we have so much faith.

MIGUEL A. GARCIA MENDEZ, Speaker.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a joint resolution of the Legislature of Wisconsin favoring the enactment of the so-called Agricultural Equality Act (S. 570), which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

(See joint resolution printed in full when presented today by Mr. WILEY.)

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a joint resolution of the Legislature of Wisconsin favoring a higher tariff on dairy products, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

(See joint resolution printed in full when presented today by Mr. WILEY.)

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a resolution of the Michigan State Joint Council, Utility Workers Organizing Committee, C. I. O., of Saginaw, Mich., favoring the allotment of sufficient funds to continue the investigation of the subcommittee of the Committee on Education and Labor investigating violations of civil liberties, etc., which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution of members of the Woman's Alliance of All Souls Unitarian Church, Santa Monica, Calif., favoring the enactment of House bill 1813, providing Federal aid toward the education of physically handicapped children, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution of Local G–1449, Workers Alliance of Washington, Pinehurst, Wash., protesting against amendment of the National Labor Relations Act, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution of the executive committee of New York (N. Y.) Typographical Union No. 6, protesting against amendment of the National Labor Relations Act at the present session of Congress, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution of the board of aldermen, approved by the mayor, of Chelsea, Mass., favoring abrogation of the reciprocal-trade treaty between Czechoslovakia and the United States, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also laid before the Senate a letter from James R. Allen, of Wilmington, Del., relative to the Works Progress Administration, which was referred to the Special Committee to Investigate Unemployment and Relief.

Mr. CAPPER presented resolutions of Caldwell Camp No. 962 and Osborne Camp No. 326 of the Royal Neighbors of America, both in the State of Kansas, favoring the enactment of legislation exempting fraternal societies from the operation of the social-security system, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. LUCAS presented a resolution of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Buda, Ill., favoring the enactment of Senate bill 280, relative to block-booking and blind-selling of motion-picture films, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of the State of Illinois, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the advertising of alcoholic beverages by press and radio, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I have received several petitions, signed by many citizens of the State of New Mexico, asking action on bills pending before Congress relating to the prohibition of the advertising of alcoholic beverages through the press and the radio. I ask that these petitions be referred to the committee considering the bills.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the petitions will be received and referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. BYRD presented petitions of sundry citizens of the State of Virginia praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the advertising of alcoholic beverages by press and radio, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mrs. CARAWAY presented petitions of sundry citizens of the State of Arkansas praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the advertising of alcoholic beverages by press and radio, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. HERRING presented petitions of sundry citizens of the State of Iowa praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the advertising of alcoholic beverages by press and radio, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. HUGHES presented petitions of sundry citizens of the State of Delaware praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the advertising of alcoholic beverages by press and radio, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. RUSSELL presented petitions of sundry citizens of the State of Georgia praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the advertising of alcoholic beverages by press and radio, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. VANDENBERG presented petitions of sundry citizens of the State of Michigan praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the advertising of alcoholic beverages by press and radio, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. WILEY presented the following joint resolution of the Legislature of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

Joint Resolution 33, A

Joint resolution memorializing Congress to pass the pending "Agricultural Equality Act"

Whereas for several years, with slight exception, the return to the producer for farm products has been less than the cost of production, which has left the farmer without purchasing power in the face of many needs; and

Whereas it is agreed by many economists and other thinking people that the well-being of the farmer is the criterion of the Nation's prosperity; and

Whereas there is now pending in the Congress of the United States a measure known as bill S. 570 or the Agricultural Equality Act of 1939; and

Whereas this bill provides for regulating the world market on agricultural commodities by imposing duties on imports and manipulating exports on surpluses in a manner that will assure the producer of farm products a price therefor equal to the cost of production price of such products; and

Whereas the 18 United States Senators who introduced this bill are unanimously of the belief that the plan proposed will not only assure an abundant and permanent supply of such products by securing to the producers a minimum price of not less than the cost of production, but that when such prices are made a reality the general welfare of the entire country will be promoted thereby: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the assembly (the senate concurring), That this legislature respectfully memorializes the Congress of the United States to enact into the law the said bill S. 570; and be it further

Resolved, That properly attested copies of this resolution be sent to the President of the United States, to both Houses of Congress, and to each Wisconsin Member thereof.

Mr. WILEY also presented the following joint resolution of the Legislature of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on Finance:

Joint Resolution 21, A

Joint resolution memorializing Congress for higher tariff on dairy products

Whereas the Statistical Abstract of the United States for the year 1937 lists the following figures for imports of dairy products into the United States for the year of 1936:

Total value of all dairy products imported into the United States		$16,103,000
Amount of dairy imports into the United States:
Butter	pounds	9,874,000
Casein or lactarene	do	16,209,000
Swiss cheese	do	8,029,000
Other cheese	do	51,820,000
Milk, condensed and evaporated	do	2,245,000
Dried and malted milk	do	24,584,000
Cream	gallons	44,000
Milk	do	67,000

Whereas thousands of farmers in various sections of the United States depend mostly on dairying for a living; and

Whereas it is evident from the foregoing figures that farmers in other countries are taking away the market of the American dairy farmer; and

Whereas the present tariff on dairy products is ineffective to prevent the foreign farmer with his cheap production from selling dairy products in the United States in ruinous competition with the American dairy farmer: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the assembly (the senate concurring), That the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin hereby respectfully memorializes the Congress of the United States to place a tariff on dairy products sufficiently high to protect the American dairy farmers against foreign competition; be it further

Resolved, That properly attested copies of this resolution be transmitted to both Houses of Congress and to each Wisconsin Member thereof.

JOHN NANCE GARNER

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD and read by the clerk from the desk a concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 26) adopted by a unanimous vote of the State Senate of Texas and the House of Representatives of that State. It relates to the Vice President of the United States, a very distinguished, a very able, and an outstanding citizen.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the concurrent resolution will be read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Senate Concurrent Resolution 26

Whereas the time is not far distant when the National Democratic Party will put in motion the machinery for the selection of its Presidential nominee in the 1940 general election; and

Whereas Texas was formerly an independent republic, and merged its destinies with the United States of America and is the only State in the Union which has this distinction; and

Whereas the Honorable JOHN NANCE GARNER, a native Texan, has served long and ably in the National Congress of the United States, as a Member from a Texas district and as the Presiding Officer of both the House and Senate of said National Congress, a distinction that comes to but very few men; and

Whereas by repeated tests of legislative and administrative capacity and ability, said JOHN NANCE GARNER has fully and convincingly demonstrated his statesmanship and grasp of national affairs; and

Whereas his ability has been recognized in each and every one of the other 47 States of the American Union as well as in his own State: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate of Texas (the house concurring), That the said JOHN NANCE GARNER is hereby endorsed and put forward as a candidate for the nomination of the National Democratic Party for the high office of President of the United States, which we believe he would fill with ability and distinction, and that we call on fellow Democrats in all of the States of the Union to instruct their delegates to the 1940 National Democratic Convention to vote for the nomination of the said JOHN NANCE GARNER as the candidate of the National Democratic Party for the Presidency of the United States at the 1940 general election.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I am very glad that my colleague has presented the concurrent resolution, and desire to say that I am in hearty sympathy with it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The concurrent resolution will lie on the table.

TAXES ON CERTAIN VEGETABLE OILS—LETTER FROM THE PRESIDENT

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a letter received by me this morning from the President of the United States, relating to the amendments increasing the taxes on certain vegetable oils imported into this country, and giving his views as to the effect of these amendments on our reciprocal trade agreements program, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, March 29, 1939.

MY DEAR SENATOR HARRISON: I feel impelled to write to you in regard to certain amendments now under consideration before your committee which would amend H. R. 3790, a bill which deals with the important and entirely separate subject of reciprocal taxation of incomes of Federal and State employees. These amendments would raise to new heights the taxes—in effect tariffs—on many imported fats and oils. I am addressing this letter to you because the amendments have been referred to the committee of which you are the chairman.

I, of course, know that the Senators who introduced these amendments acted in good faith. But there should be no illusion about the vital importance of the issue the amendments present. We are not dealing here with bona fide excise taxes for revenue purposes, but with what in purpose and effect are tariffs of the embargo variety. The amendments run directly counter to the provisions of reciprocal-trade agreements already in force with such important countries as the United Kingdom, Canada, the Netherlands, and Brazil. If enacted, they would destroy or at the very least seriously impair these agreements under which we have obtained concessions benefiting more than a quarter of a billion dollars worth of American exports of agricultural products alone, and they would hamper our efforts to conclude additional trade agreements in the interest of American agriculture and industry. The issue is clear. It is whether to sustain our present policy or to return now, or during the pendency of the Trade Agreements Act to the embargo tariff policy exemplified by the disastrous Hawley-Smoot Tariff Act.

The private interests who seek to benefit from the amendments apparently ignore the fact that on the basis of 1938 import values the rates as they now stand have an ad valorem equivalent of 89 percent in the case of palm oil, 96 percent on edible palm-kernel oil, and 65 percent on inedible palm-kernel oil. Under the proposed amendments these ad valorem equivalents would be increased to 149 percent, 151 percent, and 108 percent, respectively. In the place of present rates on wool grease, ranging from 43 percent to 93 percent, the proposals would substitute rates of from 60 percent to 146 percent. By and large these proposals call for 50 percent increases over the already high rates. The resulting rates could be described by no other word than "embargoes." If one industry is thus to receive an embargo, all will demand it. Then other nations will inevitably impose embargoes on our exports.

At first the proposals called for these tax increases immediately, which would have meant outright violations of our trade agreements with the United Kingdom, Canada, the Netherlands, and Brazil. Now it is suggested that the effect of the conflicting tax increases shall be postponed until the four agreements mentioned, which are of such great value to American agriculture and industry, can be modified and terminated at the earliest possible moment under the terms of those agreements. Let no one be lulled into thinking that this modification of the amendments would remove the basic conflict between them and the trade-agreements program. The real issue would remain exactly the same. All this modification means is that we would not be convicted of violating outright four of our international agreements; we would still inevitably lose a substantial part of the benefits of these important agreements and would run the grave risk of losing all of them.

I should like every farmer, every producer of surpluses in this country, everyone in all walks of life, to know how great the cost would be if these amendments should be adopted. I should like them to know that the enactment of these amendments would seriously jeopardize trade agreements by means of which concessions have been obtained on more than a quarter of a billion dollars worth of our agricultural exports and on several hundreds of millions of dollars worth of our exports of factory and other products. I should like them to know that these amendments, if passed, would sooner or later expose this huge volume of trade to the danger of retaliatory trade restrictions in the countries adversely affected. I should like them to know that these amendments would hamper our efforts to obtain additional benefits for our agricultural and industrial producers. And I should like them to know that the power for leadership of this country in the great task of rebuilding international trade under the principles of equality and mutual profit, without which full and stable economic recovery in this country and in other countries cannot be realized, would be virtually destroyed.

These amendments would seriously undermine a program which already has proven of great benefit to American agriculture, notwithstanding the depressed state of our foreign market. Our exports of farm products to trade-agreement countries increased by 55 percent in the fiscal year 1937–38 over 1935–36. Our exports of farm products to non-trade-agreement countries increased by only 3 percent over the same period. This comparison, striking as it is, does not take into account the agricultural benefits obtained recently in the agreement with the United Kingdom or in the new agreement with Canada. In 1936, the United Kingdom alone bought one-third of the agricultural products we sold abroad. Concessions covering 92 percent of those purchases were obtained in the agreement, effective January 1 of this year. In other words, we have obtained in one single trade agreement improved or more stable markets for nearly a third of our total agricultural exports, including such key products as wheat, cotton, corn, lard, and tobacco.

Our trade agreements with 19 foreign countries have done more for American agriculture than to improve and stabilize foreign markets for many of our agricultural products. They have increased purchasing power in the domestic market for our farm crops. When, for example, our exports of automobiles to Brazil under a trade-agreement concession increase, as they have done, by $4,500,000, there is more purchasing power available for our workers to buy meat, butter, milk, eggs, fruits, and vegetables. Our total exports to 17 agreement countries in the 2-year period 1937–38 were greater in value by 61.2 percent than the average for the preagreement period 1934–35, while exports to all other countries increased by an average of only 37.9.

Such tariff or tax increases, when proposed, obviously should be treated as amendments of existing tariff legislation and should receive the kind of consideration that would be given to specific tariff legislation. This would include study of the proposals on their own merits by experts of the Tariff Commission and other agencies of the Government and by the appropriate committees of the Congress, as elements in the general tariff structure and in relation to the country's commercial policy as a whole.

The inclusion of tariff revisions as parts of or as riders on other legislation creates a difficult situation for the Congress and a much more difficult situation for the Executive. It imposes upon the President the necessity of accepting tariff rate revisions which he may consider contrary to the public interest in order to preserve the main legislation. His only alternative is to veto the whole act and thereby delay and perhaps endanger the desirable and major portions of the act. In this case the adoption of the amendments would make it my clear duty to veto H. R. 3790, however meritorious the bill may be.

Let me repeat, the trade-agreements program is an essential part of our general program for economic recovery in this country. It is also, particularly at this critical stage of world affairs, a vital part of our foreign policy. Attacks on the trade-agreements program such as that represented by this new drive for embargo tariffs on fats and oils are, therefore, attacks on our efforts to attain full prosperity at home and to promote economic disarmament and peaceful relations throughout the world.

Very sincerely yours,

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

The Honorable PAT HARRISON,
Chairman, Senate Finance Committee,
United States Senate.

PEOPLE'S PETITION FOR PEACE LEGISLATION

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, the People's Petition for Peace Legislation, to which was attached the signatures of 171,950 Americans from all parts of the United States, was presented to me yesterday by the American League for Peace and Democracy, represented by Rev. Ernest De Bordenave, Rev. William H. Jernagin, Mildred Riemer, Harry Lamberton, and Henry Lehmann. The petition reads as follows:

We, the undersigned Americans—part of the 90 percent of the population of the world who want to live in peace—hereby request congressional consideration of the contribution to be made to peace through a foreign policy based on:

1. The distinction between aggressors and their victims.
2. The necessity of denying our economic resources to the war-making, treaty-breaking aggressors and opening them up to their victims under conditions designed to remove the risk of our being drawn into war.
3. The necessity for concerted action to quarantine the aggressors.

The delegation explained that these signatures had been brought from all over the country to the congress of the American League for Peace and Democracy, held in Washington, D. C., in January of this year. That congress, attended by delegates representing seven and one-half million Americans, embodied the three points of the petition in their program for 1939.

Since the question of neutrality and peace legislation is now to be considered by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the American League for Peace and Democracy has asked that I present the petition to the Senate as an indication of the expression of all these persons on this subject. I hereby do so, and request that the petition be referred by the Chair to the Foreign Relations Committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the petition presented by the Senator from Utah will be received and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4425) to provide for reorganizing agencies of the Government, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolution, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 5269. An act making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture and for the Farm Credit Administration for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes;

H. R. 5427. An act making appropriations for the Labor Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes; and

H. J. Res. 250. Joint resolution making an additional appropriation for the fiscal year 1939 for expenditure by the United States Employees' Compensation Commission in accordance with section 16 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

The message further announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the enrolled bill (H. R. 4425) to provide for reorganizing agencies of the Government, and for other purposes, and it was signed by the President pro tempore.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. HATCH, from the Committee on Privileges and Elections, to which was referred the bill (S. 1871) to prevent pernicious political activities, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 221) thereon.

He also, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, to which was referred the bill (S. 1569) to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 226) thereon.

Mr. GEORGE, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 3655) to amend the act entitled "An act for the grading and classification of clerks in the Foreign Service of the United States of America, and providing compensation therefor," approved February 23, 1931, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 222) thereon.

Mr. PITTMAN, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 590) for the relief of Macey N. Bevan, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 223) thereon.

Mr. CONNALLY, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 534) for the relief of Hallie H. Woods, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 224) thereon.

Mr. BURKE, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 919) for the relief of William Boyer, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 225) thereon.

Mr. ELLENDER, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 1164) for the relief of Nadine Sanders, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 228) thereon.

Mr. TOWNSEND, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

H. R. 2064. A bill for the relief of Allen L. Abshier, Verne G. Adams, Oliver D. Chattin, William K. Heath, and Harry B. Jennings (Rept. No. 229); and

H. R. 2073. A bill to allow credit in the accounts of certain former disbursing officers of the Veterans' Administration, and for other purposes (Rept. No. 230).

Mr. SMATHERS, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 289) for the relief of the West Virginia Co., reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 231) thereon.

Mr. SCHWARTZ, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 431) for the relief of Mrs. Quitman Smith, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 232) thereon.

Mr. HUGHES, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 1882) for the relief of Thomas A. Ross, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 233) thereon.

Mr. LOGAN, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each with an amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 1339. A bill for the relief of Grace S. Taylor (Rept. No. 235); and

S. 1945. A bill conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear and determine the claim of the Mack Copper Co. (Rept. No. 227).

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, to which was referred the bill (S. 1109) to amend the act entitled "An act to aid the several States in making, or for having made, certain toll bridges on the system of Federal-aid highways free bridges, and for other purposes," by providing that funds available under such act may be used to match regular and secondary Federal-aid road funds, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 236) thereon.

Mr. BANKHEAD, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, to which was referred the bill (S. 1514) providing in the interest of the general welfare for an appropriate reduction of the burdensome oversupply of American cotton and for further encouragement of soil conservation and soil improvement by making payments in kind in cotton, and for other purposes, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 237) thereon.

Mr. HARRISON, from the Committee on Finance, to which was referred the bill (S. 1899) to provide for the detail of a commissioned medical officer of the Public Health Service to serve as assistant to the Surgeon General, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 238) thereon.

Mr. GEORGE, from the Committee on Finance, to which was referred the bill (S. 1088) to authorize the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to exchange certain property located at Veterans' Administration Facility, Tuskegee, Ala., title to which is now vested in the United States, for certain property of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 239) thereon.

Mr. O'MAHONEY, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 90) to amend the joint resolution approved June 16, 1938, entitled "Joint resolution to create a Temporary National Economic Committee," reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 240) thereon.

REGULATION OF COMMERCE IN AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry I report back favorably, with amendments, the bill (S. 570) to regulate interstate and foreign commerce in agricultural products; to prevent unfair competition; to provide for the orderly marketing of such products; to promote the general welfare by assuring an abundant and permanent supply of such products by securing to the producers a minimum price of not less than cost of production; and for other purposes. I ask unanimous consent that I may later file a written report on the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered. The bill will be received and placed on the calendar.

(Mr. FRAZIER subsequently submitted a report (No. 234) to accompany the foregoing bill.)

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED

Mrs. CARAWAY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills:

On March 28, 1939:

S. 1301. An act to create the office of military secretary to the General of the Armies of the United States of America, with the rank of colonel, and for other purposes.

On March 29, 1939:

S. 316. An act to authorize and direct the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to reappoint David R. Thompson and Ralph S. Warner as members of the Metropolitan Police Department of the District of Columbia;

S. 794. An act relating to banking, banks, and trust companies in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes;

S. 1123. An act to amend paragraph 57 of section 8 of the act entitled "An act making appropriations to provide for the expenses of the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, and for other purposes," approved March 4, 1913;

S. 1125. An act to provide for the appointment of research assistants in the public schools of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes;

S. 1126. An act to provide alternative methods of enforcement of orders, rules, and regulations of the Joint Board and of the Public Utilities Commission of the District of Columbia;

S. 1129. An act to amend paragraphs 31 and 33 of an act entitled "An act to amend section 7 of an act entitled 'An act making appropriations to provide for the government of the District of Columbia for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, and for other purposes,' approved July 1, 1902, and for other purposes," approved July 1, 1932;

S. 1130. An act to amend Public Law No. 111, Sixty-sixth Congress, entitled "An act for the retirement of public-school teachers in the District of Columbia"; and

S. 1295. An act to amend section 9, article V, of an act known as "An act to amend the act entitled 'An act to fix and regulate the salaries of teachers, school officers, and other employees of the Board of Education of the District of Columbia,' approved June 20, 1906, as amended, and for other purposes."

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED

Bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. JOHNSON of California:

S. 1983. A bill for the relief of Cecil Ray Murphy; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

S. 1984. A bill for the relief of Indian war veterans who were discharged from the Army because of minority or misrepresentation of age; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. McKELLAR:

S. 1985. A bill to extend the time within which the States may cause toll bridges to be made free in order to qualify for aid under the act of August 14, 1937; to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

By Mr. VANDENBERG:

S. 1986. A bill for the relief of the State of Michigan (with an accompanying paper); to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. LOGAN:

S. 1987. A bill for the relief of J. S. Melloan and the Boston Milling Co.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. GILLETTE:

S. 1988. A bill authorizing the city of Keokuk, Iowa, to purchase, construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Keokuk, Iowa; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. TRUMAN:

S. 1989 (by request). A bill to provide for the alteration of certain bridges over navigable waters of the United States, for the apportionment of the cost of such alterations between the United States and the owners of such bridges, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce.

S. 1990 (by request). A bill relating to the transportation by railroad of persons and property for or on behalf of the United States; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

By Mr. MINTON:

S. 1991. A bill to authorize the appointment and retirement of William H. Crap as a lieutenant, Supply Corps, United States Navy (with an accompanying paper); to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

S. 1992. A bill for the relief of George G. Waldrop; and

S. 1993. A bill to amend section 8 of the National Defense Act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. MINTON (for himself and Mr. VAN NUYS):

S. 1994. A bill for the relief of W. B. Engle; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WILEY:

S. 1995. A bill for the relief of Anna Soucek; to the Committee on Immigration.

By Mr. McNARY:

S. 1996. A bill to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Columbia River at Astoria, Clatsop County, Oreg.; to the Committee on Commerce.

S. 1997. A bill granting an increase of pension to Helen M. Lamar; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WAGNER:

S. 1998. A bill for the relief of Ernestine Huber Neuheller; to the Committee on Immigration.

S. 1999. A bill granting a pension to Dennis Smith; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

S. 2000. A bill authorizing an appropriation for the construction of an air mine; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma:

S. 2001 (by request). A bill for the relief of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Tribes of Indians of Oklahoma; and

S. 2002 (by request). A bill to authorize the sale and conveyance of certain property of the estate of Jackson Barnett, deceased Creek Indian; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. BYRD:

S. 2003. A bill for the relief of the Priest Lumber Co., Inc.; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 2004. A bill to extend the time for filing claims for refunds of amounts collected under the Agricultural Adjustment Act; to the Committee on Finance.

S. 2005. A bill providing for a survey, with preliminary estimates of cost, for the proposed construction of railroad and automobile-truck tunnels across the Potomac River; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

S. 2006. A bill to confer jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claims of Herbert R. W. Lauterbach and others for overtime labor performed at the Norfolk Navy Yard, Portsmouth, Va., in excess of the legal day of 8 hours; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Mr. THOMAS of Utah:

S. 2007. A bill to provide for the establishment of a reservoir on Bear River, Utah, for the maintenance of water levels in the Bear River Migratory Bird Refuge, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

S. 2008. A bill to amend the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Mr. WHEELER (for himself and Mr. TRUMAN):

S. 2009. A bill to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, by extending its application to additional types of carriers and transportation, and modifying certain provisions thereof, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

By Mr. KING:

S. 2010. A bill to authorize the board of directors of the Columbia Institution for the Deaf to dedicate a portion of Mount Olivet Road NE., and to exchange certain lands with the Secretary of the Interior, to dispose of other lands, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

S. 2011. A bill to provide for allocation of funds to the States to provide relief and work relief; to the Special Committee to Investigate Unemployment and Relief.

S. 2012. A bill to provide for the widening of Wisconsin Avenue in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. CAPPER:

S. 2013. A bill to amend the Code of the District of Columbia to provide for the organization and regulation of cooperative associations, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. LUCAS:

S. 2014. A bill granting a pension to Oscar Hinson; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

S. 2015. A bill for the relief of Richard L. Byrd; to the Committee on Claims.

S. J. Res. 107. Joint resolution authorizing the President of the United States to award the Congressional Medal of Honor to Dr. Anita Newcomb McGee; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BARKLEY:

S. J. Res. 108. Joint resolution amending the joint resolution providing for the construction and maintenance of a National Gallery of Art, approved March 24, 1937; to the Committee on the Library.

HOUSE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED

The following bills and joint resolution were severally read twice by their titles and referred to the Committee on Appropriations:

H. R. 5269. An act making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture and for the Farm Credit Administration for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes;

H. R. 5427. An act making appropriations for the Labor Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes; and

H. J. Res. 250. Joint resolution making an additional appropriation for the fiscal year 1939 for expenditure by the United States Employees' Compensation Commission in accordance with section 16 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938.

AMENDMENT RELATIVE TO TAXATION

Mr. CLARK of Missouri submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 3790) relating to the taxation of the compensation of public officers and employees, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY ACT—AMENDMENTS

Mr. KING submitted an amendment, and Mr. BRIDGES submitted four amendments, intended to be proposed by them, respectively, to the bill (S. 1796) to amend the Tennessee Valley Authority Act of 1933, which were severally ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

FOUR-HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY OF EXPLORATIONS OF FRANCISCO VASQUEZ DE CORONADO

Mr. CHAVEZ (for himself and Mr. HATCH) submitted an amendment in the nature of a substitute intended to be proposed by them to the bill (S. 535) authorizing Federal participation in the commemoration and observance of the four-hundredth anniversary of the explorations of Francisco Vasquez de Coronado, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed.

AMENDMENTS TO AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. BANKHEAD (for himself and Mr. RUSSELL) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by them to House bill 5269, the Agricultural Department appropriation bill, 1940, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed, as follows:

At an appropriate place in the bill, to insert the following section:

"PARITY PAYMENTS

"To enable the Secretary of Agriculture to make parity payments to producers of wheat, cotton, corn (in the commercial corn-producing area), rice, and tobacco, pursuant to the provisions of section 303 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, $250,000,000: Provided, however, That, in expending the appropriation in this paragraph, the rate of payment with respect to any commodity shall not exceed the amount by which the average farm price, or the local rate, whichever is the higher, of the commodity is less than 75 percent of the parity price."

Mr. WILEY submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to House bill 5269, the Agricultural Department appropriation bill, 1940, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed, as follows:

At the proper place in the bill, to insert the following:

"DISPOSAL OF SURPLUS COMMODITIES

"To enable the Secretary of Agriculture to further carry out the provisions of section 32, as amended, of the act entitled 'An act to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and for other purposes,' approved August 24, 1935, and subject to all provisions of law relating to the expenditure of funds appropriated by such section, $100,000,000. Such sum shall be immediately available and shall be in addition to, and not in substitution for, other appropriations made by such section or for the purpose of such section: Provided, That not less than $50,000,000 of the funds herein made available shall be devoted to dairy products."

NATIONAL ECONOMY AND THE BANKING SYSTEM OF THE UNITED STATES

Mr. LOGAN submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 113), which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved, That 6,000 additional copies of Senate Document 23, current session, entitled "National Economy and the Banking System of the United States" be printed for the use of the Senate Document Room.

FEDERAL AND STATE INCOME-TAX LAWS—OPINIONS BY UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT (S. DOC. NO. 55)

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President, on Monday last the Supreme Court rendered an opinion which has far-reaching effect; in fact, it affects directly something over two or three million of our people. It is of such importance that I ask unanimous consent that the opinion be made a Senate document. The opinion is in the case of Mark Graves, John J. Merrill, and John P. Hennessy, as commissioners constituting the State Tax Commission of the State of New York, petitioners, against the people of the State of New York, upon the relation of James B. O'Keefe.

The majority opinion was rendered by Mr. Justice Stone, the concurring opinion by Mr. Justice Frankfurter, and the dissenting opinion was rendered by Mr. Justice Butler.

I also ask unanimous consent that there be included in the Senate document the opinion rendered in the case of the State Tax Commission of Utah et al., petitioners, against W. Q. Van Cott, rendered by Mr. Justice Black.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ANDREWS. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. I wonder if the Senator would object to having included in the Senate document the great case which preceded these cases, and probably broke the ground for the opinions to which the Senator has just referred? I refer to the case of Helvering against Gerhardt in Three Hundred and Third United States Reports, in which Mr. Justice Stone rendered the opinion holding that the employees of the Port Authority of New York were subject to the income tax laid by the Federal Government, and particularly the concurring opinion of Mr. Justice Black, who pointed out, it seems to me, the realistic basis upon which the doctrine of taxation of salaries, and so forth, must ultimately rest, and will finally rest, if other decisions go in the direction to which they now point. It is because of this exceptionally unique opinion of Mr. Justice Black concurring in the case of Helvering against Gerhardt that I ask the Senator if he will agree that the opinion in Helvering against Gerhardt be included in the Senate document.

Mr. ANDREWS. I have no objection to that being done. I was looking through the two opinions to which I first referred to see if the Helvering against Gerhardt case was analyzed in them, which perhaps would make inclusion of that case unnecessary.

Mr. MINTON. It is not analyzed in those cases, but it is very important to be read in relation to the doctrine that is handed down in the opinions to which the Senator has referred.

Mr. ANDREWS. I have no objection at all to that opinion being included in the same document.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the opinions in the cases mentioned will be printed as a Senate document.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES OF BILLS INTRODUCED TODAY

Mr. BARKLEY, from the Committee on the Library, to which was referred the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 108) amending the joint resolution providing for the construction and maintenance of a National Gallery of Art, approved March 24, 1937, reported it without amendment.

Mr. MCKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, to which was referred the bill (S. 1985) to extend the time within which the States may cause toll bridges to be made free in order to qualify for aid under the act of August 14, 1937, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 241) thereon.

GEORGE EDWIN ADAMSON

Mr. SHEPPARD. I ask unanimous consent that the Chair lay before the Senate, as in executive session, the nomination of Capt. George Edwin Adamson.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore, as in executive session, laid before the Senate the nomination of Capt. George Edwin Adamson, Quartermaster Corps, to be military secretary to the General of the Armies of the United States, with the rank of colonel.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I wish to ask for the confirmation of this nomination.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the nomination is confirmed.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I ask that the President be notified of the confirmation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the President will be notified.

RELIGIOUS LIBERTY—ARTICLE BY SENATOR DAVIS

[Mr. CAPPER asked and obtained leave to have printed in the Appendix an article by Senator DAVIS entitled "A Call for Religious Liberty," published in the current issue of Liberty magazine, which appears in the Appendix.]

INVOLVEMENT OF AMERICAN INTERESTS IN WORLD ACTIVITIES—ADDRESS BY SENATOR THOMAS OF UTAH

[Mr. SCHWELLENBACH asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a radio address on the subject To What Extent Are American Interests Involved in Present-Day World Activities? delivered by Senator THOMAS of Utah on March 28, 1939, under the auspices of the American Council Against Nazi Propaganda, which appears in the Appendix.]

MONETARY POWERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

[Mr. WAGNER asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD correspondence between himself and the Secretary of the Treasury relative to certain monetary powers of the Government, and the exercise of those powers, which appears in the Appendix.]

LABOR DISPUTE CONCILIATIONS

[Mr. THOMAS of Utah asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article on labor dispute conciliations, written by Mr. Ben H. Miller, and published in the Baltimore Evening Sun of March 21, 1939, which appears in the Appendix.]

TRADE WITH SPAIN—ARTICLE BY HARRY W. FRANTZ

[Mr. REYNOLDS asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article written by Harry W. Frantz, entitled "United States to Enter Race for Trade with Spain," published in the Times-Herald of Washington, D. C., Thursday, March 30, 1939, which appears in the Appendix.]

NEED OF MEMBERS OF CONGRESS FOR ADDITIONAL CLERICAL AND RESEARCH ASSISTANCE

[Mr. LOGAN asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article by David Lawrence, published in the Washington (D. C.) Evening Star of Tuesday, March 28, 1939, relative to the need of Members of Congress for additional clerical and research assistance, which appears in the Appendix.]

THE COTTON SURPLUS

[Mr. BRIDGES asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD editorials from the Baltimore Sun, the New York Herald Tribune, and the Philadelphia Inquirer, relative to the cotton surplus, which appear in the Appendix.]

TEXAS—ADDRESS BY RALPH D. PITTMAN

[Mr. WILEY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address entitled "Texas," delivered by Mr. Ralph D. Pittman before the Gyro Club at Washington, D. C., on March 29, 1939, which appears in the Appendix.]

STATE OF THE NATION—RESOLUTION OF PENNSYLVANIA HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—ADDRESS BY SENATOR GUFFEY

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD a copy of Resolution No. 14, passed by the Pennsylvania House of Representatives, inviting me to appear before that body, and the address I delivered in accordance therewith.

I ask that the resolution of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives and the address delivered by me in pursuance thereof lie on the table.

The resolution of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Resolution 14

The whole world is distressed and waring and following strange dogmas

Our own country continues in the grip of the severest economic depression and financial panic in our history

The federal administration by its domestic policy has engendered an unhealthy class consciousness within our borders

Secret diplomacy a policy strange to our Republic threatens to embroil our Nation in the dangerous and viscious disputes of Europe

The policy of reciprocal trade tariffs seem to build up our unemployment roles rather than spur trade

The dangerous "isms" of Europe appear to be fostered and encouraged by certain federal bureaus threatening the overthrow of our government

The whole New Deal has created the largest debt in our history makes no effort to balance its budgets and threatens inflation

The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania has a large interest in these problems and a great stake in the economic affairs of the United States therefore be it

RESOLVED That the Speaker of this House of Representatives be directed to communicate with the two United States Senators the Honorable Joseph F Guffey and the Honorable James J Davis the Keystone State's ambassadors to the seat of the federal government at Washington and invite them to appear together at an agreeable time before this House and give to its members a report of the state of the Nation to the end that Pennsylvania may be fully and authentically advised of the things which threaten our people and that this great Commonwealth may be the better guided in the formulation of a legislative policy that shall protect her best interests and the quicker relieve her distress.

The address delivered by Mr. GUFFEY, in response to the foregoing resolution, was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

ADDRESS BY HON. JOSEPH F. GUFFEY, OF PENNSYLVANIA, BEFORE THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA ON THE EVENING OF MONDAY, MARCH 27, 1939, IN RESPONSE TO HOUSE RESOLUTION NO. 14 OF THE SESSION OF 1939

Ladies and gentlemen of the House of Representatives, I wish to express my gratitude to your honorable body for affording me this opportunity to render a report on the problems of the Congress and their relationship to your own legislative program for our Commonwealth.

All of you are familiar with the reports given to Congress by the President of the United States, in which he outlines the major issues facing our Nation. These reports have been supplemented from time to time by numerous hearings, both public and private, before the various committees of the Senate and House. It is on the basis of Presidential messages and the information furnished at committee hearings that the Congress necessarily must base its actions.

Above all, the legislative bodies of the Nation, both in Washington and in the State capitals, from coast to coast, view with ever-increasing anxiety the steady advance in foreign lands of political principles alien to our American concepts of democracy.

Communism and fascism, both based upon the theory of the individual's subordination to the state, have gathered force and momentum during the years since the World War. They are dominant today in Russia, Germany, and Italy. They are contending against each other for domination in Spain. They lie at the root of the warfare that is still raging in China. They are beginning to play an important part in the affairs of our southern neighbors—Mexico and the republics of South America.

We fear, and with good reason, that the present state of affairs in Europe is such that any untoward incident may be sufficient to embroil the great powers in another World War. The very thought of such a conflict fills our American people with foreboding. They naturally fear, because of the economic interdependence of the nations of the world, that such a conflict inevitably will involve the United States.

There are some who dare to assert that the President has not been entirely frank and candid with the people in his foreign diplomacy; some people who profess to believe that secret negotiations have been under way to aline the United States with Great Britain and the other great democracies of the world in anticipation of a life-and-death struggle with the advancing dictatorships.

Nothing could be further from the truth. Nothing could be more typical of the numerous efforts that have been made, sometimes in malice and sometimes in ignorance, to cast doubt upon the policies adopted by the President of the United States. America may well feel gratified that its ship of state has at the helm a man not dedicated to the interests of the international financiers who bred war, not imbued with the old doctrine that the American flag follows the American dollar.

While President Roosevelt has firmly and resolutely protected our American nations in the war areas abroad, he has just as firmly and resolutely resisted all efforts of impassioned partisans to involve the United States in diplomatic incidents. There is no doubt in my mind that on more than one occasion his concern for the peace of this Nation has impelled him to act contrary to his own sympathies.

There is no foundation whatever to the repeated partisan cries that the national administration has been engaged in secret diplomacy contrary to the best interests of the Nation.

I make reference to this because the resolution extending the invitation for me to speak here flatly asserts that such "secret diplomacy" is being practiced. I need only mention that the former Republican Secretary of State, Hon. Henry Stimson, has clearly and unmistakably refuted these claims, and has upheld in the strongest terms the position taken by the President and Secretary Hull.

It should be obvious to everyone that in all diplomacy there are some crises which must be handled without fanfare. Everyone knows that no formal and binding agreements have been, or can be, made until they are publicly presented to and ratified by the Senate of the United States.

If I was surprised at the resolution of this House flatly asserting that "secret diplomacy" was a definite policy of the Roosevelt administration, I was even more amazed to find this House asserting that "the dangerous 'isms' of Europe appear to be fostered and encouraged by certain Federal bureaus threatening the overthrow of our Government." The mere suggestion that any Federal bureau is threatening the overthrow of our Government or fostering and encouraging alien political principles contrary to American traditions of government is so fantastic as to fall of its own weight.

I cannot think that any Member of this House would lend credence to such idle gossip, which has been repeatedly investigated and repeatedly found to be false. Nor is any refutation of the charge necessary, for no evidence of any kind whatsoever has been brought forward to support it.

I say flatly, and I want you to mark my words, that if dangerous alien "isms" gain ground in this Nation they will do it because of our failure—your failure and my failure and the failure of the American people—to meet the great economic problems that confront us today.

The seed of discontent does not grow until the soil is fertile. One grasping, avaricious employer who denies elementary justice to his workers, one State legislature unmindful of its duty to defend the rights of labor and agriculture and the average man, can do more to promote fascism or communism in this Nation than a whole army of agitators backed by all the gold in Moscow. Your resolution says that "the Federal administration by its domestic policy has engendered an unhealthy class consciousness within our borders." Such a statement is utter nonsense. Class consciousness does not arise from any Federal policy. It arises from wretched working conditions, from low pay and long hours, from unemployment and distress, from the hunger of women and children. It arises from the primary instinct of self-preservation. And it reached its peak, not under the administration of President Roosevelt but under the administration of Herbert Hoover, when this Nation was as close to class warfare and revolution as it has ever been in all its history. President Roosevelt, by his inspiring leadership, saved us from that ultimate disaster, and for that achievement of statesmanship we all owe him our undying gratitude.

If, on the other hand, your resolution means that the Federal administration, by its labor policies, has made the worker conscious of his dignity as a man and his rights as a citizen, then I am sure the administration will gladly plead guilty.

What policy, or what legislation, I ask, has brought about this so-called unhealthy class consciousness? The Wagner Act, that protects the fundamental right of labor to organize into unions and bargain collectively? The Wage and Hour Act, that establishes absolute minimum conditions for health and decency? The Social Security Act, that guarantees the worker against hunger and destitution in old age? The burden of proof, ladies and gentlemen, rests not upon the accused but upon the accuser.

The same applies, and with equal force, to the accusation that the policy of reciprocal-trade tariffs seems to build up our unemployment rolls rather than spur trade.

Without burdening you with figures, which are available in great detail in the United States Department of Commerce, I merely point out that the reciprocal-trade agreements have tremendously increased the dollar volume of American trading abroad, without proportionately increasing imports of manufactured goods. Through the trade-agreements program, employment in the United States has been increased and business activity stimulated.

We now approach, ladies and gentlemen, some of the fundamental questions raised in your resolution. The first is that our own country continues in the grip of the severest economic depression and financial crisis in our history. The second is that the whole New Deal has created the largest debt in our history, makes no effort to balance its Budgets, and threatens inflation.

Let us consider a few simple facts. Our country scraped bottom financially in 1929 as the logical outcome of policies followed by three successive Republican Presidents—Harding, Coolidge, and Hoover.

After the dizzy speculative inflation of that period there was a still dizzier descending spiral of deflation that almost wrecked the country. President Roosevelt stepped into the breach in the emergency and saved our country from bankruptcy. His emergency measures were met with loud acclaim by business, because business was scared to death. Those measures gained for this country the most precious thing in the world at the moment—time. They allowed time to proceed with the second phase of economic reconstruction, the reform of evil practices, the establishment of new safeguards to eliminate the factors responsible for our economic collapse.

You all know what happened then. Once the storm had passed the special privileged interests immediately wanted to lapse back into the old ways that had proved so disastrous. Knowing full well that the exploitation of labor and agriculture had resulted in destruction of purchasing power, which is in a real sense the fuel that makes our economic machine go, they insisted upon going back to the "good old days."

They not only went on a sit-down strike by refusing to cooperate with the President, but also took an active part in the movement to destroy the New Deal in its entirety.

After the President had pulled them out of the rut they not only got off the bandwagon but tried to pull it back the way it had come. They wanted rescue, but not reform. They were enjoying the new purchasing power that the New Deal had created, but they didn't want to pay for it either in wages or in taxes. They wanted the cake and the penny too.

Instead of purchasing power, they wanted lower rates. Instead of reform, they wanted confidence. They proclaimed that there would be no recovery until they got what they wanted. They conveniently forgot that they had been given all kinds of tax reductions, not to mention "confidence," during those dizzy years that ended with such a bang in 1929.

They insisted upon Budget balancing, with the result that the first move in that direction abruptly ended the comparative prosperity of 1937 and brought on the recession of 1938. Cause and effect followed quickly and surely. Now they are at it again, and our recent history shows that if they succeed they will get just what they asked for—a still further business slump and more taxes to meet the relief needs it will create.

Your resolution, ladies and gentlemen, says that the New Deal has "created the largest debt in our history" I believe it would be fairer to say that the debt was created before the New Deal came into existence, because the New Deal's expenditures have been made to restore a structure that was practically destroyed by its predecessor.

If you took over a house that was not habitable and had to spend large sums to prevent it from collapsing altogether, would you not say that the debt had been created by the neglect of the former owner and that you merely assumed it? For that is what the New Deal did; it assumed the debt that was its heritage from the Harding-Coolidge-Hoover crash.

The question is, Has the New Deal made no effort to balance its Budgets? You all know that the President has made a careful and proper distinction between normal and emergency expenditures. The Nation's normal Budget is balanced.

The emergency budget, the budget for the care of the victims of depression, has not been balanced. You are perfectly familiar with that distinction, for you are doing the same thing here in Harrisburg.

You have before you a balanced budget for normal expenditures of departments and a highly unbalanced budget for relief. In fact, your relief budget is short-changed at least $110,000,000, and everyone seems to be accepting the fact calmly. As I said in Washington recently, your Governor is betting $110,000,000 that President Roosevelt will lick the unemployment problem before he leaves office.

You would have no thought, I am sure, of balancing your budget by refusing to provide for the hungry. Neither has the Roosevelt administration, and the plain fact is that the Nation's emergency budget probably will remain unbalanced until the need for relief disappears.

Unbalanced budgets are not unfamiliar to Pennsylvania, even without a relief problem. In the State's largest city, Philadelphia, the third largest city in the country, the Republican Party has been in power for a century, and the city's budget hasn't been balanced for as far back as I can remember. Although it has provided little or nothing for relief at any time, its funded debt today is well over a half billion dollars, its employees go unpaid, and in spite of its recent sales tax it is talking of pawning the gas-plant revenues.

I am sure the Republican Members of this House from Philadelphia must have had their tongues in their cheeks when they voted to accuse the New Deal of failing to balance its Budget.

Ladies and gentlemen, you should give thanks that the Federal Government's relief budget is unbalanced, for your problem would be far greater if it were. Let us suppose for a moment that the Senate were to take you seriously in the matter of Budget balancing and suddenly turn the relief problem entirely back to the States. It would be utterly appalling.

With your own budget more than $110,000,000 out of balance, with your principal city practically bankrupt, with your business establishments and industries complaining of taxation, with your real estate groaning under an already insupportable loan, you would have to go out and double—yes, more than double; triple and quadruple—your present emergency taxes.

Just think that over when you speak of Federal Budget balancing. And I warn you that your Pennsylvania friends and political supporters are in Washington right now fighting to have the Budget balanced. God help them—and you—if they should succeed, for the problem would then be yours, and any new taxes you might levy would be theirs, either directly if you taxed industry or indirectly if you attacked purchasing power through a consumers' tax.

The blunt fact is that the relief problem has to be met, and if Congress balances the National Budget by shirking its responsibility you will have to step into the breach.

I hope I may be pardoned if I remind you, since the political campaigning is over for the present, that the Republican Members of this House, and your Republican Governor, solemnly pledged to reduce taxes when elected. In fact, your Governor as a candidate charged that the Democratic administration had established a little New Deal—as if that were something dishonorable—and that the Democratic taxes were "punitive" taxes against business.

Yet today you have before you a budget which not only levies the same amount of taxes but the very same taxes, the identical taxes item by item, and it is freely admitted that even these will not be sufficient.

Now that the campaign is over, of course, the situation is different because you are faced with realities. I would like to ask that you face another reality, the need for continued Federal appropriations for the unemployed. Naturally Republican candidates were expected to fire away at the unbalancing of the Federal Budget while they were candidates, but it's time now to come down to earth. If you want to make good Governor James' implied budget prediction of recovery, and if you want to avoid the necessity for levying tremendous additional taxes a year from now, you should cooperate to the limit in the effort that we are making to provide adequate Federal aid to the needy.

As one of the two Representatives from Pennsylvania in the upper House of Congress I am doing everything in my power to bring that about. I want to declare now that I am going to vote to restore the $150,000,000 that was cut out of the W. P. A. relief appropriations bill some weeks ago. This will make available to Pennsylvania an additional sum in excess of $10,000,000 for W. P. A. relief purposes. If my associates and I should fail, you will have to take up the burden, and therefore it is of greatest importance to you that we succeed.

I offer you my fullest and heartiest cooperation. I'm down in Washington fighting for Pennsylvania's best interests, and I'll welcome your help. If you will approach the problems facing our State and our Nation with sincerity and candor, if you will consider the interests of all our citizens rather than a few, if you will concentrate on real issues rather than some of the ward politics' bugaboos that mark your resolution, we will make real progress.

Your request for guidance in the formulation of legislative policy may seem somewhat ironic when addressed to me, accompanied as it is by an attack upon policies to which I am unalterably committed, but nevertheless I am going to take it at face value.

My advice is simply this:

Defend and amplify the liberal statutes enacted by the legislature that preceded you, see to it that they are administered faithfully and well, fix your tax levies on the basis of ability to pay, cooperate with the New Deal in its effort to restore prosperity by restoring purchasing power, meet your legislative issues squarely instead of dodging them with a maximum of concern for public welfare and a minimum of politics.

If you can do that the platforms of both parties will be carried out and you will go down in history as one of the greatest legislatures ever to sit at Harrisburg.

STATUS OF PENDING MEASURES

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, when the Senate recessed on Tuesday last, Senate bill 572 was before the Senate, and it is carried on the calendar as the unfinished business. I desire to ask the Chair if Senate Resolution 107 is not the unfinished business, temporarily laid aside for the consideration of Senate bill 572? I have no desire to interfere with the completion of the debate on the pending bill, but I wish merely to elicit from the Chair the status of Senate Resolution 107.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will call the Senator's attention to a rather anomalous situation, and will read from the RECORD of Tuesday last, as follows:

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, Senate Resolution 107, submitted by the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], occupies practically the status of being the unfinished business.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let the Chair state that in spirit it does, but not as a matter of parliamentary procedure.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is true.

I have conferred with the Senator from Georgia; and in view of the imminent action of the House on the agricultural appropriation bill, which contains items involving the cotton situation, and in view of the fact that the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] has suggested, and it has been agreed and understood, that the bill from his committee, which is on the calendar, will go over awaiting action on the part of the House on the agricultural appropriation bill, which may have some bearing upon the legislation which is necessary or advisable, the Senator from Georgia has agreed that his resolution may preserve its present status and go over without prejudice.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator mean to say that it shall be the pending business and go over without prejudice?

Mr. BARKLEY. That is correct.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

According to that discussion, while Senate Resolution 107 was not laid aside temporarily, as is ordinarily done when it is desired to take up other business, the Chair is compelled, it seems, as a matter of logic, to hold that the resolution of the Senator from Georgia was laid aside temporarily, that it is now the unfinished business, and that the other bill referred to was merely taken up while Senate Resolution 107 was temporarily laid aside. The Senate took a recess on Tuesday, so that the status then prevailing continues this morning. The Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS] now has the floor on his bill. If any Senator desires to question the ruling of the Chair, the Chair will be glad to hear him.

ACQUISITION OF STOCKS OF STRATEGIC MILITARY MATERIALS, ETC.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 572) to provide for the common defense by acquiring stocks of strategic and critical raw materials, concentrates, and alloys essential to the needs of industry for the manufacture of supplies for the armed forces and the civilian population in time of a national emergency, and for other purposes.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, when the Senate recessed at its last session the pending amendment was that offered by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], as modified. I suggest that the modified amendment be read by the clerk, so that it may be properly before the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment, as modified, will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to insert in the bill the following new section:

SEC. 8. The President is hereby requested to enter into negotiations with foreign governments which are indebted to the United States with a view to arranging for such governments to furnish the United States with strategic and critical materials for national-defense purposes, which are not now produced in the United States, in payment or part payment of the indebtedness of such governments to the United States.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I trust this amendment will not be agreed to. While, of course, no one can disagree with the aim and the desirability of bringing about, in some way or other, the payment of debts which have been defaulted, it seems to me this is about as bad a place as could be found to make the suggestion.

The bill before us is supposed to lay down, as it will lay down if enacted, the Government policy in regard to providing a stock pile of necessary materials in case of an emergency and in case of war. In no sense is the bill a temporary emergency bill. In bringing our Government into this field and presenting this rather broad policy—the building-up of stock piles—the adoption of the amendment would be very unfortunate, especially in the light of the fact that the bill is dual in its nature, in that it not only seeks to have the stock piles gathered together but it seeks to encourage the American production of materials to be made part of such stock piles. To bring the international debt situation into the picture, to cause the President to enter into negotiations when we want materials from other countries, might greatly retard the second objective of the bill, which is to encourage the production of our own materials.

Then, too, the adoption of this amendment might be interpreted as an act of Congress wherein the idea would be put forth that America is ready and willing to settle the debts by receiving materials from debtor nations, instead of by receiving cash. That immediately opens up what has been one of the most contested questions in regard to the debts. There is no doubt that debtor nations would have been happy to send us, in payment of their interest and in payment of their principal installments, materials of various kinds. There is no doubt that the American people became aroused at such a prospect, and that if the amendment were adopted the very thing which they were more fearful of being accomplished than anything else—that is, that the debts might be turned into an arrangement whereby American producers of goods would be actively legislated against—would be brought forth at this time.

For example, to take a situation which now will probably never come about, but one which would come right home to the Senator from Massachusetts, the Czechoslovakian state owed us in debts something like $165,000,000. There is no doubt that that state would have been happy to settle that debt on some sort of an arrangement whereby they would be given the entire contract for providing shoes for our Army and our Navy.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I shall be glad to yield.

Mr. LODGE. That could not happen under the provisions of my amendment, because my amendment would exclude anything produced in the United States.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I understand that, Mr. President. I am talking against the philosophy of the amendment, bringing into this situation and this argument a matter which is not germane to the hopes and the aspirations of the American people in attempting to make themselves independent of the necessity of bringing in materials from the outside.

Our President, or his negotiators, would immediately be confronted with the necessity of trying to handle the debt question on the merits of the debt question in and of itself. No matter what provision were put into the amendment about negotiating in regard to something which is not produced in the United States, the question would be opened, and it would be opened in a very unfortunate way. If we want to open the debt question, let us do it forthrightly; let us do it in an open way; let us do it by negotiations about debts, not in connection with negotiations in an attempt to get some little quantity of a single product into our country.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I am glad to yield.

Mr. NORRIS. I do not understand what the Senator means when he says we ought to negotiate about the debts. The negotiations in reference to the debts have been concluded, have they not? The amounts have been determined;

there is no disagreement as to what the foreign countries owe the United States. Those matters have all been gone over and settled, and after adjudication the amount in every case determined definitely, as I understand. So there would be no negotiation about the debts, as I see it.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I probably used an unfortunate word in saying "negotiation," if the negotiation were limited to something which has been accomplished; and I did not wish to imply that. For example, there is one question involved in the debts due by foreign governments which I think, in some way or other, is before our country now, which may need some sort of further negotiation. If what I have read in the newspapers is correct, Hungary has made an offer to the United States to start paying tokens again. Immediately, if we accept some sort of arrangement as to tokens, or immediately if we accept some sort of arrangement concerning products, the whole question must of necessity again be opened up, and opened up in what I consider an unfortunate way if, for instance, the negotiations are, as the Senator from Nebraska has said, a closed incident, and the amounts have been concluded, and concluded forever.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I am glad to yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. As I understand, the measure now pending has two objectives. One is to enable the United States to accumulate a supply of necessary materials which cannot be produced in this country, and at the same time possibly to encourage the production of the same materials which are not now being produced in this country. Is that correct?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. That is correct.

Mr. BARKLEY. I suppose we all understand that the articles which we are proposing to buy are not owned in any country by the government, unless it might be in Russia, where the Government owns everything. The articles are owned by private individuals. They have them for sale, just as our private industries have their products for sale. So that if the President of the United States should undertake to negotiate with any foreign country under the amendment to accept some of the things contemplated in the bill in part payment of what that country owes us, that country would have first to go out and buy the things with its own money, and then exchange them, or sell them, to our Government, and get credit on what they owe. That would be the process, I suppose, by which the matter would be handled. If the President should negotiate for the entire $25,000,000 a year provided in the bill for a period of 4 years, then there would be no encouragement to any American industry, by reason of the proposed law, to produce the things needed, and which are not now purchasable in this country. Would that be the result?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I think that would be the result.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, while we all want the debts paid, and we talk about it, even if the countries could supply the whole hundred million dollars' worth of materials, it would scarcely make a dent on the size of the debts. It is questionable, in view of the insignificant amount compared with the total debt—a hundred million dollars compared with $12,000,000,000—whether this program, if it is worthy and meritorious, ought to be held up and delayed while we were undertaking to arrange with some foreign country some process by which that country would buy the things we want and then sell them to us and get credit on its debt.

Mr. NORRIS and Mr. BORAH addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Utah yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield again to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. NORRIS. Suppose what the Senator from Kentucky has said is a correct statement of what would happen—and I suppose that it is, at least to an extent that a foreign government desiring to take advantage of the proposed law, if the bill should become a law, would have to buy from its own citizens the materials for which they would get credit on their debts to us.

It would be advantageous to that government to take that method of paying its debt, assuming it wanted to pay its debt, because it would give encouragement to the manufacture or whatever might have to be done to get the materials ready, and it would buy from its own citizens, and at the same time it would get credit for the entire amount on the debt which it owed to this Government. That would make it much easier for the foreign government, it seems to me, than if it had to send us money instead. It seems to me it would be an advantage if a foreign government could pay its debt by buying materials in its own country from its own citizens, and getting credit for the full amount of the purchases on what the country owed some other government.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. BORAH. I wanted to ask the Senator from Massachusetts, the author of the amendment, whether the amendment is sufficiently comprehensive. It reads:

> The President is hereby requested to enter into negotiations with foreign governments which are indebted to the United States with a view to arranging for such governments to furnish the United States with strategic and critical materials—

And so on. Is it to be left entirely to the President? Is his negotiation to be final, or is it to take the form of a treaty?

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I think it would take the form of a treaty probably.

Mr. BORAH. Then I think the amendment should so state. I think that some of these days the Congress will have to meet the question of whether it is to have anything further to say about the debts.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, the Senator from Idaho has in a very quick way brought before us the type of thing I had in mind. There are many complexities to the international debt situation. Even the use of a word such as "negotiations" brought misunderstanding, when the word "negotiations" is used in the amendment itself.

If, for instance, arrangements were made by the President of the United States, under the amendment would not those arrangements modify the contract or the understanding which has been made between the Congress of the United States, on the part of the Government of the United States and the foreign country involved? As the Senator from Idaho suggests, are we not here moving into a sphere which would probably give the executive branch of the Government the right to modify treaties, the right to modify international agreements, on its own initiative? I repeat what I stated in the beginning—and to me this argument is sufficient ground for rejecting the amendment—the debt question is not germane to the question of getting strategic materials. The debt question should be handled on the merits of the debt question itself, and not in connection with some endeavor to get advantageously some little bit of money credited by some roundabout movement.

I suggest that the Senate not agree to the amendment.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield.

Mr. MURRAY. If the amendment should be agreed to, would it not result in a sort of dumping? It would enable those countries which develop manganese, for instance, to dump their manganese into this country to such an extent that it would absolutely preclude our domestic producers from taking advantage of one of the purposes of the proposed law, that is, to encourage the development in this country of manganese and other strategic minerals.

I think there is a great misunderstanding in the country, as well as in the Senate itself, with reference to these strategic minerals. The effort has been to make it appear that this country cannot produce manganese in sufficient quantities to supply the Government with manganese in case of war. As a matter of fact, in my State of Montana we have already developed manganese to such an extent that we are able at the present moment, with the equipment we have on hand, to furnish 70,000 tons a year, a capacity which can be easily expanded so as to enable us to produce 150,000 tons within a very few months.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me a moment?

Mr. MURRAY. Certainly.

Mr. LODGE. The language of my amendment would specifically prevent the importation into this country of any product or material now produced here. So the Senator from Montana need have no fears on that score.

Mr. MURRAY. I should like to ask another question. Does the amendment as it is worded contemplate that the minerals brought in under the amendment would be applied exclusively as a credit, or would it permit the President to negotiate with a foreign country producing minerals and deal with it for the materials? There is nothing in the language of the amendment that would indicate that any minerals supplied under it would be merely in the form of a credit.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. That, of course, would be a question for one interpreting the amendment.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield.

Mr. MILLER. I should like to make a suggestion in reference to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Massachusetts. The amendment provides that negotiations shall be entered into only with respect to such materials as are not now produced in the United States. But in addition to reopening the foreign debt question we will have ever present the same old question raised by certain interests in the United States which claim that this country is not able to produce a sufficient amount of strategic or critical material. That question always results in conflicting contentions.

The adoption of the amendment would also invalidate section 5 of the bill, which has been considered by the Senate. Section 5 provides that—

> Purchases under this act shall be made in accordance with title III of the act of March 3, 1933.

That is the Buy American Act. I know that the Senator is familiar with the provisions of the Buy American Act. One of the objectives of the pending bill is to lend encouragement to domestic producers of critical and strategic materials. It is even provided that as much time as possible may be given domestic producers to produce, if they do not have on hand an immediate supply. That time is limited to 1 year, in the discretion of the Army and Navy and the Treasury Department and the other departments which are to pass upon the question.

The whole question resolves itself into this one statement: The Army and Navy are definitely of the opinion that we do not have in the United States an adequate supply of certain materials and certain minerals. The industry involved is definitely of the opinion that we do have. The bill is an effort to prepare the Nation industrially for conflict, or to prepare and to aid it industrially in its national defense. If we want to reopen the entire question of the debt, very well. If the Lodge amendment should be adopted, we would, in my opinion, reopen the entire question of the debt settlement.

I agree most heartily with the Senator from Utah when he says that the debt question has no business on a bill of this kind. By the bill before us we are undertaking to furnish some encouragement to domestic producers of the minerals and the materials in question, and at the same time not tie the hands of the Army and the Navy so as to prevent them from obtaining material in the event of a crisis, which might come upon us unawares and unexpectedly.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Along the line of what has been said by the Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY] as to the strategic and critical materials in the United States, I may say that in the State of New Mexico there is sufficient manganese to last the United States for many years if only we are given the opportunity to develop it. I believe that the suggestions made by the Senator from Montana and the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER] are correct in the present instance.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield.

Mr. LODGE. I am glad to assure the Senator from New Mexico that under the provisions of my amendment the situation of which he speaks would not be interfered with at all.

Mr. CHAVEZ. It would be interfered with to the extent that if the President should enter into negotiations with some country which may owe us money that country could discharge a part of its debt by payment of manganese, a product which is produced in this country.

Mr. LODGE. Not if manganese is produced in this country. In that case payment on the debt by the use of such a product is specifically prohibited.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I should like to ask the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER] a question. I do not quite see the cause of the suggestion that the adoption of the Lodge amendment would reopen the question of debts due by other countries to our country. I have not been able to be present during all the discussion; and, if the Senator from Arkansas is clear upon that point, I should be very glad if he would tell me why the amendment would open again the whole debt question.

Mr. MILLER. I understand the debt question has been settled by the Congress. If we should now authorize the Executive to enter into negotiations with any foreign government to furnish this Government any material to be applied as a credit upon the debt of such foreign government, why would it not open the entire question?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. No more so than a debtor seeking to pay his debt in part thereby reopens the whole question of his debt. If the President were to enter into negotiations with one of the debtor countries to receive an amount of material which in the market would be worth so much, and to apply it upon that country's debt to us, I do not see that that would reopen the whole debt situation.

Mr. MILLER. I would agree most heartily with the able Senator if the negotiations were to proceed only to the extent that the President would say to the debtor nation, "Give us so much and we will apply it as a credit." But, judging from past operations and past experiences we have had with the debtor countries, when we come to negotiate the arrangement is two-sided.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Oh, I will admit that when we come to negotiate with them we will get the worst of it every time.

Mr. MILLER. That is what I am afraid of.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I will admit that our negotiators do not always accomplish what I should like them to accomplish; but if they should comply with this measure and enter into negotiations for specific items which would be applied upon the indebtedness of the foreign government, why would we thereby reopen the whole subject?

Mr. MILLER. The Senator has more faith than I have in the result that might be achieved by negotiations at any time with any of the debtor nations with respect to the payment of their debts.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. No; I do not have more faith than has any other Senator upon this floor in anything being accomplished by those who do not want to accomplish anything, and I recognize that our negotiators would probably be in that position.

Mr. MILLER. I think so.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. But when they go to one of our debtors and say, "Give us so much of this particular article which is in the market, worth so many millions of dollars, and we will apply it upon your indebtedness," I rather think we could be safe under those circumstances, although I admit the fear that always assails me when we attempt to deal with any international subject and some of our brethren are given charge of the particular negotiation.

Mr. MILLER. If the negotiations were unilateral, I would agree entirely with the learned Senator, but they would be bilateral.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. The negotiators who were chosen to negotiate the debts between the United States and other countries happened to be members of a joint congressional committee, made up of Members of the House and Senate, and when they made the report on their negotiations the Senate and House, by a very large majority, endorsed and ratified what they had done. So if there has been fault heretofore with respect to the negotiations concerning the debts, it is the fault of Congress and not of anyone else.

Mr. MILLER. I am not finding any fault with the Congress.

Mr. BARKLEY. No; I understand the Senator from Arkansas is not, but the Senator from California was casting some aspersions upon the negotiators who had had anything to do with the negotiations concerning the settlement of the debts.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, I did not hear all that the Senator from Kentucky just said. I am always very anxious to hear every word that may fall from his lips.

Mr. BARKLEY. I thank the Senator for that profound compliment.

I said that the Senator had indulged in some criticism or expression of lack of faith in the negotiators with respect to the settlement of the debts, and I called attention to the fact that the debt settlements, as they now exist, were negotiated by a joint committee of the House and Senate, and that the results of those negotiations were brought back to Congress, and by an overwhelming vote ratified. So if there has been any fault with respect to the negotiations concerning those debts heretofore, the fault lies at the doors of Congress as much, if not more so, than at the door of any other agency of our Government.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I am willing that the Senator should place upon the heads of Congress anything that he wishes. That will be all right. We constantly accuse ourselves, and we accuse ourselves to excuse someone else. But in this instance I cannot see that the particular proposal in question would result in anything that would be to the detriment of the House or of the Senate or of the Executive, or of anyone else but the foreign country owing us a debt.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield.

Mr. ADAMS. It occurs to me that there is a good deal of needless alarm about the matter. The President pro tempore of the Senate some 4 or 5 years ago offered an amendment, which was agreed to, authorizing the debtor nations to make certain payments in silver, and I think up to this hour no debtor nation has taken advantage of the opportunity then afforded to pay us. I do not think that we need worry about the debtor nations crowding upon us and offering anything else in payment on their debts. I should be very glad to have payment in almost any form from them.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I am sure the remarks which have been made and the questions which have been put prove the contention that the amendment should not be put into the bill.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. I am interested in what has been said about the existence of undeveloped manganese in the United States. I merely wish to add that in the State of Wyoming we have large amounts of chromium, which is of such character that in the past it could not be profitably worked with the knowledge we then had of the art, but with the new electric process and the new and effective methods that are being tested by the Bureau of Mines these deposits can be worked profitably and the product put on the market. As a matter of fact, in the United States we now produce less than 2,000 tons or 2,500 tons of chromium per year, while we import from South Africa and other countries 560,000 tons a year.

In case of an emergency, if we needed a large supply of chromium we might have difficulty in bringing it to this country from foreign waters. That is another reason why I am opposed to the Lodge amendment. It would have a tendency to discourage the kind of development we want to encourage.

I wish to add that the War Department itself is not very sympathetic toward our efforts to develop native deposits and domestic manufacture. From what I gathered from some of the testimony, the Department would prefer to buy a nicely graded lot on an order and have it shipped in the customary way. For that reason we need the protection of the bill to enable us to develop some of our own industries and some of our own deposits in the United States.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, the language of my amendment would specifically exclude the importation of any articles now produced in this country. Such a prohibition is written into the amendment. If a new industry were to begin the production of some new product, all those interested in that product would have to do would be to signify that fact to the President, and at once it would go into the category of things which can be produced in this country. I think we have sufficient confidence in the President of the United States to agree that he would take cognizance of any important fact of that kind.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. It is true that the Senator's amendment says "which are not now produced in the United States." In the case of chromium 2,000 tons are domestically produced to supply a need of 600,000 tons.

Mr. LODGE. Therefore the foreign product would not come in.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. There is not a single critical material mentioned some of which is not produced in the United States, even if it is only a handful in the laboratory.

Mr. LODGE. If we can obtain only a handful, that is better than nothing.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield to the Senator from Montana.

Mr. MURRAY. The Senator from Massachusetts calls attention to the fact that the language of his amendment is—

> Materials * * * which are not now produced in the United States.

While it is true that chromium is not now being produced in any substantial quantity, we have tremendous deposits of manganese in several States.

Numerous letters have recently come to me from the State of Montana with respect to huge deposits of chromium in the neighborhood of Red Lodge, Mont., and also in the neighborhood of Livingston, Mont. So, if the Lodge amendment were adopted, it would preclude the possibility of developing those deposits and putting the product on the market.

Mr. LODGE. I think the Senator is exactly reversing the language of the amendment. In my judgment, the exact opposite would be true. Under the terms of the amendment anything produced in this country would not come in. I do not believe there is a more sincere protectionist in the Senate than am I. If there is any clearer or more specific language to prohibit the importation of foreign goods into this country than is contained in the amendment, I should like to know what it is. The minute anything is produced it is no longer on the eligible list to be furnished to us by foreign governments.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. From what the Senator from Massachusetts has said I take it that the amendment would require, first of all, that the President determine whether or not a product or material which was wanted was produced in the United States. If not, he would then have to determine whether or not the material or product could be furnished to us by a debtor nation. Then, when he found the material and the debtor nation which had the material he would have to enter into negotiations.

What about the practicality of such an arrangement as that? Go through the list of strategic and critical materials, and then go through the list of the debtor nations which would come under such an arrangement. What have we gained? All we have gained is that we have again sent forth to Europe the suggestion that we would like to have European nations pay their debts in any way in which they can pay them. What is there now in the bill to prevent a debtor nation from carrying out the arrangement which the Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON] suggested in asking his question? What is to interfere with the payment of the debts? A debtor nation might buy products from some of its citizens and send them to us. It could just as well pay us the money.

It seems to me that if we consider the facts about the operation of the bill and the acquirement of materials, and the facts about the debtor nations, the amendment would be the merest kind of a gesture and would interfere with a straightforward policy, in that it would introduce an exceedingly confusing element.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I shall be glad to yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. The amendment is based upon a different premise from the provisions of the bill. The bill provides that certain strategic and critical materials may be purchased when there is a deficiency of them or when they are insufficiently developed in this country to supply industrial, military, and naval needs for the national defense. While it is true that the amendment limits the President's authority to negotiate for payment in goods on the debts to goods which are not produced in this country, if the spirit of the amendment were carried out it might be possible for the President to purchase goods which might be produced under the developing appropriation authorized in the bill. So if he bought all we needed of a given article which is not now being produced in this country, but which might be produced by development, he would thereby foreclose the Government in its efforts to develop at home the very materials which, if he carried out the spirit of the amendment, he would buy in some other country, accepting them in payment on the debt.

Looking at the mechanics of the operation, suppose Great Britain, France, or Italy, for example, had some material which we did not produce or did not produce in sufficient quantities for our own defense. If Great Britain, France, or Italy were anxious to pay a part of the debt, would it go through the roundabout method of paying money out of its own Treasury to some private industry within its borders, and then furnishing the material to us as a payment on the debt? Would not any government which desired to avoid circumlocution and all sorts of roundabout purchases prefer to pay us directly the amount which was involved in the purchase of the material, and allow the Government of the United States to purchase whatever it needed from the producer, as it would do under the bill as it is written? What government would go to the trouble of buying material involving the same amount of money that it might pay directly to the United States rather than permitting the Government of the United States to purchase the material privately?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I thank the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. If the Senator will permit me another suggestion, the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] inquired awhile ago as to whether or not such negotiations would be in the form of a treaty, and if so, whether or not it would have to be ratified by the Senate. The Senator from Utah can imagine how long it would take for the Government of the United States to buy any of such materials from another government, even if they were applied to the debt that government owed us, if it had to be done in the form of a treaty which must come before the Senate for ratification, especially if in the meantime the production of the material in this country had developed to the extent that we might supply our own demand.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I thank the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. President, I ask that the Senate reject the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE].

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I should like to speak briefly with respect to some of the remarks which have been made today upon my amendment. Before doing so I should like to take advantage of the privilege which I understand I have, of modifying the amendment in accordance with the suggestion which has been made by the eminent Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS], by striking out the words "strategic and critical" appearing in lines 4 and 5. I am obliged to the Senator from Nebraska for his valuable suggestion.

In my opinion, the objections which have been made to the amendment are more imaginary than real. It is true, of course, that the amount which might be realized through a procedure of this kind would be small. However, I think a small amount is better than nothing.

It is also true that a little inconvenience might be caused some foreign governments, for they would have to enter into negotiations with private concerns in their own country. While I know we have no desire here to embarrass foreign governments, I think we have a duty to perform to our own citizens, which is certainly paramount.

Fear has been expressed that under the terms of this amendment the future development of articles which are not now produced in this country would be prevented. Mr. President, I think that is an absolutely unwarranted fear. So soon as any group of Americans discovered a new natural resource or engaged in the production of some new article that is not now produced here, they would simply have to signify that fact to the President, at once such articles would go off the eligible list, and would not be subject to negotiations under the terms of this amendment. If we cannot trust the President to take cognizance of a fact of that kind, in Heaven's name, whom can we trust?

The statement has been made that foreign nations would not pay; that, whether they are democracies of dictatorships, they have made up their minds that they are not going to pay these debts, and that is all there is to it. That pessimistic view may be correct; but there are certain rays of hope. In the first place, there are countries today that eagerly desire the friendship and support of the United States, and that situation might, possibly, color their views toward a proposition of this kind. In the second place, we have the example of Finland which did pay its debt; and we have the example of Ireland, which, if I am not misinformed, went even further and assumed a debt which, according to a strict legal construction, she did not have to assume, and paid that debt. I mention those instances of character and honesty among nations as something that is refreshing to think about at this time.

The technical question has been raised as to whether or not the adoption of this amendment would reopen the foreign-debt question. I am not an expert on a matter of that kind, but I ask the simple question, Do they owe us the money, or do they not? If they owe us the money, if they have borrowed it, the amendment, if adopted, would afford one perfectly honorable way to make good on that debt. The adoption of the amendment would constitute an asset to the national defense of the United States, and it could not possibly interfere with any type of American production.

As I said earlier, there is no more sincere or convinced protectionist in the United States Senate than am I. In my opinion, altogether too many foreign goods are coming into this country today. Several times I have spoken here about the influx of foreign goods that is literally taking the livelihood away from American citizens. In my judgment, this amendment, if adopted, would specifically make that kind of an occurrence impossible. Here is an opportunity in an orderly, peaceful, constructive way to right an injustice that has been done to the American people, and to do something, in these troublous times, for international good will.

Mr. ELLENDER obtained the floor.

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me to permit me to ask the Senator from Massachusetts a question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Louisiana yield for that purpose?

Mr. ELLENDER. I yield for that purpose.

Mr. LEE. As I understand, this is the second amendment the Senator has offered to his own amendment since he offered it. Is that true?

Mr. LODGE. No; that is not true. It is merely a modification suggested by the Senator from Nebraska, and I hope the Senator from Oklahoma will not object to the modification suggested by the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. LEE. Is not that the second modification the Senator from Massachusetts has recommended to his own amendment since he submitted it on Tuesday last?

Mr. LODGE. There was another change I made because the Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] assured me that, with that change, he would support the amendment. To my mind, the change was not necessary, because the purpose of it was implicit in the amendment any way; but my regard for the Senator from Arizona is so great that, of course, I was happy to accept the suggestion. I hope the Senator from Oklahoma will not object to that.

Mr. LEE. That is not the point. I do not object, but the fact that the Senator has twice modified his own amendment since he offered it is the best proof I know of that it is not well-considered legislation that is attempted to be added at this time to a bill that has been considered by a subcommittee and the whole committee.

Mr. LODGE. Does the Senator think that every amendment that has been modified here on the floor of the Senate is ipso facto an inferior amendment for that reason?

Mr. LEE. Not at all; but when the Senator offers an amendment and then accepts two amendments to his own amendment, it is very good proof that it is not well considered.

Mr. LODGE. The Senator from Oklahoma has been a Member of the Senate for only a short time, as I have been, but he can remember numerous instances during the last few years when some of the leading Members of this body have accepted on the floor amendments which have been suggested by other Senators. If what the Senator suggests is going to be a disqualification of amendments offered in the future, I think that fact should be understood.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. ELLENDER. I yield to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. NORRIS. I should like to say, in regard to the Senator from Massachusetts modifying his own amendment, that such things occur every day. It is an absolute right that the Senator from Massachusetts has. He can change his amendment at any time before the Senate has taken some action on it. It is his property. He can withdraw it if he wants to, or he can modify it. I have never yet heard the argument made that such a proceeding is detrimental to an amendment. If that is a good objection, then, at least 50 percent of the amendments attached to bills on the floor should be stricken out, and there ought to be no amendments permitted, because they have not had sufficient consideration.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Louisiana has the floor. Does he yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. ELLENDER. I yield for a question.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I should like to take just a few moments to clarify the amendment to the amendment which the Senator from Massachusetts has offered. The Senator from Massachusetts suggests that the words "strategic and critical materials" be stricken from his amendment.

Mr. LODGE. No; that the words "strategic and critical" be stricken out but not the word "materials."

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. "Strategic and critical" are the words to be stricken out?

Mr. LODGE. That is correct.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, that modification really does not change the effect of the amendment, because all the bill refers to is strategic and critical materials, so that it would apply to them anyway.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. There is a further point which should be made. A classification has been made by the Army and Navy Munitions Board; they have a definite list of materials which are considered "strategic"; they have a definite list of materials which are considered "critical"; they have a list of materials which are considered essential in time of emergency. To strike out these words, which are more or less technical, in this rather technical measure would make the amendment read in such a way that the President of the United States could negotiate for the furnishing of any materials for national-defense purposes, which is an idea, of course, entirely out of harmony with the purposes of the bill, and would make the amendment so broad that it would open up the question even in a broader way than it has been opened up. The only limitation left is the word "materials" as found in the phrase "for national-defense purposes, which are not now produced in the United States."

I cannot help, Mr. President, but call attention to the facts in regard to this amendment and in regard to the purchase of these materials as they are related to materials which may be purchased from debtor nations. With these two words stricken from the amendment, of course, the President could go into the realm of anything which is used for national defense. With the words in the amendment, it was at least possible for us to see with what the President had to deal and with what nations he had to negotiate, but if he were required to go over the list of strategic and critical materials and try to fit them into the capabilities of the debtor nations, remembering that, first of all, there must be removed from the field of dispute the question whether or not the material is produced in the United States, which is a subject of controversy, practically nothing would be accomplished. I should not like, of course, to leave the impression that that is my idea of the Senator's amendment, but practically it is just exactly that.

Furthermore, we would enter into the realm of international relations, the realm of the President's authority in regard to treaties and international negotiations. Mr. President, I think it would be very unwise, especially in its modified form, to allow this amendment to be adopted.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. ELLENDER. I have yielded several times, and I do not propose to yield any more unless it is to answer questions. I do not, however, desire to be discourteous.

Mr. LUCAS. Will the Senator permit me to ask the Senator from Utah just one question?

Mr. ELLENDER. I yield for that purpose.

Mr. LUCAS. In view of the modification of amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts the words "strategic and critical" having been eliminated from the amendment, can the distinguished Senator from Utah give to the Senate any comprehensive definition of what the word "materials" would include?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. It would include, under this amendment, anything which is used for national defense except those materials which are produced within the United States.

Mr. LUCAS. And that would open up a rather broad and comprehensive field insofar as dealing with materials in a national-defense way is concerned?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. It would cause utter confusion in the building of the stock piles.

SALE OF COTTON ABROAD BELOW COST

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, I dislike to divert the attention of the Senate at this time from the pending amendment. I have been listening with a great deal of interest to the debate on the subject under discussion. I desire to address the Senate with respect to Resolution 107, by Senator GEORGE. A few days ago, when the resolution was under discussion, I obtained the floor for the purpose of making a few remarks with reference thereto; but, because the resolution was laid aside temporarily, I decided to await another opportunity to speak. My reason for desiring to speak at this time is that at 2:30 o'clock I must engage in a very important hearing pertaining to the civil-service investigation ordered by the Senate, which I have scheduled for that hour. I ask the indulgence of the Senate to listen to me for only a few minutes with reference to the all-important subject of cotton.

I believe that one of the most perplexing problems confronting the Senate today is the one dealing with cotton. The large amount of the product that we now have on hand makes it imperative that something be done to relieve our country of the enormous surplus of cotton.

Our difficulty started in 1937, when we produced the largest crop in history, totaling the enormous figure of almost 19,000,000 bales. As a result of the production in that year of such a large amount of cotton, we have today a carry-over which is as large as any carry-over in our history.

Ordinarily speaking, a normal ratio of world carry-over of American cotton to normal production of American cotton should not exceed 40 percent. I will produce figures to show that the carry-over of American cotton at the close of the 1937–38 season was 74 percent of production, almost twice as much as a normal carry-over. I am informed that the carry-over of American cotton at the end of the current season will be as much as fourteen and five-tenths million bales and should that be the case, the carry-over will be over 122 percent of production.

Not only has this large increase occurred in the United States, but there has been an increase in the production of cotton all over the world. I have data that I will produce to the Senate to show that although the world's consumptive requirements for cotton aggregate from twenty-seven to thirty million bales per year, the world's supply is over 50,000,000 bales for the current season. Of this enormous supply the United States has in excess of 25,000,000 bales.

What are we to do with all this cotton? We have to find some method to get rid of it. We have to find some method by which cotton can be consumed; and until we find such a method I say that American cotton prices are destined to remain low.

If we could only return to normalcy with reference to our carry-over, there is no question in my mind that we would get a fair price for our cotton.

Let us see, according to statistics, how the production of cotton has increased from year to year.

In 1930 the world supply of commercial cotton was only 37,000,000 bales. The next year it was 41,000,000 bales; the next year it was 41,000,000 bales; and so on down to the year 1938, when the present available figures show a supply of 50,462,000 bales.

There is no doubt in my mind but that the condition which is now causing distress among the cotton farmers of our Nation is this enormous surplus. At this point let me read to you the resolution under discussion.

Whereas the world is today confronted with an international crisis of the gravest magnitude; and

Whereas the market for American cotton is rapidly becoming demoralized; and

Whereas cotton is a vital commodity to national defense; and

Whereas the United States Government is in possession of the largest quantity of raw cotton in the world; and

Whereas there is now under consideration the disposal of American cotton to the foreign trade below the cost of production and considerably below its cost to this Government; and

Whereas such policy is fraught with the gravest dangers and injustices to the American farmers, American industry, and the national economy: Therefore be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that pending this world crisis no American cotton be sold to foreign purchasers at a price below the actual cost of said cotton to the Government of the United States, and that the Secretary of Agriculture is directed to negotiate no sales of American cotton to the foreign trade below its cost to this Government without the approval of the Congress.

Now, what would occur should we adopt the resolution? The Senate would go on record of simply closing every avenue for the exportation of cotton now under Government loans because it is specifically stated that no cotton that is under the loan may be sold for export purposes for less than the amount the Government has in the loan. I am not in favor of giving an advantage to a foreign mill as against our local operators. That, however, is not the question——

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LEE in the chair). Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. ELLENDER. I yield for a question; yes, sir.

Mr. GEORGE. Does not the Senator know that we now have in the United States 6,000,000 bales of free cotton that is not going into the foreign market?

Mr. ELLENDER. My figures do not so indicate. I propose to show to the Senate that the amount of free cotton at present is about 4,600,000 bales. As of January 31, 1939, it was almost 5,000,000 bales.

Mr. GEORGE. We have 4,600,000 bales of cotton, then, that is not under the loan and would not be affected by my resolution.

Mr. ELLENDER. It is my understanding that a good deal of that cotton is now in the hands of the mills. The mills have purchased it. And some of it is under contract.

Mr. GEORGE. They have less than 2,000,000 bales.

Mr. ELLENDER. My figures indicate that they have just about 2,000,000 bales on hand. That is correct.

Mr. GEORGE. Yes; and that leaves about 4,500,000 bales of free cotton.

Mr. ELLENDER. It is necessary to deduct that amount from the amount of free cotton.

Mr. GEORGE. Then, let me ask the Senator, will it do any good simply to transport a part of the American cotton now in the loan into the markets of Europe?

Mr. ELLENDER. Of course it will.

Mr. GEORGE. If that is done, where will we sell our 1939 crop?

Mr. ELLENDER. I mean, of course, for consumption.

Mr. GEORGE. Who is going to consume it?

Mr. ELLENDER. If we sell it abroad, I hope it will be consumed abroad and not brought back to this country.

Mr. GEORGE. Oh, I want to be courteous to the Senator.

Mr. ELLENDER. So do I.

Mr. GEORGE. But what purpose can be served by merely transferring cotton to Europe, when Europe already has a supply which she is not able to consume?

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, I have here facts and figures to show that Europe—in fact, other foreign countries—are presently purchasing quite a large quantity of cotton from cotton-producing countries which are selling it just below the American price, and which are getting the market for their cotton.

Mr. GEORGE. Certainly.

Mr. ELLENDER. If we continue this policy, what will happen is that the foreign producers of cotton will increase their production; we shall be giving them a chance to do it; and so long as we make conditions such that their price will be just under ours, they are bound to get the market. To me that is just common sense.

Mr. GEORGE. Let me say to the Senator that if we shall now pay Europe a subsidy to take our cotton, we shall have no place to sell the 1939 crop, and then it will be necessary to redouble the subsidy in order to move it at all.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, if we should continue to sell cotton to foreign countries at the present pace, we shall sell abroad just about 3,400,000 bales of cotton for the current season. That amount is as low as, if not lower than, the amount sold to foreign countries in any year in our past history. We have to make every effort to find some way to get rid of this enormous surplus of cotton.

Mr. GEORGE. The Senator would not get rid of it by merely shipping it across the street. It would simply be there to fill up the gap, to fill up the pail which is already full, and we should have no place to sell the 1939 crop of cotton. We can get rid of it, but not in that way.

Mr. ELLENDER. I cannot agree with the Senator from Georgia on that point. I feel that if we could but remove the cotton—and when I say "remove," I do not necessarily mean for immediate consumption—from the warehouses, and put it beyond the seas, our local cotton prices naturally would have a tendency to rise, because any reduction in our present surplus of cotton to the extent of 1,000,000, 2,000,000, or 3,000,000 bales would have a healthy effect on the domestic price of cotton.

I wish to say to the distinguished Senator from Georgia that I am not wedded to any particular plan.

Mr. GEORGE. I should agree with the Senator if the cotton moved normally; but if we should pay somebody to take it we should not have any stimulus of the price at home, because we would furnish our customers with cotton at a price lower than that at which we could furnish it to all the rest of the world, including ourselves. If we now supply those customers with cotton at a lower price than that at which we sell it to our own people, we shall have no place to sell the 1939 crop except through a subsidy, and the subsidy will have to be increased.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, if we further curtail our exports, instead of having at the end of the current cotton year a surplus of about 14,500,000 bales, we may have a surplus of as much as sixteen and one-half million or seventeen million bales; and then God pity the farmers.

Mr. GEORGE. God is pitying the farmers now, and especially the cotton farmers.

Mr. ELLENDER. Why?

Mr. GEORGE. Because the program we have followed has virtually wrecked the industry. I have no doubt about that so far as I am concerned, and I do not propose to apologize for my opinion. But what I am talking about now is the question, How does the Senator propose to better the condition by merely having some of our cotton shipped abroad, especially if we have to cut our price down below the price to our own people? What the Senator says might be very forceful if we did not already have free cotton for export; but we undoubtedly have some four and a half million bales of free cotton. Assume, however, that we have only two and a half million bales of free cotton; there simply is not a demand for it, and we are trying to create one by cutting the price down.

Mr. ELLENDER. If the Senator will permit me, in the course of my few remarks——

Mr. GEORGE. I will not interrupt the Senator further.

Mr. ELLENDER. I desire to point out to the Senate how the prices of foreign cotton in some way, somehow, have always been a shade under American prices, and foreign countries got the business and we had to sit back.

As I pointed out a while ago, the normal carry-over of cotton in this country should be about 40 percent of production. After 1924–25 the carry-over increased from 24.1 percent—and I may say that it fluctuated above and below that figure before and after the years I have just mentioned—to as high as 94.4 percent of production. So long as we are confronted with such an abnormal carry-over as presently exists we are bound to be faced with lower prices.

As I said before, if we do not dispose of any of this cotton in some way, if we follow the policy proposed in the George resolution, we are going to have a carry-over next year of 122 percent of our production; and then what will prices be? Will the Government continue lending money to the farmers in order to peg the price at 8.3 cents? If it does not, and we have on hand enough cotton for about 2 years, we might be lucky if we sell cotton for 3 cents a pound or I may say for any price at all.

As I have stated, I believe we ought to stand back of any proposal which would mean a disposition of a portion of the enormous surplus now on hand, and I am not willing at this time, by the adoption of Senate Resolution 107, to close an avenue for the disposal of some of the cotton.

In connection with my remarks I ask to have printed a table showing in detail the figures for the years about which I have just been speaking.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Cotton, American and foreign—Production, end of season carry-over, and percentage carry-over of production, 1920–21 to date

Crop year	American			Foreign
	United States production	World carry-over, end of season [1]	Percentage carry-over of production	Foreign production	World carry-over, end of season [1]	Percentage carry-over of production
	Bales	Bales		Bales	Bales
1920–21	13,664,000	9,674,000	70.8	6,964,000	5,495,000	78.9
1921–22	8,285,000	5,680,000	68.6	6,888,000	4,814,000	69.9
1922–23	10,124,000	3,318,000	32.8	8,327,000	4,253,000	51.1
1923–24	10,330,000	2,711,000	26.2	8,760,000	3,903,000	44.6
1924–25	14,006,000	3,380,000	24.1	10,088,000	4,568,000	45.3
1925–26	16,181,000	5,501,000	34.0	10,562,000	4,972,000	47.1
1926–27	18,162,000	7,845,000	43.2	9,768,000	4,809,000	49.2
1927–28	12,957,000	5,206,000	40.2	10,386,000	5,329,000	51.3
1928–29	14,555,000	4,517,000	31.0	11,247,000	6,024,000	53.6
1929–30	14,716,000	6,187,000	42.0	11,535,000	5,705,000	49.5
1930–31	13,873,000	8,976,000	64.7	11,503,000	5,832,000	50.7
1931–32	16,877,000	13,263,000	78.6	9,602,000	5,073,000	52.8
1932–33	12,961,000	11,809,000	91.1	10,500,000	5,307,000	50.5
1933–34	12,712,000	10,701,000	84.2	13,354,000	6,839,000	51.2
1934–35	9,576,000	9,041,000	94.4	13,474,000	6,031,000	44.8
1935–36	10,495,000	6,998,000	66.7	15,825,000	6,651,000	42.0
1936–37	12,375,000	6,235,000	50.4	18,476,000	7,531,000	40.8
1937–38	18,412,000	13,652,000	74.1	18,164,000	8,960,000	49.3
1938–39	11,850,000	----------	----------	16,000,000	----------	----------

[1] The carry-over at the end of the season cannot be added to the production of the season to get the supply. To get the supply, production is added to the carry-over at the end of the preceding season.

Compiled from reports of New York Cotton Exchange Service.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, with reference to the question asked by the distinguished Senator from Georgia as to the free cotton, I have before me a table prepared from statistics gathered by the Department of Agriculture which gives for each year the amount of free cotton in this country beginning with 1922–23, from August 1 to January 31, and February 1 to July 31 of each year. I shall not take the time of the Senate to read the table, but the figures show that the amount of free cotton now on hand is about as small as we have ever had. I offer the table at this point as a part of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TABLE 15.—Supply of American cotton in the United States and distribution of American cotton for 2 periods, Aug. 1–Jan. 31 and Feb. 1–July 31

[In thousands of running bales]

Period and season	Supply in the United States [1]	Distribution					"Free cotton" [3]
		Consumption	Exports	Mill stocks [2]	Government stocks	Total
Aug. 1 to Jan. 31:
1922–23	13,168	3,272	3,362	1,909	----------	8,543	4,625
1923–24	12,521	3,096	3,832	1,553	----------	8,481	4,040
1924–25	15,267	2,953	5,342	1,371	----------	9,666	5,601
1925–26	17,651	3,180	5,382	1,745	----------	10,307	7,344
1926–27	21,344	3,429	6,645	1,787	----------	11,861	9,483
1927–28	16,499	3,627	4,534	1,625	----------	9,786	6,713
1928–29	16,844	3,448	5,557	1,697	----------	10,702	6,142
1929–30	16,843	3,314	4,893	1,730	1,315	11,252	5,591
1930–31	18,292	2,460	4,466	1,522	3,592	12,040	6,252
1931–32	23,087	2,626	4,897	1,583	3,389	12,495	10,592
1932–33	22,390	2,812	4,968	1,455	2,579	11,814	10,576
1933–34	20,728	2,923	4,902	1,557	4,004	13,386	7,342
1934–35	17,196	2,622	2,874	1,148	5,531	12,175	5,021
1935–36	17,528	2,954	4,002	1,406	5,095	13,457	4,071
1936–37	17,498	3,773	3,464	2,041	3,018	12,296	5,202
1937–38	22,544	3,003	3,866	1,716	6,513	15,098	7,446
1938–39	23,067	3,332	2,192	1,589	11,011	18,124	4,943
Feb. 1 to July 31:
1922–23	7,003	3,394	1,427	981	----------	5,802	1,201
1923–24	5,821	2,585	1,815	638	----------	5,038	783
1924–25	7,383	3,240	2,657	787	----------	6,684	699
1925–26	9,377	3,276	2,663	1,010	----------	6,949	2,428

[1] Supply first half of season includes carry-over Aug. 1, plus ginnings from Aug. 1 to Jan. 31 plus city crop accumulations.

[2] Stocks in consuming establishments on Jan. 31 and July 31.

[3] "Free cotton" is defined as that cotton which is available for trade channels and does not include mill stocks. Supply minus total distribution equals "free cotton."

TABLE 15.—Supply of American cotton in the United States and distribution of American cotton for 2 periods, Aug. 1–Jan. 31 and Feb. 1–July 31—Continued

Period and season	Supply in the United States	Distribution					"Free cotton"
		Consumption	Exports	Mill stocks	Government stocks	Total
Feb. 1 to July 31—Con.
1926–27	11,721	3,761	4,318	1,325	----------	9,404	2,317
1927–28	8,723	3,207	3,105	935	----------	7,247	1,476
1928–29	8,234	3,643	2,496	932	333	7,404	830
1929–30	8,968	2,792	1,804	1,048	1,312	6,956	2,012
1930–31	11,486	2,803	2,354	922	3,393	9,472	2,014
1931–32	15,762	2,240	3,857	1,163	2,379	9,639	6,123
1932–33	14,909	3,325	3,458	1,298	1,129	9,210	5,699
1933–34	13,133	2,777	2,650	1,172	3,002	9,601	3,532
1934–35	12,560	2,619	1,942	749	5,088	10,398	2,162
1935–36	10,641	3,267	2,038	855	3,237	9,397	1,244
1936–37	10,429	3,995	2,047	1,218	1,665	8,925	1,504
1937–38	15,865	2,613	1,806	1,223	6,964	12,606	3,259

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, will my colleague yield?

Mr. ELLENDER. I yield for a question.

Mr. OVERTON. Is there anything incompatible with the theory now being advocated by the junior Senator from Louisiana and the proposal that three or four million bales of Government-controlled cotton be turned over at a certain price to the producers of cotton in consideration of their reducing their acreage?

Mr. ELLENDER. No; there is not.

Mr. OVERTON. In connection with the Senator's remarks, I wish to say that I think both suggestions are worthy of consideration. We should undertake to get rid of the surplus in some way or other, and a very practical way would be to attempt to dispose of the cotton in foreign markets, under an export bonus, and also to attempt to dispose of the cotton by turning it over to the producers of cotton in the United States in consideration of their reduction of acreage during the coming season.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Louisiana yield to me?

Mr. ELLENDER. I yield for a question.

Mr. McNARY. I regard very highly the opinion and good judgment of the able Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. ELLENDER. I thank the Senator.

Mr. McNARY. A few days ago I expressed a want of sympathy with the proposal made by the distinguished senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], in which I think the Senator and I are in accord.

I read with considerable interest this morning the plan suggested by the President of the United States with respect to paying a bounty, a bonus, on the exportation of cotton, at the rate of about a quarter of a cent a pound, which would be $1.25 a bale. Has the Senator given any consideration to the proposal made by the President, and published in the press this morning?

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, I have read in the newspapers of the proposal of the President, and offhand I should say it shows us a way, I believe, of getting rid of some of our surplus. If we can dispose of a million or a million and a half or two million bales of cotton, we will have that much cotton out of the way and, in my humble opinion, it would have a tendency to cause our domestic price to rise.

Mr. McNARY. Would it have the effect of restoring our influence in foreign markets?

Mr. ELLENDER. It certainly would. That is one of the purposes I have in mind as I propose to discuss with the Senate in just a few minutes. We have gradually lost our export cotton market during the past few years. There has been a gradual decrease and——

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ELLENDER. I yield for a question.

Mr. BILBO. I wish to make a suggestion brought to mind by the Senator's observation. He says we have lost our export trade in the last 3 years.

Mr. ELLENDER. I will not say that we have entirely lost it, but we have been gradually losing it.

Mr. BILBO. Will the Senator kindly tell us why we have been gradually losing it?

Mr. ELLENDER. I tried to point out to the Senate awhile ago that the main reason for that is because we cannot compete with foreign producers.

Our enormous crop of 19,000,000 bales in 1937 has been a sore spot, to my way of thinking, to the cotton producers, and because of that crop and the large surplus on hand as the result of it I do not see how the price of cotton can go up more than the pegged price resulting from our loans. If we continue to follow the policy now being pursued, I fear that the increase in the production of foreign cotton will be greater than it has been; and that is the point which I now propose to present to the Senate to show exactly what has occurred in the past 20 years.

I do not believe that the Agricultural Act of 1937, under which we have curtailed cotton production in this country, has materially increased production abroad. I cannot see that it has. It may have had some effect, but the figures I will present to the Senate will demonstrate that the increase in foreign production has been gradual for over 20 years, and the foreign nations are in a measure doing what we are advocating for our farmers, the live-at-home program. That is what a good many of the foreign nations are doing, and, of course, that has given impetus to cotton production within those nations.

Listen to these figures which I quote to show the increased cotton acreage from 1920 to 1921. I have the figures by countries—Mexico, Argentina, Egypt, Turkey, Belgian Congo, Bulgaria, and other countries. The total foreign acreage in 1920 was 32,092,000. In 1921–22 it was 29,322,000 acres. There was a small drop. From that time on until the year 1937–38 the foreign planting of cotton increased to the total of 59,399,000 acres.

I ask unanimous consent that the table be placed in the RECORD at this point. I am not going to take the time of the Senate to discuss it. It shows that the increase in acreage has been gradual, and must not be considered to be limited to the last 3 or 4 years when our cotton-curtailment program has been in effect.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the table may be printed in the RECORD at this point.

The table is as follows:

Cotton: Acreage in specified countries, and world total, 1920–21 to date

Crop year	Mexico	Argentina	Anglo-Egyptian Sudan	Chosen	Turkey	Belgian Congo	Bulgaria	Total foreign	World
	1,000 acres	1,000 acres	1,000 acres	1,000 acres	1,000 acres	1,000 acres	1,000 acres	1,000 acres	1,000 acres
1920–21	[1]	59	85	359	[1]	74	5	32,092	66,500
1921–22	241	39	87	362	[1]	86	4	29,322	58,000
1922–23	343	56	64	370	[1]	124	4	33,539	64,900
1923–24	292	155	116	389	[1]	185	4	36,300	71,850
1924–25	246	258	174	418	396	148	5	41,199	80,700
1925–26	425	272	239	485	392	173	7	43,314	87,700
1926–27	613	177	216	529	346	235	7	39,942	84,550
1927–28	326	210	239	503	225	272	13	39,758	78,100
1928–29	502	245	284	503	407	265	13	42,866	85,300
1929–30	492	301	369	456	301	314	14	43,168	86,400
1930–31	390	315	387	473	609	337	13	43,006	85,450
1931–32	319	336	336	472	491	368	14	43,396	82,100
1932–33	192	342	325	390	358	472	20	42,609	78,500
1933–34	424	482	333	432	401	539	51	46,717	76,100
1934–35	418	707	365	474	486	662	48	48,634	75,500
1935–36	599	763	392	514	520	751	89	51,820	79,460
1936–37	845	713	475	561	627	852	77	54,882	84,910
1937–38 [2]	830	1,035	443	548	792	----------	114	59,399	93,400
1938–39 [2]	----------	1,018	----------	576	483	----------	143	50,144	75,490
1939–40	----------	----------	----------	----------	----------	----------	----------	----------	----------
1940–41	----------	----------	----------	----------	----------	----------	----------	----------	----------

[1] Comparable data not available.
[2] Preliminary.

NOTE.—Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Compiled from official sources and reports of the International Institute of Agriculture or estimates of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ELLENDER. I yield.

Mr. GEORGE. I ask the Senator from Louisiana to give the increase since 1933–34.

Mr. ELLENDER. Before I do so let me go back to the years 1929–30. The total foreign acreage in 1929–30 was 43,168,000. In 1930–31 it was 43,006,000 acres. In 1931–32 it was 43,396,000 acres. In 1932–33 it was 42,609,000 acres.

Mr. GEORGE. Did the Senator say 42,000,000 acres?

Mr. ELLENDER. Yes. Those are the figures I have.

In 1933–34 it was 46,717,000 acres. In 1934–35 it was 48,634,000 acres. In 1935–36 it was 51,820,000 acres. In 1936–37 it was 54,882,000 acres. In 1937–38 it was 59,399,000 acres.

Mr. President, if we are to continue a program under which we will keep on piling up cotton in our warehouses and not sell it, we are bound to invite further increases in cotton production abroad. Further curtailment will, no doubt, increase foreign expansion.

We ought to do all in our power to make the use of cotton "the thing," as it were.

Let me give the Senate some figures with respect to the increase in the use of rayon in competition with cotton. I have a table which shows the use of rayon by countries. It gives the figures with respect to Japan, Germany, Italy, Great Britain, France, and other nations. The increase in the use of rayon in the United States, from 1920 to 1937, was from 10,000,000 to 341,000,000 pounds. I am using round numbers. In Japan the use of rayon increased from 200,000 to 509,000,000 pounds. In Germany the use of rayon increased from 5,200,000 to 345,000,000 pounds.

The total of rayon used by all countries takes the place of over 4,000,000 bales of cotton, I am informed.

At this point I ask that the table from which I have just quoted be printed in the RECORD in connection with my remarks.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Production of continuous filament rayon and rayon stable fiber, in specified countries, 1920 to date

[In millions of pounds]

Year	United States	Japan	Germany	Italy	Great Britain	France	Other	World total
1920	10.1	0.2	5.2	1.6	6.0	3.4	6.6	33.1
1921	15.0	.2	7.7	3.2	9.0	4.4	8.7	48.2
1922	24.1	.5	11.0	6.6	14.5	6.8	13.1	76.6
1923	35.0	.8	14.3	11.0	17.0	7.7	17.2	103.0
1924	36.3	1.4	23.2	17.6	24.7	13.2	21.9	138.3
1925	51.0	3.2	26.0	30.8	29.8	14.3	30.2	185.3
1926	62.7	5.0	24.7	36.8	25.5	19.2	37.8	211.7
1927	75.6	10.5	41.3	53.8	38.8	24.2	50.9	295.1
1928	97.2	16.5	48.9	57.3	52.1	29.9	58.5	360.4
1929	121.9	27.0	60.8	73.0	55.3	41.8	62.6	442.4
1930	127.7	36.6	63.4	67.0	47.8	50.6	64.3	437.4
1931	151.8	49.0	66.3	75.6	53.9	44.5	67.6	508.7
1932	135.8	70.2	60.9	71.7	71.1	52.2	72.5	534.4
1933	215.6	99.3	71.6	84.4	82.5	59.2	78.6	691.2
1934	210.5	157.8	100.6	107.4	91.3	61.6	95.1	824.3
1935	262.2	237.9	135.5	153.4	121.5	66.7	101.7	1,078.9
1936	289.9	320.8	193.6	196.1	143.0	65.9	109.8	1,319.1
1937	341.9	509.1	345.0	262.9	152.4	77.7	129.3	1,818.3

Rayon staple fiber production not given prior to 1929.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at this point for a question?

Mr. ELLENDER. Yes; I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. I have been very much interested in the Senator's statement with respect to the increase of cotton acreage in foreign countries. I cannot get away from this thought with respect to the matter. The figures presented have a tendency to show—I think they do show—that the production of cotton outside of the United States has been increasing for a great many years, and the cost of production in foreign countries, as I understand, has been decreasing. Is that true?

Mr. ELLENDER. The cost of what?

Mr. NORRIS. The cost of production of cotton. Is cotton produced cheaper in foreign countries than we can produce it in the United States?

Mr. ELLENDER. I have no figures on that point, I will say to the Senator from Nebraska, but I am sure that cotton is produced abroad much cheaper than we can produce it. Peon labor is largely used in the production of cotton. We produce a better staple of cotton and there is some demand for our cotton.

Mr. NORRIS. Admitting those two facts, it seems to me we are faced with the situation that the continued production of cotton in the United States, at least on a scale larger than we can consume, is doomed. I hate to say that, Mr. President. I do not want to reach that conclusion, but do not those figures lead logically to the conclusion that we in the United States must face the fact that as a permanent proposition we cannot expect to have much of a foreign market for cotton.

Mr. ELLENDER. I will say to the Senator from Nebraska that what we ought to do is to try to maintain as much of the foreign market for cotton as we possibly can.

Mr. NORRIS. The figures presented show that various countries can produce cotton, and I understand they have considerably more land on which they can produce cotton, and produce it cheaper than we can produce it. Therefore we cannot compete with them in the foreign markets; and we will come to the time when we will have to place a protective tariff on foreign cotton, and prohibit such cotton from coming into the United States and competing with the cotton we are producing. I do not reach that conclusion because I want to, but it seems to me that the logical mathematical figures which confront us lead to that conclusion, and that we cannot escape it. I should like to ask the Senator if that is his idea, and if the statement is correct?

Mr. ELLENDER. There is, I admit, a great deal of truth in what the Senator is saying; but we cannot remain idle and let our foreign trade in cotton be whittled down to nothing. It strikes me that we ought to do something about the situation. Let us make every effort to dispose of our present surpluses and grow better cotton than our competitors. That is possible, I believe.

Mr. NORRIS. I do not want to let our foreign trade in cotton be whittled down to nothing; but are we not faced with the situation I have stated?

Mr. ELLENDER. That is the proposition I am discussing; that by all means we ought not to close the doors to a possible method of ridding ourselves of some of this surplus cotton. If a subsidy is to be allowed under any plan proposed, I believe that the domestic mills which have cotton goods to sell abroad should be treated the same as foreign mills. In other words, all cotton that is manufactured into cloth in this country for foreign exportation should receive the same subsidy as is given to cotton shipped to foreign mills, so that it cannot be said that we are treating our local mills which operate in the foreign trade differently from the mills in foreign countries.

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President——

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, I would like to yield to the Senator from Mississippi, but as I said a while ago, I have a very important hearing which I am conducting, and I should like to close my remarks. However, I will yield to the Senator from Mississippi for a question if he desires to ask one.

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, I shall not ask the Senator to yield now.

Mr. ELLENDER. I wish to point out to the Senate that in this country we have some of the largest cotton factors, Americans, who are now interested in developing cotton production in Brazil, in competition with cotton produced in the United States. I cite figures of exports of cotton by leading firms through Santos, Brazil, from March 1 to November 30, 1938. At least three American concerns are interested in this Brazilian cotton. They are not only interested in exporting it but those patriotic Americans have advanced millions of dollars, I am informed, for the production of cotton in that country.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ELLENDER. I yield.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Is that not in keeping with the general idea of other American industrialists, especially the oil interests, who produce oil in Brazil, Colombia, Venezuela, and a little now in Mexico and send it over by tankers every day in the week, while the production of oil in New Mexico and Louisiana is curtailed?

Mr. ELLENDER. Yes; it is to some extent.

Let me give the figures of cotton exportations through Santos, Brazil, from March 1 to November 30, 1938. The company heading the list is a foreigner, Algodoeira do Sul Limitada. The second is Anderson, Clayton & Co., an American firm which is supposedly deeply interested in the American cotton farmer. McFadden & Co. is a little farther down the list. Another American concern on the list is Dixon, Irmaos & Co.

Between March 1 and November 30, 1938, Anderson, Clayton & Co. exported from Brazil 93,686 bales of cotton. The highest amount exported was 133,169 bales, by Algodoeira do Sul Limitada. McFadden & Co. exported 29,800 bales; Dixon, Irmaos & Co., 22,838 bales. All those exportations were made by American firms in the face of the enormous surpluses which we have in the United States. I am not blaming these patriotic Americans, but, so far as I am concerned, I am trying to look out for the interests of our own people.

Let me give the Senate a few figures on the amount of money which has been spent in Brazil, largely, I am told, by some of the cotton factors of whom I have spoken. I cite figures with regard to investments in gins—machinery for removing the seed from the cotton. In 1933 the value of those investments was $68,081; in 1934, $558,305; in 1935, $847,197. That was money spent in Brazil to buy gins in order to create, as I conceive it, more cotton acreage. In 1936 the amount was $663,161; and in 1937, $631,942.

Mr. President, just a few more remarks and I shall have concluded. I present to the Senate, and I ask that there be printed in connection with my remarks, a few tables showing the price of American cotton on the Liverpool market in comparison with Indian cotton, Egyptian cotton, and Brazilian cotton.

There being no objection, the tables were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Spot price per pound of specified growths of cotton at Liverpool expressed as a percentage—Each growth is of American Middling and exports from the United States

Season	As percentage of American Middling			Exports from the United States
	Indian [1]	Egyptian [1]	Brazilian [1]
	Percent	Percent	Percent	Running bales
1920–21	71.6	139.7	92.2	5,745,000
1921–22	82.6	132.4	95.9	6,184,000
1922–23	74.2	104.6	96.0	4,823,000
1923–24	73.9	116.0	97.9	5,666,000
1924–25	86.7	141.4	100.6	8,005,000
1925–26	83.2	133 1	93.7	8,051,000
1926–27	88.0	142.5	91.2	10,927,000
1927–28	82.4	131.3	95.9	7,542,000
1928–29	76.4	115.0	96.6	8,044,000
1929–30	70.2	115.7	93.6	6,690,000
1930–31	70.6	119.9	98.1	6,760,000
1931–32	90.0	118.5	99.4	8,707,000
1932–33	86.1	125.2	101.0	8,419,000
1933–34	75.1	110.8	98.8	7,534,000
1934–35	75.8	108.8	97.4	4,798,000
1935–36	79.9	114.8	99.8	5,973,000
1936–37	74.4	119.0	96.6	5,440,000
1937–38	77.1	126.7	98.7	5,598,000
1937–38 [2]	78.4	132.0	98.9	3,832,000
1938–39 [2]	71.1	123.3	95.9	2,192,000

[1] Indian Oomra No. 1 Fine, Egyptian Uppers F. G. F., and Brazilian Sao Paulo Fair.

[2] Percentages are averages of 6 months, August–January. Exports, total 6 months, August–January.

Source: Compiled from reports of the Liverpool Cotton Association, Bureau of the Census, and New York Cotton Exchange.

Spot price per pound of specified growths at Liverpool, and percentage each growth is of American Middling, 1920–21 to date

Season beginning Aug. 1	Actual price per pound				As percentage of American Middling—
	American Middling, ⅞-inch	Indian Oomra, No. 1 Fine	Egyptian Uppers, F. G. F.	Brazilian Sao Paulo, Fair	Indian	Egyptian	Brazilian
	Cents	Cents	Cents	Cents	Percent	Percent	Percent
1920–21	19.73	14.14	28.20	18.28	71.6	139.7	92.2
1921–22	20.19	16.71	26.63	19.36	82.6	132.4	95.9
1922–23	28.70	21.26	29.96	27.58	74.2	104.6	96.0
1923–24	32.99	24.37	38.19	32.31	73.9	116.0	97.9
1924–25	27.09	23.49	38.30	27.22	86.7	141.4	100.6
1925–26	21.82	18.15	29.14	20.48	83.2	133.1	93.7
1926–27	16.57	14.58	23.55	15.13	88.0	142.5	91.2

Spot price per pound of specified growths at Liverpool, and percentage each growth is of American Middling, 1920–21 to date—Continued

Season beginning Aug. 1	Actual price per pound				As percentage of American Middling—
	American Middling, ⅞-inch	Indian Oomra, No. 1 Fine	Egyptian Uppers, F. G. F.	Brazilian Sao Paulo, Fair	Indian	Egyptian	Brazilian
	Cents	Cents	Cents	Cents	Percent	Percent	Percent
1927–28	22.65	18.66	29.71	21.72	82.4	131.3	95.9
1928–29	21.36	16.30	24.57	20.64	76.4	115.0	96.6
1929–30	18.44	12.95	21.25	17.27	70.2	115.7	93.6
1930–31	11.61	8.19	13.95	11.36	70.6	119.9	98.1
1931–32	7.54	6.76	8.93	7.50	90.0	118.5	99.4
1932–33	8.52	7.29	10.61	8.61	86.1	125.2	101.0
1933–34	12.47	9.35	13.77	12.28	75.1	110.8	98.8
1934–35	14.24	10.78	15.49	13.86	75.8	108.8	97.4
1935–36	13.50	10.78	15.49	13.45	79.9	114.8	99.8
1936–37	14.62	10.87	17.40	14.12	74.4	119.0	96.6
1937–38	10.31	7.96	13.10	10.18	77.1	126.7	98.7
1938–39 [1]	9.96	7.08	12.28	9.55	71.1	123.3	95.9
September 1937	11.06	8.46	14.80	10.86	76.5	133.8	98.1
September 1938	9.59	6.93	12.27	9.27	72.2	128.0	96.7
January 1938	10.29	8.06	13.04	10.29	78.3	126.7	100.0
January 1939	10.10	6.97	11.54	9.61	69.0	113.9	95.2
10-year average, 1920–21 to 1929–30	22.95	18.06	28.95	22.00	78.7	126.1	95.9

[1] Average of 6 months, August–January.

Source: Bureau of Agricultural Economics from reports of the Liverpool Cotton Association.

Mr. ELLENDER. With reference to Indian and Brazilian, but not Egyptian cotton, the price in almost every instance for every year has been just a shade under the price of American cotton. For that reason I believe that those countries obtained a good share of the market that was formerly ours.

The tables show, for example, that from 1920–21 to 1938–39 the price of Brazilian cotton on the Liverpool market has always been under that of American cotton except for the years 1924–25, 1932–33, and in January 1938, when it was the same.

Mr. President, there is another method of getting rid of some of our cotton. I have a bill pending which would have that effect. I should like to take more cotton and use it for our own people. In this country we have millions of people who could use better cotton mattresses or who could wear better overalls or better shirts. However, I fear that because of the enormous cost we can use only a limited amount of our cotton in order to carry out that purpose. I shall show why, especially with reference to the manufacture of the cotton into usable cloth. I have some figures to show the relative cost of manufacturing cloth, in comparison with the price of raw cotton and the retail price of the shirts, overalls, or what nots made from the cloth.

With respect to men's shirts, a bale of cotton at 8 cents a pound would cost $40. The wholesale value of the fabric alone would be $133. In other words, a bale of cotton made into available fabric would cost $133, or $93 more than the value of the cotton.

Let us go a step further. If we take that fabric and make it into men's shirts, the average retail price of those shirts would be $775.

Let us take pajamas. The average retail value of the garments would be $600 per bale of cotton.

In the case of a cheaper class of men's shirts than I have just mentioned, the cost of a bale of cotton would be $40; the wholesale value of the fabric, $144; and the average retail value of the garments would be $540.

In the case of trousers, the bale of cotton would cost $40. The average retail value of khaki trousers would be $520 per bale.

It can readily be seen from these figures that the Government would be required to put up an enormous amount of money to manufacture into cloth and distribute among the poor people any appreciable amount of the excess cotton. I want to do that, but I am convinced that we can do it only to a limited extent. My bill proposes that 1,600,000 bales of the old cotton from back in 1934 be used, not only to make shirts, pajamas, and overalls but mattresses as well.

In connection with my remarks, Mr. President, I ask that the table to which I have referred be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The table is as follows:

Approximate value of lint cotton and approximate value of cotton products at various stages of manufacture and distribution per bale of cotton [1]

Item	Cost of lint cotton	Wholesale value of fabric [2]	Average retail value of garments [3]	High retail value of garments [3]	Low retail value of garments [3]
	Per bale
Men's shirts, 4.10-yard, white broadcloth	$40.00	$133.00	$775.00	$1,000.00	$580.00
Pajamas, printed, 5.35-yard print cloth	40.00	-------	600.00	650.00	550.00
Men's pajamas, 4.10-yard solid-color broadcloth	40.00	159.00	580.00	680.00	435.00
Men's shirts, 3.90-yard chambray, sanforized	40.00	144.00	540.00	650.00	440.00
Men's shirts, 5.90-yard covert, sanforized	40.00	-------	530.00	660.00	400.00
Trousers, work, 8-ounce khaki drill, sanforized	40.00	114.00	530.00	610.00	420.00
Trousers, work, 2.50-yard khaki drill, regular finish	40.00	-------	520.00	650.00	400.00
Men's shirts, 3.90-yard chambray, regular finish	40.00	110.00	460.00	650.00	360.00
Men's shorts, printed, 80 by 60 broadcloth	40.00	-------	420.00	610.00	350.00
Overalls, 2.20 denim	40.00	90.00	270.00	360.00	185.00

[1] No allowance made for seconds.
[2] Based on Works Progress Administration purchases and Daily News Record prices, June 1938.
[3] Based on preliminary Government data, March 1938.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, I shall not consume any more of the Senate's time to quote from a table showing the relative income of cotton farmers, hog farmers, tobacco farmers, and producers of other crops in relation to national income. I shall ask that the table be inserted in the RECORD in connection with my remarks. The figures are very interesting, and I hope that the Members of the Senate will take occasion to study them.

Mr. President, I ask that the table referred to be inserted in the RECORD at this point in my remarks.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Cash farm income from cotton and cottonseed and national income paid out, and ratio of farm income from cotton and cottonseed to national income, 1909–38

[In millions of dollars]

	Farm cash income from cotton and cottonseed	National income paid out	Ratio of income from cotton and cottonseed to national income
			Percent
1909	-------	26,235	-------
1910	880.5	27,924	3.15
1911	854.7	28,284	3.02
1912	851.7	30,178	2.82
1913	968.2	31,890	3.04
1914	602.0	31,694	1.90
1915	830.0	32,997	2.52
1916	1,148.3	38,794	2.96
1917	1,603.7	47,192	3.40
1918	1,784.5	55,097	3.24
1919	2,282.0	60,150	3.79
1920	1,475.8	64,115	2.30
1921	852.2	53,644	1.59
1922	1,147.9	57,037	2.01
1923	1,568.8	64,501	2.43
1924	1,663.5	68,160	2.44
1925	1,762.4	72,580	2.43
1926	1,222.3	74,795	1.63
1927	1,500.0	75,685	1.98
1928	1,452.6	77,359	1.88
1929	1,512.0	79,704	1.90
1930	824.1	73,542	1.12
1931	497.0	61,609	.81
1932	460.7	48,644	.95
1933	577.6	46,089	1.25
1934	862.9	53,172	1.62
1935	711.8	57,564	1.24
1936	904.9	64,809	1.40
1937	883.8	71,013	1.24
1938	667.2	65,991	1.01

Cash farm income from cotton and cottonseed and national income paid out, and ratio of farm income from cotton and cottonseed to national income, 1909–38—Continued

	Farm cash income from cotton and cottonseed	National income paid out	Ratio of income from cotton and cottonseed to national income
Including Government payments:			Percent
1933	689.0	-------	1.49
1934	1,005.2	-------	1.89
1935	857.7	-------	1.49
1936	990.9	-------	1.53
1937	952.8	-------	1.34
1938	933.2	-------	1.41

Sources: Farm income, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, except that Government payments since 1935 are Agricultural Adjustment Administration estimates of payments applicable to the year's production rather than calendar-year payments; national income, Agricultural Adjustment Administration estimates based on Department of Commerce national income studies and Bureau of Agricultural Economics farm-income data.

Cash and gross farm income from wheat and national income paid out, and ratio of farm income from wheat to national income, 1909–38

	Farm income from wheat		National income paid out	Ratio of income from wheat to national income
	Gross	Cash		Gross income	Cash income
	Million dollars	Million dollars	Million dollars	Percent	Percent
1909	-------	-------	26,235	-------	-------
1910	505.5	494.6	27,924	1.81	1.77
1911	456.9	446.0	28,284	1.62	1.58
1912	503.4	493.3	30,178	1.67	1.63
1913	503.8	492.9	31,890	1.58	1.55
1914	684.3	674.0	31,694	2.16	2.13
1915	786.4	773.4	32,997	2.38	2.34
1916	844.3	828.6	38,794	2.18	2.14
1917	1,092.0	1,066.9	47,192	2.31	2.26
1918	1,560.7	1,532.7	55,097	2.83	2.78
1919	1,597.8	1,572.4	60,150	2.66	2.61
1920	1,394.0	1,367.8	64,115	2.17	2.13
1921	880.4	866.0	53,644	1.64	1.61
1922	673.5	661.0	57,037	1.18	1.16
1923	616.9	605.0	64,501	.96	.94
1924	811.5	798.8	68,160	1.19	1.17
1925	860.8	843.6	72,580	1.19	1.16
1926	857.9	842.9	74,795	1.15	1.13
1927	907.2	895.0	75,685	1.20	1.18
1928	780.7	770.5	77,359	1.01	1.00
1929	735.0	726.9	79,704	0.92	0.91
1930	460.5	451.4	73,542	.63	.61
1931	273.7	265.7	61,609	.44	.43
1932	207.0	199.8	48,644	.43	.41
1933	316.3	304.0	46,089	.69	.66
1934	330.6	316.7	53,172	.62	.60
1935	386.0	372.2	57,564	.67	.65
1936	464.5	450.8	64,809	.72	.70
1937	617.5	603.0	71,013	.87	.85
1938	440.0	430.4	65,991	.67	.65
Including Government payments:
1933	334.7	322.4	-------	.73	.70
1934	459.0	445.1	-------	.86	.84
1935	494.9	481.1	-------	.86	.84
1936	519.5	505.8	-------	.80	.78
1937	647.5	633.0	-------	.91	.89
1938	500.0	490.4	-------	.76	.74

Sources: Farm income, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, except that Government payments since 1935 are Agricultural Adjustment Administration estimates of payments applicable to the year's production rather than calendar year payments; national income, Agricultural Adjustment Administration estimates based on Department of Commerce national income studies and Bureau of Agricultural Economics farm income data.

Cash and gross farm income from cattle and calves and national income paid out, and ratio of farm income from cattle and calves to national income, 1909–38

	Farm income from cattle and calves		National income paid out	Ratio of income from cattle and calves to national income
	Gross	Cash		Gross income	Cash income
	Million dollars	Million dollars	Million dollars	Percent	Percent
1909	814.3	785.4	26,235	3.10	2.99
1910	882.6	851.0	27,924	3.16	3.05
1911	812.7	783.7	28,284	2.87	2.77
1912	917.1	894.6	30,178	3.04	2.93

Cash and gross farm income from cattle and calves and national income paid out, and ratio of farm income from cattle and calves to national income, 1909–38—Continued

	Farm income from cattle and calves		National income paid out	Ratio of income from cattle and calves to national income
	Gross	Cash		Gross income	Cash income
	Million dollars	Million dollars	Million dollars	Percent	Percent
1913	1,035.6	999.3	31,890	3.25	3.13
1914	1,022.6	985.5	31,694	3.23	3.11
1915	998.9	965.6	32,997	3.03	2.93
1916	1,166.5	1,131.7	38,794	3.01	2.92
1917	1,693.0	1,650.8	47,192	3.59	3.50
1918	2,076.6	2,028.8	55,097	3.77	3.68
1919	1,967.7	1,920.8	60,150	3.27	3.19
1920	1,569.5	1,528.4	64,115	2.45	2.38
1921	902.8	875.9	53,644	1.68	1.63
1922	1,063.4	1,037.1	57,037	1.86	1.82
1923	1,068.5	1,042.5	64,501	1.66	1.62
1924	1,142.8	1,118.8	68,160	1.68	1.64
1925	1,275.7	1,252.1	72,580	1.76	1.73
1926	1,294.1	1,271.3	74,795	1.73	1.70
1927	1,359.6	1,335.9	75,685	1.80	1.77
1928	1,581.1	1,555.8	77,359	2.04	2.01
1929	1,519.2	1,494.8	79,704	1.91	1.88
1930	1,204.3	1,183.6	73,542	1.64	1.61
1931	854.1	838.0	61,609	1.39	1.36
1932	635.5	620.6	48,644	1.31	1.28
1933	613.5	599.5	46,089	1.33	1.30
1934	830.2	815.4	53,172	1.56	1.53
1935	1,082.5	1,061.8	57,564	1.88	1.84
1936	1,118.5	1,097.8	64,809	1.73	1.69
1937	1,240.2	1,217.2	71,013	1.75	1.71
1938	932.0	909.0	65,991	1.41	1.38

Source: Farm income, Bureau of Agricultural Economics; national income, Agricultural Adjustment Administration; estimates based on Department of Commerce national income studies and Bureau of Agricultural Economics farm income data.

Cash and gross farm income from hogs and national income paid out, and ratio of farm income from hogs to national income, 1909–38

	Farm income from hogs		National income paid out	Ratio of income from hogs to national income
	Gross	Cash		Gross income	Cash income
	Million dollars	Million dollars	Million dollars	Percent	Percent
1909	792.3	592.8	26,235	3.02	2.26
1910	907.3	669.9	27,924	3.25	2.40
1911	797.0	617.0	28,284	2.82	2.18
1912	829.4	647.5	30,178	2.75	2.15
1913	947.7	740.5	31,890	2.97	2.32
1914	921.4	712.5	31,794	2.91	2.25
1915	885.6	691.2	32,997	2.68	2.09
1916	1,185.9	949.0	38,794	3.06	2.45
1917	1,692.7	1,298.9	47,192	3.59	2.75
1918	2,371.8	1,866.3	55,097	4.30	3.39
1919	2,433.3	1,911.2	60,150	4.05	3.18
1920	1,808.1	1,384.9	64,115	2.82	2.16
1921	1,105.1	856.9	53,644	2.06	1.60
1922	1,271.4	1,023.6	57,037	2.23	1.79
1923	1,238.5	1,027.1	64,501	1.92	1.59
1924	1,283.4	1,064.0	68,160	1.88	1.56
1925	1,621.1	1,318.6	72,580	2.23	1.82
1926	1,729.7	1,407.2	74,795	2.31	1.88
1927	1,510.2	1,237.5	75,685	2.00	1.64
1928	1,447.9	1,218.5	77,369	1.87	1.58
1929	1,540.6	1,296.8	79,704	1.93	1.63
1930	1,368.7	1,135.5	73,542	1.86	1.54
1931	949.8	774.2	61,609	1.54	1.26
1932	557.2	444.6	48,644	1.15	.91
1933	631.5	523.9	46,089	1.37	1.14
1934	646.0	520.6	53,172	1.21	.98
1935	877.6	671.4	57,564	1.52	1.17
1936	1,211.4	964.7	64,809	1.87	1.49
1937	1,140.7	906.5	71,013	1.61	1.28
1938	1,090.0	856.0	65,991	1.65	1.30

Cash and gross farm income from hogs and national income paid out, and ratio of farm income from hogs to national income, 1909–38—Continued

	Farm income from hogs		National income paid out	Ratio of income from hogs to national income
	Gross	Cash		Gross income	Cash income
Including Government payments:	Million dollars	Million dollars	Million dollars	Percent	Percent
1934	749.0	623.6		1.41	1.17
1935	1,011.6	805.4		1.76	1.40
1936	1,246.4	999.7		1.92	1.54
1937	1,150.7	916.5		1.62	1.29
1938	1,124.0	890.0		1.70	1.35

Source: Farm income, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, except that Government payments since 1935 are Agricultural Adjustment Administration estimates; national income, Agricultural Adjustment Administration estimates based on Department of Commerce national income studies and Bureau of Agricultural Economics farm income data.

Cash farm income from tobacco and national income paid out, and ratio of farm income from tobacco to national income, 1909–38

[In millions of dollars]

	Farm cash income from tobacco	National income paid out	Ratio of income from tobacco to national income
			Percent
1909	87.8	26,235	0.33
1910	101.9	27,924	.36
1911	95.8	28,284	.34
1912	108.5	30,178	.36
1913	134.9	31,890	.42
1914	99.2	31,694	.31
1915	93.2	32,997	.28
1916	138.8	38,794	.36
1917	241.5	47,192	.51
1918	343.2	55,097	.62
1919	499.9	60,150	.83
1920	294.7	64,115	.46
1921	252.4	53,644	.47
1922	248.8	57,037	.44
1923	275.6	64,501	.43
1924	260.1	68,160	.38
1925	259.6	72,580	.36
1926	239.6	74,795	.32
1927	245.6	75,685	.32
1928	247.5	77,359	0.32
1929	278.7	79,704	.35
1930	243.9	73,542	.33
1931	156.8	61,609	.25
1932	115.2	48,644	.24
1933	156.5	46,089	.34
1934	235.9	53,172	.44
1935	242.5	57,564	.42
1936	243.2	64,809	.38
1937	318.3	71,013	.45
1938	294.1	65,991	.45
Including Government payments:
1933	157.8		.34
1934	252.5		.47
1935	275.6		.48
1936	259.2		.40
1937	329.3		0.46
1938	303.1		.46

Sources: Farm income, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, except that Government payments since 1935 are Agricultural Adjustment Administration estimates of payments applicable to the year's production rather than calendar-year payments; national income, Agricultural Adjustment Administration estimates based on Department of Commerce national income studies and Bureau of Agricultural Economics farm-income data.

Mr. ELLENDER. I also wish to have printed as a part of my remarks at this point, a table showing the value of the cotton dollar today.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Cotton: Cash income from lint, cottonseed, and payments, purchasing power of crop, and index of purchasing power, 1909–10 to date

Crop year	Cash income from—					Index of prices paid by farmers [1]	Purchasing power of [2]—		Index of purchasing power of [2]—
	Cotton lint	Cotton-seed	Total crop	Payments	Crop, including payments		Total crop	Crop, including payments	Total crop	Crop, including payments
	Million dollars	Million dollars	Million dollars	Million dollars	Million dollars		Million dollars	Million dollars
1909–10	676.5	71.8	748.4			(4)	(4)		(4)
1910–11	810.5	100.1	910.6			97	938.8		108.2
1911–12	756.9	77.1	834.0			100	834.0		96.1
1912–13	787.7	77.0	864.7			100	864.7		99.6
1913–14	882.4	98.7	981.1			102	961.9		110.8
5-year average, 1909–10 to 1913–14	782.8	84.9	867.8			(4)	(4)		(4)

See footnotes at end of table.

Cotton: Cash income from lint, cottonseed, and payments, purchasing power of crop, and index of purchasing power, 1909–10 to date— Continued

Crop year	Cash income from—					Index of prices paid by farmers	Purchasing power of—		Index of purchasing power of—
	Cotton lint	Cotton-seed	Total crop	Payments	Crop, including payments		Total crop	Crop, including payments	Total crop	Crop, including payments
	Million dollars	Million dollars	Million dollars	Million dollars	Million dollars		Million dollars	Million dollars
1914–15	592.0	182.5	674.5			101	667.8		77.0
1915–16	626.9	118.3	745.2			107	696.4		80.2
1916–17	993.8	193.6	1,187.3			124	957.5		110.3
1917–18	1,528.4	262.1	1,790.5			148	1,209.8		139.4
1918–19	1,735.2	275.6	2,010.7			174	1,155.6		133.2
1919–20	2,016.2	244.7	2,260.9			201	1,124.8		129.6
1920–21	1,066.7	91.3	1,158.0			205	564.9		65.1
1921–22	675.5	74.4	749.9			164	457.2		52.7
1922–23	1,116.2	88.2	1,204.4			162	743.5		85.7
1923–24	1,454.0	124.2	1,578.2			164	962.3		110.9
1924–25	1,561.6	142.5	1,704.1			168	1,014.3		116.9
1925–26	1,578.7	162.6	1,741.4			169	1,030.4		118.7
1926–27	1,121.1	130.8	1,251.8			167	749.6		86.4
1927–28	1,308.1	148.2	1,456.3			167	872.0		100.5
1928–29	1,302.1	162.1	1,464.2			167	876.8		101.0
1929–30	1,245.3	145.7	1,391.0			163	853.4		98.3
10-year average, 1920–21 to 1929–30	1,242.9	127.0	1,369.9			169	810.6		93.4
1930–31	[4]659.2	92.8	752.0			148	508.1		58.6
1931–32	483.6	42.4	526.1			128	411.0		47.4
1932–33	424.1	40.4	464.4			115	403.8		46.5
1933–34	630.0	48.5	678.5	[5]179.7	858.2	125	542.8	686.6	62.5	79.1
1934–35	629.1	105.9	734.9	[6]115.2	850.1	131	561.0	648.9	64.6	74.8
1935–36	590.2	105.0	695.2	[6]160.2	855.4	127	547.4	673.5	63.1	77.6
1936–37	764.4	141.3	905.7	[7]82.0	987.7	134	675.9	737.1	77.9	84.9
1937–38	795.0	123.0	918.0	[7]63.7	981.7	131	700.8	749.4	80.8	86.4
1938–39	[8]500.0	[8]100.0	600.0	[9]266.0	866.0	126	476.2	687.3	54.9	79.2
6-year average 1933–34 to 1938–39	651.4	103.9	755.4	144.5	899.9	129	585.6	697.6	67.5	80.4

[1] Includes interest and taxes, 1910–14=100. Prior to 1923–24 season, index on calendar year basis; 1923–24 season to date, averages of monthly index, August–July.
[2] Cash income divided by index of prices paid by farmers.
[3] Purchasing power as percent of 1909–13 cash income.
[4] Comparable data not available.
[5] Rental and benefit payments as of Dec. 31, 1937; profits on cotton options as of June 30, 1938.
[6] As of Dec. 31, 1937.
[7] Preliminary estimates.
[8] Estimated.
[9] Includes 1937 price adjustment payments and 1938 American Cotton Pool.
Source: Income from Agricultural Outlook Charts (Cotton), 1939.

Mr. ELLENDER. The index price to the farmer in 1938–39, in terms of cotton, was $1.26 for the dollar. In other words, the cotton farmer, with the Government payments, received 79.2 cents in cotton value for every dollar.

Mr. President, I dislike very much to disagree with the distinguished Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE]. However, I believe that we should do all in our power to get rid of cotton surpluses. I am convinced that if by the adoption of the resolution we close the outlet for some of our surplus cotton, the cotton farmers of the South will be faced next year and the year after with 3- or 4-cent cotton.

I would like to have had more time to discuss the problem more in detail. I hope to on some other occasion.

ACQUISITION OF STOCKS OF STRATEGIC MILITARY MATERIALS, ETC.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 572) to provide for the common defense by acquiring stocks of strategic and critical raw materials, concentrates, and alloys essential to the needs of industry for the manufacture of supplies for the armed forces and the civilian population in time of a national emergency, and for other purposes.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, the objection has been made to the pending amendment that it would not effectively safeguard the development of infant industries or new industries. While I think that objection is not valid in view of the discretion reposed in the President, in order to eliminate any possibility of doubt, particularly such as was expressed by the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. SCHWARTZ], I modify the amendment by striking out the word "now" in line 6.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts modifies his amendment as stated by him. The question is on agreeing to the amendment as modified.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I think we should hear the amendment as the Senator has now modified it before we further consider it. Therefore, I ask that the clerk read the amendment as modified.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment, as modified, will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to insert in the bill the following new section:

SEC. 8. The President is hereby requested to enter into negotiations with foreign governments which are indebted to the United States with a view to arranging for such governments to furnish the United States with materials for national-defense purposes, which are not produced in the United States, in payment or part payment of the indebtedness of such governments to the United States.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, the amendment as now modified is very much less germane to the bill proper than it was before the modification was made.

The bill has to do with strategic and critical materials. The only grant of power which is given to the administration is a grant of power to purchase strategic and critical materials. Now "strategic and critical" are left out, and the President is asked—

To enter into negotiations with foreign governments which are indebted to the United States with a view to arranging for such governments to furnish the United States with materials for national-defense purposes which are not produced in the United States in payment or part payment of the indebtedness of such governments to the United States.

In the beginning of the consideration of this amendment objection was made to it on the ground that the debt question is hardly a valid question to be brought into this bill. It was brought in in connection with the acquisition of merely two types of materials. Anything which the Government uses for national-defense purposes which is not produced in the United States is the sort of thing concerning which the Government should begin to negotiate. Of course, I realize that the last two modifications of the amendment have been made because of the list of those materials which are considered strategic and critical and because the field has been narrowed down so completely that we could see that the amendment is the merest sort of a gesture. About all that can be said for it is that it is a gesture of confusion.

For example, if one will read over the list of materials—and I must repeat that what I am now saying is not germane to the latest suggestion, because anything not produced in the United States which is used for national defense is the only thing which is to guide the President in starting the negotiations—as we run down the list as worked out by the Army and the Navy we must find, under this scheme, something that comes from a debtor nation in the very narrow list of strategic and critical materials. While I do not want to read the list, I ask Senators to go over the list, found on page 11 of the committee report, and see what insignificant payments could possibly be made upon the debts, and how narrow is the field in which the debtors would have a chance to make such payments.

Mr. President, I suggest that the Senate reject the amendment as modified.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I am somewhat astonished by what seems to me to be the character of the objections that have been made to this amendment.

It is suggested that confusion would arise. It is said that the amendment would open up the question of the debts owed to the United States by foreign governments. It is suggested that when the report of the President came in it would be in the nature of a treaty and we should have to go through the formality of passing on it as a treaty.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, we do not have to do that any more in the case of treaties. The Senate has deprived itself of that function.

Mr. NORRIS. I am going to try to show that we shall not have to do it in this case, in any event.

It seems to me that there is a lack of seriousness in the objections that are made. When the Senator from Massachusetts modifies his amendment, it is objected that the modification broadens it somewhat. The second modification is said to broaden it a little more. There is an intimation that that is objectionable; but when the modifications are not made, the objection is that the amendment is not broad enough.

I am assuming that the amendment has been offered in good faith. I believe it to be a good amendment. I do not believe we ought to throw it aside simply because it will not result in very much, if any, reduction of the debts which foreign countries owe to our Government. There is nothing compulsory about the amendment. It does not compel foreign governments, even if we thought we had the power to do so, to have this credit made upon their debts; but the President is requested to negotiate with the various governments, and, if he can, to make a trade with them and get something in kind instead of money and credit it on the debts.

If I had it in my power, and if I were framing the amendment, I would make it still broader than it is. I do not see why it would give rise to any confusion. A treaty has to be ratified by the Senate. We have before us a law that we are going to pass. If we put this amendment in the law, it will have to have the approval not only of the Senate but of the House as well, and of the President. It will be more sacred than a treaty. There is no reason that I can see why it involves any of the attributes of a treaty. It is a proposed law by which the President is requested to negotiate and see if he can get some materials instead of money to apply on the debts; and if he can, to do so. That is the assumption. Why is not that a good thing?

Mr. President, to my mind the most important result that will come from the adoption of this amendment, if it is put into the bill—and I think that will be an important thing—is the notification to the world that we are still holding the debts, and we expect payment of them. It is a notification to our debtors that we have not forgotten what they owe us. The debts have been compromised. They were compromised by a commission composed in part of Members of the Senate. I did not like the compromise. I thought the commission surrendered too much. In many instances they gave away more than half of the debts before a settlement was reached. But a settlement having been made, and having been approved by Congress, I think it was my duty to accept it, and I have done so, and I have acted on that theory.

Now the time has arrived when the debtor countries have failed to pay what they agreed to pay under the settlement. I am not going to discuss the question whether or not they can do so; but no country has denied the debt. It is admitted. They receipted for the money when they got it. They have acknowledged and agreed to the settlement solemnly made and agreed to. If this amendment becomes a part of the law, it will be a reminder to the debtor nations that the Congress of the United States has not yet forgotten the debt, even if the debtors never pay it.

I should like, if I could, to write the foreign debt on the canopy of the international heavens in words that would not be blotted out or worn out or fade away, so that all posterity would know of the money that we have loaned; that our taxpayers have had to pay and are now paying in toil and in labor; a debt that ought to have been paid by the governments in Europe that owe us the money. I do not want it forgotten. I want it to stand as a warning when they ask us, if they ever do, to loan them some more money; I want us then to say, "Pay us what you owe us before you borrow any more."

There is nothing dishonorable in the amendment. There is no discourtesy in it. It simply requests the President to see if he can have something applied on the payment of the debt; if not in money, then in materials that the debtors may have. If they have not the materials, or even if for no reason on earth they do not want to furnish them, they do not have to do so. There is no compulsion, but it will be a reminder in a Federal statute to every government indebted to us, "You owe us money. If you cannot pay us in cash, pay something in kind, if you have it—something that we do not produce—and we will credit you for it."

That is not disrespectful to our debtors. It would be to the debtor's advantage to pay his debt in that way if he could. We do not ask to have any hardship inflicted on anybody. But here are these several billion dollars of debts scattered among nations that have been spending, spending, and spending for the production of cannon and ships of war and war materials and guns; and no nation except little Finland has felt under obligation to pay something every year upon her debt. If I were going to forgive a debt now, I would forgive the debt of Finland before I would forgive that of any other country on earth.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President——

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. SMITH. Is it not the objective of this amendment to obtain materials which are necessary, which we do not produce, and to obtain them in the thriftiest and most economical way that we can get them?

Mr. NORRIS. Yes.

Mr. SMITH. Let us take it for granted that the debt is not likely to be paid in full. In that event, anything we get on it is that much to the good. The amendment has the dual purpose, as the Senator says, of reminding the world that the foreign countries owe us the money and of obtaining possession of materials that we cannot produce in part settlement of the debt. It seems to me it is the most economical way of attempting to get the materials which we have not.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, it seems to me the amendment at least does not deserve all the insinuations and suggestions which have been offered against it. If we consider the amount of money or the material that is to be produced, it may not be of much importance; there may not be anything purchased; but at least the amendment says, and says in a friendly and courteous way, "If you would like to pay something on your debt and you have not the money, and you have something we do not produce, we will take that and give you credit."

Mr. President, I do not see any objection to the amendment, and I think it ought to be incorporated in the bill.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah rose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts as modified.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I thought the Senator from Utah was about to address the Senate on the amendment.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I was about to make just one more suggestion in relation to the amendment. Of course, like all the other junior Members of this body, I have followed for years the logic and the satire and the fine record of the great Senator from Nebraska. I for one wish with all my heart and with all my soul that the history of the debt situation brought about by the late war could be emblazoned upon the skies, so that all could read. I sometimes even go to the extreme suggested by the Senator from Massachusetts, who indirectly has quoted a former President of the United States when he said, "They hired the money, didn't they? Therefore they ought to pay the money, shouldn't they?", or words to that effect.

I have been brought up in the environment of Main Street and business, and I know that one should pay his debts, and that nations should pay their debts. But knowing that does not solve the question before us, and knowing that will not cause the experience of the United States and the experience of other nations of the world to erect that monument which the Senator from Nebraska wishes erected.

The mistakes of civilized nations in the last two generations are so manifold and so great that one who is a reader of history may rightfully ask the question, "Have men gone mad and have governments failed?" There is nothing in international politics and international arrangements on which men have placed their security and their lives which has not failed in the last two generations.

The international debt situation should bring home to every person in the United States what happens when the world goes crazy and ceases to think, and acts in an emotional way. I have all the hatred for war and for men pursuing insane methods anywhere that any man can have. Let us be constructive about overcoming such situations, however. Let us recognize the diseases which have been rampant in the world, and try to cure them. Let us think of our obligations toward the correction of those evils instead of everlastingly pointing a finger, and asking the youth of the world to look back and see the mistakes of the past, and profit by them.

Plato says that we are told we should read history in order that we may miss the pitfalls, and learn from the mistakes that have been made, but the main lesson that comes from reading history is that man does not learn from experience or from the mistakes which have been made.

We have been discussing cotton in relation to the pending bill. I think that everything that has been said in this debate adds to the realization that we are asked to attach to a rather simple bill a proposal which is intensely complex, and which cannot but add confusion to the proper administration of the proposed law. When I use the word "confusion," I mean confusion in relation to the proper administration of the law which may be enacted. It will not confuse a debtor nation, a nation which has already repudiated, a nation which justifies repudiation by another revolution, a nation which may turn itself inside out. It is not possible to confuse such a nation.

I wish the members of this body would think of the bill in its simple aspects. If we want to discuss world economics, if we want to discuss cotton in its relation to world economics, let us face the facts about the world, and not attempt to bring world problems, which are so hard to solve, into the radius of a bill which is very easy to understand and will be be very easy to administer.

Mr. President, if we begin to talk of war debts and international economics, if we undertake to discuss international politics and the course of nations in the last two generations, where will we stop? That is a field which I like to think about and like to speak of.

I trust that the amendment will be voted down as being not germane, and as being wholly inconsistent with the objectives and the purposes and the wording of the bill.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I offer the following as a substitute for the amendment presented by the Senator from Massachusetts: Strike out all after "Sec. 8" and insert—

If any strategic or critical materials are, in pursuance of this act, purchased from any foreign government or agency that is indebted to the United States, the departments or officials who represent this Government in the transaction shall endeavor to have the amount of such purchase or purchases credited on the indebtedness of such foreign government or agency to the United States, instead of obligating this Government to pay therefor in cash or its equivalent.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NEELY. I yield.

Mr. LODGE. Under the terms of the proposed substitute the United States would have to pay out the money. Is not that a correct statement?

Mr. NEELY. No, this Government would not have to pay one cent in cash.

Mr. LODGE. I thought the Senator's amendment provided for the case of strategic or necessary materials being purchased from any foreign country.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I ask that the amendment be read from the desk for the information of the Senate.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. Is this offered in the nature of a substitute or as an amendment?

Mr. NEELY. As a substitute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is offered in the nature of a substitute.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, let it be reported.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to strike out all after "Sec. 8" in the pending amendment and to insert the following:

If any strategic or critical materials are, in pursuance of this act, purchased from any foreign government or agency that is indebted to the United States, the departments or officials who represent this Government in the transaction shall endeavor to have the amount of such purchase or purchases credited on the indebtedness of such foreign government or agency to the United States, instead of obligating this Government to pay therefor in cash or its equivalent.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, the senior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] has very appropriately and convincingly argued that there should be no further negotiations relative to the debts which are due the United States from foreign governments. The amount of the indebtedness of England, France, Italy, and various other European countries to this Government is definitely known. Additional negotiations would in all probability mean additional reductions and further prejudice to the people of this country. My proposed substitute for the Lodge amendment authorizes no negotiations or conversations concerning foreign debts; nor does it propose any instructions or advice to the President. But it does provide that in the event of our purchasing critical or strategic materials from foreign countries or agencies which are indebted to the United States, the departments or officials who represent this Government in the transaction shall endeavor to have the amounts of the purchases credited on the indebtedness of such countries or agencies to us instead of obligating the United States to pay cash or its equivalent therefor. The President should not be burdened with this matter.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NEELY. I yield to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. LODGE. Under the terms of the amendment the foreign countries furnish us with the materials, and under the terms of the Senator's proposed substitute we purchase the materials from the foreigin countries. Is not that a correct statement?

Mr. NEELY. With great respect for the Senator from Massachusetts, it must be observed that the difference which he has suggested is simply the difference between "tweedledum" and "tweedledee."

The important feature of the transaction is the delivery of something of value by the debtor to the creditor on account. It is a matter of no consequence whether such delivery be designated as a purchase by the creditor or a sale by the debtor.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I have no criticism to make of the Senator's substitute. What is the difference between the substitute the Senator proposes and the amendment presented by the Senator from Massachusetts? Both provide for negotiations, and in both cases the amount involved must be credited to the foreign nation concerned.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, as I previously explained, no negotiations by the President are required under the proposed substitute. He would have nothing to do with the transaction. The War Department or the Navy Department would make the purchases, the amounts of which would be credited on the indebtedness of the foreign country to the United States.

Mr. McNARY. Would not that require some conversations and negotiations?

Mr. NEELY. In my opinion, not by the President. There should be no more negotiations regarding the debts.

Mr. McNARY. No; but under either of the proposals the President, or the Secretary of War, or whoever had the power, would have to sit down and talk the matter over with the representatives of the foreign countries to see whether they were satisfied to have the value of the materials credited on their indebtedness. So we come out at the same place under either proposal.

Mr. NEELY. The financial result of the transaction would be the same. The principle of the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts is praiseworthy, but we should deal with the question directly, without involving the President in further negotiations.

UNITED STATES EMPLOYEES' COMPENSATION COMMISSION

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I wonder whether the Senator in charge of the pending measure will permit me to bring an emergency appropriation matter before the Senate. I will explain what it is.

The Employees' Compensation Commission, which provides awards for disabled employees, including relief employees, is absolutely out of money. There are awards which have to be paid, there are conditions of considerable distress, taken care of in the emergency bill which passed the House. It is now found that very serious distress and inconvenience would be incurred if it were necessary to wait even for the deficiency bill.

The House today passed a joint resolution which covers that item, which is merely substituted for the item in the deficiency bill. I presume the Senate will adjourn until Monday, and the matter is of sufficient importance to justify immediate consideration. Therefore, from the Committee on Appropriations I report back favorably, without amendment, the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 250) making an additional appropriation for the fiscal year 1939 for expenditure by the United States Employees' Compensation Commission in accordance with section 16 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938.

I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution.

Mr. McNARY. Does the Senator desire to have the unfinished business temporarily laid aside for the purpose of considering the joint resolution in question?

Mr. ADAMS. Yes.

Mr. McNARY. I have no objection.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I have no objection, either, if the consideration of the joint resolution will take only a minute or two. I should like to know how long it will take.

Mr. ADAMS. I have made all the statement about it I care to make.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I have no objection, with the understanding, of course, that immediately after the consideration of the joint resolution we return to the pending business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If done by unanimous consent, it will not affect the pending legislation.

Mr. GEORGE. I will consent to it provided it does not affect the unfinished business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will not affect the unfinished business.

Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 250) making an additional appropriation for the fiscal year 1939 for expenditure by the United States Employees' Compensation Commission in accordance with section 16 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938, was read, considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the sum of $2,000,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for expenditure during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, by the United States Employees' Compensation Commission in accordance with the provisions of section 16 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938.

RETIREMENT OF FEDERAL JUDGES—PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT

Mr. ANDREWS. I ask unanimous consent to submit at this time an amendment in the nature of a substitute intended to be proposed by me to Senate Joint Resolution 14, heretofore introduced by me. I send the proposed amendment to the desk and ask that it be read by the clerk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), That the following amendment, when ratified by three-fourths of the several States, shall replace section 1 of article III of the Constitution of the United States of America:

"ARTICLE III

"SECTION 1. The judicial power of the United States shall be vested in a Supreme Court, circuit courts of appeal, district courts, and such inferior courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish.

"The Supreme Court shall be composed of not less than nine Justices, no two of whom shall, after the ratification of this amendment, be appointed from territory embraced within the same circuit court of appeals.

"There shall be at least nine circuit courts of appeal composed of at least one judge from each State embraced within the territory comprising each circuit.

"The justices and judges of said courts shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. They shall hold their offices during good behavior and as herein provided and shall receive at stated times for their services a compensation which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office: Provided, That any justice or judge of said courts may voluntarily retire upon attaining the age of 70 years, and shall automatically retire upon attaining the age of 75 years and, in either instance, each justice or judge having held a commission or commissions as such justice or judge consecutively or otherwise for 10 years, shall thereafter, upon his request, be paid the same annual compensation received by him during his term of office.

"This section shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States within 5 years from the date of its submission."

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President, I desire to make a very short statement in regard to the proposed constitutional amendment in order that its purposes may be fully understood by the Senate.

Many Members of the Senate seem to feel there should be submitted at this session of Congress a proposed amendment to our Constitution providing, in substance:

First. An age limit for voluntary retirement of all Federal judges;

Second. An age limit for involuntary retirement;

Third. Appointment of Associate Justices of our Supreme Court one each only from the territory composing the respective circuit courts of appeal; and Fourth. A further provision requiring that the membership of the respective circuit courts of appeal shall be composed of at least one judge from each State included in each circuit.

I am presenting a revision of Senate Joint Resolution 14, which is now offered as an amendment by way of substitute for a similar one introduced by me early in this session. This last draft seems to meet generally the views of those of the Senate and hundreds of officials and citizens who have expressed themselves on this subject.

I have asked that the amendment be read into the RECORD and request that it be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary to make a study and report to the Senate.

The debate between the distinguished Members of the Senate during the last Congress on the question as to whether the President has authority under our Constitution to fill a "vacancy" created by the "retirement" of a Justice, who may continue his duties, by appointing a "successor" has further emphasized and conclusively shown to us that the only proper and practical way to deal with the permanent retirement of Federal judges is by constitutional amendment.

I thank the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the proposed amendment is referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

ACQUISITION OF STOCKS OF STRATEGIC MILITARY MATERIALS, ETC.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 572) to provide for the common defense by acquiring stocks of strategic and critical raw materials, concentrates, and alloys essential to the needs of the industry for the manufacture of supplies for the armed forces and the civilian population in time of a national emergency, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY].

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, about all one can say in regard to the substitute offered by the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY] is that it is just a little bit less objectionable than the amendment proposed by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], when one takes into consideration the purpose of the bill and what is to be accomplished by it.

Mr. President, I ask for a vote on the question.

Mr. NEELY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NEELY. I have suggested the absence of a quorum.

Mr. BORAH. Does the Senator suggest the absence of a quorum with a view to securing a quorum for a vote on the measure? I should like to make a few remarks before the vote.

Mr. NEELY. I now suggest the absence of a quorum so that Senators may hear the remarks of the Senator from Idaho.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Connally	Lodge	Schwellenbach
Andrews	Danaher	Logan	Sheppard
Ashurst	Davis	Lucas	Shipstead
Austin	Frazier	Lundeen	Smith
Bankhead	George	McKellar	Stewart
Barkley	Gillette	McNary	Taft
Bilbo	Green	Maloney	Thomas, Okla.
Borah	Guffey	Miller	Thomas, Utah
Bridges	Gurney	Minton	Townsend
Brown	Harrison	Murray	Tydings
Bulow	Hatch	Neely	Vandenberg
Burke	Hayden	Norris	Wagner
Byrd	Herring	O'Mahoney	Wheeler
Byrnes	Johnson, Colo.	Pepper	White
Capper	King	Reed	Wiley
Chavez	La Follette	Russell
Clark, Mo.	Lee	Schwartz

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Sixty-six Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I wish to say a word about the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] and the amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY]. I think the two amendments have at least one benefit in common. They might remind the foreign governments that they are still indebted to us, which they seem long since to have forgotten.

Mr. President, I do not like the idea of reopening the debt negotiations. Some years ago we entered into negotiations with the nations which owe us, and we finally entered into contracts based largely upon figures which they themselves furnished us as to the amount which they could pay. If those negotiations or contracts are reopened in one respect, the debtors may expect them to be reopened in other respects; and if we send an agent to negotiate for a different kind of settlement from that which the Congress agreed upon, and which has gone into a firm contract, the debtors may expect a different contract in the future with reference to another phase of the matter.

In other words, we ought to consider the debt matter closed. It ought to be regarded as final. The Congress of the United States has acted. It has always been jealous not to give up any authority to anyone in any way to change the contract.

The proposal of the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY] is to have one of the departments negotiate in regard to the debts. That is reopening the contract. That is setting aside the contract which has been made final by Congress.

We do not know how much material may be offered, or at what price. The matter would pass out of our hands, to the extent of changing the contract as to the amount due and the amount which shall be paid.

The amendment of the able Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] says:

> The President is hereby requested to enter into negotiations with foreign governments which are indebted to the United States.

Enter into negotiations for what purpose? It must necessarily be for the purpose of finding some amount which they are willing to pay. The whole contract, therefore, would be reopened. It is true that the debtors are permitted to pay in material; but the contract would be reopened as much as if we delegated to the President the power to open negotiations for a new contract with reference to the amount of money which should be paid.

The United States should stand firm on this question, because it settled the question after a most thorough investigation, and practically upon the figures which the nations themselves furnished as to the amount which they ought to pay. The United States stands before the world demanding nothing more than the amount which after the war the debtor nations concluded they could properly pay. I feel that we ought not to enter into negotiations in any respect whatever to change the amount or to change the method of payment. I feel very strongly that if the Government, as a government, should make known its determination that the debts should be paid or we would look upon the debtors as repudiating their obligations before the world, they would be paid. We should insist on payment, and that we are not doing.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. Does the Senator think it is barely possible that some of the nations of Europe which defaulted on their sacred debt obligations set a bad example to other nations of Europe on the question of nonobservance of treaties?

Mr. BORAH. I think that would be the effect.

The reason I hesitate to support either of the amendments is that I do not want to open up negotiations again. We have only one message to our debtors: "You agreed with us as to what you could pay. You furnished the figures of what you were able to pay, and what you should pay, and it is righteous that you should pay it. All we have to say is that we are taking your figures and your contract, and we ask you to pay." They cannot stand before the world refusing to pay and escape the odium of repudiation. The trouble is that this Government has been so sympathetic about the matter that the debtors have come to the conclusion—and it was practically so stated in the houses of commons—that the United States did not expect the payment of the debts.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I wish to say only a word about the amendment and the substitute. I am opposed to both of them. However, as between the two, I prefer the Neely substitute. I shall vote for the Neely substitute, and if it is adopted I shall vote against the adoption of the amendment, because I do not think the debt question ought to be injected into the bill at all.

We have a bill authorizing the purchase of certain materials not sufficiently produced or developed in the United States in order that they may be stored and preserved against the time when we may need them in case of emergency.

There is also a provision authorizing an appropriation for the development of certain American materials which are not now efficiently or sufficiently produced. That is a simple matter. The question of the payment of the debt to the United States has no connection whatever with what we are trying to do.

I agree with the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH]. At the end of the war the nations of Europe, or certain of them, owed the United States a certain amount of money. We appointed a joint congressional committee to negotiate with those nations as to what might properly be paid on those debts, and we very largely accepted their word as to what they could pay. Congress ratified the report of the joint committee, which practically cut in half the debt of the European nations to the United States, and that agreement provided that those debts should be paid in money.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. Some of the debts were so reduced that the debtors were paying only 28 cents on the dollar.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is true; but the average was about half of the entire amount of the debt at that time.

The Lodge amendment or the Neely substitute, or any similar amendment on the subject would change the whole picture. Whereas the contract calls for payment in money, any amendment such as those now under consideration would put the United States in the position of hawking itself around among the nations of Europe and saying, "Won't you pay something on these debts in chickens, turkeys, butter, eggs, and a pig now and then, so that you may obtain some credit on the debts which you owe us?"

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. LODGE. The amendment could not possibly provide such a result, because we produce chickens, turkeys, butter, and eggs in this country.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course. The Senator's amendment makes it the duty of the President of the United States to send agencies to Europe to hawk around among the nations and to say to them, "We want a little something that we do not have in our country."

Mr. LODGE. And to which we are entitled.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, we are entitled to it if we want it and can obtain it; but certainly the dignity of the United States does not require us on a $12,000,000,000 debt to hawk around among the nations of Europe to get a little credit of $100,000 or $100,000,000 on something which we are not producing in this country at the present time.

If the President were to carry out the spirit of the Senator's amendment for a period of 4 years it would foreclose the United States against the development of our natural resources and the production of the things that we do not now produce, as provided for in the bill.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President——

Mr. BARKLEY. For that reason I do not think the debt question ought to be injected into a serious measure undertaking to provide for the national defense.

I yield to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. LODGE. The Senator has said that my amendment would interfere with the development of infant industries. If the Senator will read my amendment he will see that as soon as any article or material is produced in this country, it is no longer eligible to be applied as a credit on the debts of foreign countries; and I am sure he will agree with me that we can trust President Roosevelt to accept the advices which will come to him when such new articles and new materials are produced.

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; but if the Senator's amendment means anything, it means that any President, not particularly Mr. Roosevelt, but any President, if he accepts the spirit of it, would go out and purchase the materials not now produced so that we would have them on hand, regardless of the fact that over a period of 4 years we might be able to develop them in our own country. If he purchased all we needed, there would be no encouragement for the development of our own industries.

Mr. LODGE. My amendment says not one word about purchases. That is the amendment of the Senator from West Virginia. My amendment says that these materials shall be received and transmitted to us by the foreign countries in payment of the debts. There is no question of purchasing anything.

Mr. BARKLEY. There is bound to be a purchase. We cannot go over there and take the materials. We cannot assume that any nation will come to us voluntarily with materials and say, "We have bought these with our money, and we now wish to turn them over to you and receive credit on what we owe you." There is bound to be negotiation. There is bound to be an approach by somebody; and under the Senator's amendment it would have to be made by the President of the United States.

I do not at all disagree with the position taken by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] that we made a contract with the debtor nations for a certain amount of money, to be paid in money.

Mr. LODGE. And they have not paid it, have they?

Mr. BARKLEY. No; they have not paid it; and there would not be a dime paid on the debts under the Senator's amendment.

Mr. LODGE. We would not lose anything by it.

Mr. BARKLEY. If the Senator thinks that any of the debtor governments will spend its own money to buy materials in order to turn them over to us and receive credit on the debt, the Senator does not know the nature of the governments indebted to the United States.

Mr. LODGE. Two nations, Finland and Ireland, have paid us.

Mr. BARKLEY. Only two nations.

Mr. LODGE. Other nations which desire the favor of the United States at the present time might be induced to pay.

Mr. BARKLEY. The fact that two nations paid their debts does not obligate any other nation which owes us to pay either in money, material, chips, or whetstones.

Mr. LODGE. The fact that two nations paid shows that it can be done.

Mr. BARKLEY. It can be done; but there is no way to force it. It cannot be done in the way provided in the Senator's amendment, and it will not be done in that way.

Mr. LODGE. It will not be done in that way if we will not try it in that way.

Mr. BARKLEY. The results would be insignificant on a debt of this sort. We should not handicap a bill like the one under consideration with the requirement that the President of the United States must go around with a feed basket on his arm and say to Italy, France, England, or any other nation, "I am out to collect our debt. If I cannot get it in money, give me something to fill up my feed basket, so that I may take it back home and give you credit."

I wish to reiterate that as between the two proposals I prefer the substitute of the Senator from West Virginia. However, I am opposed to both of them in principle.

OUR FOREIGN DEBTS

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, it is indeed a great pleasure to hear the Senate deliberate upon the subject of foreign debts. I am glad Senators are spending some time upon these matters, which involve, if we go into the entire amount, perhaps some $50,000,000,000; and at full interest rates our taxpayers will pay about that. It will be my pleasure, if the opportunity is afforded later, to give the figures. They are not twenty-four billion or twenty-five billion which we cut in half, refunding, and canceling $12,087,667,000. Over a period of 62 years the amount is far greater than that. The amount the American people actually are paying, the amount on which the taxpayers are paying interest, will prove to be about double the amount we were considering when we refunded the debts.

THEY HIRED THE MONEY, DIDN'T THEY?

I think the amendments under consideration are very mild in their nature. I would like to put a little iron into this thing. I would put a little backbone into the executive departments which deal with foreign governments. I would adopt the good democratic doctrine of Andrew Jackson, who said he would seize their property. I had the pleasure of putting into the RECORD a few days ago quotations from that great state paper for the attention of the Senate of the United States. I am now referring to the French war debt of more than 100 years ago.

ANDREW JACKSON COLLECTED THE FRENCH WAR DEBT IN FULL

Let the officials of this Government read again the statement of a real, red-blooded, fighting American who was unafraid, and who was not spending his time making excuses for foreign governments, but who was actually thinking of his own country, his own America. When he left office there was no debt against America, and he had a surplus in the Treasury.

I should like to have the folks who are always talking about balancing the Budget, but meanwhile are precipitating our entire country into this financial abyss, give a little attention to that matter.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, before we take a vote, I should like to have the parliamentary situation straight. We shall vote first, I suppose, upon the substitute of the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. When we vote upon that proposal, do we vote upon it as a substitute for the modified amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. That does not mean that we are carrying the amendment on a vote for the substitute; does it?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No. If the Neely substitute should be adopted, the vote then would come on the amendment, as amended.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. That is all right.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I have studied the amendment offered to my amendment by the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY]. While I do not think it is quite so strong as mine is, and I do not think it is so specific in some of its provisions as mine is, nevertheless, I think the Senator from West Virginia is substantially correct when he says that the difference between the two is the difference between tweedledum and tweedledee. If his amendment shall be adopted, the notice will be given to which the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] referred in his splendid speech. The notice will be given to the world that we have not forgotten what has happened. So I am very glad indeed to accept the amendment of the Senator from West Virginia to my amendment; and I hope the modified amendment will be adopted.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. BARKLEY. Will this be a vote on the fifth or the sixth modification of the original Lodge amendment as offered by the Senator from Massachusetts? [Laughter.]

Mr. LODGE. The modifications do not have to be voted on.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator from Massachusetts yield for a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has yielded the floor.

Mr. LODGE. I yield the floor. I shall be glad to answer the question, however.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I should like to submit a very serious question to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. LODGE. I know the Senator is always serious.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. The first words of the Senator's amendment, as modified, are:

The President is hereby requested to enter into negotiations—

I should like to ask the Senator from Massachusetts just what the President would do to meet the requirement of negotiations. The amendment says, "enter into negotiations."

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, the whole thing is permissive. I have great confidence in the way President Roosevelt would conduct this matter and I have no desire to tie him down to details of procedure.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I know the Senator from Massachusetts never has had any such desire so far as the President of the United States is concerned.

Mr. LODGE. I am sure he would be faithful in carrying out the intent of the amendment if it should become law. He would ascertain the materials which are not produced in this country, and then, through the appropriate departments—I do not expect him to do it himself, of course—inquiries would be made. By this amendment notice would be given the foreign countries; and I have no doubt that some of them, in fact, might step forward with offers to make payments on this basis.

The Senator from Washington is much more experienced than I am in legal matters, and he knows perfectly well that if there were a will to do this, there would be a way.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. My specific question of the Senator from Massachusetts is, Just how much negotiations will the President be compelled to carry on in order to satisfy the intent of the amendment which the Senator offers?

Mr. LODGE. Just a reasonable amount.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I think the fact that the Senator from Massachusetts has been unable to define the intent or the purpose of his amendment——

Mr. LODGE. Does the Senator from Washington think negotiations can be weighed by the pound, or measured out by the yard?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I think unquestionably the failure and inability of the Senator from Massachusetts either to weigh them by the pound or to measure them by the yard, when he injects into this very serious question of national defense an amendment regarding which he is unable to state the requirements that would be placed upon the President——

Mr. LODGE. I can state them.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I will yield in a second—is a pretty good indication of the impossibility of carrying out this amendment.

I am not saying that the Senator from Massachusetts is not acting in good faith. I am not saying that if the President went so far and did not go any further, the Senator from Massachusetts would then get up and charge the President with bad faith. I am not saying that any of the Senators upon the other side would do that. Of course, as the Senator says, and as Senators upon the other side always say, they have great faith in the President of the United States, except when anything important comes up.

Mr. LODGE. How about the amendment of the Senator from West Virginia?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. But I predict, and I say with all seriousness, that if this amendment is adopted, and it is not possible to secure payment of the obligations due to this country from foreign governments—I do not say in eggs and butter and cheese; I say in chips and whetstones; that is what the Senator from Massachusetts wants—if the President is not able to do that, I can see the Senator from Massachusetts and a number of estimable Senators on the other side standing in all their glory, and hear them saying, "Once again the President of the United States has broken faith with the Congress of the United States."

This amendment has one purpose, and one purpose only; and that is to put the President of the United States in a spot where he cannot possibly comply with it, because the Senator from Massachusetts himself cannot even define the requirements of the amendment.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I can define the requirements of the amendment. The question is, Is the Senator from Washington in favor of having the foreign governments pay the just debts they owe to the American people, or is he not? That is a very simple question, and all the insinuations that are made here today are not going to alter it.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. It is a very simple question, and I will answer it.

Mr. LODGE. I have the floor now, because the Senator from Washington gave it up.

The second thing I intend to say is that I never on this floor have charged the President with breaking faith. I challenge the Senator from Washington to mention a single instance in which I have ever made any remark that was in any way derogatory about the President of the United States. For the Senator to read a motive such as that into an amendment of this kind is, I think, most unfortunate.

Let me say also that I have accepted the amendment of the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY]. Consequently, if the Senator from Washington really wants to be up to date in his remarks, he ought to advert to that amendment. We cannot accuse the Senator from West Virginia of wanting to embarrass the President of the United States, can we?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I merely want to answer the Senator's question, which is a very categorical one, as to whether I want the debts paid. I answer that question "yes."

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Washington yield?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield to the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. MINTON. The Senator from Washington is of the opinion, as I understand, that this amendment is just one of those too-clever amendments?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. That is the proper description of it. I make no claim that the amendment is offered in bad faith; but I do say that the fact that the Senator who offered it is not able even to give a definition of what would be required of the President shows the value of the amendment which he has offered.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I do not know how many times I shall have to repeat the same thing over and over again; but I shall be very glad to say what the amendment proposes. It requests the President to enter into negotiations to have these payments made. It is very simple; and anybody who does not understand it must have a great deal of difficulty in understanding other portions of the measure before us.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, before we vote, I think as a result of the debate and the acceptance of the substitute there may be some parliamentary confusion. May I ask what we shall be voting on when the vote is taken?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The parliamentary situation is that if the Senate votes now, it will vote on the Lodge amendment as modified. The Senator from Massachusetts has modified his own amendment by accepting the amendment offered by the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY]; and the vote will be on the wording offered by the Senator from West Virginia.

In order to clarify the matter, the Chair will ask the clerk to state the modified amendment.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, one more question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Those who are opposed to any amendment should therefore vote "no," should they not?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

The amendment, as modified, will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. As modified, the amendment reads as follows:

If any strategic or critical materials are, in pursuance of this act, purchased from any foreign government or agency that is indebted to the United States, the departments or officials who represent this Government in the transaction shall endeavor to have the amount of such purchase or purchases credited on the indebtedness of such foreign government or agency to the United States instead of obligating this Government to pay therefor in cash or its equivalent.

Mr. McNARY. I call for the yeas and nays on the adoption of the modified amendment.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I merely wish to say that the Neely amendment was offered as a substitute for the original Lodge amendment because it was preferable. The fact that the Senator from Massachusetts has accepted it, and modified his own amendment by accepting the Neely amendment, does not remove the impropriety of having any sort of an amendment on this subject in the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], as modified. On that question the yeas and nays have been demanded and ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce the following pairs on the pending question:

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. GIBSON] with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN]; the Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON] with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER]; the Senator from Oregon [Mr. HOLMAN] with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS]; the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BARBOUR] with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL]; the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY] with the Senator from New York [Mr. MEAD]; the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. NYE] with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS].

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. GIBSON], the Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON], the Senator from Oregon [Mr. HOLMAN], the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BARBOUR], the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY], the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE], and the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. NYE] would vote "yea" if present and voting.

I am advised that the Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL], the Senator from New York [Mr. MEAD], and the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS] would vote "nay" if present and voting.

The Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON] and the Senator from Oregon [Mr. HOLMAN] are detained in a meeting of the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

Mr. BYRNES (after having voted in the negative). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE], which I transfer to the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], and permit my vote to stand.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I have a pair with the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS]. I am informed that if present he would vote as I intend to vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HOLT] is detained from the Senate because of illness in his family.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], the Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE], the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. RADCLIFFE], the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS], and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] are unavoidably detained.

The Senator from Idaho [Mr. CLARK], the Senator from California [Mr. DOWNEY], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. OVERTON], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATHERS] are detained from the Senate on departmental business.

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER] and the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HUGHES] are detained in important committee meetings.

The Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN], the Senator from New York [Mr. MEAD], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS], and the Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN] are absent on important public business.

The Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE] has a pair with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HUGHES]. If the Senator from Washington were present, he would vote "yea," and the Senator from Delaware would vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 18, nays, 48, as follows:

YEAS—18

Austin	Frazier	Neely	Vandenberg
Bridges	Gurney	Norris	White
Capper	Lodge	Reed	Wiley
Danaher	Lundeen	Taft
Davis	McNary	Townsend

NAYS—48

Adams	Bilbo	Byrd	George
Andrews	Borah	Byrnes	Gillette
Ashurst	Brown	Chavez	Green
Bankhead	Bulow	Clark, Mo.	Guffey
Barkley	Burke	Connally	Harrison

Hatch	Logan	O'Mahoney	Smith
Hayden	Lucas	Pepper	Stewart
Herring	McKellar	Russell	Thomas, Okla.
Johnson, Colo.	Maloney	Schwartz	Thomas, Utah
King	Miller	Schwellenbach	Tydings
La Follette	Minton	Sheppard	Wagner
Lee	Murray	Shipstead	Wheeler

NOT VOTING—30

Bailey	Gerry	Johnson, Calif.	Reynolds
Barbour	Gibson	Lewis	Smathers
Bone	Glass	McCarran	Tobey
Caraway	Hale	Mead	Truman
Clark, Idaho	Hill	Nye	Van Nuys
Donahey	Holman	Overton	Walsh
Downey	Holt	Pittman
Ellender	Hughes	Radcliffe

So Mr. LODGE's amendment, as modified, was rejected.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 5, line 7, it is proposed to strike out "$25,000,000" and to insert "$10,000,000."

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, the question of the purchase of critical and strategic materials has been before the Committee on Appropriations for several years, particularly under consideration by an able subcommittee.

I have communicated with the officials of the War Department, who state that the President has said that should the pending bill be passed he would not submit an estimate for more than $10,000,000 for this purpose. I have conferred with the Director of the Budget, who makes the same statement to me.

I therefore submit to the Senate that it would be unwise to authorize the appropriation of the sum of $25,000,000 a year, or a total of $100,000,000.

If the pending bill shall be passed in its present form, with the authorization fixed at $25,000,000, it matters not what may now be said by the departments, when the Congress again convene we will be met with an estimate for a larger amount. If the estimate is not for $25,000,000, then gentlemen in the House or in the Senate will say that, inasmuch as Congress has acted and has put the figure at $25,000,000 per year, the full amount of $25,000,000 should be appropriated. I think we may as well agree that it will mean $25,000,000 a year, or a hundred million dollars, for this purpose.

I submit to the Senate that, in view of the statements which have been made to the Committee on Appropriations by Army and Navy officials, it is unnecessary to appropriate so large an amount. I know that the argument is made that the appropriation is desired in order to encourage investments. There is a danger in that. If men throughout the country are encouraged to make investments in the development of nickel mines, manganese mines, and in the production of other materials referred to in the report, on the strength of contracts secured from the Army or the Navy, they are going to borrow money. If, at the end of 4 years, the Government, through the Army and Navy, no longer enters into those contracts, then the investments of those men will be on their hands, and they will come to Congress and say they were led into making the investments by reason of the legislation, which indicated to them that $25,000,000 a year would be appropriated. We will have a repetition of what occurred after the World War, when we had to undertake the settlement of claims of many citizens who maintained they were misled into making investments of all kinds for the production of war materials.

We have not yet settled those claims; and while I am sure that the Senator who reported the pending bill from the committee had no idea that such a thing would result, my experience with the war claims causes me to believe that there is some danger. Certainly, in view of the fact that the President himself has stated to the War Department and to the Budget Director that he would not submit an estimate for more than $10,000,000, there is no reason why we should authorize the appropriation of $25,000,000 a year.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, in the beginning of the discussion of the bill I remarked that the amount of the appropriation was a subject which would go to conference. I have no objection in the least to the reduction of the figure to $10,000,000 for the first year, but I should like to retain the figure of $100,000,000 for the period of 4 years. The remarks made by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] in regard to our experiences during the war-claims days were certainly not applicable or appropriate when referring to the pending bill, because under the provisions of the bill that which will be obviated, above all other things, will be the type of experience we went through after the World War.

Under the pending bill no contract will be entered into except in a formal way. The experience during the World War, and following the war, was that due to confusion almost every type of contract was entered into. The primary purpose of the pending bill is to bring order out of the chaos we would have if we did not have this kind of a law.

Mr. President, as I have stated, I have no objection in the least to the reduction of the sum for the first year to $10,000,000; but, because of the dual nature of the measure, I think the sum of $100,000,000 is a proper one to be spent over the period of 4 years.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator whether he does not think the purpose of the bill, being to purchase and store materials which would be of use in time of war. From his investigation, the Senator knows that we have some of the materials on hand now, and the sole question is as to how much money we shall tie up in materials of this nature. I submit to the Senator that when we appropriate $10,000,000 a year we are going a pretty long way toward satisfying the requests of the officers of the Army and the Navy that a store of materials be provided. I ask the Senator whether he will not accept the proposal to make the amount $10,000,000, which in 4 years will mean $40,000,000 for the purchase of critical materials in addition to all the war materials we now have.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Utah yield to me to ask a question of the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, the pending bill is only an authorization. It provides $25,000,000 a year for a period of 4 years. The amount which will thereafter be spent will depend upon the Congress itself and largely upon the recommendations of the Committee on Appropriations, of which the Senator from South Carolina is a member.

No one can tell what will happen in the world or in this country in 4 years. It might be necessary, it may conceivably be necessary, within that 4-year period, for Congress to appropriate $25,000,000 in a year, but if it should not be necessary, if the contingencies should not require it, the amount actually expended could be controlled by the Committee on Appropriations, unless the Congress should be convinced that the Committee on Appropriations had recommended too small an amount.

Therefore, in view of the uncertainty, the world chaos, the impossibility of foreseeing what is going to happen in the world, what is the objection to authorizing the amount asked, understanding always that the Committee on Appropriations will be governed by the needs each year as the appropriation is asked for?

Knowing the Senator's ability to withstand pressure from departments, I should be willing to rely upon him and his committee to resist any unnecessary appropriations within the $25,000,000 limit each year if the committee and the Congress were not convinced it was necessary.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, answering the Senator from Kentucky, the experience of the Senator from South Carolina is that whenever we authorize an expenditure, neither the Committee on Appropriations nor the Senate nor the House of Representatives withstands the pressure. At this time, when the world may be said to be in a chaotic condition, and the President of the United States, the commander in chief of the Army and the Navy, is of the opinion that $10,000,000 is sufficient, why should we not agree with the Commander in Chief, who is in a better position than we are to know? If the conditions should become more chaotic next year, I have supreme confidence in the Congress of the United States being willing to increase the amount above $10,000,000. Would not the Senator be willing then, if conditions became more dangerous than at present, to vote to raise the amount above $10,000,000? There would not be any trouble about that being done.

Mr. BARKLEY. I understood the President in some roundabout way indicated to the press that $10,000,000 would be sufficient and that is all he wanted for the first year. I do not understand that he suggested a limitation of $10,000,000 a year for the whole period. There has been no official communication on the subject of which I know.

Mr. BYRNES. I do not know except that I communicated with the Chief of Staff and the Director of the Budget, and that is about as far as I could go in respect to that question.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I may first answer the Senator from South Carolina by saying that so far as the first year is concerned $10,000,000 would be sufficient for buying the materials. But the bill has a dual purpose, and by the time the second year rolls around we expect to see those purposes in operation. The second of the purposes is to increase America's production of strategic materials. If the amendment should authorize during the first year but $10,000,000, but over the period of the 4 years $100,000,000 was authorized, and if, after the year's investigation and the year's work on the part of the Bureau of Mines and on the part of the Geological Survey it should be ascertained that the production was feasible, then, of course, we would want to bring that production into the economic life of our Nation. I think if the Senator from South Carolina keeps in mind the dual purpose of the measure he will find that the authorization of $100,000,000 over the period of the 4 years is perfectly consistent, perfectly feasible, and not out of harmony with what the President has said.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. I hope the Senator from Utah, when he suggests that he will accept the figure of $10,000,000, speaks for himself and not for the other members of the committee. I think the bill was very thoroughly considered in the Committee on Military Affairs and by all the departments interested who made their reports to the committee. Their reports are before us. Whatever grapevine information we may have respecting what is supposed to be the position of some officials that they do not need all the money recommended by the committee, that they can get along with less, should not be controlling now. Such information should have been given to the committee where the whole subject was discussed. As one member of the committee I do not desire to accept the suggestion that we not even authorize the appropriation of the money which may be needed.

I am sure that the iron-bound and economically inclined Committee on Appropriations will not provide a dollar more than ought to be appropriated, regardless of what we may authorize. It will do no harm to authorize what the committee determines as necessary and the various departments say is right. If anyone wishes to sidestep, let him sidestep when the time comes to vote on the amount to be appropriated. It will not do any harm to authorize the appropriation of the amount suggested.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, the Senator from Wyoming I am sure realizes that my suggestion would not involve cutting down the total amount over the period of the 4 years. It would merely result in a limitation of $10,000,000 for the first year, and would leave, of course, $90,000,000 to spend, if need be, over the remaining 3 years. The theory I have in mind, and I think the theory in the minds of those who suggested $10,000,000 for the first year, is that so far as concerns the second purpose of the bill, not much of the money will be used in the first year if it is authorized.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, the important thing, it seems to me, is to limit the authorization, not for the first year, but for the second, third, and fourth years. So far as I can see, the authorization is the important thing, particularly in this field, because just as certainly as we stand here we will be told that industries have been started because of an authorization of $25,000,000 a year, and in one way or another Congress will have to provide $25,000,000 a year.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President——

Mr. TAFT. That argument will be made to justify the appropriation for the full amount authorized. We have seen that occur again and again at the present session. The important thing is the authorization.

If we are ever going to balance the Budget, there is only one way to do it, and that is by gradually reducing expenditures. We will appropriate this year apparently between $9,000,000,000 and $10,000,000,000; but the national income will never reach so large a figure that we can afford, without absolutely stifling industry, to raise taxes amounting to $10,000,000,000. The only way we can balance the Budget is by some deliberate plan gradually to cut down that $10,000,000,000 to something like $7,000,000,000. What stands in the way of cutting down that figure are the millions of dollars of authorizations in one bill after another bill.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President——

Mr. TAFT. What is proposed is purely an experiment. No one knows what is actually going to be done. If the plan works, we can increase the amount later. We do not have to increase it now. No one really knows what the $25,000,000 will be spent for. Twenty-five million dollars is a figure pulled out of the air. We might just as well make it $10,000,000. Every purpose desired could be accomplished with that amount and we would not interfere in any way with the development of the program to store strategic materials in the United States.

Mr. President, I personally feel it is far more important to limit authorizations for the second, third, and fourth years than for the first year. But the deficit is so great that, after all, I suppose it does not make any difference to the gentlemen who are now running the Government whether the amount authorized is $10,000,000 or $25,000,000.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I am sure the Senator from Ohio allowed his tongue to get ahead of his reasoning. I am sure the Senator from Ohio knows more about Government contracts than to assume that a thing would happen under the United States Government, which will make the contracts, which no freshman in any law school in the country would dare to assume could be possible under any system of contracts. Every safeguard which is put around the expenditure of a single cent under the scheme of the United States Government has been put into the bill. When anyone assumes that if the bill were passed the Procurement Division, the legal forces of our Nation, and the Army and the Navy would not seek to run their affairs in accordance with law, he allows his imagination to run so rampant that one wonders how he dares to stand here and suggest such a thing.

Mr. President, I am convinced that the bill embodies a most constructive idea. I have been told by men who had charge of acquiring necessary materials during the World War that if this bill had been a law in 1917 it would have saved millions and millions of dollars, and made unnecessary hundreds and hundreds of litigated cases.

Mr. President, do not let anyone for 1 minute imagine that the Senate Military Affairs Committee is suggesting a law which will allow someone in the Government to throw contracts out of the window. Do not let anyone imagine for a minute that the Senate of the United States will pass a law the effect of which will be to destroy the fiscal scheme of government which has been evolving over the last 150 years. Let no one imagine, simply because of someone's vain remarks, that serious study has not been made of the measure. Two years of the hardest kind of work has been put into the bill. In fact I have never known of a bill presented to the Congress of the United States in connection with which we had more meetings, at which were present representatives of more departments of government, dealing with fiscal questions and matters relating to the Army and the Navy. In those meetings there has been a meeting of minds of the best authorities and the best officers the United States Government has.

I regret that anyone should assume or suggest the silly notion—and I cannot help but call it silly—that there might be a deviation in the purposes of the Army of the United States, the purposes of the Navy, the purposes of the Treasury Department, the purposes of the Interior Department, the purposes of the Procurement Division. The attack which has been made is an attack upon every good thing which the Government of the United States has stood for in regard to the handling of its funds.

It is an attack upon the honesty of its administrative officers. It is an attack upon the good judgment of those men whom we have honored probably more highly than anyone else by turning over to them the care of the affairs of our Government.

Mr. President, I do not object in the least to anyone discussing the question as to whether we should appropriate $25,000,000 or as to whether we should appropriate $10,000,000. That is a question for the Senate to decide and for the House of Representatives to decide. But it is ridiculous for anyone to assume that by passing such legislation the Senate of the United States has issued an invitation to those who have control over our fiscal affairs to throw all law out of bounds, to proceed in any way they want to proceed which is not according to law, the effect of which would be to destroy all the habits and customs of our administrative branch of the Government.

I repeat, I have never heard anything like it, and surely the Senator from Ohio would like to withdraw his remarks.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I thoroughly agree that my remarks were a reflection on the judgment of the Senator and the judgment of the gentlemen who have adopted the present fiscal policy, but certainly they were expressed in the mildest of terms. If the Senator thinks we can continue such a fiscal policy for years to come, I wish he would state on the floor of the Senate how in the world we can pursue it. I frankly admit I did not know what the Senator was talking about in his remarks, in his attack on my speech.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, let us get down to basic economics. If the Government of the United States buys $100,000,000 worth of products, and those products go up in value 100 percent, has the Government lost money? Does not the Senator realize the difference between an ordinary expenditure for one thing and an ordinary expenditure for stock with value? Where is there in this bill an opportunity for spending money in the sense that the money leaves the Government?

Mr. TAFT. Does the Senator think that prices always go up; as for instance, in the case of cotton which the Government bought?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I have never known it to happen in any emergency at any time in the history of the world that the prices for essential materials did not go up once war was declared, and if the Senator knows of a time when they did not I should like to have him correct my study of economics.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, however, there may be no war. Prices may go down just as likely as they may go up. We may lose money just as well. In any event, the only way tc balance the Budget, the only way to make our economy work is not to pay out the cash. I do not care what the Government buys with the cash. Of course, for the money it pays out it gets some value. In nearly every Government expenditure some value is obtained for what is paid. That is not the question. The question is, Where is the cash coming from that will have to be paid out for these strategic materials? Who is going to pay for them? The taxpayers of the United States are going to pay for them. There is only one way to stop spending, and that is to stop appropriating money, and so far as I can see, the only way to stop appropriating money is to stop authorizing appropriations.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I am sure the Senator did not mean what he said. He said he did not care how the Government spent its money, and what it bought for it. The committee does care, and it limits the expenditures for certain things.

We realize that there is a difference between spending money for something which the Government is going to use and merely spending it for whatever the Government wishes to spend it for.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, a few mornings past I had the good fortune to hear the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT], in the Committee on Education and Labor, complain about the extravagance of spending money for public education. This afternoon I have heard him complain about the folly of spending money for strategic and critical war materials. I am persuaded by at least those two illustrations that the Senator means what he says when he says that hardly anything is worth spending Government money for.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote! Vote!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES].

Mr. BYRNES. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President——

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll, and Mr. ADAMS voted in the affirmative.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, may the amendment be stated?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES]. The amendment will be stated for the information of the Senate.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 5, line 7, it is proposed to strike out "$25,000,000" and insert "$10,000,000."

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Danaher	Lodge	Russell
Ashurst	Davis	Logan	Schwartz
Austin	Frazier	Lucas	Schwellenbach
Barkley	George	Lundeen	Sheppard
Bilbo	Gillette	McKellar	Smith
Borah	Green	McNary	Stewart
Bridges	Guffey	Maloney	Taft
Brown	Gurney	Miller	Thomas, Okla.
Bulow	Harrison	Minton	Thomas, Utah
Burke	Hatch	Murray	Townsend
Byrd	Hayden	Neely	Tydings
Byrnes	Herring	Norris	Vandenberg
Capper	Hughes	O'Mahoney	Wagner
Chavez	Johnson, Colo.	Pepper	Wheeler
Clark, Mo.	La Follette	Pittman	White
Connally	Lee	Reed	Wiley

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Sixty-four Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I desire the floor.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, the yeas and nays were ordered, and the first name had been called, and the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] had voted when the point of no quorum was made. I make the point of order that the roll call had commenced.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will inform the Senator that the Chair had recognized the Senator from Oregon before the roll call was started; but the clerk, not having heard the Chair, went ahead with the first name.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I merely have a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. The way in which the amendment is now put will provide, will it not, for cutting the total appropriation from $100,000,000 to $40,000,000?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed by the Parliamentarian that the amount would be $10,000,000 for each of the 4 years.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. BYRNES. Is it a parliamentary inquiry to ask the effect of striking out $25,000,000 and inserting $10,000,000? If so, I wish to present several inquiries as to the effect of the amendment.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I wonder if the question of the Senator from South Carolina is a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understood the Senator from Utah to ask the form in which the amendment was stated. The Chair, in answering that question, was answering a parliamentary inquiry.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote! Vote!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. SMITH. Are we now voting on the Byrnes amendment to reduce the amount to $10,000,000?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BYRNES (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN], and will vote. I vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HOLT] is detained from the Senate because of illness in his family.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], the Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE], the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. RADCLIFFE], the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS], and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] are unavoidably detained.

The Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER], the Senator from Florida [Mr. ANDREWS], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], and the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] are detained in important committee meetings.

The Senator from Idaho [Mr. CLARK], the Senator from California [Mr. DOWNEY], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. OVERTON], and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATHERS] are detained on departmental business.

The Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN], the Senator from New York [Mr. MEAD], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS], and the Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN] are absent on important public business.

The Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] has a pair with the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATHERS]. If the Senator from Utah were present and voting, he would vote "yea," and if the Senator from New Jersey were present and voting he would vote "nay."

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce the following general pairs: The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BARBOUR] with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL], the Senator from Vermont [Mr. GIBSON] with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN], the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY] with the Senator from New York [Mr. MEAD], the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. NYE] with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS], the Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON] with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER], the Senator from Oregon [Mr. HOLMAN] with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS], and the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD] with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS].

I am advised that if present the Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON], the Senator from Oregon [Mr. HOLMAN], and the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. NYE] would vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 33, nays 31, as follows:

YEAS—33

Adams	Danaher	Lodge	Townsend
Borah	Davis	Lucas	Tydings
Brown	Frazier	Lundeen	Vandenberg
Burke	George	McNary	Wagner
Byrd	Gillette	Maloney	White
Byrnes	Harrison	O'Mahoney	Wiley
Capper	Herring	Reed
Clark, Mo.	Johnson, Colo.	Russell
Connally	La Follette	Taft

NAYS—31

Ashurst	Guffey	Miller	Schwellenbach
Austin	Gurney	Minton	Sheppard
Barkley	Hatch	Murray	Smith
Bilbo	Hayden	Neely	Stewart
Bridges	Hughes	Norris	Thomas, Okla.
Bulow	Lee	Pepper	Thomas, Utah
Chavez	Logan	Pittman	Wheeler
Green	McKellar	Schwartz

NOT VOTING—32

Andrews	Downey	Holt	Radcliffe
Bailey	Ellender	Johnson, Calif.	Reynolds
Bankhead	Gerry	King	Shipstead
Barbour	Gibson	Lewis	Smathers
Bone	Glass	McCarran	Tobey
Caraway	Hale	Mead	Truman
Clark, Idaho	Hill	Nye	Van Nuys
Donahey	Holman	Overton	Walsh

So Mr. BYRNES' amendment was agreed to.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I move to amend the bill, on page 2, line 17, by striking out the period after the word "act" and inserting a colon and the following:

Provided, That bituminous coal shall be considered a strategic and critical material within the meaning of this act.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 2, line 17, after the word "act" and before the period, it is proposed to insert a colon and the following:

Provided, That bituminous coal shall be considered a strategic and critical material within the meaning of this act.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, those who remember the industrial and financial confusion that prevailed during the World War will not fail to recall that under the inexorable law of supply and demand the price of bituminous coal soared to more than $25 a ton. In spite of this exorbitant price there was an insufficiency of coal.

A hundred thousand miners need employment. A multitude of operators are financially distressed and need a market for their potential production. In the circumstances the Government should prudently protect itself against a fuel famine in the event of war by immediately purchasing and storing at least a million tons of bituminous coal. Such action would be beneficial to our national defense, a blessing to the coal operators, and a godsend to the idle miners.

Mr. President, I urge that the amendment be adopted.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I trust the amendment will not be agreed to. I am sure that no definition which Congress may enact into law would make coal a strategic material in the United States.

AMERICAN DEVELOPMENT OF TRANSOCEANIC AIR NAVIGATION

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, I desire to speak briefly concerning the brilliant achievement of the Pan American Yankee Clipper, which landed in Lisbon, Portugal, today. It is a stellar achievement on the part of American aviation.

CROSSING THE ATLANTIC IN 17 HOURS

Senators will remember that a day or two ago the first portion of the journey, from the eastern coast of the United States to the Azores, was completed in 17½ hours. This great flying boat is the product of an American company which is the world's pioneer manufacturer of flying boats. The first modern flying boat constructed was used as the China Clipper. There were several of them. The first one, constructed in order to carry mail across the Atlantic, was diverted to the Pacific. I had the pleasure of flying in one of those boats from Honolulu to San Francisco in 1937, on Territory Committee business. We covered more than 2,000 miles over the mighty Pacific and we made the journey in something like 17 hours. Mrs. Lundeen left Honolulu on a fast ocean liner 2 days before I boarded the China Clipper, and I waited 2 days for that great ocean greyhound to arrive in San Francisco. That is aviation—the world's most marvelous method of transportation.

WINGED VICTORY—A NEW RECORD OF TRANSATLANTIC AVIATION

Pan American Airways started its operation in 1928 with a small line from Key West, Fla., to Habana. At that time both French and German subsidized airlines were strongly entrenched in South America. Being heavily supported financially by their respective governments they threatened to dominate air transport service in Latin America. This trade area, with its millions of people and great undeveloped resources is one of the most important world markets for both Europe and the United States.

EUROPEAN COMPETITION

The countries of Europe fully appreciated that trade would follow improved communications. During the World War the United States had taken advantage of its opportunity to wrest from the nations of Europe a large portion of their trade with Latin America and immediately following the war these nations set out to regain the trade that they had lost. As a new and effective weapon in their drive for this market, France and Germany each commenced the development of services in Latin America in which at that time they had no competition from this country—air transport. The German-controlled Scadta line, then operating under exclusive contracts in interior Colombia and between Colombia and Ecuador, was actively planning to extend its operations to Panama and up through Central America to Cuba. Another German-controlled company had secured and was operating a monopoly concession in Bolivia, the service to be extended through Brazil to the Atlantic seaboard at Rio de Janeiro.

THE GERMAN SYSTEM

"Condor," a direct subsidiary of the Luft Hansa, the German air system, had commenced operations along the Brazilian coast, to be later extended across the South Atlantic to Europe.

Aeropostale, the French subsidized international line, was operating service between France and Buenos Aires, fast destroyers made available to the company by the French Government, transporting the mails between Dakar, Africa, and Natal, Brazil. Aeropostale also had a line in operation from Buenos Aires over the Andes to Santiago, Chile; held concessions to extend its service north from Natal to Trinidad and the French West Indies, and between Trinidad and Venezuela, and was actively negotiating for a monopoly international mail contract in Peru.

NEW AIR RECORDS FOR LATIN AMERICA

The result of the establishment of these air-transport services was the reduction in transit time for mail and express moving between Europe and Latin America from 16 to 9 days, bringing this valuable trade area 2 weeks nearer to Europe than the United States. The situation then existing constituted a serious menace to this country's trade and prestige in Latin America and a diminution of our share in this trade appeared to be inevitable unless the United States set up similar improved communications facilities.

At this time the possibility of extending its operation in Latin America had been considered by Pan American but, faced with the tremendous investment incident to the establishment of airways in foreign territory, it was found impossible to compete against air lines subsidized by European nations unless this Government should establish a national policy of encouraging such a service by private capital and enterprise through long-term air-mail contracts or other financial assistance.

PAN AMERICAN PIONEERS

This situation soon received the official consideration of our Government, and in time legislation was enacted to provide financial Government aid through long-term air-mail contracts for the projection and operation of American air transport service into the fertile but highly competitive field of Latin America. The assistance offered by the legislation was limited to payments for the carriage of mail. Unlike the Government systems in the domestic air-mail system whereby intermediate landing fields, communications, and other aids to navigation were provided and maintained by the Department of Commerce, operators in the foreign field were required to provide their own facilities. At their own expense they had to build thousands of miles of airways, including the negotiation and procurement of the necessary operating rights and concessions, the construction of airports and intermediate landing fields, the installation of radio communications and meteorological bureaus, and the provision of other essential aids to aerial navigation.

GREAT BRITAIN, GERMANY, FRANCE, AND ITALY IN SOUTH AMERICA

In the face of the strongly subsidized European competition and the unusual financial risk involved, Pan American projected itself into Latin America and established a network of air lines that serve every country in Latin America. In setting up the physical facilities for this system of 32,000 miles of airways, the company was obliged to invest approximately $15,000,000, nearly half of which has been devoted to airports, buildings, radio stations, equipment, and other fixed assets.

A unique record was accomplished in the raising of the necessary capital to finance this new and somewhat risky venture. The company made no public offering of its stock, and not a dollar was expended for any underwriter's or broker's commissions.

The United States can boast today of the largest and most efficient air service in Latin America. And while we maintain this expansive aerial artery, the cost of its maintenance by the Government as a result of mail payments is only one-half of the cost of European lines, whose total mileage is only one-half of ours.

PAN AMERICAN AIR SERVICE

Our air-transport system provides a service to every neighboring country and colony to the south of us. As an integral part of this system Pan American Airways provides and maintains approximately 150 land and marine airports, about 85 radio and weather stations, together with machine shops and overhaul bases adequate to maintain a service thousands of miles removed from its main terminals. Landing fields have been carved out of jungles and otherwise uninhabited areas, and pack-mule transportation was necessary on numerous occasions to successfully accomplish airways construction.

The existence of this aerial courier has been of inestimable value in the promotion of social, political, and economic relations between North and South America. The rendering of a dependable, impressive service by the Pan American System throughout Latin America, employing the most advanced equipment and the highest type of personnel, together with the opportunity afforded for closer intercourse between the people of the United States and the countries to the South, has necessarily been an outstanding factor toward the improvement of our relations with Latin America.

SUPERIOR FLYING EQUIPMENT

The flying equipment used by this system is far superior to anything that Europe has sent to Latin America. As a result of this demonstration of the superiority of American aeronautical equipment, substantial orders have been received by American manufacturers from the military organizations of the different countries, notwithstanding the large number of European military missions that have been employed in South America.

Pan American Airways has continuously taken steps to improve its Latin-American system. Larger and faster flying equipment has been installed and the travel time to the important commercial centers has been materially reduced. Today, Buenos Aires, the capital of Argentina and the metropolis of South America is but 4½ days from the United States by air as against 17 days by boat.

AMERICAN AIR-MAIL SERVICE

The American air-mail service established by this Government in Latin America has provided an outstanding and unique means for a more favorable contact between this country and Latin America. The peoples of Latin America know that Pan America's air-transport system is made possible by the support of the United States Government and the benefits received by them from the service are therefore largely attributed by them to this Government's spirit of cooperation. This makes for the creation of good will and a more "neighborly feeling" toward our Republic and its citizens.

Another helpful factor in building up friendly relations with Latin America has been the services rendered by the system in national emergencies in the countries served. When hurricanes, floods, earthquakes, or other unfortunate disasters strike, Pan American Airways has performed important relief work in otherwise inaccessible stricken areas. The most recent case of relief work was the evacuation of the earthquake-stricken area of Chile. It was only by airplane that survivors could be evacuated and the Pan American system made available every possible resource to accomplish this errand of mercy.

At this point I ask unanimous consent to print an article by Mr. Pyle on the Pan American Airways and their activities in South America.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

[From the Washington Daily News of January 11, 1939]

PAN AMERICAN AIRWAYS

(By Ernie Pyle)

PORT OF SPAIN, TRINIDAD.—When your big clipper plane skims gently down into the busy harbor of Port of Spain you have left South America behind you.

Trinidad is an island—a British possession. It's just a few miles off the coast of South America. On a clear day you can see over to Venezuela from a hilltop.

Things are lovely here—hilly, verdant, immensely tropical, and comfortable with good British efficiency. The Negroes speak with a British accent. Cars drive on the left side.

And does it rain! All day long it has come down in one of those all-engulfing, straight-down deluges. It is a day for sitting on the balcony and reading and thinking.

I had planned sometime to write a column on Pan American Airways. So why not today—our first day off the continent, raining, nothing else to do, looking back.

The outstanding memory in this 3 months of delving into the Latin countries is, and must always be, Pan American Airways. It is one of the most amazing organizations I have ever known.

Most everybody in America knows something of Pan American Airways. But nobody can ever really have a full sense of its superiority until he has made one of these trips around South America.

By the time we return to Miami we will have flown nearly 15,000 miles. In all that time there was only one aerial "incident"—the time we had our forced landing in Peru. And that was such a beautifully handled thing that it added to Pan American's stature in our eyes instead of detracting. We felt even safer after it had happened.

In those 15,000 miles there has not been one single hitch. Only twice has the plane been late. For only two or three short periods have we had rough air, and then not very rough. There has never been a time, outside of the Peru incident, when we felt uneasy.

When we left Miami we took out $10,000 worth of air insurance, good for a year, at a cost of $18. I would do it again. And yet it seems to me the chances of getting hurt are less than if we were to start walking from Washington to Baltimore.

How Pan American has built up and holds together this terrifically scattered organization is beyond me. The perfect coordination they have trained into staffs of dozens of different countries is almost unbelievable.

Every Pan American station is a little gem. Often, as I have written before, it is the only clean and beautiful thing within hundreds of miles. And somehow Pan American has even drilled cleanliness into its native staffs.

The amount of money and the number of people it takes to run this outfit all through South America is staggering. At great division points like Rio there are as many as 500 employees. And even at the little places, where planes stop only once a week, there is a permanent crew of at least a dozen.

You fly always with American pilots and radio operators. Just to look at them gives you confidence. On these long flights, where you stay overnight in the same hotel with the crew, you get to know them all pretty well.

At every city Pan American traffic men keep close touch with the passengers. They know where you are, and keep you well informed on mail, plane schedules, and so on. They even act in the bigger cities as a sort of a travel agency for you.

Company busses or cars take you into town and pick you up when you leave. Pan American men interpret and are liaison men between you and foreign officials.

They don't do so much that they make you feel like a baby. But they do enough, and with no ostentation at all, that it lifts the worries from your shoulders.

If you know anything at all about flying, it doesn't take you long to sense the conservatism with which Pan American flies. There is a definite rule for everything. And they don't violate it. We sat on the ground for an hour one morning at Trujillo, Peru, waiting for the ceiling at Lima (200 miles away) to lift just a few feet.

I have seen our pilots fly clear around a high cloud bank, just to avoid maybe 30 seconds of rough air, for the passengers' comfort.

If Pan American were to pay me $1,000 for a serious criticism or suggestion, I do not believe I could think of one. They have done everything. Why, they even provide pilots' wives with booklets telling them what to feed their husbands before a flight.

Pan American Airways right now is facing very keen competition from the lines of Germany and France. It is competition that cannot be laughed off, for those countries are running good air lines, too, and they are pushing harder, perhaps, than the United States.

German lines now circle the southern half of South America, and have run up the east coast clear to Peru. It is said that Hitler has given orders to extend these lines right up to the boundary of the Panama Canal Zone.

Pan American Airways is one of the finest good-will-producing institutions the United States has in South America. It has given those countries something they need. And it has been run on a basis that shows Americans at their best.

Yet the battle is not yet won by any means. South American countries aren't always respectful of calm, efficient things. Pan American is getting kicked around in many places.

Of course our Government has always been good to Pan American. The line is heavily subsidized. But it seems to have built wisely and is worthy of its subsidy.

And if our Government has decided to get right down there in South America and fight the advances of Europe, one of the things is must not neglect in the future is this air line.

Mr. LUNDEEN. With the establishment of an efficient service to Latin America, Pan American turned its pioneering endeavors to bridging the world's largest ocean, the Pacific, with an aerial system. Fortunately, there existed in the Pacific a group of island stepping stones that our Government owned. There was no need to obtain flying and landing concessions, except at the western terminus of the line, which was readily accomplished. Then, with characteristic American courage and enterprise, Pan American and the Glenn L. Martin Co., of Baltimore, developed the first transocean flying boats. These were the China Clipper type of planes. In addition, if there was ever a modern Robinson Crusoe undertaking, it was the construction of the physical airway across this massive ocean. Facilities existed at Hawaii and Guam. But at Midway and Wake Islands, two outposts of the Pacific, it was necessary to send a large crew of engineers and technicians to construct the necessary ground facilities and accommodation. History will record the accomplishments of these hardy pioneers along with other builders of our country of earlier days.

EIGHT THOUSAND MILES OF PAN AMERICAN PACIFIC AIR SERVICE

At Wake Island there had never been any habitation of any kind. Almost overnight these Pacific pioneers turned an otherwise coral reef into an island air base with a comfortable hotel to accommodate passengers overnight. I am advised that the cost of setting up the physical facilities and the equipment for this great Pacific air service approximates $5,000,000. Today we have an 8,000-mile air-transport service that brings the Far East, with its rich trade of $10,000,000,000, just 6½ days from the United States. The arrival and departure of the giant clippers used in this service have become commonplace. Since this service started in November 1935 Pan American Airways has accomplished 270 crossings of the Pacific Ocean.

AIR SERVICE AND NATIONAL DEFENSE

In addition to its peculiar commercial value, the importance of Pan American Airways system from a national-defense standpoint is quite obvious. It is a spearhead for recovery of commerce and an important structure in our national defense. With its far-flung operations, circling Latin America, crossing the Pacific, and connecting the important communities of Alaska, this system must be considered in any calculations bearing on national defense. It possesses something more than 135 airplanes, of which 22 are of the clipper type; it has a trained flight corps and ground staff in 51 countries and colonies that are second to none in the world. As far as big-boat flying and transoceanic operations are concerned, the Pan American personnel are the peer of the world.

AMERICA FIRST

These gallant airmen in their particular field are pushing far ahead of our foreign competitors in the commercial field. Today every nation of any consequence is employing every possible resource and force to catch up to the United States in commercial air development. Commercial services of other countries are heavily supported financially by their governments. Great Britain, for instance, is spending $15,000,000 a year on its commercial system and is not getting one-half of the service that the United States receives for half of that sum.

Today there is a trade war in the air and we can proudly say that America is in the forefront. Activities are centered for the time being on the Atlantic Ocean. And out in front is Pan American, carrying the banner of the United States. One of the new fleet of superclippers—the Boeing Yankee Clipper—has just crossed the Atlantic without incident with the largest number of people ever to be carried over this turbulent ocean by air in a heavier-than-air plane. There were 12 members of the crew, 3 officials of aircraft companies, and 6 Government observers, a total of 21 persons. And with this record-breaking number of people aboard, the mammoth plane was not filled to capacity.

NEW YORK TO LONDON IN 24 HOURS

Three years were required to build the Yankee Clipper, which is the flagship of a fleet of six superclippers for ocean flying. This plane cost $750,000 and when placed in regular passenger service across the Atlantic will carry 40 passengers with sleeping accommodations. Over the northern Atlantic route this plane will put the British Isles within 24 hours of the United States. Employing the southern route, via the Azores, there will be a 34-hour service to France and the continent.

COMMERCIAL AIR SERVICE WITH EUROPE

Mr. President, the aviation industry is not so far afield from this particular bill, in that these aviation lines are being extended to South America, to the West Indies, and to the far China coast. We have there established American air lines to Hong Kong through the Philippine Islands airways that are not equaled by those of any other nation in the world. I think we all anticipate with great pleasure the American achievement in establishing commercial air service with Europe.

Senators probably know that one of the air lines now in service in South America circumnavigates that continent.

We hear much about Germany, France, Great Britain, and Italy and their air lines and their activities in South America. I desire to say that, so far as I am concerned, I am in favor of the Government supporting our air lines, whether the support be by an air-mail subsidy or whatever it may be. We invented these planes. We first placed them in the skies. We shall lead, and I think we are leading. We should continue to lead. The more frequent the service to South America, the better the service, the more air lanes we have, the more lighted airways, the more landing fields—the safer the country will be from the imaginary foreign attacks about which we hear so much. If, however, they are to come; if some of us should be mistaken in that respect, let us build still more complete airways and increase the landing-field facilities, so that there may be increased commerce for our air lines and their splendid personnel. This will strengthen our national defense.

THE "YANKEE CLIPPER"

Mr. President, there is also here a description of the Pan American air liner, the Yankee Clipper—the one some of us saw at the landing field here recently, a magnificent ship, something of which America may be proud. This one boat cost $750,000. I would rather see American money invested in aircraft of that kind than in futile adventures across the seas. Let us build up American industry, American airways, American air boats, flying equipment, and flying fields.

I also ask permission to insert this description in the RECORD, together with a statement of the air-mail service to foreign countries giving the total revenue and expenditures for the fiscal years shown.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The article and statement referred to appear at the end of Mr. LUNDEEN's remarks.)

Mr. LUNDEEN. I thank the Senate for their indulgence in this matter. I think it is fitting and proper that some one should call attention to this magnificent achievement of our air pilots.

There are no finer men in the service of the American Government anywhere in the world than the men who take these ships into the uncharted ocean of the air, and take them across the great seas, and safely land their passengers and their air mail. We are all proud of them; and we hope this is only the beginning, the inauguration of a mighty air service the like of which no other nation will ever accomplish.

The matter referred to by Mr. LUNDEEN, and which was ordered printed in the RECORD, is as follows:

PAN AMERICAN AIRWAYS CLIPPERS

(Type Boeing 314)

The latest aircraft so far developed in America—and the largest in the world designed for regular transport service—the Boeing 314 type Pan American clippers were developed to permit commercially feasible transoceanic passenger, mail, and express service.

Six aircraft of this type were ordered from the Boeing Airplane Co., Seattle, Wash. The first of the series has been under continual test since June and this month completed the tests required for licensing by the Civil Aeronautics Authority. Only one supplementary test for seaworthiness in rough water remains to be done and awaits the necessary water conditions. The second is ready for immediate delivery at Seattle; the third will be completely fitted for delivery January 10. The first aircraft upon which the tests were made will, on completion of the rough-water test, return to the factory for final passenger fittings and is scheduled for delivery January 25. The fourth, fifth, and sixth in the series will be delivered thereafter at intervals of 3 weeks.

POWER PLANTS

The Pan American Airways clipper, Boeing type 314, is a four-engine, high-wing, all-metal, monoplane flying boat. It has an original gross weight of 82,500 pounds—41¼ tons—has flown successfully with loads as high as 84,500 pounds. It is powered with four 1,500-horsepower, double-row, Wright Cyclone engines, driving three-blade Hamilton standard, full-feathering hydromatic propellers.

One of the advanced features of these aircraft—and a safety factor impossible of incorporation in smaller types—is the accessibility of its four engines in flight. A companionway is provided through the wing from the flight deck to each of the four engine stations, which are large enough to permit four men to work.

Under full-load conditions the aircraft can take off and land with three engines operating and can fly and climb with two of the four engines operating.

DIMENSIONS

The wing span is 152 feet; the over-all length, 109 feet. The surface ability is provided by sponsons or "seawings" attached to the fuselage at the water line. In addition to providing lateral stability on the surface, these sponsons also carry the main fuel supply, 3,000 gallons. An additional 1,200 gallons is carried in wing tanks immediately behind the engines. The over-all height from the water line is 24 feet.

PERFORMANCE

As a transoceanic mail plane (no passengers) the B-314 can carry 5,000 pounds of mail cargo for over a range of 5,000 miles, nonstop. For transoceanic passenger service the B-314 will carry 10,000 pounds of net pay load over a range of 4,000 miles, nonstop. This load will permit carrying 40 to 50 passengers in berths, in addition to 2,000 pounds of mail, over the 2,500-mile (the longest) sectors of the Pacific and Atlantic routes, each with a safety margin in excess of 1,000 miles.

For shorter routes the B-314 will carry a pay load of 26,000 pounds for a range of 1,750 miles nonstop. This load will permit carrying 75 passengers (for which individual seats are provided), in addition to 12,500 pounds of mail and freight cargo over this range.

The top speed of the Boeing 314 has been recorded at 201.5 miles per hour. The cruising speed on a full load, over full range, at 50 to 60 percent horsepower (for minimum fuel consumption and maximum power reserve) is in excess of 150 miles per hour.

ACCOMMODATIONS

The Boeing 314 type are two-deck flying boats. The upper deck, or flight deck, is equivalent in size to the cabin space of the largest transcontinental transport aircraft in current use and is reserved exclusively for the multiple flight crew of eight. Working stations are provided for two pilots, radio officer, navigation officer, chief engineering officer, two flight mechanics at wing-engine stations, and a junior flight officer. In addition, private captain's office is provided on the flight deck, forward of which is the marine compartment in the bow, and aft a special navigation observatory, sleeping and rest quarters for the flight crew, and the main cargo holds with a capacity for 5,000 pounds of transoceanic mail and express.

On the lower or main deck are accommodations for 75 daytime and 50 nighttime passengers. In addition to the regular passengers' seating and berth accommodations, on this deck are located the steward's galley and pantry for the preparation and serving of meals aloft, ladies' and men's lavatories and dressing rooms, and the main dining lounge. Aft of the main deck is a private cabin for two or more passengers and equipped as a stateroom lounge.

(The above statement was furnished by Pan American Airways.)

Air-mail service to foreign countries—Total revenue and expenditures for the fiscal year shown

Fiscal year—	Revenue	Expenditures	Excess expenditures over revenues	Miles flown
1929	$6.731.04	$1,150,711.96	$1,143,980.92
1930	308,812.57	4,300,000.00	3,991,187.43
1931	989,191.38	6,564 858.17	5.575,666.79	3,535,864
1932	1,199,997.85	6,962.984.28	5,762,986.43	3,778,729
1933	1,303,743.21	6,948,188.77	5,644,445.56	3.775.454.5
1934	1,786,173.31	6,942,375.29	5,156,201.98	3,767,102
1935	2,170,807.67	6,828,178.06	4,657,370.39	3,682,621
1936	2,685,149.09	6,610,271.15	3,925,122.06	3,754,537.3
1937	3,864,140.32	7,874,670.60	4,101,530.28	4,445,591.6
1938	4,170,516.83	8,579,524.57	4,409,007.74	4,994,557.6

ACQUISITION OF STOCKS OF STRATEGIC MILITARY MATERIALS, ETC.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 572) to provide for the common defense by acquiring stocks of strategic and critical raw materials, concentrates, and alloys essential to the needs of industry for the manufacture of supplies for the armed forces and the civilian population in time of a national emergency, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The pending question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the Senator from West Viriginia [Mr. NEELY].

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, I am entirely in sympathy with the amendment offered by the Senator from West Virginia, and I hope the amendment will prevail.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I rise to ask a question of the able Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS] in charge of the bill. What agency of the Government or what authority will determine what commodities, metals, or other things, are strategic and critical?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, the determination of what is strategic and critical is left with the War Department and the Navy Department.

Mr. ASHURST. I am content.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to return to the committee amendment in line 2 on page 2 for the purpose of offering an amendment to it. I send the amendment to the desk and ask to have it stated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the amendment to the committee amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 2, line 2, it is proposed to strike from lines 2 and 3 the following words:

to encourage the further development of mines and deposits of these materials in the United States, and—

It is also proposed in line 7, after the word "emergency", to insert the following words:

and to encourage the further development of mines and deposits of these minerals in the United States, provided that such development shall be undertaken through the use of private capital, except that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is authorized and empowered to make loans to private corporations to aid in such development in accordance with, and subject to the limitations contained in, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, it will be observed that by this amendment the phrase now appearing in lines 2 and 3, at the top of page 2, is transposed to follow the word "emergency" in line 7.

The purpose of the amendment is phraseologically to tie in the more readily with a proviso or limitation upon the proposal to develop mines and deposits of materials.

The reason must become apparent from the very answer which the Senator in charge of the bill gave to the distinguished Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] only a few minutes ago. There is nothing in the bill to provide for the allocation of any given amount for the development of mines or mineral resources of whatever kind. For all we know, the entire fund—provided the Secretaries of the departments agree—may be used for the development of mines and deposits.

As the bill is drawn, Mr. President, it has the singular vice of devoting public funds to the development of these mines and the deposits of these materials, when the crying need of the hour is the encouragement of private capital to be directed into those very fields. It would seem to me to be the height of wisdom not only to encourage private capital to develop these mines and deposits of materials indigenous to the United States but, if there be a shortage of them, or if there be required additional credit, that R. F. C. funds be made available for such purpose. Certainly we all realize that if there were deposits of tin, for instance, in the United States they would long ago have been developed, or molybdenum, or any of the other materials supposed to be covered by this development and research program.

Mr. President, I submit that the amendment is in the interest of the development of a sound national economy. At the same time, the amendment in no way militates against the proposal that the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy may acquire such stores of natural resources not indigenous to our soil as may be needed in times of war.

I submit that the amendment ought to be adopted.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I trust the amendment will be rejected.

In the bill there is no provision for the expenditure of public money, as such, to carry on the private affairs of a mine or any sort of corporation which may be organized. The suggestion that the R. F. C. may be allowed to lend to these organizations is not adding anything to the law of the land as it stands today, because I think the R. F. C. has that right at the present time. If, for example, section 7 of the bill is construed to provide for setting up companies with public funds, I think that is a reading of the section which is hardly correct. The bill still has just two purposes—one, to establish a stock pile; the other, to encourage discovering methods whereby American products may be available.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I am glad to yield.

Mr. DANAHER. Will the Senator please advise us how much of the proposed fund may be allocated to the second of the so-called dual purposes; namely, to provide employment at the mines?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. There is nothing in the bill about employment at the mines.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I have distinctly in mind the references of the Senator from Montana a few days ago to the opening of mines in Butte.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I do not recall the remarks of the Senator from Montana; but there is nothing in the bill to provide directly for employment. It is not a relief measure in any way.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator how much money would be allocated under the committee bill to the development of mines?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. That amount of money is in the appropriation made under paragraph (b) of section 7—$350,000 to the Bureau of Mines and $150,000 to the Geological Survey—and those sums are to be used primarily and, in fact, entirely for experimental purposes.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, I think what the Senator from Montana said the other day was that in the event the Government of the United States should buy extensively of the strategic materials produced in the United States, the necessary production of those materials by private industry would employ men; not that any of this money should be used for the purpose of paying wages, but that it would simply induce the employment of men by private industry.

Mr. DANAHER. I thank the Senator for the contribution from his recollection.

Mr. President, I ask the distinguished Senator in charge of the bill in what fields the development of mines and deposits of materials is contemplated?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Merely in the field of experimentation. For example, if the Bureau of Mines believes that it has a process for the development of nickel in our country which we are not now developing in sufficient quantity to take care of our national needs, that experimentation will go forward. Experimentation may be conducted on private land or on public land, but it always remains in the realm of experiment; and the development will come in accordance with the ordinary objectives of the two great Bureaus which will be put to work.

Mr. DANAHER. Will the Senator inform us if there is any field covered by minerals sought to be purchased and accumulated in stock piles as to which our Bureau of Mines has not long since made complete surveys?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I can answer that question in many ways. If the Senator had been present at all of the hearings he would have found that each answer would have been extremely valuable.

There is the testimony, for example, that America never can produce manganese of a grade which will be acceptable to our Navy. There was the testimony that we have plenty of manganese if we just have a right to develop it.

We have all types of expert testimony given to us. It was told by one man who calls himself, and who has been recognized, as one of the greatest experts in metallurgy and mining in our country, that there are in our country large deposits of tin, and that he would like to prove that there is plenty of tin to be found here.

The point is that we are dealing here with an experimental field, and there has been difference of opinion about whether we produce in the United States the materials in question. The theory of the bill is that if they are found in this country, we should encourage their development and their use.

Mr. DANAHER. But, Mr. President, we do it at the expense of the Public Treasury, do we not, under the bill?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. To the extent of half a million dollars a year, and the half a million dollars a year will be spent under the direction of the Government's greatest experts in the fields where they work.

Mr. DANAHER. Does not the Senator feel that if these fields in fact await exploration and development, they can be developed through private capital?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. It will be accomplished by private capital, because that is the only way in which they can be developed in a big way. But for the Senator to turn his back upon the tremendously great achievements of the Bureau of Mines, for example, and the Geological Survey would be to turn his back upon some of the most valuable contributions which have been made to our economic life. For instance, there is the process, simple to us now, for the proper treatment economically of low-grade copper ore, a process which I myself saw worked out, which process all came about as the result of experiment, and it has brought millions and millions and millions of dollars of wealth to our country.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I recognize and applaud the efforts of the Bureau of Mines and all the valuable activities to which the Senator has referred. I also wish to thank the Senator for the earnestness with which he has attended upon this whole subject. The point of objection, when we reduce it to its fundamentals, is that public funds are being used to develop and to exploit what should be a field of private endeavor.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Public funds will be used for private endeavor only to the extent that public funds have been used to encourage private endeavor by these two great institutions, the Geological Survey and the Bureau of Mines. The line of demarcation between that which is public and that which is private in the realm of experiment is very narrow, because when an experiment is developed and a new process is discovered in the Bureau of Mines, it belongs to all the people of the United States.

If a process were discovered by a private individual, it might be patented and so be protected by the patent laws of the United States. Probably in no better way can we use public funds to increase the wealth of private individuals and private property than through the medium which is set up in the bill.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator inform us whether there is any provision in the bill which limits the field of research to public lands of the United States?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Quite the contrary. The Bureau of Mines may go on private property; the Bureau of Mines may take over for experimental purposes a given mine owned by a given person if that person wants experiments carried on there, and if mining feasibility is proven, and then the processes are proven by public endeavor, the profit, the benefit, goes to all the people, and the mine owners still own their mines.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator whether there is anything new or novel in the policy to which he has just adverted. Is it not true that for the past 50 years the Bureau of Mines and the Geological Survey have been conducting studies of this kind in every mineral area of the United States, and is it not true that we have been told in the committee hearings that approximately 20 States in the Union claim they have within their borders enormous deposits of manganese, and that a great number of States claim they have deposits of chromium, which should be uncovered, and which, if the claim be true, would be a great addition to the wealth of this country? All new wealth comes from the ground. This measure is an effort to uncover mineral wealth, and will be a great advantage to the country, inasmuch as it will result in the production of minerals of a character which are absolutely essential for our defense purposes.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I thank the Senator. He has answered his own question in the explanation made.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, the questions which have been asked by the Senator from Connecticut, and also portions of the debate as it has proceeded, prompt me at this time to refer to certain conditions which developed in this country under a law somewhat similar to the pending bill, which will verify what the Senator from Montana has stated, that the bill is not a new or novel thing in our history.

Before the World War practically the entire supply of potash used in the United States came from Germany and other foreign countries. As a consequence, as every person who is familiar with the subject at all knows full well, during the war our country was placed in dire straits, especially the agricultural interests, on account of the lack of potash.

Some years later in the State of New Mexico a private company searching for oil found evidences of potash deposits. Under a bill sponsored by the senior Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD], Congress authorized an appropriation for an investigation and development of the potash resources of the United States. As I recall, the bill carried an appropriation of $100,000 a year for 5 years, a total of some $500,000, quite a large sum at that time to be devoted to one industry, the mining industry.

Using that fund wisely, the Geological Survey, the Bureau of Mines, and other departments of the Government, cooperated with the private companies developing potash in New Mexico and as the result of their joint efforts it was discovered that there were in the State of New Mexico sufficient deposits of potash to supply our entire country, if the necessity arose. Should war come, no longer would our country be dependent upon foreign supplies of potash. We could supply it all from the deposits in New Mexico.

As a further result, we have in the State of New Mexico two companies, possibly three, operating the potash mines, with which the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], who now presides over the Senate, is familiar, and with which the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS], who sits by my side, is especially familiar, having been through those mines with me, mines which now employ more than a thousand men, paying to those men the highest wages paid labor in the State of New Mexico. Those mines are a profitable investment. They have placed on the tax rolls of my State property which pays a good share of the taxes returned.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, let me call the Senator's attention to the price to which potash went during the World War.

Mr. HATCH. I quite well recall that the price went up, but I do not recall the figure to which it rose.

Mr. SMITH. It went to two or three hundred dollars a ton for the muriatic form, and was somewhat less than that for the sulphuric form.

Mr. HATCH. I wonder whether the Senator has in mind how many thousands or perhaps millions of dollars were spent during that period in the dry-lake region in Nebraska, and in the seaweed development, and other experiments in an attempt to develop a supply of potash?

Mr. SMITH. I recall that the kelp on the west coast was supposed to be a prolific source of readily available potash. The device to clip the kelp under water, dry it out in sheds, and extract the potash was very costly in the experimental stage, and then there was in the Searles Lake region all kinds of experimentation in an effort to develop a supply. The difficulty is now solved, because the war brought to us a very vivid realization of our dependence on this material.

Mr. HATCH. I wonder whether it would be too much to say that if the Congress of the United States had been sufficiently far-sighted before the war to enact a measure such as the one we are considering today, we might have had supplies of potash developed in our own country, such as we now have, and would have been saved the experience of which the Senator speaks.

Mr. SMITH. There are two illustrations, one the development of nitrates, brought about by a realization that we were dependent on Chile for that basic element in the manufacture of explosives; and the development of potash, which is just as essential in the manufacture of war materials. We lacked both those materials, and the exigencies of war caused us to spend untold millions of dollars, which expenditures would have been avoided had we had such a law on the statute books as the bill now before us.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I shall not delay the Senate. I merely desired to mention the incident to which I have referred, because it is a matter of which I have personal knowledge, and I know full well that a short-sighted economic policy sometimes proves to be the most expensive in the long run.

Because I have seen cooperation between Government agencies with private industry, have seen them work together wisely and intelligently and honestly, to the progress and development of my own State and her industries, I felt compelled to pay this tribute to the Congress of the United States, to the Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD], who encouraged the measure to which I called attention awhile ago, and the type of legislation represented by the bill now before us.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, in this connection, as the Senator has mentioned the cooperation of private industry with the Government, I wish to state that that was preeminently true in the development of the nitrate process. The price of nitrate went up to something like $100 or $110 a ton, on account of the war exigency, but now, under the process as it is being developed, the price is down to something like $25 or $30 a ton, with an abundant supply in the United States.

I was not so familiar with the development of the potash business; but, as the Senator has indicated, we now have developed a process by which we can be assured of all the potash we need.

Mr. HATCH. The potash is mined as a mineral in New Mexico and in the Searles Lake region, and between the two supplies there is no question that we could supply this country with all the potash necessary for many years.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I voted against the restriction of the appropriation to $10,000,000 a year, because I am convinced that supplying a sufficient amount of money to encourage investigation and development will result in the best economy we can practice.

I am apprehensive that reducing the annual appropriation to $10,000,000 would impose such a limitation that the different materials and chemicals which we wish to develop might not be developed in sufficient quantities. I am sorry that the chairman of the committee accepted the amendment, when I recall our experience with the two chemicals upon which we have to depend in carrying on a war which we had to develop during the war at an enormous expense to the Government. In the case of one of these materials, our early participation in the war was jeopardized, because had Chile been blockaded we would have been without the prime essential in the manufacture of explosives.

I cannot for the life of me see why we should object to appropriating the full $25,000,000. It is not a question of balancing the Budget. It is a question of getting ready to preserve our country with our own resources. The question of economy does not enter into the consideration of the question. It is a question of developing the resources of this country to such a point that under all conditions we will be prepared to meet any exigency which may arise.

As I stated last Tuesday in my remarks on the Senator's bill, I do not believe in mixing in European quarrels; but I know that we are one of the sisters among the nations of the earth.

Mr. President, I want to go on record as being in favor of our country being prepared for any exigency that may arise. No Senator can tell what conditions we may be called upon to meet, when we consider the crazy, lunatic way affairs are being run in Europe, reversing the order and the progress of civilization and reverting back to the times of dictators, emperors, and kings. The idea of a great country such as Germany being subjected to the will of one man and the other nations of the earth either quaking at his tremendous exhibition of power or surrendering to him at his behest without the shedding of a drop of blood. How soon we may be called upon to consider some of the demands of this crazy egomaniac we do not know. I think it is time for us to get ready, and I hail with delight the bill of the Senator from Utah which looks to the appropriation of an amount sufficient to enable us to be provided with all the things necessary to protect ourselves in the event of attack.

Mr. President, of course we get very economical when it comes to certain fundamentals, but we can pour out billions of dollars to support people who never contribute one iota to the progress or welfare of the country. We all know humanity sufficiently well to realize that the unemployed will keep pace with our appropriations. As we increase the appropriation we are going to increase unemployment. We know that a man who can be supported by the Government is not going to hunt a job. No. So long as he is supported he is satisfied. I say here today, that the greatest crime ever committed by the Federal Government was to assume the role of relief agent for all the unemployed in America. Forty-eight sovereign States had their unemployment problem with their reserved power. What was done by the United States Government made for national unemployment. Had we divided the problem among the 48 States, and made each State responsible for its own unemployment we would not have the degrading condition of twelve or thirteen million persons on relief at the expense of the taxpayers, regardless of the amount of unemployment within the States.

What is the use? I am in the dog house. [Laughter.] I am in the dog house. All I can do is to stick my head out and bark. [Laughter.] Yes; and whenever they get too close to me, I want to bite. [Laughter.]

It is time for us to call a halt on this tremendous expenditure of public money that has grown up in the billions when we know that the basis of it all is to corral votes.

Let us call a spade a spade. The money is voted in the House and voted in the Senate, not for the welfare of America but to corral votes for some persons so they can warm these seats.

What Congress has done has had the effect, indirectly, of buying votes. What is done may be according to the law Congress enacted, but the time will come when everyone who has been a party to this impoverishment of our country in order to buy votes will cover his head in shame. That page in our history will contain a record which will be to the everlasting shame of this body. We do not study the economic situation. Listen to the speeches that are made here, consider the votes that are cast, and when examined and analyzed they will be found to be based on the hope that "I am going to be the fair-haired boy on election day."

Mr. President, it is not very encouraging for a man who thinks it his duty to stay within the delegated powers of the Constitution and make laws under its limitations to see others forget their duty and, with a senseless, mad rush, spend billions and billions of dollars for no other purpose in the wide world than to make the recipients of their largess remember them on election day.

There is not a Senator who will deny that that is the purpose. And some of us must be crucified, some of us must be denounced, we who have kept the faith for 30 and 35 long years, who have never been apostates, who have never digressed from our sense of obligation to that splendid instrument which has kept us within the bounds of democracy. That document left it to the 48 States, with their divergent interests, divergent local feeling, and different psychologies to work out their own problems under the powers reserved to them.

There never was conceived in the mind of man a more splendid arrangement than our dual form of government. But step by step we have eliminated the powers of the States, until now the eyes of 130,000,000 people are turned to Washington, and to a little group of men who, if even they had all the brains that man could have, if they were touched by divine power and made geniuses such as exist in the manufacturing world, could not comprehend the difference in psychology and the difference in local feeling that exists within the several States. And yet we sit down here and at the crack of the whip jump through a hoop. We have a two-ringed circus, one here and one at the other end of the Capitol. [Laughter.] Crack the whip, jump through the hoop!

Mr. President, I think I had better desist. The way we are going, and, after listening to the speeches and watching the votes of my colleagues, I despair of ever getting back to the old "horse and buggy" days. Yes, my God, I would rather be in the "horse and buggy" age than be in the "jackass age." [Laughter.]

I think I had better quit. I feel that I am getting to the point where I may tell the truth. [Laughter.]

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SMITH. I yield.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I always listen with attention when the able Senator from South Carolina speaks. If I am in the reception room, or even if I am holding a conference with a constituent, I leave the conference in order to hear the able Senator, whose philosophy, although exceedingly rich, apparently does not go sufficiently deep to give him much comfort.

During the years I have been a Member of the Senate I have received upward of 30,000 telegraphic dispatches, only 3 or 4 of which have urged me to vote against appropriations, whereas many thousand telegrams have urged me to vote for appropriations. When the taxpayers cease sending telegrams requesting Congress to provide unnecessary appropriations, the taxpayers will obtain relief from high taxes.

We need not despair. There are in this world some laws that may not be repealed. There is the law of the survival of the fittest, the law of supply and demand, the law of compensation, and the law of reaction. Even if Congress should refuse to grant relief from excessive taxes, the law of reaction would ultimately do its perfect work.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I hope and trust to God that law will never be applied to the United States Senate.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, as a fiercely raging fire will burn itself out, and a rapidly running river will create obstructions for itself, as Aristides the Just was banished because people grew tired of hearing him called Aristides the Just, likewise an era of prodigal expenditures will be followed by an era of economy to the point of parsimony, and in due time there will ensue an era of economy that will make Calvin Coolidge look like a spendthrift.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I wish to take up one suggestion made by the Senator, and that is that we will start economy when the people demand it. The people did not start the demand for this orgy of senseless spending. They did not do it, but once they got a taste of it, who in the name of Heaven would expect them not to say, "Give us some more?" They did not start it.

Mr. President, I felt that if I went on with my opposition to certain encroachments upon the sacred rights of the States, as I interpret their rights, I would be ignominiously defeated. I told the people, "Whenever I reach the point where I think more of sitting in this body than of doing my duty as a Senator, you may have the seat." Thank God, the little State of South Carolina, the storm center of the Union, the home of nullification, the home of secession, responded gloriously. I carried my case to the people and received the biggest majority I have ever received since I have been running for office. All honor to South Carolina for ratifying and endorsing a man who was not afraid!

I am not afraid to stand in this one-time august body and declare my faith in the American people if we will do our duty. Talk about the recession of the tide. Mark my prediction: Whenever we cut off the flow of public money to the unworthy we have given such hostages to fortune that we shall have riots, if not revolution, in America. A man does not stop being a recipient of the public largess without a fight. There is an element in this country which we have trained for 6 long years to look to the Government for support rather than to its own efforts. We shall not loosen them from their hold until there is a totally new body in the Senate and in the House.

Mr. President at some future time I shall take up seriatim the acts which are now on the statute books and, without passion, show whether or not they are in accordance with my conception of the Constitution of the United States. I know that an effort is being made to amend that instrument. It is said that we have moved far beyond the application of the old doctrine. However, I think there are some fundamental truths which will never change as long as we are human beings. I think the first 10 amendments voiced beyond a doubt the inalienable rights of the individual—rights which neither Congress, nor any legislature, nor any President, nor any dictator, nor any man, has the human right to invade, to curtail, or to interfere with. They are congenital rights and they were were written into our organic law.

The relations between the sovereign States and the Federal Government were very clearly outlined in the first seven articles of the Constitution. Take that instrument, from the first article to the eleventh, and it will be applicable a thousand years from now, just as the stability of the sunrise is necessary for us to calculate time. Such principles are the fundamentals upon which all democratic governments must be based.

Mr. President, I apologize for taking so much time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. DANAHER].

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, if I may advert to the pending amendment without disrupting the trend of thought of the Senate, I call the attention of the Senator from Utah to subsection (b) of section 7, beginning in line 10 of page 6. We there find that for the purposes of carrying out the provisions of the section there are authorized to be appropriated the sums therein mentioned. The appropriation therein set forth has no reference whatever to section 1, and particularly the part of it appearing at the top of page 2.

That is the first observation by way of rebuttal to my colleague.

With reference to the next objective declared in the amendment, Mr. President, I should like to point out that lines 2 and 3 on page 2 are not stricken from the bill. There is nothing in the amendment as offered that is subversive of the announced purposes of the bill as first introduced and set forth in its title; quite the contrary. The provisions of lines 2 and 3 on page 2 are preserved, but are merely restated after the word "emergency" in line 7.

Consequently, after the Bureau of Mines or any other Government bureau has explored the possibilities, as provided by the authorization in section 7, the development is limited to the use of private capital which, if need be, may be supplemented by a loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

With the amendment thus stated, Mr. President, I submit that the whole purpose of the bill, devoid of its present vice, can be served.

I ask that the amendment be agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. DANAHER].

The amendment was rejected.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE—ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the enrolled joint resolution (H. J. Res. 250) making an additional appropriation for the fiscal year 1939 for expenditure by the United States Employees' Compensation Commission in accordance with section 16 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938, and it was signed by the President pro tempore.

REFUSAL OF PULLMAN CO. TO OBEY AWARDS OF NATIONAL RAILROAD ADJUSTMENT BOARD

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I shall ask for only a short time to speak with regard to a matter discussed in a communication to me from Mr. M. S. Warfield, president of the Order of Sleeping Car Conductors.

In 1934 the Congress passed an amendment to the Railway Retirement Act, and in that amendment the Congress made two very important contributions to industrial stability and economic peace.

The Congress created a Railway Adjustment Board and a National Mediation Board. By the statute itself it was made the duty of the carriers to observe the adjudications made by the Railway Adjustment Board.

That Board has now functioned for 4 years with a satisfactory experience behind it. It has succeeded so well in preserving peace between the employer and the employee that that statute has often been referred to as a model statute pertaining to that vital subject of industrial peace. In my opinion, Mr. President, that principle of settling disputes between employer and employee is important to America, and the violation of that principle and the lack of confidence of either the employer, the employee, or the public in that principle and in such an institution is detrimental to the economic order.

Such a situation has recently arisen. A few years ago an agreement was entered into between the Order of Sleeping Car Conductors and the Pullman Co., their employer. Subsequent to that time the Pullman Co. began to require that the Pullman conductor should be relieved from his conductor's employment, and that the cars be left in charge only of Pullman porters. There had been a previous adjudication on this question by the Adjustment Board, which had adjudicated that if there were any conductor's work to be done, under the agreement the right to perform that work belonged to the conductors, who were the beneficiaries of that agreement. However, the case was specifically presented to the Adjustment Board, under award No. 779, involving the question as to whether or not certain conductors, who were assigned to line 161 of the Burlington Railroad operating between Kansas City and Billings, Mont., and beyond during certain seasons, were subject to removal. The porters who had previously served upon the cars were to retain their places and be the only representatives of the Pullman Co. in charge of such Pullman cars. In that case the Railway Adjustment Board made it clear and certain that the claimants were entitled to the claims they made, and the award was in favor of the Order of Railway Conductors, which had protested the violation of the agreement on the part of the Pullman Co.

Mr. President, under the terms of the 1934 act an alternative is open to the employee. That is to say, he has the right to resort to a Federal court for the purpose of enforcing the award which is made by the Railway Adjustment Board set up by the Congress, composed of an equal number of representatives of the employer and the employees. The employer is now acting contrary to the literal requirement of the letter of the law, which makes it the statutory duty of the carrier to observe the adjudication of the Railway Adjustment Board, in violation of the spirit of that remedial legislation, and in violation, I believe, of the sentiment of the country for an orderly and lawful industrial peace.

The controversy has reached the point where the employees have been thrown back outside the scope of the remedial legislation, into the forum of the courts, where they could have gone before such legislation was ever enacted. I think it is worthy of public notice, Mr. President, that this attitude has been manifested on the part of the employer, not alone for its importance in this particular case but for the bad example it sets in the country at a time when we are trying to obtain some proper method of determining what is right between employer and employee, before a competent tribunal which can adjudicate those rights, and trying to encourage a spirit on the part of both parties to observe what may be the adjudication of such a forum.

Mr. President, I wish to submit my views on this matter and to express the very earnest hope that the employer in this case will lend a beneficent example to the employers of the country by observing the adjudication of the adjustment board, on which the employer and employees are equally represented. I hope the employer will see fit to reconsider its policy and to observe what the statute requires with respect to the decisions of the Board. This will probably avoid the necessity of reviewing this legislation with a view to strengthening its provisions as to observance of awards, and will make for good feeling generally.

Mr. President, I ask leave to supplement my remarks by having printed at this point, in the body of the RECORD, the statement to which I have referred.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

REFUSAL OF THE PULLMAN CO. TO OBEY AWARDS OF THE NATIONAL RAILROAD ADJUSTMENT BOARD THREATENS TO DESTROY THE EFFECTIVENESS OF THE RAILWAY LABOR ACT

(By M. S. Warfield, president, Order Sleeping Car Conductors)

The purpose of amending the Railway Labor Act by Congress in 1934 was to establish methods for more prompt and equitable adjustment of disputes between the carriers and organizations of employees, which was shown by experience under the original act to be much needed.

The National Railroad Adjustment Board and the new Mediation Board created by these amendments have been functioning now for over 4 years, and their record of achievement leaves no doubt as to their value. So successful have been the services of these Boards in preserving peace in the industry and providing for uninterrupted interstate commerce during these most difficult years that the amended Railway Labor Act has come to be known as a model for the guidance of others whose labor relations are less efficiently handled.

Commerce between the States has been maintained continuously under voluntary agreements between the carriers and the organizations of employees, and these amicable relations have resulted in the passage of other legislation to stabilize and improve conditions of employment.

It is therefore gravely disconcerting to learn that the Pullman Co. and a few other carriers are attempting to discredit the Railway Labor Act by paralyzing the machinery created for the purpose of adjudicating disputes. This is being done by ignoring Adjustment Board awards and otherwise interfering with the prompt disposition of claims under the rules of procedure adopted by the Board. This refusal of the carriers to settle claims or apply the rules of agreements as interpreted by Adjustment Board awards has the effect of short-circuiting the law and substituting managerial domination for voluntary agreements entered into in good faith by the employees.

Resort to Federal court action by the employees to force observance of Adjustment Board awards is not the answer to this problem. Carrying on their contractual relations with the carriers by court orders was not intended as a part of routine procedure open to the carriers as a matter of course. The courts could not handle the flood of complaints thus produced and the country would be confronted with a new and serious problem concerning uninterrupted interstate commerce.

The Order of Sleeping Car Conductors, representing all conductors employed by the Pullman Co., recently obtained Adjustment Board awards regulating pay for certain types of overtime work and interpreting the agreement with the carrier to mean that wherever it is established that conductors' work exists, the conductors have the right to perform it. Under that interpretation of the agreement the carrier does not have the right to remove conductors from their regular assignments and give their work to porters, thus making the porters do two men's work for one man's pay. In each case where porters are given conductors' work the conductor loses his job, but when this work is returned to conductors the porters remain on their jobs; they are simply relieved of the necessity of doing two men's work.

Instead of applying the award interpreting the agreement to mean that the conductors have the right to perform the work for which they were employed, the Pullman Co. continues to remove conductors from their assignments with accelerated speed. Men who have spent their lives in the service are now out of work on that account.

Aside from the fact that this practice is contributing to unemployment at a time when all employers are being urged to create more jobs to stimulate business revival, it is depriving the patrons of Pullman cars of the safety, comfort, and convenience afforded by the supervisory services rendered by conductors. Conductors and porters have their separate duties to perform and each in his own field does his work efficiently. It is out of the question, however, to expect either one to do the work of both. Conductors are the supervisors of service, patrolling the cars to insure the safety of passengers and their property, and making sure that their needs are properly taken care of. The importance of these services to the patrons of Pullman cars should make their continuance a certainity. Under no circumstances should an Adjustment Board award preserving them be disregarded.

The success of the amended Railway Labor Act has been so convincingly demonstrated that no interference with its functions should exist, certainly not where the safety or convenience of the traveling public is adversely affected.

Under the law it is the duty of the carriers to make and maintain agreements with the organizations of their employees but here we find a situation where the Pullman Co., after signing an agreement with its conductors, refuses to maintain it as interpreted by the Adjustment Board designated by law and the agreement for that purpose. Under the law these awards are final and binding upon the parties. In cases of this character the company attempts to defend its position by asserting that the revenue produced on the line is not sufficient to warrant the operation of conductors or that the service is adequate without conductors. Neither of these excuses establishes the right to farm out conductors' work to porters under the agreement. Furthermore, it will be obvious that the smaller the number of passengers, the greater the need for the protection afforded by the conductor.

One or two passengers in a car constitutes an invitation to anyone inclined to commit criminal acts to do what they will at night when there is nothing between them and the passengers who are asleep but a cloth curtain. Adequate protection to passengers at such times, especially women, is an inescapable obligation. Up to the present time passengers in Pullman cars are undoubtedly enjoying considerable immunity from such dangers due to the well-known protection afforded them through constant conductor supervision of service. The removal of conductors from their runs has not been advertised. On the contrary, by having conductors receive passengers at terminals and take care of their transportation, it has been largely taken for granted that they continue with the train. Now that the veil has been lifted and it is public knowledge that the Pullman Co. has withdrawn the safety and service supervisor from so many trains, favorable reactions can hardly be expected. The employees who are devoting their lives to this service and know its inside story are alarmed at the future prospects. They know that business lost to other modes of transportation where better supervision is assured will be almost impcssible to recover.

There is no justification for this let-down in service from the standpoint of expense. The Pullman Co. is financially sound. It has no bonded debt, and has been a consistent dividend payer. An analysis of its reports to the Interstate Commerce Commission shows that it is in no danger of insolvency. The last available annual reports to the Interstate Commerce Commission are for 1937 and show net income after all charges of $4,571,686, dividends of $3,243,855, profit and loss surplus of $5,944,656, and total corporate surplus of $7,436,981. At the close of 1937 the total outstanding capital of the Pullman Co. aggregated $108,135,000.

The assertion of the need for economy merely serves to divert attention from the real issue, which is an attack on the machinery created by the amended Railway Labor Act for the adjudication of disputes between carriers and their employees. In this matter it will be found that the attitude and practices of the company are in violation of the act and its agreement with conductors. The company still maintains that the assignment of conductors to service or removal therefrom is strictly a managerial function in no way limited by its agreement with its conductors, in spite of Adjustment Board awards to the contrary.

Under the previous agreement the right of conductors to perform terminal duties was established. The Adjustment Board rendered a decision, effective April 23, 1937, that receiving passengers at the terminal was a conductor's work which could not be assigned to any other employee not covered by the agreement. The award states:

"The statement has been made in connection with this claim that the application of rule 2 (d) is 'permissive and not mandatory.' the Board cannot agree to this interpretation. * * * If it were applied only 'when required' according to the interpretation of the carrier it would result in a confusing and uncertain application of the rules and, unless checked, with a resultant nullification of their object."

Under the current agreement the right of conductors to perform conductors' work to the exclusion of other employees not covered by the contract has been ruled on by the Adjustment Board. Certain conductors who were assigned to line 161, Burlington Railroad, operating between Kansas City and Billings, Mont., or beyond, during certain seasons, were removed on September 26, 1937, and porters took their places. The conductors made claim for return to their runs and pay for time lost on account of removal. Their claims were sustained in award No. 779, effective February 1, 1939, but the company has refused to pay their claims. It is also continuing to remove conductors from their runs in a similar manner elsewhere in spite of the interpretation placed upon the agreement by the Board that such removals are not permissible. Award No. 779 states:

"It therefore becomes necessary to inquire as to the scope or extent of coverage of the agreement between the parties. This and other boards have held many times that work subject to an agreement cannot be removed therefrom arbitrarily and that principle is too well settled to admit of further questioning. * * * The reason for the implication that the agreement embraces all of the work of the class involved (except such as is specifically excepted) is that any contract must have a definite, ascertainable, subject matter in order to be a contract at all. A contention, therefore, such as that advanced by the management here; that is, that it can, at will, unilaterally, subject to or withhold from the agreement such work as it sees fit, is quite untenable since it would be destructive of the agreement."

In spite of this clear and positive interpretation of the scope of the agreement the company is still pursuing its practice of substituting porters for conductors. It is also introducing the same arguments in subsequent cases which the Board has declared to be "untenable."

Acting in conformity with the terms of the amended Railway Labor Act the Pullman Co., voluntarily, has signed a contract with its conductors which gives to those employees the right to perform all of that class of work. Having executed this agreement it is bound by its terms. Any attempt to evade or violate the rules thus created should be severely condemned. Otherwise, the Pullman Co. will establish a precedent that will undermine the law and ultimately destroy it.

No employer has less reason for treating its employees unfairly. The Order of Sleeping Car Conductors has tried in every way to cooperate with the Pullman Co. It originated safety and service movements in Pullman service and tried to interest the company in a cooperative plan for scientific treatment of service problems but all without success. Pullman conductors work longer than any other train service employees with the exception of dining-car crews. Their rest periods en route are deducted from hours of work, running as high as 4 to 6 hours a night. Two hundred and forty hours, exclusive of rest periods, constitutes a month's work. They frequently work from 12 to 14 cars, heavily loaded, without help.

The Pullman Co., insofar as its attitude toward its employees is concerned, has not changed much since 1915, when the Commission on Industrial Relations appointed by President Wilson investigated its relations with employees and reported to Congress in part as follows:

"1. The conductors and porters employed in the car service of the Pullman Co. are employed under conditions which seem to require radical readjustment. Both classes of employees are admitted by officials of the company to be underpaid.

"4. The employees of the Pullman Co. are unable to improve their condition through organization, as employees known to be members of labor unions are discharged, and through means of an effective system of espionage employees are deterred from affiliating with labor unions."

In the State of Kentucky, where Pullman conductors have recently been removed from a train between Louisville and Fulton, on the State line, the railroad commission requested the Pullman Co. to restore these conductors to service. The request was refused, whereupon the commission cited the company to appear before it on January 28, 1939, to show cause for its action. This case is still pending.

Bills to require the continual operation of Pullman conductors on trains have been introduced in the States of Texas, Arkansas, and Tennessee, with more to follow. In Florida and South Carolina there are orders of the State commissions requiring the operation of Pullman conductors on all trains within the State.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, it is obvious that we cannot finish the pending bill today. I therefore move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

FRED H. BROWN

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, which was read:

To the Senate of the United States:

I nominate Fred H. Brown, of New Hampshire, to be Comptroller General of the United States for a term of 15 years.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, March 30, 1939.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that that nomination be acted upon without reference to a committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, of course the request is unusual, but it is a courtesy often extended to former distinguished Members of this body. For that reason I have no objection.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I certainly hope the request will be agreed to.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, is there a unanimous-consent request that we act on a nomination for an important office without reference to a committee?

Mr. BARKLEY. I have asked unanimous consent that the nomination of Hon. Fred H. Brown, formerly a Member of this body, to be Comptroller General, be considered without reference to a committee.

Mr. BURKE. I think all nominations should be referred to the appropriate committees for study; and I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The nomination will be referred to the Committee on Finance.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF A COMMITTEE

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of sundry postmasters.

Mr. HARRISON, from the Committee on Finance, reported favorably the following nominations:

Fannie Dixon Welch, of Columbia, Conn., to be collector of customs for customs collection district No. 6, with headquarters at Bridgeport, Conn. (reappointment);

Charles E. Kemper, of Columbus, Ind., to be collector of customs for customs collection district No. 40, with headquarters at Indianapolis, Ind., in place of Wray Fleming, whose term of office has expired;

Florence Clarke Lynch, of New York, to be appraiser of merchandise in customs collection district No. 10, with headquarters at New York, N. Y., to fill an existing vacancy;

Abe D. Waldauer, of Memphis, Tenn., to be collector of customs for customs collection district No. 43, with headquarters at Memphis, Tenn., to fill an existing vacancy; and

Dr. Filip C. Forsbeck to be surgeon in the United States Public Health Service, to take effect from date of oath.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The reports will be placed on the Executive Calendar.

If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will state in their order the nominations on the Executive Calendar.

THE JUDICIARY—WILLIAM O. DOUGLAS

The legislative clerk read the nomination of William O. Douglas to be an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, one of the Members of the Senate was called from the Chamber a short time ago, and desires that the nomination go over for the day. In his behalf I make that request.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, in that connection I wish to say that it is my understanding that on Monday next the Supreme Court will recess until the 17th day of April. If this nomination should go over beyond tomorrow, Mr. Douglas would not be able to take the oath prior to the recess of the Supreme Court. I do not wish to press the matter today, however, if there is any legitimate objection to its consideration at this time.

Mr. McNARY. It always has been customary, of course, when a Senator is called from the Chamber and makes such a request, to comply with it. The request was made to me by the senior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. FRAZIER], who was called away, and desired further to investigate the record of the nominee. We are to have a session tomorrow, as I understand; and I ask that the nomination go over for the day.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Oregon? The Chair hears none, and the nomination will go over for the day.

The clerk will state the next nomination on the calendar.

HARRY E. KALODNER

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Harry E. Kalodner to be district judge for the eastern district of Pennsylvania.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Ray Spear to be Paymaster General and Chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, with the rank of rear admiral.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Elmer F. Andrews to be Administrator of the Wage and Hour Division, Department of Labor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

COAST GUARD OF THE UNITED STATES

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Ensign Bernard E. Scalan to be a lieutenant (junior grade).

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask that the nominations of postmasters be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

IN THE ARMY

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the Army.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I ask that the nominations in the Army be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

IN THE MARINE CORPS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the Marine Corps.

Mr. BARKLEY. I make the same request with reference to the nominations in the Marine Corps.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

That completes the calendar.

RECESS

Mr. BARKLEY. As in legislative session, I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 3 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Friday, March 31, 1939, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate March 30 (legislative day of March 28) 1939

COMPTROLLER GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES

Fred H. Brown, of New Hampshire, to be Comptroller General of the United States for a term of 15 years.

APPOINTMENT IN THE REGULAR ARMY

Capt. George Edwin Adamson, Quartermaster Corps, to be military secretary to the General of the Armies of the United States with the rank of colonel, with rank from March 28, 1939.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate March 30 (legislative day of March 28) 1939

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

Harry E. Kalodner to be the district judge, eastern district of Pennsylvania.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

Elmer F. Andrews to be Administrator of the Wage and Hour Division, Department of Labor.

COAST GUARD OF THE UNITED STATES

Bernard E. Scalan to be a lieutenant (junior grade) in the Coast Guard of the United States.

APPOINTMENT IN THE REGULAR ARMY

Capt. George Edwin Adamson to be military secretary to the General of the Armies of the United States, with the rank of colonel.

APPOINTMENT BY TRANSFER IN THE REGULAR ARMY

Capt. John Baylis Cooley to Adjutant General's Department.

First Lt. Loren Boyd Hillsinger to Cavalry.

APPOINTMENT IN THE NAVY

Ray Spear to be Paymaster General and Chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts in the Department of the Navy with the rank of rear admiral.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY

MARINE CORPS

To be lieutenant colonels

Martin J. Kelleher
William E. Riley
David R. Nimmer
Merwin H. Silverthorn

POSTMASTERS

ARKANSAS

Wayne S. Ross, Gillham.

DELAWARE

Walton Owens, Bridgeville.
Mary C. O'Connor, Greenville.

GEORGIA

Carey C. Earnest, Blairsville.
George H. Busha, Toccoa.

ILLINOIS

Raymond J. Kelley, Huntley.
Lenora B. Dickerson, La Fayette.
Herman C. Thiemann, Roselle.
Lillian R. M. Yerke, Union.
August Grewe, Wheeling.

MICHIGAN

Flossie A. Brown, Williamston.

PENNSYLVANIA

Daniel Leffler, Clearfield.
Albert F. Buck, Emmaus.
Fred Schneider, Leetsdale.
James F. Dugan, Osceola Mills.
Robert J. Miller, State College.
Mary K. Pavlik, Universal.

TENNESSEE

George F. Barfield, Henning.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, MARCH 30, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O loving, living Father, we thank Thee that our times are in Thy hands. Thy mercies are fresh every morning and new every night. We pray that Thy wisdom may lead us to seek the harmonies of law and grace. Oh, let the bigness of our lives and the richness of our service spring out of the higher unity as revealed by the Teacher of Galilee. Help us to respond to every whisper of truth and every appeal of humanity. We praise Thee for life deep, boundless, and everlasting and deathlessly nourished. We rejoice that the wings of the morning are not strong enough to bear us away from Thy hovering providence. In the immortal name of the Christ. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

NORTH BEACH AIRPORT, N. Y.

Mr. CULLEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD at this point and to incorporate therein a telegram which I received from Mayor LaGuardia, of the city of New York, dealing with the airport at North Beach, N. Y.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CULLEN. Mr. Speaker, the telegram is as follows:

NEW YORK, March 29, 1939.

The Honorable THOMAS H. CULLEN,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

Have sent following telegram to Representative CANNON of Missouri. Will you please give copy to MERRITT, SIROVICH, and others, who will answer misinformed critics. Telegram follows: "In reply to several inquiries from former colleagues I am sending you information concerning North Beach Airport. This project is, without doubt, the largest undertaken by W. P. A. Everyone connected with it may well be proud of it. This includes the approval of the project, the design, engineering, and every man who worked on it. There have been many misrepresentations concerning it by petty politicians and disappointed landmongers as well as incompetents who could not qualify for a job. The project, and everything concerning it, speaks for itself. In the first place, the relation between the United States Government and sponsors of W. P. A. projects was not at all followed here. The city's contribution is beyond any sponsor's contribution anywhere in the country. For your information, please be advised that the city has expended and authorized no less than $16,350,000. This is actual cash, all expended but about $1,350,000, already committed. I understand that it has been stated that workers are working 5 days a week regularly. This is on contract work for which the city is paying 100 percent. Such as pile driving, foundations, bulkheads, and dredging, it is true that some of the skilled workers on W. P. A. are paid a dollar and half an hour. That is not our fault; that is because Congress required all skilled mechanics to be paid the prevailing rate of wages, and it is necessary, therefore, to pay the prevailing rate as they exist and as certified in New York City. As to overtime, it is necessary in three trades to work extra hours in order that their work may keep pace with the forty-odd other trades involved in a construction of this magnitude. Electricians are working 5 days a week, ornamental-iron workers are working 3 extra days a month; in other words, paying them the prevailing rate of wages, as provided by act of Congress, they can work but 7 days a month within the maximum allowed. They are now working 3 extra days a month. The structural-iron workers are working 5 extra days a month. They can work but 12 days a month within the maximum allowed. We expect to open North Beach Airport before Congress adjourns and cordially invite critics and supporters to visit this great project. I am sure every Member of the House will be proud of his contribution to this necessary addition to the national net of airports for commercial and defensive use. Incidentally, the city receives no direct benefit of contribution of Federal Government, for rentals and charges are calculated on actual city expenditures, and Government's contribution, therefore, reflecting in aid to subsidized air mail and subsidized commercial aviation. Should you desire any additional information, will be glad to furnish it, or will come down personally and answer any question any Member may desire to put.

"Regards to all."

F. H. LAGUARDIA, Mayor.

EMPLOYEES' COMPENSATION COMMISSION

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, in the second deficiency appropriation bill, now pending in the Senate, there is an item of $2,000,000 for the Employees' Compensation Commission for the payment of injury claims for relief workers. Under the organic act it will be remembered that employees of the P. W. A. and the W. P. A. injured in line of duty are entitled to compensation; a reduced rate of compensation, however. An item of $2,000,000 was reported by the committee and passed by the House and is in the deficiency appropriation, as I say, pending in the Senate. No hearings have been started on the bill. The Employees' Compensation Commission is faced with the contingency of not being able to pay the claims which have been adjudicated and which the beneficiaries are badly in need of having paid. Therefore I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of House Joint Resolution 250, which I send to the desk.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the joint resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Joint Resolution 250

Joint resolution making an additional appropriation for the fiscal year 1939 for expenditure by the United States Employees' Compensation Commission in accordance with section 16 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938

Resolved, etc., That the sum of $2,000,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for expenditure during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, by the United States Employees' Compensation Commission in accordance with the provisions of section 16 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. Has the gentleman assurance from the Senate committee that it will report an amendment eliminating that amount from the bill?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I have no assurance, but I have no doubt they will do it.

Mr. TABER. It will be presented to them?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Yes; and the conferees can control it in any event.

Mr. TABER. It is the intention to have it eliminated from the regular bill?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. That is correct.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

ROGER Q. MILLS

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute and to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Mr. Speaker, today, in my home city of Corsicana, Tex., exercises are being held commemorating the one hundred and seventh anniversary of the birth of a distinguished American statesman, Hon. Roger Quarles Mills.

His home was in Corsicana from 1852 until his death on September 2, 1911. For 27 years he served in the Congress of the United States; 20 years as a distinguished Member of this House, and in 1892 resigned his membership here to accept a seat in the United States Senate from Texas, to which he had been elected to succeed Hon. John H. Reagan. He was reelected to the Senate for a 6-year term, and voluntarily retired at the expiration of his term on March 3, 1899, and never thereafter held, or aspired to, public office, but spent the evening of his life in his beautiful colonial home surrounded by huge oak trees, and which home and grounds is still one of the most attractive of the many beautiful homes in Corsicana.

During his service in the Congress of the United States, he was an outstanding and distinguished Member, having a national reputation as an orator and a statesman and a leader of the Democratic Party.

While in the House, he served as chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, and was recognized as the best informed authority in the United States upon the subject of the tariff, and speeches upon this subject which he made in this Chamber are still quoted and referred to by those of this generation.

In the Fifty-second Congress, he was a candidate for Speaker of the House, and was defeated by Hon. Charles F. Crisp by a very few votes.

Serving with him on the Ways and Means Committee, but entertaining opposite views on the tariff, was Hon. William McKinley, of Ohio, afterward President of the United States, and while they were members of different political parties, they were close friends. I recall that when Maj. Charles H. Mills, his son, came to Washington soon after my election to Congress, and a portrait of Senator Mills was to be hung in the Ways and Means Committee room, our old colored friend, Harry Parker, who retired a year ago after a long service as an employee of that committee, said:

I know right where Colonel Mills' picture ought to be hung, right by Major McKinley, for he and Colonel Mills were always such good friends.

And in the Ways and Means Committee there hangs today, side by side, the portraits of these two distinguished Americans.

During the War between the States, he served with distinction in the Army of the Confederate States, having attained the rank of colonel of the Tenth Regiment, Texas Infantry, and he led his regiment through many of the bloody battles in that fratricidal conflict.

He was a gallant soldier, an eminent lawyer, and a great statesman. At a banquet following Mills' address to the graduating class of Washington and Lee University in June 1894, John Randolph Tucker gave this toast:

To Roger Q. Mills—by race Virginian; by birth Kentuckian; by adoption, the reflex representative of the brilliant Lone Star; by patriotic statesmanship, an American citizen.

Now, after the lapse of 40 years since his retirement from public life, and nearly 30 years after he has crossed over the river, and is resting tranquilly under the shades of the trees with Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson and other great Confederate leaders with whom he served, we can say of him, as was said of another son of the South:

He was tried in many high offices and critical enterprises and found faithful in them all. No country e'er had a truer son, no cause a nobler champion, no people a bolder defender.

And as his old friends in Corsicana meet today to revere his memory, may we in the House pause long enough to pay tribute to his sainted memory. [Applause.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HOUSTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include certain letters and telegrams from mayors in my district in respect to the W. P. A.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ELLIOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to place in the RECORD a report from F. C. Harrington, Administrator of the Works Progress Administration, with reference to the interstate migration problem and its effect on California, including also a report upon the same subject from the San Francisco administrator.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

LEAVE TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, on Wednesday next, April 5, after the disposition of matters on the Speaker's table and the reading of the Journal, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 hour.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. As everyone knows, I have objected heretofore to any Member of the House proceeding for more than 1 minute until the legislative program of the day is finished. I am not going to object to this request for this reason: The gentleman from Maryland [Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH] has had a long and distinguished career in the House. On that day he intends to submit his resignation as a Member of this House and go upon the bench.

I simply make that explanation for the reason that I do not intend to object, and I, therefore, withdraw the reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, when will this speech be made?

The SPEAKER. On Wednesday next.

Is there objection?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. FERNANDEZ. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert at this point in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD a letter written by Commander Louis L. McCormick, of the Louisiana Department of the American Legion, addressed to me. The same letter was addressed to Congressmen ALLEN, BROOKS, MILLS, and MOUTON of Louisiana, and I am also making this offering on their behalf.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The letter referred to is as follows:

THE AMERICAN LEGION,
DEPARTMENT OF LOUISIANA,
Destrehan, La., March 27, 1939.

Hon. J. O. FERNANDEZ,
Member of Congress, Washington, D. C.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN FERNANDEZ: We were interested to note in yesterday's Times-Picayune that Congressmen MALONEY, GRIFFITH, and DEROUEN had a conference with General Hines, and that a recommendation with regard to the additional hospital facilities for Louisiana would be forthcoming within 30 days. General Hines is also quoted as saying that the results of the Nation-wide survey of hospital sites would be available within 10 days, and with that information at hand, the determination of locations could be made promptly.

We realize that you too have been most active and interested in securing these additional facilities for our State, and it is with sincere appreciation that I want to thank you both in behalf of the Louisiana department and personally, for the interest you have taken and for the cooperation you have given us in this worthwhile undertaking. We know that your activities in our behalf will not cease until these additional hospital facilities for our State are an actual reality, for you have long since proven yourself a friend of the ex-service men. If there is any way in which we can assist, either as individuals or as an organization, we will appreciate your suggestions.

Again thanking you for your continued interest and cooperation, and with the kindest of personal regards, I am

Sincerely,

LOUIS L. MCCORMICK,
Department Commander.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and include a letter from the director of the California State Department of Industrial Relations on the fine work that has been done by the National Youth Administration in that State.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

W. P. A. RELIEF BILL—SITUATION IN STATE OF WASHINGTON

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks and include therein a statement which I made before the Appropriations Committee.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I am supporting the appropriation of $150,000,000 additional W. P. A. funds, as requested by President Roosevelt. I supported vigorously his original request for $875,000,000 because I felt certain that $725,000,000 would be inadequate, which it has proven to be. I am strongly opposed to reducing the present appropriation to $100,000,000, for it will result in many deserving citizens and heads of families being dropped from the work relief rolls.

According to an Associated Press dispatch from Seattle, Wash., Hon. Don G. Abel, director of the W. P. A. in the State of Washington, has stated that 7,000 more persons are due to be dropped from the State rolls before April 3. He further stated that he had received notice from Col. F. C. Harrington, National Administrator, that such a slash would be necessary if Congress fails to appropriate an additional $150,000,000 W. P. A. appropriation by that date.

The W. P. A. State employment total last fall in the State of Washington was 64,000, of which 56,000 were on projects and 8,000 on other Federal agency jobs. The March quota is 39,000, according to Mr. Abel; and if this is further reduced by 7,000, it will leave only 32,000 on the rolls, exactly 50 percent of the number who were on the rolls last fall. This is so drastic a cut that suffering and hardship will be inflicted upon many thousand families.

My statement before the Committee on Appropriations during the recent hearings sets forth my views more fully, and was as follows:

STATEMENT OF HON. MARTIN F. SMITH, A REPRESENTATIVE IN CONGRESS FROM THE STATE OF WASHINGTON

The CHAIRMAN. We will now be glad to hear Mr. SMITH of Washington.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I fear that after listening to my colleague from Pennsylvania, Mr. ALLEN, my testimony is going to be rather drab and colorless, because I have nothing very sensational to offer. However, in view of the fact that my testimony will follow his in the record, I do believe that I should make a statement in regard to politics, or rather of lack of politics, in the W. P. A. in the State of Washington and in my own congressional district.

I think I am thoroughly conversant with what transpired in my district and in the State of Washington, and I want to take this occasion to say that in my opinion there was absolutely no politics practiced.

Mr. WOODRUM. Did you have a hot campaign, Mr. SMITH?

Mr. SMITH. I had a very hot campaign—the most strenuous that I have had in the past 6 years, but I emerged with a majority of 18,000. But I have every reason to believe that there was no politics played on the part of any W. P. A. supervisor, any foreman, or any of the men individually, and certainly not by our State director, Mr. Don G. Abel, who had given very strict instructions—which were fully carried out, too—that anyone that indulged in politics, who was employed by W. P. A., would be immediately discharged. In fact, I think that some of the W. P. A. workers who were dissatisfied on account of some of the conditions which existed on the jobs and the wage scales supported my opponent, which I think they had a perfect right to do. We are still a democracy, and I think, regardless of whether people are on W. P. A. or how they derive their livelihood, they are entitled to vote as they see fit.

Mr. WOODRUM. You would not approve of a situation such as has been outlined by Mr. ALLEN?

Mr. SMITH. I certainly would not. I would condemn it in unmeasured terms. But according to all my observations, and my own experience, and contacts that I have had with many of our colleagues in the House in discussing this very matter, I think that the amount of politics in the W. P. A. throughout the country, taking into consideration our vast geographical area and vast population, has been infinitesimal; that it would be a very small fraction of 1 percent; and that there is probably less politics in W. P. A. than there would be in fraternal organizations, religious organizations, in church work, or in any group of the population. Of course, it is utterly impossible entirely to eliminate politics or participation in elections from any great group of our population, whether they are on W. P. A. or wherever they may be found.

Mr. LUDLOW. Did our Republican friends in your State flirt with the W. P. A.?

Mr. SMITH. They certainly did. They made promises that they would give them more work and better work and pay them higher wages than we have ever done, and that they would fare much better if my opponent were sent down to Washington. They did not promise to economize in the State of Washington or to reduce the relief rolls, as they now favor doing here in Congress.

But, with all due deference to my colleague from Pennsylvania, for whom I have the highest regard, and whom I like very much personally, as I know we all do, I just have the feeling that such testimony as he has given is probably premature, and would more properly be presented as testimony before a committee investigating the W. P. A. Personally, I hope that in justice to the W. P. A. there may be sometime such a nonpartisan investigation, and it is my opinion that when such an investigation is held it will rebound to the credit of the Works Progress Administration. I think they have done a fine, constructive job.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Smith, have you read the so-called Sheppard report of the Special Committee to Investigate Senatorial Campaign Expenditures, dated January 3, 1939?

Mr. SMITH. Yes, sir; I have. I was, of course, somewhat impressed by it; but I think a thorough probe all over the country would be more apt to show the true picture.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Do you approve of the scandalous use of funds appropriated for those in need which the committee found in State after State and condemned in its 440-page report?

Mr. SMITH. I do not. I think that, insofar as is humanly possible, we ought to keep politics out of the W. P. A., and I think, to a great extent, it has been kept out, although I think it has crept in in some parts of the country.

Mr. LUDLOW. You have a very comprehensive knowledge of the entire far West. Is W. P. A., generally speaking, as clean in the other States out there as it is in your State?

Mr. SMITH. I think so. There has been very little complaint out there. There has not even been very much in the press concerning charges that there have been politics and, of course, all of the press in that part of the country is Republican—all the daily newspapers are Republican.

The CHAIRMAN. Aside from the very few large cities, we do not have any bosses that run us people in the West, do we?

Mr. SMITH. We do not, Mr. Chairman. Our people would not tolerate it.

Mr. LUDLOW. Every Democrat is a general out there; there are no privates.

Mr. SMITH. No privates; all generals, yes.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. The Chairman does not live in Kansas City, of course.

The CHAIRMAN. I said, outside of the large cities; and then we do call Kansas City the West.

Mr. SMITH. Gentlemen, I would like to come to the matter in which I am most interested, and I am sure you are most interested in, and that is the relief appropriation for the unemployed and the hungry people of our country. I urge the committee to report favorably the appropriation for $150,000,000 requested by President Roosevelt. As you know, I supported the original request of $875,000,000 and was sorry that it was reduced to $725,000,000, which has proved inadequate, as many of us felt that it would.

We have a very serious condition out in the West, in my State and in my district particularly. And in the last 2 months we have had conditions out there which have never existed before.

I have a clipping here from the Longview News of January 10, 1939, published at Longview, Wash., where we have the plants of the big Long-Bell and Weyerhaeuser Lumber Cos., which has been, in the past, a very prosperous community, and just to summarize the story of what happened, there were 20 mothers who went to the office of the county commissioners at the county courthouse, and said that they had to abandon their children and turn their children over to the county commissioners on account of the insufficient relief that they were receiving.

Some of these were women whose husbands had been on W. P. A.

Then we have the condition out there of the single men. I do not know whether there has ever been brought to the attention of this committee information in regard to the rations of these single men, as relief, which they are given when they are dropped from the W. P. A. rolls. But I think it is pitiful when you consider the great natural resources of this country and the wealth which we know that we have here in America, surpassing that to be found anywhere in the world.

Here are the surplus commodities that a single man gets for 2 weeks.

Mr. O'NEAL. This is relief?

Mr. SMITH. This is relief for single men dropped from W. P. A. In one county alone they dropped 2,000 single men from the relief rolls: 1 pound of rice, 1 pound of beans, 3 pounds of flour, 1 pound of dried fruits, 2 dozen small oranges, 1 pound of corn meal, 1 pound of coffee, 3 pounds of sugar, 1 cup of salt, 1 pound of shortening, 1 pound of whole-wheat cereal, half a pound of butter.

That is what an able-bodied man has to live on for 2 weeks.

Mr. LUDLOW. Translated into money, how much would that be, Mr. Smith?

Mr. SMITH. I will say to my distinguished friend from Indiana that I have not estimated that, but it seems to me that it would be very small.

Mr. WOODRUM. That is State relief, is it not?

Mr. SMITH. State and Federal and county; everything. That is all they get from all sources.

Mr. WOODRUM. The Federal Government does not participate in any direct relief.

Mr. SMITH. No.

Mr. WOODRUM. This is not the Federal program that you are talking about.

Mr. SMITH. Is it not a fact that they do receive surplus commodities from the Surplus Commodities Corporation?

Mr. WOODRUM. The Federal Government does not undertake to do anything for unemployed single people who are employable.

Mr. SMITH. No.

Mr. WOODRUM. Am I right in that, Colonel, or not?

Colonel HARRINGTON. This is not Federal relief; you are correct.

Mr. TABER. It is surplus commodities, is it not, Mr. Smith?

Mr. SMITH. Yes.

Mr. TABER. That is Federal, is it not?

Mr. SMITH. That is what I thought.

Mr. TABER. Surely.

Mr. SMITH. These surplus commodities come from the Federal Government.

Colonel HARRINGTON. The surplus commodities are turned over by the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation to local relief agencies to distribute.

Mr. WOODRUM. The point I want to make right here is that the inadequacy that you are talking about is not chargeable to the inadequacy of any Federal program.

Mr. SMITH. Probably not.

Mr. WOODRUM. But it is the State program.

Mr. SMITH. But it proves, does it not, that that is all the more reason why we cannot afford, and certainly should not, from every humanitarian standpoint and every patriotic standpoint, to reduce the W. P. A. appropriation to an extent where millions of these people are compelled to subsist upon that kind of a diet and to live under those conditions.

Mr. WOODRUM. Why does not your State do more for them? Why does not your State take better care of them than that?

Mr. SMITH. We know how limited the resources of the States and municipalities are. There are many of them on the borderline of bankruptcy.

Mr. WOODRUM. The State of Washington is in good shape, is it not?

Mr. SMITH. I would say compared to the other States of the Union that it is.

Mr. WOODRUM. I think the statement that you have just read is absolute proof of the fact that the State is not doing its duty to its people on relief, and that the burden of your argument is that you want the Federal Government to take them over, so that the State will not be compelled to do its own duty.

Mr. SMITH. I would say to the distinguished gentleman from Virginia——

Mr. WOODRUM. If that is unfair, please show us where it is unfair.

Mr. SMITH (continuing). For whose opinion I have the highest regard, that I cannot agree with that statement, because I happen to know that our State officials have done everything within their power, based upon the tax money that can be raised and the means that they have out there.

Mr. LUDLOW. Do you have a constitutional debt limit?

Mr. SMITH. Yes.

Mr. LUDLOW. Are you pretty nearly up to the limit?

Mr. SMITH. We are.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. You were boasting of your wonderful, natural resources, were you not, Mr. Smith?

Mr. SMITH. Yes. We have wonderful natural resources in this country.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. And you were including the natural resources of your State with the rest, were you not?

Mr. SMITH. I certainly did include the State of Washington. Of course, that would be too long a story to go into now. But I believe that if we properly managed our economy in this country we could increase the productive capacity of our factories and farms to such an extent that we could create so much new wealth that there would be an abundance of food, clothing, and proper shelter for every man, woman, and child in this country, and that we would have absolutely no need of a W. P. A. or any other program if we availed ourselves of the benefits to be derived from the developments and improvements brought about by science and invention and technological discoveries. Why, we could open the door of oportunity in this country to such an extent that we would have the highest standard of living that has ever been enjoyed by any people in the history of the human race. But we just seem to lack the intelligence to utilize the resources and the means which Nature and God have provided.

Mr. TABER. We have been preventing the use of them by legislation for 6 years.

Mr. SMITH. I cannot agree with that statement.

Mr. TABER. Your State has managed pretty well in the last year, has it not?

Mr. SMITH. Indeed it has.

Mr. TABER. In December 1937, a year ago last December, your general relief load was 45,692. In January 1939 it was 31,682, a reduction of 14,000.

Your employment on W. P. A., December 31, 1937, was 31,741. On March 11, 1939, it was 45,688, an increase of 14,000.

In other words, you shifted 14,000 from the general relief which was being taken care of by the Surplus Commodities Corporation to the W. P. A.

Your State managed pretty well.

Mr. SMITH. How does that compare with the rest of the country, Mr. TABER, with the other States?

Mr. TABER. It is doing a little better than the rest of the country; managing a little better.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Also, your State, through the appropriations that have been made for expenditure at Bonneville and Grand Coulee and other projects of that kind, has been helped a great deal by the Government. No other State surpasses Washington in what they are receiving from the Federal Government along those lines.

Mr. SMITH. That is very true. But, of course, many of those apropriations for those very projects that you mentioned are expended in the purchase of material and equipment from firms scattered all over the United States. I think my colleague, Congressman LEAVY, has placed in the record several times statements showing the break-down of those expenditures and how every State in the Union, pretty nearly, has participated and benefited.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. You must have had a large labor use out there.

Mr. SMITH. We have employed a considerable amount of labor on those projects and they have been a big help to us in taking up the slack of employment.

Mr. JOHNSON. If I understand your argument, you want the Federal Government to step in here and take charge of your entire relief situation in Washington, is that it?

Mr. SMITH. I would not say that, in reply to my friend from West Virginia, but we desire that as many as possible be employed on

W. P. A. in preference to relief or a dole. The people want to work.

Mr. JOHNSON. That is the impression that I got.

Mr. SMITH. That is not the impression that I intended to give. I was simply calling attention to these facts to show what would happen if we further curtailed these W. P. A. appropriations. And, of course, it would not only happen in the State of Washington, but I am sure it would happen in every one of the 48 States of this Union until there is a decided improvement in business, so that we can move these people from W. P. A. rolls to private industry, and give them regular employment at regular wages.

Mr. LUDLOW. Is not business showing an upturn in your section of the country?

Mr. SMITH. It is showing a slight upturn, I will say to the gentleman from Indiana. We are very gratified about that improvement and hope that it will continue. But it is slight, so far.

Mr. JOHNSON. You want the W. P. A. to continue more extensively, then, in view of the fact that private employment is improving, is that the idea?

Mr. SMITH. That would not be logical, I would not say that. We want the W. P. A. to continue until the unemployed can secure jobs in private industry.

Mr. CANNON. The purpose for which this appropriation is to be provided is to take up the unemployment; it is to provide employment.

Mr. SMITH. Yes.

Mr. CANNON. These men are not asking for a dole; they are not asking for alms. They are just asking for a chance to work.

Mr. SMITH. That is it.

Mr. CANNON. To make an honest day's wages, and when we curtail this appropriation and take these men from the W. P. A. rolls, the only alternative is the starvation diet that you have just given to us.

Mr. SMITH. That is the point that I tried to make, I will say to the gentleman from Missouri, who expressed the situation exactly.

Mr. JOHNSON. Your theory is that the Federal Government ought to make an appropriation large enough to take care of all the unemployed and the needy?

Mr. SMITH. I would not go that far.

Mr. JOHNSON. Why not?

Mr. SMITH. But I would say that we should take care of as many as we can consistently until such time as they are absorbed in private industry.

Incidentally, there is another argument that I want briefly to call to your attention, and then I feel that I have trespassed on your time sufficiently and should conclude my testimony. That is this. Not only is this appropriation for the relief of the unemployed, who must have this employment if they are going to live and if their families are going to be half-way decently supported, but it will be a relief to business and industry, the mercantile businesses especially.

Mr. CANNON. The businessmen of your State approve this plan of providing work, do they?

Mr. SMITH. They do. And I am sure that the experience that we have had out there accords with the experience they have had in Passaic, Passaic County, N. J., where we have had a very interesting and significant break-down of W. P. A. expenditures, which I would like to read and place in the record.

This has been compiled by John J. Schneider, city engineer, Passaic County, N. J. [reading]:

"As the projects were evenly distributed it is estimated that they will directly serve 90 percent of the community or about 57,000 people. During the past 2½ years the Works Progress Administration has brought into the city of Passaic, a substantial income by means of the Works Progress Administration pay roll, which is estimated at about $1,000,000. A survey among Works Progress Administration workers indicates that the money was distributed as follows:

Butcher, grocers, and baker	$335,000
Property owner for rents	250,000
Clothier, dry goods, shoe shop	145,000
Ice and coal dealer	62,000
Tobacco shop, social clubs, recreation	53,000
Gas and electricity	50,000
Show houses, bingo games	28,000
Loan organizations	18,000
Insurance, benefit societies	16,000
Druggist, doctor	15,000
Churches	14,000
Miscellaneous, savings, auto expenses	14,000

"From the foregoing it can be seen that the Works Progress Administration funds had some effect on the general business conditions in the city."

And that is why, I will say to the gentleman from Missouri, most retail businessmen, small-business men, are in favor of the W. P. A. program and consider that it has proved itself a sound investment of Federal moneys, because it has been a stimulus to business in every community.

We have noted it. I have talked to merchants and storekeepers in my home community. It has been very noticeable to them that every time you have curtailed the W. P. A. rolls they have had a decrease in the volume of their sales, in the volume of their business.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Smith, the list that you read of food that was given to relief workers—I may be mistaken as to the price, but I think it would represent about one-third of what my city gives to their relief people, people on relief. Would not that lead you to believe that perhaps the State of Washington could do a little more along that line and assume a little larger burden without putting it back on the Federal Government? The list that you read would be a pitifully small sum for a State to be giving for that purpose.

Mr. SMITH. To which sum do you refer?

Mr. O'NEAL. You read a list of food commodities that were supposed to last a man for 2 weeks. That was a pitifully small amount for a community to furnish to a person on relief.

Mr. SMITH. While I have not computed what the cost of those items would be—but bear in mind that these rations were for single men only—I took this from the Longview (Wash.) News, that where apparently there are two children in the family, they receive a total of $33.45 per month in relief, plus approximately $2.50 worth of commodities. This lady who was interviewed by the reporters said:

"We spend $16 for rent; $2.80 for fuel; $4 for milk, and the rest for food. We never have meat. And now the county welfare department is trying to move us into a $10 house. We have no lights. My children need shoes and underclothes, and I must buy these for them out of my food allowance."

And then there was a lady who had six children and was facing immediate eviction from their home.

Mr. WOODRUM. How would an appropriation here of $150,000,000 affect that family? You are talking about direct relief and this is unemployment relief.

Mr. SMITH. I would not know whether her husband was on relief or not, on the W. P. A. rolls, or not. I could not answer that question. But my purpose in giving these figures was partly in answer to the question of the gentleman from Kentucky, showing that the State of Washington is doing very well when they are paying $33.45 a month to that type of family. I would say that we are doing an excellent job by our people out there, as well as they are doing in any other State in the Union. I think that is undoubtedly true.

Mr. LUDLOW. Bingo games have been outlawed in Indianapolis as a form of lottery. That would deprive us of that form of relief.

Mr. SMITH. Yes; I think they are taboo out in the State of Washington, too. However, I think that break-down from Passaic, N. J., is very significant as showing what a great benefit W. P. A. expenditures are to the business of the community. It certainly has acted as a stimulus to business and that is an added reason why, until business recovers, we should not curtail W. P. A. appropriations by the Federal Government.

The CHAIRMAN. Does that conclude your statement?

Mr. SMITH. That concludes my statement, and I want to thank the committee very much.

QUESTION OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

Mr. PIERCE of New York. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of personal privilege.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York will state his question of personal privilege.

Mr. PIERCE of New York. Mr. Speaker, I rise to discuss and deny statements contained in a newspaper article which appeared yesterday morning on the editorial page of the Washington Times-Herald in the column entitled "Washington Daily Merry-Go-Round," which reflected upon my conduct and integrity as a member of the Judiciary Committee of the House and as a Member of the House itself, and also affected my rights and the rights of the House collectively, its dignity and the integrity of its proceedings.

The SPEAKER. Has the gentleman a copy of the article of which he complains?

Mr. PIERCE of New York. I have.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman kindly read the language in the article of which he complains, so that it may appear in the RECORD?

Mr. PIERCE of New York. Mr. Speaker, I read the article to which I refer. I am quoting:

REAL G. O. P. AUTHORS

Real authors of the House Judiciary Committee minority report censuring Mme. Perkins were several master minds in the Republican National Committee. Here is how they put over the rap at the administration.

The subcommittee considering the resolution to impeach Miss Perkins was composed of three Democrats and two Republicans. Last week, after months of deliberating, the committee unanimously agreed that the charges against Miss Perkins did not warrant impeachment and selected Representative SAM HOBBS, of Alabama, to write a report to this effect.

HOBBS circulated copies of his draft among the members of the subcommittee for suggestions and corrections. All returned them promptly, except Representative WALLACE E. PIERCE, up-State New York Republican, who kept his copy for several days.

Reason for his delay was that he sent the report to the national committee, where, in the absence of Chairman John Hamilton, several assistants decided that it would be clever politics if PIERCE and the other G. O. P. member, Representative LOUIS E. GRAHAM, of Pennsylvania, reneged on their approval of the Hobbs report. Instead they were to file a minority report panning Miss Perkins. PIERCE and GRAHAM agreed to the scheme and several days later they were supplied with the minority report which now bears their names.

NOTE.—When Chairman Hamilton returned, learned of the affair, he expressed sharp disapproval, characterized the Pierce-Graham report as written in "very bad taste."

The SPEAKER. The Chair is prepared to rule on the question of privilege raised by the gentleman from New York.

The Chair, of course, can well understand the indignation of any Member of the House at a newspaper article that appears to be absolutely unfair or critical of his conduct as a Member of the House, but on this question of personal privilege the Chair is of course compelled to follow the precedents of the House, very few of which were established by the present occupant of the Chair.

The Chair has read the newspaper article which the gentleman from New York has read, to see if under the precedents and under the philosophy of the rule, the gentleman would be entitled to present this matter as a question of personal privilege. The Chair, within the past few days, has upon several occasions read into the RECORD the rule affecting this question of personal privilege. There are several precedents upon this particular question of newspaper criticism. One of them is found in section 2712 of Hinds' Precedents, volume 3:

A newspaper article in the nature of criticism of a Member's acts in the House does not present a question of personal privilege.

That is the syllabus of the decision.

Another decision holds that a newspaper article citicizing Members generally involves no question of privilege.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, may I interrupt at this point for a suggestion in reference to this particular newspaper article?

The SPEAKER. The Chair will be glad to hear the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. MICHENER. It seems to me that there is a difference between newspaper criticism and a newspaper article stating what purports to be factual matter. This article, if carefully read, indicates that the gentleman from New York [Mr. PIERCE] has violated his obligations as a Member of the House, it being the function of the House and the Judiciary Committee, when considering impeachment proceedings, to render their judgment and their opinion based upon evidence adduced before the committee. This article alleges that this was not done; that this Member of this House violated his obligation as a Member of the House and proceeded to take a part of the confidential proceedings of the committee to a political organization, delaying the proceedings in the House by subterfuge until this political organization prepared the report which this article alleges was delivered to the gentleman from New York [Mr. PIERCE]. Mr. PIERCE of New York, in turn, is said to have delivered it to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM]. The two gentlemen then represented that it was their report. They were charged with entering into a scheme to keep from the members of the Judiciary Committee of the House the fact that this was not the report of these members of the committee but was the report of intriguing political partisans.

It seems to me there is a vast difference between this article and a newspaper article criticizing a Member of the House. For instance, saying that the Member is the most useless Member of the Congress. Some people might agree with that statement. It expresses a conclusion and not a fact. This article, however, does not do anything like that. It touches on the very sanctity of the privileges of this House. I think the Chair should take judicial notice of the fact that when the Congress is dealing with this solemn task of considering charges of impeachment for commission of high crimes and misdemeanors against a Cabinet officer, it is not considering legislation, and is not acting in its legislative capacity; it is acting in a capacity where the integrity of the proceedings, the integrity of the members of the committee, is of vital importance. If a newspaper may charge as a fact that a Member of Congress has been guilty of fraud and deception, and such statement is to be considered only newspaper criticism, and if the Member is to be denied the right under the rules of the House to come here and state the facts as he knows them, and as the entire committee knows them, then I think the Member is not receiving the protection guaranteed by the rules of the House.

Mr. Speaker, rule IX provides, in part, as follows:

Questions of privilege shall be, first, those affecting the rights of the House collectively, its safety, dignity, and the integrity of its proceedings; second, the rights, reputation, and conduct of Members, individually, in their representative capacity only.

It is the purpose of this rule to protect the safety, dignity, and integrity of the proceedings of the House as well as the rights, reputation, and conduct of Members, individually, in their representative capacity only. Now, if this article does not reflect upon the dignity and integrity of the proceedings of the House, or state affirmatively that the conduct of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PIERCE] and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM] has been such as to show fraud, deception, or unseeming conduct by them or either of them in their representative capacity as Members of the House, then the question before the Speaker might turn on the question of criticism. This article does not indulge in criticism. It boldly alleges and sets forth a course of conduct and designates, without qualification, specific overt acts performed by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PIERCE].

In short, the article alleges that the real authors of the House Judiciary Committee minority report were not the gentleman from New York [Mr. PIERCE] and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM] who signed the report and who alleged to the full committee that they were the authors of the report, and that a deception was worked upon the committee by the gentleman from New York, when in truth and in fact the report was prepared at Republican headquarters. Further, that the report was inspired by sinister motives and that the gentleman from New York was used as the tool of certain representatives in the Republican national headquarters.

It is further alleged that the gentleman from New York betrayed a confidence of his subcommittee and sent the report referred to to the national committee headquarters, and that because these assistants in headquarters thought that it would "be clever politics if PIERCE of New York and the other G. O. P. member, Representative LOUIS E. GRAHAM, of Pennsylvania, reneged on their approval of the report." It is further alleged that they were to file a minority report prepared by these assistants and that "PIERCE of New York and GRAHAM agreed to the scheme and several days later they were supplied with a minority report which now bears their names."

This is not a legislative proceeding. It is judicial. The right of a Cabinet officer to hold her position of trust and honor is at stake. The Constitution has entrusted to the House of Representatives the performance of a function before this officer may be removed from office. No more solemn and important undertaking ever confronts the House of Representatives and its Judiciary Committee than the consideration of impeachment charges filed against high officials. The proceedings in these impeachment cases, and especially the proceedings before the Judiciary Committee, must be above suspicion. The perpetuity of our form of government depends upon the faith and confidence of the people in the Members of the House of Representatives when dealing with matters of so serious a nature. If individuals, over their signature, or newspapers in their columns, may state as positive facts that members of the Judiciary Committee, in a specific case of this kind, have acted fraudulently, deceitfully, and with political partisanship and bias rather than in accordance with right and justice, then it would seem that the rule to which I have referred is meaningless.

If the gentleman from New York [Mr. PIERCE] and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM] agreed to any scheme with those outside the committee in reference to what manner of report or findings the committee should make, that surely would not only reflect upon the safety and dignity but also upon the integrity of the proceedings of the House. Surely, if the allegations as to facts set forth in this article are untrue, then the rights, reputation, and conduct of the gentleman from New York and the gentleman from Pennsylvania, in their representative capacity, have been impinged upon.

If the gentleman from New York is granted the privilege of the floor, as provided in this rule, the only thing that he can do about it is to deny these slanderous and libelous charges and tell the House and proclaim to the world the truth and to this extent protect his rights and reputation. I cannot escape the conclusion that if this article does not come within the purview of the above rule, then there is little protection for Members of the House against untrue statements concerning their conduct in the House.

It occurs to me, if the Speaker will permit a crude illustration, that if the Speaker were called upon to make an important ruling affecting the right of a Member of this body to continue in the House, and if some newspaper should state as a fact that the Speaker, before rendering a decision, submitted the matter to the political headquarters of his party, that the Speaker's opinion was prepared in the political headquarters, and that the Speaker read the report to the House as his own report, all of which was untrue, that this rule would grant the Speaker the privilege to come upon the floor, state the facts as they are, and thus remedy, insofar as such statement could remedy, so outrageous an allegation.

As one of the signers of the final minority report submitted in the Perkins case, I believe it is a reflection upon me and every member of the committee if the gentleman from New York [Mr. PIERCE] and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM], did enter into any scheme with any outsider, and I resent the allegation of the perpetration of any such fraud. I conclude as I began: There is a distinction between newspaper criticism and definite, specific charges alleged as facts appearing in newspapers.

The SPEAKER. The Chair stated in the beginning of his decision on this question that the Chair can, of course, well understand the spirit that animates the gentleman from New York; but the Chair, as the gentleman from Michigan well knows, must conform to the general principles involved in this question of personal privilege, and unless pretty sharp restrictions were thrown around its interpretation it would probably open a very great field for Members to rise to questions of personal privilege upon adverse newspaper criticism.

The Chair can find nothing in the newspaper article referred to which charges anything that would be a violation of the oath of office of the Member from New York. There is no statement in the article that it was a confidential or executive communication of any sort, and there is nothing in the article that charges any moral obliquity on the part of the gentleman from New York as the Chair understands it, for the reason that he would have the right, if he chose to do so, to have done the particular acts charged in the newspaper article.

Having recourse again to the precedents the Chair finds the following: "The fact that a Member is misrepresented in his acts or speech does not constitute a matter of personal privilege, nor does misrepresentating a Member's vote."

The Chair personally would be delighted to have the gentleman from New York given the opportunity to address himself to the membership of the House on the question presented by him. The Chair, however, is constrained to rule in this instance as well as all others according to the precedents of the House and therefore rules that the matter complained of does not, in the opinion of the Chair, constitute a matter of personal privilege.

The Chair will be glad if the gentleman will submit a unanimous-consent request to address the House.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from New York [Mr. PIERCE] be granted 15 minutes to address the House and may proceed for that length of time on this point.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this situation is a little bit peculiar, as was the situation with reference to the request submitted by the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. GOLDSBOROUGH]. Because of the pressing and important matters that are to come before the House today, I wish the gentleman from Alabama might modify his request to 10 minutes. I think under the circumstances that would be reasonable, but I shall not object to the gentleman's request.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. PIERCE of New York. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague and fellow Member of the House, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBBS], who was a member of the subcommittee to which I shall later refer, for his courtesy and his kindness.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday afternoon my attention was called to an article which appeared in the Washington Times-Herald in a column entitled "Washington Daily Merry-Go-Round." This is a syndicated column, and doubtless the article appeared in many papers throughout the country. My attention was called to the article too late in the day for me to act at yesterday's session, which adjourned at 4 o'clock.

The article in question is replete with utterly false statements, which reflect upon my conduct and integrity as a member of the Judiciary Committee of this House, and as a Member of the House itself. I quote:

REAL G. O. P. AUTHORS

Real authors of the House Judiciary Committee minority report censuring Mme. Perkins were several master minds in the Republican national committee. Here is how they put over the rap at the administration.

The subcommittee considering the resolution to impeach Miss Perkins was composed of three Democrats and two Republicans. Last week, after months of deliberating, the committee unanimously agreed that the charges against Miss Perkins did not warrant impeachment and selected Representative SAM HOBBS, of Alabama, to write a report to this effect.

HOBBS circulated copies of his draft among the members of the subcommittee for suggestions and corrections. All returned them promptly, except Representative WALLACE E. PIERCE, up-State New York Republican, who kept his copy for several days.

Reason for his delay was that he sent the report to the national committee where, in the absence of Chairman John Hamilton, several assistants decided that it would be clever politics if PIERCE and the other G. O. P. member, Representatives LOUIS E. GRAHAM, of Pennsylvania, reneged on their approval of the Hobbs report. Instead they were to file a minority report panning Miss Perkins. PIERCE and GRAHAM agreed to the scheme, and several days later they were supplied with the minority report which now bears their names.

NOTE.—When Chairman Hamilton returned, learned of the affair, he expressed sharp disapproval, characterized the Pierce-Graham report as written in "very bad taste."

Permit me to make a brief statement of the conduct of the proceedings. When the resolution to impeach Mme. Perkins was referred to the Judiciary Committee it conducted hearings and heard testimony in executive session. When that was concluded a subcommittee of five was appointed by the chairman to draft a proposed report to the House for the full committee, in the hope that general agreement could be arrived at therein. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM] and I were the two Republican members of that subcommittee of five, of which the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBBS] was the chairman. The subcommittee held several meetings and drafted its confidential report to the full committee, and when we had agreed in general that there were not grounds sufficient to justify the interposition of the constitutional power of impeachment the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM] and I informed the members of the subcommittee that we felt we should file additional views, in which we hoped that other members of the committee might join. It was known to the chairman of the subcommittee, from the beginning, that additional views might be submitted by a part of the minority at least.

The statement that the "real authors of the House Judiciary Committee minority report censuring Mme. Perkins were several 'master minds' in the Republican National Committee" is false. No one else than the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM] and myself had anything to do with the preparation of the additional views submitted by the minority. No one other than our colleagues in the minority on the full committee ever saw the additional views until they were submitted to the full committee, which was done after the Republican members of the committee had agreed upon their form and content.

The statement therein that Congressman HOBBS circulated copies of his draft among members of the subcommittee for suggestions and corrections and that all returned them promptly except myself is false. Each member of the subcommittee kept his draft of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBBS'] suggested report until the conclusion of our deliberations, and so far as I know none of them were returned to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBBS]. I have verified this statement by inquiry from the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBBS].

The statement that the reason for my delay in returning my draft of the suggested report was that I sent the report to the national committee is false. The statement that several assistants of the national committee decided that it would be clever politics if I and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM], being the Republican members of the subcommittee, reneged on our approval of the Hobbs report is false. The statement that it was proposed to us by representatives of the national committee to file a minority report "panning Mme. Perkins" is false. The statement that the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM] and I agreed so to do and several days later were supplied with such a minority report, which now bears our names, is false.

I can conceive of no higher duty or greater responsibility laid upon a Member of this House than to be a member of its Judiciary Committee, and particularly, as such a member, to take part in the deliberations of the committee respecting a proposal referred to the committee to impeach a Cabinet officer. I accepted that duty and that responsibility as a member of the Judiciary Committee with full knowledge of its import and obligations. The committee proceeded with its deliberations in executive session. When the taking of testimony and examination of records before the committee was concluded I was appointed one of a subcommittee of five to draft, if possible, a proposed report of the committee upon the subject in hand. The discussions and the proceedings of the subcommittee were confidential in character, and each member of the subcommittee was in honor bound not to discuss the matter with any other than members of the subcommittee and of the committee.

The draft of the proposed report which the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBBS] prepared never left my immediate possession either on my person or carefully locked in my office here. No copy of that draft was ever made. I never consulted, advised with, or even spoke to a member of the national committee, any administrative officer thereof, any representative thereof, or anyone connected therewith about the proposed report or the proposed dissenting views of the minority on the committee. I never discussed the report or the proposed minority report with any person other than a member of the Subcommittee of the Judiciary or with the members of the committee itself, from the time that the resolution first came to the committee until after the time that the committee made its report to the House. The so-called minority report of the committee, which is entitled in the committee report "additional views," was first agreed upon by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM] and myself, and no living person except ourselves had any part in the preparation of the first draft. When that first draft was completed it was submitted to the 10 Republican members of the committee, and to them and no one else. It was approved by them and accompanied the committee report to the House.

I wish to read to the House a telegram received from Mr. John D. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, which speaks for itself in this connection.

ARDMORE, PA., March 29, 1939.

HON. WALLACE E. PIERCE,
House of Representatives, United States Capitol, Washington, D. C.:

Regarding our telephone conversation in connection with the Washington Merry-Go-Round column of today referring to the Perkins impeachment report I authorize you to say for me that no one at Republican National Committee headquarters had any knowledge regarding either the minority or majority reports of the Judiciary Committee until their publication. Consequently I catagorically deny my expressed disapproval of participation by anyone of the national headquarters staff by advising with regard to or preparing the minority report because no such participation ever took place. Certainly under these circumstances I could neither approve nor disapprove an imputed action which did not occur.

JOHN HAMILTON,
Chairman of Republican National Committee.

May I read also a letter of Franklyn Waltman, director of publicity, Republican National Committee, which likewise speaks for itself:

MARCH 29, 1939.

HON. WALLACE E. PIERCE,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. PIERCE: I wish to acknowledge your inquiry regarding the references to an alleged part played by the Republican National Committee in connection with the minority report in the matter of the proposed impeachment of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins appearing in the Washington Merry-Go-Round column published today in the Washington Times-Herald.

As I told you earlier today, this purported "inside" story regarding the minority report was all news to me. As you well know, I at no time consulted with you regarding this matter. Nor did I consult in any manner with anyone else regarding the attitude which any member of the House Judiciary Committee should take toward Secretary Perkins in the matter of her impeachment. Indeed, I would not have made any suggestions in regard to such a matter, even if asked—which I was not—because an impeachment proceeding, in my opinion, is a sacred judicial function. Consequently, I believe it would be highly improper for anyone outside of the Judiciary Committee to undertake to influence that committee's deliberations.

I have made a canvass of the entire headquarters staff in all divisions in an effort to locate anyone who had consulted with any person regarding the report in the Perkins case. Everyone in the headquarters was as amazed as I was over the allegations in the Washington Merry-Go-Round column. Not a single person in this headquarters had any knowledge whatever of the intention of the Republican members of the subcommittee even to file a minority report. Nor did anyone here have any knowledge of the so-called Hobbs report prior to its publication. The statement that a copy of this report was received in this headquarters prior to its publication by the press is absolutely and unqualifiedly untrue.

Certainly, in the absence of Chairman Hamilton last week, had the incident described taken place, I would have had knowledge of it. Moreover, since the chairman's return to the city I have not heard from him any expression which would indicate he had knowledge of such an incident. Consequently I am forced to the conviction that there is absolutely no foundation for this story insofar as it relates to the Republican National Committee.

Sincerely yours,

FRANKLYN WALTMAN.

That politics, directly or indirectly, entered into the preparation of the report or of the dissenting additional views is a false statement. The members of the Judiciary Committee acted with respect to this resolution as members of, and were charged with a responsibility equal to, that of the highest court in the land. The dissenting report or additional views of the minority were based solely and entirely on consideration of the testimony before the committee and were not influenced in any manner or to any degree by political considerations.

I would not dignify the article in question by notice or discussion of it and this denial of its false statements were it not for the fact that, in addition to being a reflection on my personal integrity and course of conduct as a Member of this House, it makes the false and damnable statement that a minority report or dissenting views of the Republican members of the Judiciary Committee upon a matter of such import were in fact the product of a political body. That is a statement so serious that it cannot be allowed to pass unchallenged. That charge, and the article in its entirety and its every detail and implication, are shamefully false. [Applause.]

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PIERCE of New York. I yield.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. Speaker, being one of the persons named in the newspaper article referred to by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PIERCE] as having been a member of the subcommittee appointed to draft a report relative to the Perkins impeachment and being charged with having so far betrayed my trust as to disclose confidential information to persons outside of the Committee on the Judiciary, and even outside of Congress itself, I wish to take this opportunity to supplement the remarks already made by my colleague. In short, this newspaper article states that my colleague from New York, Mr. PIERCE, and myself betrayed the confidence which was reposed in us by the committee by disclosing confidential information. That we sought the aid and assistance of leaders of the political party with which we are affiliated, but who are not Members of Congress, to assist us in making a report on a matter which, to our minds, is one of the most serious judicial functions that this committee may ever be called upon to exercise.

It is a matter of public knowledge that on January 24 the matter of the proposed impeachment of Mme. Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. The Members also know that for several weeks the Committee on the Judiciary conducted hearings relative to that matter. On the 16th day of March these hearings were terminated and a committee consisting of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBBS] as chairman, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. CHANDLER], the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. MCLAUGHLIN], the gentleman from New York [Mr. PIERCE], and myself were appointed to draft a report to be submitted to the full committee for their consideration. This particular subcommittee began its work on Thursday, March 16, and with some interruptions, proceeded therewith until on Tuesday, March 21, it had completed its labors.

It was decided to have the committee report in print, and in order to expedite this matter, Chairman HOBBS left his office to take the report to the clerk of the Committee on the Judiciary in order that the report would be in print and before the committee on the following day, March 22. At that time the additional views of the minority had not yet been finally drafted, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. PIERCE] and myself remained in the office of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBBS] and there, after the departure of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBBS], the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. CHANDLER], and the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. MCLAUGHLIN], with the complete knowledge on their part of what we were about to do, I having previously informed the chairman of the subcommittee of our intention so to do, we drew up the additional views contained in our confidential committee print of March 22, 1939. These views were signed by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PIERCE] and myself. Immediately after this was done, the Representative from New York [Mr. PIERCE] followed the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBBS] to the office of the clerk of the Committee on the Judiciary and left with him the only copy in existence of these views.

These opinions were the sole product, so far as I know, of the minds of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PIERCE] and myself, and were written in longhand by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PIERCE] in my presence in the office of the gentleman from Alabama, Chairman HOBBS, and contained suggestions from both of us. The ones emanating from me were my own and of which the gentleman from New York [Mr. PIECRE] could have had no previous knowledge.

In the light of these facts, it is thus apparent that there was no scheme between the gentleman from New York [Mr. PIERCE] and myself to use or to resort to a report prepared by an outside source. At no time did the gentleman from New York [Mr. PIERCE] seek to impose upon me his own ideas or urge me to accept any views which he advanced. The opinions expressed are the expresions of both minds, and were only reduced to writing after about an hour's discussion. At no time did the gentleman from New York [Mr. PIERCE] suggest any scheme to me or even intimate that he had in his possession a report prepared from an outside source which we should adopt.

I have never talked with Chairman John Hamilton about this matter. I have only met the gentleman once and this was at a social gathering several months ago, and our meeting was simply an introduction. It lasted less than 1 minute. I have never been to the national headquarters of the Republican Party in Washington and I am not acquainted with any person therein employed, nor have I ever had any conversation with Chairman Hamilton or any of the personnel of the Republican National Committee on this or any other subject pertaining to this Congress, and at no time did Chairman Hamilton express to me his disapproval of this report. I do not know what Chairman Hamilton's views are concerning this report. The only information I have concerning them is what I have seen in this newspaper article, and which I certainly consider untrue.

When the gentleman from New York [Mr. PIERCE] stands upon the floor of this House as he has this afternoon and states to his colleagues that he had in his possession the preliminary report which Chairman HOBBS had asked us to study, and that he did not disclose that report, nor seek the advice or assistance of any person other than the members of the committee, I know it to be true.

I consider it a distinct honor to be a member of the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives.

For 22 years I served in public office—12 years as a State district attorney, 4 years as a State deputy attorney general, 4 years as a United States attorney, and 2 years as Special Assistant to the Attorney General of the United States—the last appointment being at the hands of former Attorney General Homer Cummings in the prosecution of the so-called Pittsburgh vote fraud cases in which I was called upon to prosecute a number of Republican leaders. I feel that having served in these several capacities that I do have a conception of the great responsibility that is mine as a member of the Committee on the Judiciary, and I have an earnest desire to uphold its highest traditions. This committee has always enjoyed the utmost confidence of this House. This is probably the first attack ever made upon its integrity, and I feel that I owe it, not only to myself but to the committee as a whole, to make this complete statement in order that all may know just what occurred in this matter.

The accusations contained in this newspaper statement are false from beginning to end. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, in justice to my fellow members of the Judiciary Committee who have just addressed you, I feel it obligatory upon me to say that the draft of the subcommittee's report was not returned after its distribution to the members of the subcommittee by any member of the committee "promptly," nor at all, nor was it ever intended to be returned.

In the second place, I wish to make it abundantly clear that before the subcommittee ever began its labors, just before its first meeting, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM] stated to me that there might be a desire on the part of himself and the gentleman from New York [Mr. PIERCE] to file minority views, and that by participating in the attempt to prepare a report to which all could agree, they wished it understood that they would not thereby be precluded from expressing additional views. [Applause.]

Please permit me to express to you, and to the majority leader, and to the Members of the House at large the thanks of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PIERCE], the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM], and myself for the time granted us. [Applause.]

Mr. PIERCE of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend the remarks I made a few minutes ago and to include therein the telegram and letter to which I referred therein.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PIERCE]?

There was no objection.

ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATION FOR WORK RELIEF

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution No. 149.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 149

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for consideration of House Joint Resolution 246, a joint resolution making a further additional appropriation for work relief and relief for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and all points of order against said joint resolution are hereby waived. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the joint resolution and shall continue not to exceed 4 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Appropriations, the joint resolution shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. No amendments shall be in order to said joint resolution except amendments proposing a change in the amount of the appropriation contained in said joint resolution. At the conclusion of the reading of the joint resolution for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the joint resolution and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia is entitled to 1 hour.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. TAYLOR] for general debate.

Mr. Speaker, at this time I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH].

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH] yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I have already yielded to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH] yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. SABATH. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BRADLEY].

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. Are we to understand, if this rule is adopted, we will be precluded from offering amendments as to the amount unless the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH] consents?

The SPEAKER. No; the Chair does not so construe the rule. It prohibits the offering of other amendments, but it is wide open as far as amendments with reference to amount are concerned.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, the Rules resolution just read provides for 4 hours' general debate on the resolution appropriating funds to the W. P. A., with which the Members are familiar. This is legislation demanded from every section of the country. The rule is not one I would have wished for or offered, but unfortunately time is short. We are all familiar with the situation that faces us at the present time, and since the resolution permits the offering of amendments with reference to amount, which is the only question to be raised, I feel it is the duty of all those who recognize the dire needs of the Nation and the demands that are coming to us to support and favorably vote upon the rule.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. My good friend the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH], with whom I have served a good many years on committees, has always been considered a progressive and a liberal. How can he stand up here and advocate this arrogant gag rule?

Mr. SABATH. I say that the country today is faced with a condition which is more important than any technicality. I for one am willing to forego technicalities to see that 400,000 people are not thrown upon our streets in want and misery.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Why does not the gentleman join with us in voting down the previous question? In 15 minutes then we can have a rule the gentleman likes.

Mr. SABATH. Will the gentleman then vote for the $150,000,000?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I reserve all rights in regard to that.

Mr. SABATH. I regret that the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN] will not agree to vote for the $150,000,000. I know that his sympathies are that way, but party politics will not permit him to go along with us. I will say this to him: You on the Republican side are given the privilege, under precedents and rules of the House, to offer a motion to recommit. We Democrats cannot do so. Therefore, if you can assure me that the majority of Republicans will vote to recommit the bill to provide for $150,000,000 I will most certainly support the motion. That is providing, of course, that we are unfortunate in not being able to get a vote in favor of $150,000,000 when an amendment so providing is offered.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 additional minute to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. If the previous question is voted down the control then passes to the minority?

Mr. SABATH. Yes.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Have we any assurance that the minority will amend the rule so the bill will be considered in the House rather than in the Committee of the Whole?

Mr. SABATH. We have not. As I have stated, the minority have the advantage, because they have the right to make the only motion to recommit. I hope they will make a motion to recommit that will call for $150,000,000, and prove that they are sincere and not only playing politics.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. DOWELL. May I ask the gentleman this: If the previous question is voted down, can the rule be amended to permit those who favor a larger sum than the resolution calls for to offer amendments?

Mr. SABATH. If the previous question were voted down, and we had the votes we could then amend the rule to permit a yea-and-nay vote on amendments. But I am satisfied, since I have canvassed the situation, that we cannot get the rule amended, because some of the very men on your side who would vote for it will vote against an amendment appropriating $150,000,000. I myself am in favor of the $150,000,000, and from what I know of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. DOWELL], who has always tried to help the underprivileged, I feel that he is likewise in favor of it. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 10 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, it is not my purpose to discuss at any great length this rule or the resolution the consideration of which it makes in order. Since the beginning of the depression I have supported, uniformly, every measure that has been brought on the floor of this House for the relief of the distressed of this country, but I have carefully gone through the hearings on the pending bill and I fail to find justification for the appropriation this resolution provides. Even an analysis of the testimony of Colonel Harrington, as stated by the minority members of the subcommittee, shows that $55,000,000 will be amply sufficient to provide the necessary relief to the end of the present fiscal year. And if W. P. A. will purge its rolls of those who are not entitled to relief, it will not be necessary to appropriate any additional amount.

According to the Index of the American Federation of Labor, during the past month, the month of February, 120,000 previously unemployed found work in private industry, and according to the figures released by the Labor Department during the same period a substantial number of unemployed found such work.

Mr. HEALEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. For a brief question.

Mr. HEALEY. Does the gentleman know whether, in submitting this figure, the Committee on Appropriations had any basis for it? Has the committee any accurate figures on unemployment?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I do not know that the committee ascertained the number of unemployed, but it is generally understood that the figure is around 12,500,000 to 15,000,000.

Mr. HEALEY. There is no accurate basis for that figure, is there? It is speculation?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I do not believe a census has been taken to determine the fact.

Mr. POAGE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. POAGE. Is it not a fact that under the resolution as it is now written anyone who wants to try to equalize the wage scales among the various sections of the country has no opportunity even to offer such an amendment?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Yes, under the terms of the rule.

Mr. POAGE. It was attempted the last time this subject was under consideration and the House thought we ought to do some equalizing, but now they are afraid to let us have a chance to equalize.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. This House recently passed a bill which provided for a more or less equalization in pay rates, but the provision was stricken out in the Senate, as the gentleman recalls.

Mr. POAGE. That is right.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. It is not my intention to recite the sordid history of the W. P. A., reeking with partisan politics, favoritism, nepotism, and a considerable degree, I regret to say, of communism. You have only to read the Sheppard report of the investigation of the recent election in order to find ample evidence of the activity, the vulgar activity of the W. P. A. in political contests. The morning paper carries a story from New Mexico that 5 defendants in the Federal court out there were convicted yesterday in addition to the 11 who had previously been convicted for violating the law in connection with the administration of W. P. A. I do not have to go to Pennsylvania, to Kentucky, to New Mexico, to Oklahoma, or to any other State to get information as to the use of the W. P. A. in politics. In the campaign of 1936 I saw ample evidence of W. P. A. activity in my own district and in my own election. I saw thousands of W. P. A. workers organized and drilled. I saw them carried to the precinct registration office in W. P. A. automobiles, running upon power produced by Government gasoline, to be registered. I saw those under 50 years of age required to pay their poll tax in order to qualify them to vote in the election. Then I saw them herded like so many sheep and taken in Government cars to the polls, where they were told to vote and they were told that the W. P. A. representative there would know how they voted, and if they did not vote according to instructions they would immediately be dropped from the W. P. A. pay roll.

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. PITTENGER. Has not the W. P. A. been used as a political football right straight through, everywhere?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. There is absolutely no question about that. The W. P. A. has been debauched to the limit in efforts to elect New Deal candidates for office everywhere. In addition to requiring W. P. A. employees to vote according to the dictation of New Deal politicians, they were required to donate contributions to the New Deal slush fund. This was not confined to the salaried, white-collared employees, but the common laborer, and even the women working on sewing projects were required to "kick in." A widow came to my office after the election and told me that she had been required to contribute $1.50 to provide transportation for New Dealers to attend a political rally in an adjoining county. This widow was employed on a sewing project and was paid less than $20 per month. She contributed the $1.50 and a little later she was called upon for a contribution of $1 to provide a banquet for the political big wigs. She was not expected to be present at the banquet and partake of the refreshments thereof, so she declined to make the contribution and within the next day or two she was discharged.

Business concerns who furnished cement and other materials and equipment on W. P. A. projects were likewise the prey of the New Deal politicians. I stated on this floor some time ago that a representative of the Democratic National Committee came to Knoxville and summoned to his hotel a number of people who had done business with W. P. A. and other New Deal alphabetical agencies, and after being reminded of the business which they had enjoyed, these businessmen were asked to purchase the Democratic handbook, which had been autographed by President Roosevelt. The number of books were to be purchased in proportion to the amount of business which they had received. The price of the campaign book was only a paltry, insignificant $250 per copy. These businessmen were covertly given to understand that future orders would depend on their liberality. There never has been such a shake-down of businessmen by political highjackers as in this instance, which I understand was carried on throughout the Nation.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I yield.

Mr. KNUTSON. Is it the gentleman's contention that the W. P. A. is overripe?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Overripe?

Mr. KNUTSON. Yes.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I think it is ripe enough to pull, yes, if that is what the gentleman means. [Laughter.]

Is the W. P. A. in politics?

Mr. Speaker, in my own State, according to the testimony of Colonel Harrington and the chart which he submitted, we have 559 salaried employees working in W. P. A. and there they are paid an average of $122.36 a month, and I make the statement without fear of contradiction that of the 559 salaried employees in W. P. A. there is not one single, solitary Republican among them. Why, the only way a Republican can get employment on W. P. A., even with a pick and shovel, in Tennessee is through the influence and pressure of some Democratic politician.

Mr. PARSONS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I regret I have not the time to yield.

We understood when W. P. A. was set up that it was to be a temporary organization, but now I think we all recognize that it is the purpose of the present administration at least to continue the W. P. A. as a permanent institution.

I want to pay tribute to Colonel Harrington. I think Colonel Harrington is a clean, conscientious official and that he is honestly endeavoring to administer W. P. A. free of political influence and also as economically as possible. Of course, under Mr. Hopkins, the man who said "We will tax and tax, spend and spend, elect and elect," we could not expect anything else but extravagance. Under this man Aubrey Williams, who, in an address, appealed to those who were on W. P. A. not to forget those who put them in their jobs and gave them employment, of course, we could not expect anything else.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I beg the gentleman's pardon, but I have not the time to yield.

Up to March 6, under the administration of Colonel Harrington, 40,000 aliens have been taken off of the W. P. A. rolls, and I am satisfied that the number of aliens in W. P. A. is far more than 40,000, probably twice 40,000. But imagine, Mr. Speaker, aliens on W. P. A. when there are millions of American workingmen able to work, looking for employment. This could only happen in the United States. Such a state of affairs could not exist anywhere else. Imagine, if you can, an American over in Germany or Italy or even in Great Britain being on government relief.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 additional minutes.

According to the hearings, there are 55,000 on W. P. A. today who are entitled to relief under social security, and from 15 to 20 percent of those who are on W. P. A. today have been on W. P. A. since its inception; in other words, they are chronics.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I have not the time to yield.

Mr. Speaker, some of the work that is performed by W. P. A., with which we are all familiar, is beyond reasonable explanation, such as teaching tap dancing, puppeteering, tearing down the wrong buildings, erecting dog hospitals, raking leaves hither and yon, building Federal buildings not only in the small towns for property owners but they have even gone out into the country and erected such buildings, and I understand that a great many of them have written above them, "This is a Federal building." They are about 4 feet wide and 6 feet long, if you know what I have reference to, and I understand that Harry and Aubrey seriously discussed on one occasion whether or not it would not be in line with W. P. A. to provide a Sears & Roebuck catalog for each one of these Federal buildings. [Laughter.]

Mr. Speaker, this unemployment problem will not be solved by the W. P. A. formula.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I cannot yield.

The only way the unemployment problem can be solved is by restoring confidence to business [applause], and business will never go forward until the Federal Government sets a pattern in economy and in tax regulation.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I regret I cannot yield.

Mr. HOOK. It is because I am a Democrat?

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. No; not because the gentleman is a Democrat, but I do not think he could shed any light on this subject.

Mr. HOOK. I could shed enlightenment on the subject and could tell the gentleman how the Republicans are playing politics with relief.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I certainly cannot see how Republicans can play politics with relief when they are not allowed to in any way handle it.

Mr. Speaker, as I said a moment ago, the only way we can bring about recovery in this country is by establishing confidence among the people of this country who produce. We have already squandered more than $20,000,000,000 of the taxpayers' money in a futile attempt at recovery, and we are worse off today than when we started. There are as many unemployed today and conditions generally are as bad or worse than when the first attempt was made by the New Deal through the W. P. A. and other alphabetical activities to restore recovery in this country.

Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that it ought to be apparent to every thinking man that this profligate Government spending must cease, but, instead of reducing appropriations, under the spur of the White House, Congress is constantly increasing them. Take W. P. A. as an example. In 1936 we spent for W. P. A. a total of $1,270,235,065. If this resolution is passed, it will make a total of $2,163,868,406 appropriated for W. P. A. for the fiscal year ending June 30, or $893,633,134 more money spent on W. P. A. this year than in 1936 when the depression was at its peak. We are spending this year on W. P. A. $330,411,435 more than we spent for W. P. A. in 1937. And we are spending this year on W. P. A. $736,166,412 more than was spent for W. P. A. for the year ending June 30, 1938.

The W. P. A. organization for the month of January this year spent for administrative activities the stupendous sum of $5,788,716.44. Think of it—they spent $488,000 for travel alone during that 1 month and $150,174.22 for communication, such as telephone and telegraph. They even spent $115,582.77 for printing and binding, and why such an organization as W. P. A. needs to spend such an amount for such a purpose is certainly beyond my poor power of comprehension.

Mr. Speaker, the same principles of economics apply to the Government of the United States as apply to private business. The operator of a peanut stand can spend $2 every time he takes in $1 until his surplus is exhausted. He can continue to do this until his capital has been dissipated. He can even carry on this paradox until his credit is exhausted, but after that there is nothing left for him but bankruptcy and the poorhouse. The same is true of this or any other government. If we keep up this practice of spending two dollars when we only take in one, we are headed inevitably for inflation, repudiation, and, ultimately, bankruptcy.

Mr. Speaker, the time has arrived when we must apply the brakes so far as spending is concerned. It is up to this Congress to demonstrate to the country that this spending spree is over. There may be many headaches following, but it has always been true that those who dance must pay the fiddler. The injustice and tragedy of this situation, however, lies in the fact that those who really danced will not pay the fiddler, but that generations yet unborn will be subjected to this burden.

Mr. Speaker, I repeat, we can have no recovery until we have first a restored confidence, and I think that the last election and the increase in membership on the Republican side of the Chamber had a great deal to do toward starting such a restoration, because on this side of the Chamber, and also on the other side of the Chamber, a great many have discarded the rubber stamp and shown a disposition to be more courageous and independent than heretofore. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Tennessee has expired.

Mr. PARSONS rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Illinois rise?

Mr. PARSONS. Mr. Speaker, it is my painful duty to suggest the absence of a quorum.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and ninety-nine members present; not a quorum.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 45]

Beam	Culkin	Keller	Secrest
Blackney	Curley	Lord	Seger
Boland	Evans	McKeough	Smith, Ill.
Brewster	Ford, Leland M.	McReynolds	Taylor, Colo.
Celler	Goldsborough	Mansfield	Vinson, Ga.
Chiperfield	Green	Osmers	Vreeland
Creal	Hennings	Owen	Zimmerman
Crowther	Jeffries	Sasscer

The SPEAKER. On this roll call 393 Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

The motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. St. Claire, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a joint resolution of the House of the following title:

H. J. Res. 250. Joint resolution making an additional appropriation for the fiscal year 1939 for expenditure by the United States Employees' Compensation Commission in accordance with section 16 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend the remarks I made today upon the point of order on the question of personal privilege.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ELLIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to include a statement I made on Tuesday last before a subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

RELIEF

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox].

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I am unable to understand just what the reasons are for the fight on this rule. Certainly the Rules Committee had no idea of passing out a rule that would in any way deny any Member the right to freely express his or her views. The representative of the Committee on Appropriations handling this matter came before the Committee on Rules and of him inquiry was made as to time needed for debate, as to the kind of rule that was desired. What the committee did was simply to accommodate the needs of the situation as disclosed by the representative of the Committee on Appropriations. It appears there are those who object to the rule in its present form, because, as contended, it would deny interested parties the right to demand a record vote on the question of raising or lowering the amount carried in the bill. Mr. Speaker, I do not subscribe to that sort of contention. I attribute no cowardice to my colleagues, as that argument would imply. I do not know that there is a single Member of this body who would vote differently if he knew that a record was being made of his vote.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. Yes.

Mr. WARREN. There seems to be some misunderstanding on this side of the House about the effect of the previous question. If the previous question is voted down, the control of the debate, under the rules of the House, then passes on to the minority. Is not that the fact?

Mr. COX. That is correct.

Mr. WARREN. And the minority would then have a chance to offer amendments which would emasculate both the rule and the entire program, if that happened?

Mr. COX. That is correct. The only real controversial question that I could see might possibly arise was that with respect to amount. There are those advocating $150,000,000 who are actively opposing this rule. I say to them, speaking from my standpoint and giving expression to my understanding of the situation, that they will do tremendously well if they retain the amount set up in the bill, $100,000,000. If I understand the temper of this House, the likelihood of reducing the amount is infinitely greater than the possibility of increasing it.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. Yes.

Mr. SABATH. The gentleman from Georgia states that those who favor the $150,000,000 are responsible in trying to bring about delay.

Mr. COX. Only in part, not altogether.

Mr. SABATH. I say to the gentleman that most of those men who are actually interested to get this legislation through are in favor of the rule and will support and vote for it.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, we are obliged to meet the issue at some time.

The rule that has been reported and that is now before the House provides for fair consideration, and I trust that those who favor increasing the amount, as well as those who favor reducing it, will come to an agreement to support the rule and let us proceed with the determination of the question we have in hand.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. I yield.

Mr. COCHRAN. As a matter of fact, is this not an emergency measure?

Mr. COX. I may say that it is so contended.

Mr. COCHRAN. And to vote down the previous question would only delay final consideration?

Mr. COX. Of course, that is correct.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. I yield.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. If the previous question is voted down, control passes to the minority and we who want a record vote have no assurance whatever that the minority will so amend the rule as to give us a record vote.

Mr. COX. I trust there is that degree of courage on the side of the minority as well as on the side of the majority that enables gentlemen to vote their honest convictions under all circumstances.

Mr. SIROVICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. I yield.

Mr. SIROVICH. Independent of this rule every man will have a right to vote on an amendment whether we have $150,000,000 or $100,000,000?

Mr. COX. Yes. Of course, the gentleman is correct.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Georgia has expired.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON].

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, this is a very drastic rule. It waives all points of order, however flagrant the violations of the rules of the House may be. It precludes all amendments of every character except as to amounts, and makes no provision for a record vote even on amounts offered in Committee of the Whole. It gives control of all debate to Members who are opposed to the President's recommendation and, taken as a whole, constitutes one of the most oppressive rules ever offered in the House. In fact, so stringent is the rule that from the evident reaction on both sides of the aisle I am certain we can defeat the previous question. The previous question having been voted down, the rule would then be open to amendment; and if a substitute were adopted providing for consideration in the House as in Committee of the Whole, we would be assured of a record vote, and the way would be clear to a free and untrammeled consideration of the Budget estimate. But, unfortunately, we would not be able to offer a substitute, as right to recognition following rejection of the previous question passes to the other side of the aisle, and they refuse to permit us to offer any substitute which would provide for a record vote.

But, my friends, no question is ever settled until it is settled right; and in another and more deliberative body $250,000,000 will be added to the agricultural bill and $150,000,000 will be included in the pending resolution; and when the conference reports come back, we will have an opportunity to dispose of both questions under the regular rules of the House.

For this reason, Mr. Speaker, I hope that no one will vote against the previous question and that we will be permitted to dispose of the matter as speedily and as harmoniously as possible. [Applause.]

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MAPES].

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I may say at the outset that I have voted for every relief appropriation that has heretofore been passed by the Congress. Whether I vote for this resolution or not will depend upon the amount carried in the resolution when the final vote on it is taken, and on the showing that is made in the debate for the need of it.

I should like to present some of the issues with which it seems to me we are confronted here today. In the first place, this is a gag rule. If it is adopted as reported by the Committee on Rules, it will prohibit any amendment to the resolution except as to the amount of the appropriation. It will prevent the consideration of any amendment directing or restricting the administration of the amount appropriated, other than that which is contained in existing law. It is necessary to read the original resolution in order to understand the full significance of what that means.

I am opposed to gag rules. I am opposed to this rule as it is written, and I shall ask for a vote on the motion for the previous question, in order that it may be amended so as to permit consideration of amendments to the resolution before the rule is adopted.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAPES. I yield.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Will you, if the previous question is voted down, amend the rule so that it will be possible to have a yea-and-nay vote on the amendment to increase the amount?

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, in the first place, under the rulings of the Speaker and under the precedents, if I should be fortunate enough to obtain the floor, I would lose control of the resolution if I yielded to someone else. In the second place, I see no reason why this resolution should not be considered in the Committee of the Whole and in the House the same as legislation of this importance is usually considered; that is, with free and open debate under the general rules of the House of Representatives.

A pertinent question to be considered in connection with the consideration of this resolution as I see it is, Has there been a "will" on the part of those responsible for the administration of this appropriation to economize or to keep within the appropriation passed by the Congress? It is hard to believe that there has been, for anyone who will take the trouble to read the original resolution, the messages of the President on the subject, and the hearings before the Committee on Appropriations on the pending resolution.

In that connection, I wish particularly to direct the attention of the Members to the questions asked by the distinguished gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM], of Colonel Harrington, Administrator, and his replies thereto, as they appear on pages 23 and 24 of the hearings, and again on pages 82, 83, 84, and 85.

We start out at the very beginning with this unusual situation. The original resolution appropriating $725,000,000 for the remainder of this fiscal year, which ends June 30, 1939, was signed by the President on the 4th day of February.

Three days later, or on the 7th day of February, the President sent a message to the Congress saying that it would not be possible to live within the appropriation. Does that indicate any great ambition to conform to the wishes of Congress or to make any serious attempt to keep within the limits of the appropriation?

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAPES. I am sorry that I have not the time for the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Rules.

The original resolution provided that the amount "appropriated shall be so apportioned by the Works Progress Administration as to cover the entire period from the date of the approval of the act until June 30, 1939." It provided further that "prior to April 1 there shall be no administrative reduction of more than 5 percent in the number of employees upon Works Progress projects."

Mr. Speaker, I desire to call attention particularly to this clause in that proviso: "There shall be no administrative reduction of more than 5 percent." Everyone knows that a great many resign voluntarily from W. P. A. every month because of the opportunity which they have to get into private industry, and for other reasons. The number voluntarily resigning amounts to something between 100,000 and 200,000 per month.

The President in his message to Congress 3 days after he approved the original resolution said that "the joint resolution requires that reduction in employment in those months"—that is the months prior to April 1—"shall not exceed 5 percent." The Administrator in his testimony before the Committee on Appropriations construes that language as a mandate from Congress to keep the number employed up to within 5 percent, notwithstanding the fact that from 100,000 to 200,000 withdraw voluntarily from the W. P. A. every month.

Regardless of the merits of the contention that there are people in need who should be put on W. P. A. projects that are not now on, I think most of us will agree that any attempt to construe that language as a mandate from Congress to keep that number on W. P. A. projects is a very strained construction.

Mr. HEALEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAPES. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. HEALEY. The evidence before the committee, as I understood it, was that some 800,000 people are perfectly eligible for W. P. A., who have been certified as qualified for W. P. A. employment, who cannot get on the rolls at the present time.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. MAPES. There is not time to go into the merits of that question now. I refer the gentleman from Massachusetts again to the testimony which I have already cited and the further testimony in the hearings to the efforts in some localities to keep up the number on W. P. A.

Mr. GEYER of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAPES. I cannot yield, Mr. Speaker.

The next question I wish to ask is: Is there a need for this additional $100,000,000 appropriation in order adequately to provide work relief for the number originally contemplated and recommended in January by the proponents of this legislation? Let me say that, in my opinion, a careful reading of the majority report of the Committee on Appropriations will lead anyone to doubt that question; and the minority positively declare that the $100,000,000 is not necessary to enable the Works Progress Administration to keep on the pay roll the number that was originally contemplated to be kept on in January when this original legislation was being considered in the House.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield now? I want to answer the gentleman's question.

Mr. MAPES. I am sorry, I cannot yield to the distinguished gentleman from Illinois, I have not the time.

Appropriations for W. P. A.—and I wish every Member would take particular note of this—instead of being gradually reduced have increased the last few years. If this resolution is passed, as reported by the committee, Congress will have appropriated for W. P. A. alone for this fiscal year which ends June 30 over $2,163,000,000 as compared with $1,270,000,000 in 1936; $1,833,000,000 in 1937, and $1,427,000,000 in 1938. Anyone considering this resolution and the tendency constantly to increase appropriations instead of to decrease them cannot help but ask himself: Whither are we going?

Another thing to be remembered, when the original resolution was passed in January it was contemplated according to the report of the committee that there would be no surplus in the W. P. A. funds on January 31. Instead of that there was a surplus of something like $65,000,000 at the end of the month of January. The pending resolution, therefore, as stated by the committee in its report and by the majority members of the committee, proposes to give the Works Progress Administration more than a sufficient amount to carry on the work which was contemplated by it in January of this year.

Why should Congress appropriate more than is necessary or sufficient? I do not understand. Especially is it hard to understand in view of the tendency of this organization, as brought out in the report of the committee, to be extravagant, expending $500,000 a month for example, for travel and subsistence expenses, and $150,000 for communication service. This being so, why should Congress appropriate more money than is needed to carry on its necessary work? [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM].

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I will occupy this 5 minutes in trying to clear up, if I can, the parliamentary situation.

Bills coming from the Appropriations Committee of the House, generally speaking, are privileged and may be called up without the necessity of waiting for Calendar Wednesday or resorting to a rule. The relief bill, however, while it has always been handled by the Appropriations Committee, is not, strictly speaking, an appropriation bill; it is a legislative bill. The only way in which it could come up in the House is either by unanimous consent, by placing it upon the calendar and waiting for Calendar Wednesday, or by a special rule for its consideration such as is presented to the House today.

This is an unusual rule—a stringent rule—if you prefer to have it, a gag rule. Sometimes it is not unpleasant to be gagged. I remember the first speech I made in the House of Representatives. It was a very indignant speech against the Republican chairman of the Rules Committee, who walked around during the closing days of the session of Congress with a lot of rules in his pocket that he would not call up, which to my mind was a very outrageous procedure. As the years have gone on, I have learned that sometimes a commodious pigeonhole or hip pocket is for the good of the country. In this particular case this is an unusual rule, and I do not think I violate the confidence of the committee when I tell you that I brought up in the full committee meeting the question of the kind of rule we proposed to ask for—a rule which would limit amendments merely to the amount involved in the bill. The matter was discussed. My beloved friend from Missouri, one of the great parliamentarians of the House, was present. The minority members were present. There was no objection.

Why is it advisable to consider this resolution without permitting comprehensive amendments other than those affecting the amount appropriated? It is advisable for this reason: This appropriation runs for 3 months. It is an emergency matter. Congress has just ordered an investigation of W. P. A. for the purpose of trying to get information upon which we may formulate permanent policies. I hope very much that a great deal of good will come from it. I have many ideas of my own about the set-up of W. P. A. which are widely at variance with the present set-up. If we undertook upon the floor of the House in this emergency to write the law regulating this matter, obviously all kinds of amendments would be offered. One Member told me he wanted to offer an amendment to tack on the parity payments. Another wants the matter fixed so he can offer an amendment to allocate more funds to post offices. Another one wants funds earmarked for highways. Another wants them for public buildings. Another objects to the administrative salary of one of the W. P. A. officials, as I do myself, and he would put on an amendment controlling that.

And so on, on and on, pandemonium supreme.

The purpose of this rule is to narrow the issue and give the House the opportunity to express itself as to amount, whether it shall be $100,000,000, $50,000,000, no money at all, or $150,000,000. We felt in doing this that the committee has been honest and frank with the House and that no rights of any Member have been taken away.

With reference to the right to have a record vote on the $150,000,000, may I say that no legislative body on the face of the earth so protects the rights of the minority and individual Members as do the rules of the United States House of Representatives. If the majority of the Members sitting as a Committee of the Whole wish to have $150,000,000 in this bill, it can be written in there; and when we go back into the House you can get a roll-call vote on it; but if we do not bring in a bill for $150,000,000, amended down to $100,000,000, then we prevent some gentleman making this kind of an argument, in great emotion: "If you vote on the record vote against $150,000,000, you are a traitor to your administration."

Mr. Speaker, we ought to pass on this matter on its merits. In the rule we have presented we give this opportunity. Remember, if the previous question is voted down, the control passes to our friends over here. We should vote solidly for the previous question, take the matter up under the rule, engage in 4 hours' general debate, with a wide-open latitude as to amount.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of the time on this side.

Mr. Speaker, I want to speak briefly on the parliamentary situation with respect to this rule. Let me say to my friends on this side of the aisle, and I think I can do so authoritatively, there is nothing to be gained by any Member on the Democratic side voting down the previous question, whether he is for or against relief. The gentlemen on the other side would like to control this measure. If you vote down the previous question, the control of the measure passes to the other side, as you know, and only by yielding on that side can anyone offer an amendment of any kind to this rule.

May I say to the House that the application for this rule came to the Rules Committee yesterday. There was no objection, and no one indicated any opposition to the rule from either side. I do not regard this as a gag rule and I do not regard it as a drastic rule. Every rule brought into the House, as you know, waives points of order. I do not recall any that did not. The only thing that could be termed drastic about this rule is that it limits amendments to the question of amount. That is the only question involved in all the conversation and controversy about the measure. The rule is wide open as to amount. You may offer any amendment and vote for any amendment from $1 up to as many million dollars as your conscience and your imagination may dictate. There is absolutely no limitation on that proposition.

Why should not this rule prevent the offering of amendments to the administrative or legislative features of this law? In the last 4 weeks in connection with the consideration of the $725,000,000 bill that whole question was most elaborately and exhaustively debated in this House. I have reference to the question of the limitations that should be put on the expenditure of this money. The House passed on that matteer. The Appropriations Committee is about to consider an appropriation for the year 1940 for the W. P. A. and that committee will go into all the administrative details. As a matter of fact, the House in the past week has passed a resolution directing the Appropriations Committee to investigate fully the W. P. A. and to recommend legislation on the subject. We know perfectly well if we undertake by placing further restrictions and limitations upon the matter in the House this afternoon we are not going to accomplish it with that degree of accuracy that we all desire so far as permanent legislation on the subject is concerned. I do not think it can be fairly said that there is anything in the way of a gag rule about the pending rule which the Rules Committee has presented today.

Mr. SWEENEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. SWEENEY. Did I understand the gentleman to say this is not a gag rule?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I do not so understand it, for the reasons I have stated.

Mr. SWEENEY. Did the gentleman from Virginia hear the distinguished gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM] say it was a gag rule?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I may differ from him, and I may differ from the gentleman who asks the question. As I say, we customarily waive all points of order in every rule brought in here.

If we had no rule on this bill, the following would be the parliamentary situation: The resolution which has been presented is virtually an amendment to section 1 of the $725,000,000 bill passed by the House 4 weeks ago. If there was no rule at all, in my judgment, you would not be able to offer any amendment except such amendment as might be germane to section 1 of that bill. Section 1 of that bill appropriated $725,000,000, and I think it would be a very grave question if we came to the House without a rule at all whether you would be able to offer any amendment that would be germane to the bill except an amendment as to amount.

Mr. Speaker, I hope it will be the pleasure of the Democrats on this side of the House to vote in favor of the previous question, because that will expedite the consideration of the matter, which is what we all desire.

Mr. DUNN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. DUNN. When will those of us who believe in the $150,000,000 have an opportunity to present such an amendment?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. The gentleman may do so when the bill is being considered in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. DUNN. Will the yeas and nays then be taken?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. It depends on whether the amendment passes or not. If the amendment is agreed to, the yeas and nays could be taken.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of House Joint Resolution 246.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of House Joint Resolution 246, with Mr. WARREN in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The first reading of the joint resolution was dispensed with.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 15 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, the 2 hours for debate allotted to this side of the House will be used by giving 1 hour of that time to those who support the committee report, and dividing as best I can, if I can find a system of mathematics to do so, the remainder of the time among the estimable gentlemen who wish to speak and present a contrary viewpoint. I do not wish to take much time myself, and I should like to conclude in 15 minutes. I should like to try to make a chronological statement of my position and the committee position, and I would appreciate it if the members of the Committee would permit me to proceed without interruption.

Mr. Chairman, at the outset let me say that, speaking personally and also for certainly a majority of this committee, the fact that this resolution is for $100,000,000 instead of $150,000,000 in no sense of the word represents any antagonism to the idea that the Federal Government should have its proper and proportionate part in meeting the duties of society to the unemployed and to the needy. [Applause.]

As far as I am concerned, I believe I have handled upon the floor of this House the relief bills for the last few sessions of Congress. I have defended as best I could the administration of those funds. I am thankful for the humanitarian leadership of the President in the early stages of this thing, when there was a real emergency, when something had to be done, not tomorrow, not next week, but now; something had to be done in a hurry to prevent not only widespread suffering in this country but to prevent a collapse of our social order. The courage, the wisdom, and the willingness to do and dare of the administration met that emergency, and I am willing to accord a full share of credit for that conduct. But we have been told all along that the objective of relief was to rehabilitate the American citizen; that the objective of Federal assistance was to put the citizen in a position where he could stand on his own feet and help himself. It is toward that day that I have looked and longed and hoped.

The greatest asset an American citizen has is his independence, his determination, his self-reliance. With these virtues as a shield and buckler he has conquered all opposition and overcome all obstacles in building this great democracy in which we live. We must try to foster that spirit and that sentiment in the American citizen. If I understand aright the spirit and the sentiment of the right-thinking representative workers and farmers of America, I believe what they want to see done today is that this Government shall set its own house in order, that it shall stabilize economic conditions in this country, that it shall afford, if you please, a stable market to the farmer—and I grant that that is not an easy thing to do—that it shall stabilize, if it can, working conditions in order that the farmer upon his farm may earn his bread and the worker at his task may earn by the honest sweat of his brow his daily subsistence. I believe the farmers and the workers of America are getting pretty weary of being forced into the position of having to come crawling in the dust and supplicating their daily bread from a Government that gives them a handout every time Congress is willing to vote it.

There is no emergency in W. P. A. today save the emergency it has created itself. When Congress appropriated $725,000,000 there was a clear mandate to W. P. A. to restrict its operations, to purge its rolls, and to reduce its administrative expense, and that Congress would be here if it sought to so cooperate. Another body wrote a provision into that law which stated that W. P. A. might not by administrative action reduce its rolls more than 5 percent prior to April 1. By an unjustifiable construction of that mandate of the Senate the W. P. A. construed that to mean that they were not permitted to allow their rolls of 3,000,000 to fall more than 5 percent during that time.

The hearings show that the normal withdrawals from W. P. A. are approximately 100,000 a month, the voluntary retirements, and that in addition they purged their rolls in January, and a proportionate amount in other months, of something like 100,000 workers whom they find to be unworthy of continued Federal assistance. So under this evidence before our committee, if W. P. A. had done nothing whatever, there would have been 400,000 or 500,000 people leaving the rolls of W. P. A.

But what did they do? As fast as people voluntarily retired, as fast as they removed them for cause, they immediately recruited others in their places in order to hold the rolls up. When they removed 30,000 aliens from the rolls they immediately called upon certifying agencies to send them names, that they might build the rolls up. It reminded me very much of the situation that confronted Congress and an argument that was made on the floor of this House when we were approaching the disarmament conference. Some gentlemen in the Well of this House seriously argued that America should proceed to build battleships in order that when we should come to a conference on the limitation of armaments we should have some ships we could sink. Whether they recruited men for the rolls and kept the rolls up, approaching 3,000,000 in spite of the voluntary withdrawals until now, they are faced with the fact that if they do not get more money they will have to dismiss these people from the rolls.

There is more involved in this question than the difference between $100,000,000 and $150,000,000. There is a very vital fundamental issue involved, and that is whether this Congress is going to legislate, whether it is going to assume its functions as a legislative body, whether having made a legislative determination of a matter, it is going to stand by it, or whether it is going to yield its legislative judgment to the stubborn insistence of an administrative agency. [Applause.]

Let us look for a moment at the administrative expenses of W. P. A. Since this administration came into power the Congress has appropriated about $21,000,000,000 for relief of all sorts; that is, loans, R. F. C., C. C. C., and everything. I shall insert an itemization of this in the RECORD.

Funds appropriated and allocated for recovery and relief and expenditures therefrom—Total amounts provided to Feb. 28, 1939

Organization	Sources of funds							Expenditures
	Appropriations
	Specific	Statutory and executive allocations			Work Relief and Public Works Appropriation Act of 1938	Reconstruction Finance Corporation [1]	Tota	Fiscal year 1939	Fiscal year 1938 and prior years
		National Industrial Recovery Act, June 16, 1933	Emergency Appropriation Act, 1935, approved June 19, 1934	Emergency Relief Appropriation Acts of 1935, 1936, and 1937
Agricultural aid:
Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation: Reduction in interest rate on mortgages	$15,700,000.00						$15,700,000.00	$3,684,667.54	$5,726,515.05
Federal land banks:
Capital stock	125,000,000.00						125,000,000.00	[5] 99,200.00	124,801,520.00
Subscription to paid-in surplus	189,000,000.00						189,000,000.00	7,703,927.55	175,137,966.31
Reduction in interest rates on mortgages	141,150,000.00						141,150,000.00	23,271,854.15	113,516,033.12
Commodity Credit Corporation:
Subscription to capital stock by Reconstruction Finance Corporation						$97,000,000.00	97,000,000.00		97,000,000.00
Restoration of capital impairment	94,285,404.73						94,285,404.73		94,285,404.73
Other		$3,000,000.00					3,000,000.00	108,030.89	2,891,969.11
Relief:
Federal Emergency Relief Administration	[2] 604,861,424.48	152,017,387.70	$480,586,570.58	$934,592,359.00		911,040,000.00	3,083,097,741.76	1,330,500.24	3,078,618,777.61
Civil Works Administration	[2] 332,194,060.01	399,473,932.13				88,960,000.00	820,627,992.14	147,252.54	817,645,203.51
Civilian Conservation Corps	93,101,630.25	317,524,865.30	320,986,927.21	593,619,080.26			1,325,232,503.02	391,971.01	1,319,803,932.88
Department of Agriculture, relief			83,929,184.43				83,929,184.43	864.63	83,922,420.58
Public works (including work relief):
Public Works Administration		187,278.87			$20,000,793.09		20,188,071.96
Public highways	255,488,217.71	438,041,639.40	2,239.05	506,828,601.81			1,200,360,697.97	22,524,374.55	1,145,819,384.44
River and harbor work and flood control		256,295,622.76	93,708,050.78	162,930,431.98	5,531,000.00		518,465,105.52	8,541,364.32	500,816,403.86
Rural Electrification Administration				15,484,573.50	127,749.00		15,612,322.50	583,899.60	13,956,126.11
Works Progress Administration				4,651,655,803.60	2,090,257,437.44		6,741,913,241.04	[3] 1,477,027,387.39	[3] 4,531,419,345.48
National Youth Administration				155,728,066.45	75,000,000.00		230,728,066.45	45,746,940.93	152,310,901.01
Public Works Administration, grants 1938 (act of June 21, 1938)					667,000,000.00		667,000,000.00	151,160,931.41
Public Works Administration, loans 1938 (act of June 21, 1938)					57,000,000.00		57,000,000.00	6,722,506.24
All other:
Administrative expenses, Public Works Administration		75,611,050.56	14,739,359.11		[4] 24,000,000.00		114,350,409.67	13,973,591.63	88,896,135.92
Legislative establishment		2,800,000.00		1,078,922.56	102,000.00		3,980,922.56	91,176.33	3,822,897.57
State Department		4,880,179.08	1,101,961.43	152,264.08			6,134,404.59	5,107.98	6,002,606.78
Treasury Department:
Public buildings	65,000,000.00	83,669,081.70	7,465,385.00		6,000,000.00		162,134,466.70	4,302,346.47	147,038,582.52
Other		28,336,136.55	4,216,291.10	97,187,687.16	34,898,252.00		164,638,366.81	16,731,663.83	122,341,629.28
War Department (nonmilitary)		2,121,485.18	142,680.00	2,106,795.06			4,370,960.24	1,446.42	1,894,476.40
National defense:
Army		97,861,526.15	4,290,828.00	61,700,496.39	69,416,057.00		233,268,907.54	25,863,595.24	155,028,890.68
Navy		277,713,277.58	40,661,905.00	48,300,802.92	47,667,009.69		414,342,995.19	23,840,71[illegible].78	361,909,388.75
Panama Canal		999,850.82					999,850.82		999,850.82
Department of Justice		786,329.38	5,023.29	3,015,309.00	15,391,130.00		19,197,791.67	4,453,084.47	3,599,296.80
Post Office Department		6,198.00					6,198.00		6,198.00
Department of the Interior	18,339,960.63	186,604,089.27	11,687,064.18	157,225,037.58	66,588,734.00		440,444,885.66	44,616,129.93	333,106,154.01
Department of Agriculture		36,726,194.57	5,769,125.49	136,553,376.83	26,534,347.00		205,583,043.89	20,825,555.58	173,104,100.03
Department of Commerce		17,779,807.99	1,074,479.44	12,045,567.03	7,549,129.82		38,448,984.28	2,982,275.34	30,834,171.26
Department of Labor		4,561,781.23	4,588,118.65	33,796,276.44	3,697,818.00		46,643,994.32	1,519,367.45	42,255,794.64
Veterans' Administration		3,020,470.64		2,305,532.94	13,855,243.00		19,181,246.58	1,958,309.17	4,423,737.85
Independent offices and commissions		5,171,325.09	1,650,920.52	53,676,783.65	14,581,894.09		75,080,923.35	10,277,333.08	39,089,987.14
Civil Aeronautics Authority		2,000,000.00	300,000.00		4,000,000.00		6,300,000.00
District of Columbia		1,509,500.00					1,509,500.00		1,485,548.14
Unclassified items								[5] 563,002.91	375,108.13
Aid to home owners:
Home-loan bank system:
Home-loan bank stock						125,000,000.00	125,000,000.00		124,741,000.00
Home Owners' Loan Corporation						200,000,000.00	200,000,000.00		200,000,000.00
Federal savings and loan associations	[6] 50,000,000.00						50,000,000.00	1.15	49,964,623.85
Emergency housing		22,451,218.42		82,676,043.32			105,127,261.74	67,347.20	104,947,625.30
United States Housing Authority		6,654,241.30		22,584,742.48			29,238,983.78	4,897,292.12	20,487,826.32
Federal Housing Administration		999,996.20				68,021,074.55	69,021,070.75	4,335,075.10	58,933,572.74
Farm Security Administration		25,908,781.44	3,216,647.89	533,251,843.76	197,803,083.00		760,180,356.09	92,285,548.41	535,656,576.94

See footnotes at end of table.

Miscellaneous:
Reconstruction Finance Corporation:
Subscription to capital stock	$500,000,000.00						$500,000,000.00		500,000,000.00
Disaster Loan Corporation stock						$14,000,000.00	14,000,000.00	4,000,000.00	10,000,000.00
Loans and grants to States, municipalities, etc., under act of July 21, 1932						282,825,766.70	282,825,766.70		282,825,766.70
Other									33,304,291.67
Export-Import Bank of Washington		$1,250,000.00					1,250,000.00	3,295.88	1,246,704.12
Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation	150,000,000.00						150,000,000.00		150,000,000.00
Administration for Industrial Recovery		19,305,326.46	$4,992,511.80				24,297,838.26	[5] 136.79	24,240,944.25
Tennessee Valley Authority		50,000,000.00	25,000,000.00				75,000,000.00		75,000,000.00
Revolving funds (net): Agricultural aid: Farm Credit Administration	57,138,333.15	59,489,199.55	85,373,148.97	$16,884,200.31		[7] 386,651,631.56	605,536,513.54	[5] 7,133,842.91	559,700,139.79
Public works:
Loans and grants to States, municipalities, etc		585,665,641.97	94,396,915.89	313,339,437.74			993,401,995.60	70,071,329.87	752,468,396.71
Loans to railroads
Total	2,691,259,030.96	3,170,423,415.29	1,289,885,337.81	[9] 8,598,720,035.85	$3,447,001,677.13	[1] 2,173,498,472.81	21,370,787,969.85	2,088,251,880.81	17,257,403,926.91
Unallocated funds		401,058.74	1,467.33	2,304,080.12			2,706,606.19
Grand total	2,691,259,030.96	3,170,824,474.03	1,289,886,805.14	8,601,024,115.97	[10] 3,447,001,677.13	2,173,498,472.81	21,373,494,576.04	2,088,251,880.81	17,257,403,926.91

[1] Exclusive of $500,000,000 allocated to Work Relief program under Emergency Relief Administration of 1935.
[2] The appropriation of $950,000,000, provided in the act of Feb. 15, 1934, was allocated by the President as follows: Federal Emergency Relief Administration, $605,000,000, of which $131,542.23 has been transferred to the Emergency Relief Appropriation and $7,033.29 carried to the surplus fund of the Treasury; Civil Works Administration, $345,000,000, of which amount $7,570,000 has been transferred to the Emergency Relief Appropriation, $5,218,250 transferred to the Employees' Compensation Commission, and $17,689.99 carried to the surplus fund of the Treasury.
[3] Checks-issued basis.
[4] Includes $9,000,000 transferred from the additional loan fund, Public Works Administration.
[5] Expenditures unclassified, deduct.
[6] Includes $700,000 allocated for savings and loan promotion as authorized by sec. 11 of the act of Apr. 27, 1934.
[7] Includes $200,000,000 capital stock of Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation.
[8] Excess of credits, deduct.
[9] Includes $500,000,000 referred to in footnote 1.
[10] Excludes $18,000,000 statutory allocation to the War Department under act of June 11, 1938, expenditures of which will be included under general classification, and includes transfers from the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1937 as follows: Interior Department, $2,660,448; Farm Security Administration, $22,803,083; and Works Progress Administration, $27,633,146.13; and from the additional loan fund, Public Works Administration, $9,000,000.

About one-third of that amount, or about $7,000,000,000, has gone to W. P. A. Never has it made an accounting to anybody. Other Government agencies go to the Bureau of the Budget annually, appear before their examiners and investigators, lay down their administrative expenses, lay down an accounting of where they have spent the money and what they have done with it, and the Bureau of the Budget goes over it. Frequently, and more frequently than not, it makes curtailments here and curtailments there and restrictions here and restrictions there, but not so with W. P. A. The Budget hearing with W. P. A. consists of a little conference of several gentlemen gathered around the table to decide on the amount to ask of Congress, and when a legislator charged with the duty of trying to see to it that there is orderly consideration when money is to be taken out of the Treasury, dares to stand up and demand an accounting from this agency, his motives are questioned and there is some question raised about whether he should dare challenge this agency.

Let us look for a moment at the administrative expense of W. P. A., which is approximately $60,000,000 a year—I shall insert the table in the RECORD.

TABLE 2.—Federal expenditures for W. P. A. and N. Y. A. administrative expense, by objects of expenditure—Monthly, July 1938 to January 1939

[Checks issued as reported by U. S. Treasury Department]

Object of expenditure	1938						1939
	July	August	September	October	November	December	January
Total	$4,450,384.31	$6,657,578.01	$6,168,562.58	$5,941,677.34	$6,161,144.32	$6,748,509.96	$5,788,716.44
Personal services	3,621,100.69	5,562,868.90	5,062,267.46	4,827,662.42	4,998,820.53	5,530,206.35	4,547,597.66
Supplies and materials	153,357.29	177,738.40	164,820.70	146,593.62	145,969.42	169,291.31	187,037.46
Rent	97,669.34	134,301.09	166,913.38	143,162.41	107,757.40	169,471.90	150,128.73
Equipment	[1] 5,090.09	22,623.86	21,682.71	19,331.87	25,458.59	16,957.55	10,492.90
Buildings	102,759.43	111,677.23	145,230.67	123,830.54	142,248.81	152,514.35	139,635.88
Construction, maintenance, and repair contracts	911.25	1,175.14	989.02	1,455.73	1,959.01	1,059.20	1,364.79
Contractual services	528,542.37	730,958.70	702,381.45	789,309.59	785,663.61	834,089.03	845,341.63
Communication	62,277.95	149,602.78	153,852.64	156,859.22	146,456.93	120,940.72	150,174.22
Travel, including subsistence	438,112.98	481,952.56	494,481.23	528,534.80	530,749.05	562,847.37	488,929.62
Transportation of things	6,864.30	7,678.47	9,438.18	7,100.63	24,585.81	34,131.27	30,500.62
Printing and binding	10,606.95	60,752.13	15,544.12	52,989.79	43,980.10	87,376.62	115,582.77
Publication of notices		[1] 388.43				41.01
Heat, light, power, water, and electricity	15,434.22	13,794.51	15,136.67	21,083.27	18,862.91	16,288.21	24,238.74
Other	[1] 4,754.03	17,566.66	13,928.61	22,741.88	21,028.81	12,463.83	35,915.66
Equipment purchased	48,803.37	50,535.78	71,190.57	33,493.57	61,024.35	44,392.17	57,246.12

[1] Credit figures reflect adjustments of prior charges.

Over $5,000,000 a month. Let us look at a few of the items. Travel and subsistence for January—and this is typical—$488,929 for W. P. A.; communications, telephone, and telegraph for January $150,000, and so on down the line.

Now, by comparison the administrative expense of W. P. A. is more than the administrative expense of the following eight agencies, and listen to them: The Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Civil Service Commission, the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Railroad Retirement Board, the Federal Trade Commission, the Federal Power Commission, and the Social Security Board.

Dealing, as it does, with about 3,000,000 unemployed people, its expenses are more than twice as much as the Social Security Board, which has an office in every State and in every city and in every hamlet and deals with millions and millions of people who are candidates for public assistance under the social-security program.

Let us look for a moment at a number of these unjustifiable administrative expenses. They have traveling exhibits going over the country exhibiting what and for what reason? Showing the wares of W. P. A. and glorifying W. P. A.

Well, I am quite willing to admit that they have done many fine things. I say this seriously, and unquestionably it is so. I do not question the sincerity or the good intentions of the people at the head of it, but I do challenge their administrative procedure. Now, exhibiting what? A dignified showing of the art products, the products of labor that W. P. A. has produced would be quite in order, but why send an exhibit off to Miami right in the height of the season at Miami, and was it just a coincidence that it moved on to New Orleans right when the Mardi Gras was going on? [Laughter.] And why go to the city of New York and pass by the Government building that we put up there to house the exhibits of Government activities, and go around the corner and build a $250,000 building, a permanent building, in which to show W. P. A. Why, this is to be quite a building. At the right of the main building will be a 299-seat theater, complete with a revolving stage and a motion-picture projection booth in which the Federal theater project will present a series of 45-minute plays. Also there is to be an open court, 126 feet long and 80 feet wide, with shade trees and benches and gravel walks and flower beds and fountains, and so forth. [Laughter.] It sounds like a description of King Solomon's Temple, does it not? [Laughter.]

Then there is to be a staff of supervisory personnel. For what purpose? Why, Mr. Chairman, I do not know how you feel about it, but in our great land of boasted liberty, freedom, and equality of opportunity I am not particularly proud that our country has to support so many of our citizens who cannot care for themselves. Seems as if there is something radically wrong. Why glorify—why parade it in front of the public in that sort of way? Gentlemen may have their own answer for it.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Virginia has again expired.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 minutes more. It just happens that this exhibit building in New York, built out of relief funds—mind you, relief funds that we appropriated to feed hungry people, and to give employment to men who have little children——

A MEMBER. Under what authorization?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Oh, you do not have to have any authorization for it. They have wide authority under W. P. A., and I advise gentlemen not to challenge it, else you will not be exactly right in some quarters. In the world's fair in New York City there are only to be a few permanent buildings. The others will be taken down when the fair is over. The W. P. A. exhibit building is to be a permanent building, and at the end of the world's fair is to be donated, gratis, to the city park system of the State of New York. Do you gentlemen have any nice buildings in the parks down in your districts which the W. P. A. has constructed and donated to your city? If you have, you are fortunate.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. O Mr. Chairman, I know the gentleman wants to be fair. I think he should make this observation that the construction of this building does not entail a single penny more than the money allotted for W. P. A. purposes in New York State. Is not that correct?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Paying for the construction of the building and the materials in it out of relief funds and then giving it to the city of New York as a permanent structure is an outrageous diversion of relief funds. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I find in the Cleveland Plain Dealer where we not only send traveling exhibits but where we are not failing to look after the welfare and appearance of the fair sex, because you will find in the hearings a little article that I inserted, which shows that about $100,000 of relief funds out there have been allocated to fixing up a beauty parlor project in Cleveland. But that is not all. The people must be amused. Out in Chicago the W. P. A. inaugurated a Negro opera company to swing the Mikado. The Gilbert and Sullivan operas have always been to me something like old lavender and lace. They come down out of the past as a sort of blessing, because I remember them way back in other years, and somehow I shudder a little bit at swinging them but I say to my friends over here that I might not protest so much the W. P. A. swinging the Mikado, but I do protest the W. P. A. swinging the Democratic Party along with it. They organized in Chicago a troupe to jazz the Mikado, and it was a big success from a theatrical standpoint. Box office receipts rolled in and, being ambitious to show off this achievement of W. P. A., they decided to move on to more fertile fields, and announced that they would open on Broadway. The theatrical people on Broadway did not like that. So they opened overtures, and you will find in the hearings the absolute, uncontradicted testimony of one of our colleagues that this troupe of W. P. A. workers were offered private employment, not at relief wages but at regular theatrical wages, both in Chicago and New York, and that they refused it, and they are now playing in New York, and no one has yet explained how they got around the plain mandate of section 7, House Joint Resolution 83, which we passed a few weeks ago which provides that any W. P. A. worker who refuses bona fide employment offered to him at reasonable wages shall be stricken from the rolls.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. No; I would rather go ahead.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Virginia has again expired.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I shall take 5 minutes more. But let us go on away from the light and the humorous. However, I cannot yet leave the great city of New York—the wonderful, beloved metropolitan city, one of the greatest in the world. I love to go there and enjoy the bright lights and the fine hospitality of its citizens, but what a wonderful, blessed opportunity there is to be had under W. P. A.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I cannot refuse to yield to my colleague on the committee.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. How does the amount of money New York State received and the taxes it pays into the Federal Government compare with that paid in by other States?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Oh, I make no particular complaint about that.

Mr. TABER. If the gentleman will yield, it exceeds it.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. It probably does. But that is not what I am complaining about. I am complaining now about taking money that this Congress appropriates for needy people and shamefully and outrageously diverting it to other purposes.

There is written into the law a provision that the W. P. A. must pay the prevailing rate of wage, meaning that a mechanic or a carpenter or a laborer or an electrician or an ironworker, if he is employed on W. P. A., is paid the prevailing rate of wage of his craft, but he is not permitted to work but a certain number of hours per month. Thereby it holds down the amount of money he may ultimately earn in any month. That is what is done in your district, unless you are from New York. Down in your district your carpenter and your mechanic may make $1.50 or $2 an hour on W. P. A., the prevailing rate of wage, but when he has earned $75 or $80 a month he must quit work and somebody else takes up the tools of trade in order that they may have an opportunity. Not so in New York. We found since we closed our hearings that on the North Beach Airport of New York, being rushed to completion on account of the world's fair, 499 electricians receiving $2 per hour were permitted to work a total time until their wages per month were $260. Six hundred and forty-eight structural ironworkers receiving $1.93 an hour were permitted to work a total of 20 extra days per man per month and received $152 a month instead of $85, the security wage. Six hundred and ninety ornamental ironworkers are working extra time and drawing $121 a month instead of $85 a month, which is the security wage. On the W. P. A. exhibit building 20 electricians drawing $2 per hour are permitted to earn $240 a month each; a total of 2,058 W. P. A. workers drawing this amount of money, and if they had held them to the security wage in your city of New York, instead of giving employment to 2,000 it would have given employment to 4,295 at the security rate of wage. That is what I complain about. I say that W. P. A. has no right to so administer its funds and then come back to the Congress and say, "Unless you appropriate more money in New York City we will have to turn them out." [Applause.] Why do they say they do that? Because they are in a hurry to build the airport. I want to insert in the RECORD a letter from Colonel Harrington wherein he says:

The wishes of the mayor of New York in this connection have been given consideration—in view of the fact that the city of New York is contributing approximately $15,000,000 of its own funds to the project.

[Laughter]—

WORKS PROGRESS ADMINISTRATION,
Washington, D. C., March 28, 1939.

(Via special messenger.)

The Honorable CLIFTON A. WOODRUM,
House of Representatives.

MY DEAR MR. WOODRUM: The following is in response to your request of this morning for information concerning an article which was published in the New York Sun of Wednesday, March 22, under the headline "W. P. men get $8 to $16 a day in airport job." The major portion of the article is devoted to the project for the construction of the North Beach Airport in the Borough of Queens.

The common-labor rate, which this article states to be $1.03⅛ an hour, is actually 50 cents an hour. The other hourly rates quoted in the article—namely, for steamfitters, plasterers, bricklayers, carpenters, cement masons, structural ironworkers, and painters—are correct. These are the prevailing rates for these trades in New York City, which this Administration is required to pay under the provisions of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938. You may recall that I have testified before the Committee on Appropriations in opposition to this policy.

The exemptions from monthly security wage-scale earnings which have been granted on this project are as follows:

(a) Four hundred and ninety-nine electricians are working five 6-hour days per week.

(b) Six hundred and forty-eight structural ironworkers are working 5 extra 7-hour days per month for a period of 4 months, or a total of 20 extra days per man.

(c) Six hundred and ninety-one ornamental ironworkers are working 3 extra 7-hour days per month for a period of 4 months, or a total of 12 extra days per man.

The total number of persons on the project who are earning more than the monthly security wage is 5.3 percent, or a little more than 1 man in 20.

The total number of workers on the project, which the article states as 19,435, is approximately correct. However, the project is operating on a three-shift basis and this represents the total number of persons who work at any time during a month. The number at work at one time on the project is about one-fifth of this total. Incidentally, this project has worked on a three-shift basis since its inception. The reason for working the project on a three-shift basis and for granting the security wage exemptions enumerated above has been an endeavor to place the airport in operation as soon after the opening of the New York World's Fair as possible. The wishes of the mayor of New York in this connection have been given consideration, in view of the fact that the city of New York is contributing approximately $15,000,000 of its own funds to the project. The security wage exemptions which are now granted will begin to expire about May 1 and will not be renewed.

Two other projects are mentioned in the article, the Queensboro Bridge, a paving job, and the construction of a building at the New York World's Fair to house a W. P. A. exhibit. The facts concerning these are as follows:

On the Queensboro Bridge paving job 300 structural ironworkers were permitted to work 4½ extra days per month for a period of 2 months. Their earnings for this period therefore exceeded the security wage. This job was finished in December 1938. It consisted in repaving the upper deck of Queensboro Bridge between Manhattan and the Borough of Queens. This bridge carries very heavy traffic, amounting to approximately 110,000 vehicles per day, and it was therefore desired to complete the paving in the minimum of time and with the least possible interruption of traffic.

On the W. P. A. building at the world's fair 20 electricians are working 6 hours per day for 20 days a month and are therefore exceeding the security wage.

I trust that this covers the information that you desire, but if there is anything further concerning these projects which you would like to know, please do not hesitate to call upon me.

Sincerely yours,

F. C. HARRINGTON,
Administrator.

Now, what has happened there? That is not a project to help needy people. That is not a project to give employment to men who want to buy food. It is a project to build an airport for New York in time for the world's fair. That is what I object to. I do not believe the Congress meant to appropriate money for those purposes. [Applause.] Now, what is the answer?

On February 6 I introduced House Joint Resolution 151, which, in brief, provides $1,120,000,000 for the next fiscal year for relief. One hundred and twenty million dollars is placed at the disposal of the President to be used in real emergencies, for which he is to account to Congress. A billion dollars is to be used for unemployment relief through a system of grants in aid to States, under appropriate safeguards and restrictions. The W. P. A. is continued with its name changed, however, to the Unemployment Relief Administration. Its Washington personnel of approximately 2,000 is restricted to 1,500, and its field personnel, which now numbers approximately 35,000, is restricted to 5,000, this set-up to be used for supervisory purposes. It prohibits the employment of aliens, carries safeguards against political activities, and takes all heavy construction projects away from W. P. A. I hope that these suggestions will receive the consideration of the Congress, as I believe it has the form, the foundation, and framework of a relief policy which will give the Federal Government a liberal part in this problem and yet avoid some of the pitfalls in which we find ourselves.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM] has again expired.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 15 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, last January we appropriated ¢725,000,000 to take care of W. P. A. requirements to the end of the fiscal year. At that time we appropriated sufficient funds to permit of the carrying on of this activity. Just so you may have a picture of some of the things that have been done and some of the ways they have been done, I am going to call attention at this moment to the number of people upon W. P. A. at different times.

From January 14 through the 4th of March there was an increase in the number. Notwithstanding the fact that the statute required separating the aliens from the rolls, the rolls were built up. In many cases they went back on the rolls 6 years, to people who had been denied employment 6 years ago, because they could not qualify for relief, and had never applied since, and they built up the rolls so that they could tear them down just as we were approaching the consideration of this bill. You will find the figures that relate to that on pages 4 and 26 of the hearings.

But they have a lot of things in here that are absolutely unconscionable. We have a press section here in Washington of only 12. We have an information section and the two of them together run about 230. A man named Niles is head of the information service and he, at $9,500 a year, is detailed over to the Department of Commerce where he spends his time—not upon the work of the Department.

We have exhibits sent all over the country in the line of propaganda. We had an exhibit in Paris at the International Exposition to advertise the distress of America. [Laughter.] We had an exhibit in London at the International Exhibition a year before, to advertise the distress of America. We have traveling exhibits going around the country for propaganda purposes. We have theater projects galore. If you will look on pages 128 to 137 of the hearings, you will see 9 pages of 1,200 plays that have been produced by W. P. A., many of which are going on at this time. The average cost of putting on each of those plays has been approximately $40,000 each. The total receipts run about $1,900,000, or $1,500 each.

I was informed last night of a case where a party had run a show up around New York in the summertime a year ago last summer, and just as soon as the show was finished the whole outfit, who had never been on relief or had any relief status at all, went to work for the Federal theaters project as W. P. A. employees, paid for with relief money. When this party tried to start the show last summer they were all on W. P. A. and have been ever since, and they would not leave W. P. A. to go to work at a regular job, and they are still on W. P. A. None of them have ever been legitimate actors.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. TABER. Not at this time.

Now, there is a man named Alsberg; and if you will turn to page 211 of the hearings, you will see that he has a good deal to say on this writers project. You will see where he wrote a letter to the editor of the Nation indicating that the convicts must be organized into a union to protect the rights of the convicts in prison.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Why does not the gentleman be fair? Why does he not state the date of the letter? The letter was written back in 1929.

Mr. TABER. The letter was written back a little ways. It is dated October 11 and was printed in 1929—not so far back; but the man was full grown and had probably as sane ideas as he has now. [Laughter.]

And then there is a man named Evans. He is the head of some of these projects where they go out into the country and get up a catalog of the things of historical interest in the community. That gentleman was dropped as an instructor at Princeton University several years ago because of his communistic tendencies.

Millions of dollars is being spent annually upon this kind of stuff. Money is being wasted so fast that it is a menace to every thinking man in America. They tell us right now in the hearings—if you want to see it, it is on page 50—that about 5 percent of the 3,000,000 who are on W. P. A. employment—and this is the statement of Colonel Harrington, not mine—have no relief status at all. These are not administrative employees. This means there are 150,000 on the rolls, according to Colonel Harrington's own admission, that ought not to be there. If you get rid of these 150,000, according to the letter Colonel Harrington wrote to Senator VANDENBERG—and it is published in the RECORD, at pages 3337-3338, under date of March 27—you will reduce the number down to the figure 2,450,000, which is 150,000 below the 2,600,000, the number set up by the colonel to represent the reduction on Monday next; and there is no question about any bills passing the Congress before Monday next. That number cannot be exceeded.

If these ineligibles are taken off the roll, you will have only 2,450,000 remaining and you will see by reading the letter I have referred to that W. P. A. will have money enough to go along with that 2,450,000 on the rolls without the slightest trouble to the end of the year. All that is necessary is to get rid of those who have no business on the rolls.

Colonel Harrington admits that they have money enough to go to June 7 on figures that will average 2,800,000 for the months of May and June or way beyond the 2,600,000 that goes into effect on Monday, and we are approaching that period and season of the year when W. P. A. employment, in the interest of decency ought to be reduced, and in the interest of honesty to the taxpayers ought to be reduced.

We have got to handle the relief problem honestly. Probably we have got to go on with W. P. A. another 3 months, but we ought not to go along with it any longer than that because we ought to get a forward looking set-up that will clear the rolls of those who do not belong on relief. [Applause.]

Even to carry the proposition along on the basis the President asked for in January when he sent his message up here and when the item was considered, if we go along on the basis that was set up at that time, which appears month by month in Colonel Harrington's letter to Senator VANDENBERG that I have referred to, we would have at least $45,000,000 left if we should appropriate $100,000,000, and if we get rid of those who have no business on the rolls and reduce them another $150,000 a month there is absolutely no question that we do not need a dollar. If you appropriate $100,000,000 the way the thing stands here, there is not any question in the world that we will have $45,000,000 left at the end of the year.

Why should we appropriate money that they themselves say is not needed? I cannot understand why we should go along and appropriate $100,000,000 on the kind of set-up that is presented here. There is no excuse for raising the amount carried by this bill. Anyone who is a friend of W. P. A. will try to persuade W. P. A. to get rid of its ridiculous activities, of the 1,215 shows it has been running, of the exhibits, of that world fair activity in which they are spending W. P. A. money, and all those ridiculous things that they have been doing. On top of that they have 32,000 administrative employees, an absolutely ridiculous number.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. KNUTSON. In view of the fact that the hearings became available only yesterday, I ask the gentleman whether or not the committee inquired into the number of golf courses that have been put up all over the United States by W. P. A.? My reason for asking this is that I was down in Florida the other day and I saw three or four beautiful golf courses, beside each of which was a W. P. A. project sign. I am wondering just how many they have built all over the country.

Mr. TABER. I may say to the gentleman from Minnesota that that was one of the items we did not cover. We had no lead on it and we did not know about it.

I realize, and I am sure the rest of the Members must realize, that it is an absolute impossibility for anybody to fathom the enormity of their operations. They are spread out into so many things that are absolutely ridiculous that it is absolutely impossible to keep track of them.

Mr. KNUTSON. Can the gentleman give the House any information as to the number of sanitary outhouses that have been distributed over the country by the W. P. A.?

Mr. TABER. Upward of $200,000,000 worth; and it is customary after they have completed such a project to plant rambler rosebushes all around them so as to make them more attractive to passers-by on the highway.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. The gentleman realizes, I am sure, that the sponsor of a project is basically the person that determines the nature of the project; so we cannot blame the W. P. A. for the nature of projects sponsored by others.

Mr. TABER. These rackets I am speaking of have no sponsor at all but are paid for in cash by the Government; and the gentleman ought to realize that W. P. A. ought not to approve projects that are not meritorious; and the longer we go on with Members of Congress apologizing for absolutely wasteful and ridiculous things that are done the worse the W. P. A. situation is going to be.

We are not friends of the W. P. A. if we permit such things to go on, even if sponsors have endorsed them, because the longer that sort of thing goes on the more discredit will ultimately be brought upon the W. P. A.

Mr. Chairman, that is the situation. I hope the House will not appropriate $100,000,000 to be wasted by the W. P. A., because it is way beyond their needs and it is absolutely ridiculous to appropriate such amount at this time.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to insert a table in my remarks which has been prepared to indicate the operations of the President's proposal in January of this year.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. TABER. I submit the following memoranda and table pursuant to the above request:

An analysis of relief requirements according to the President's January message, for the period ending June 30, 1939, on the basis of an average of 2,870,000 W. P. A. employees

The original recommendation contemplated an average number of relief workers for the 5-month period, February to June, to cost		$875,000,000
In practice, there was charged to funds previously appropriated the cost of relief workers for the first week of February; such charge was		45,750,000
Leaving		829,250,000
After the passage of Public Res. No. 1, appropriating $725,000,000, savings not previously contemplated, ensued as follows:
Removal from rolls of persons not in actual need	$16,282,425
Removal from rolls of 30,000 aliens	7,015,000
		23,297,425
Thus reducing original needs to		805,952,575
There has been appropriated		725,000,000
Now proposing a further additional appropriation of		100,000,000
		825,000,000
To which should be aded the free cash carry-over on Jan. 31, 1939		26,659,030
Making a total available of		851,659,030
Deduct the reduced needed amount as above		805,952,575
And there is left a margin or cushion of		45,706,455

There is no excuse for that amount because now if the letter of Colonel Harrington to Senator VANDENBERG of March 24, 1939, is followed and the 5 percent, or 150,000 nonrelief employees on W. P. A. eliminated and the number reduced by that amount there is enough money to carry through June 30, next.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON].

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I rise to call attention to one of the most brilliant chapters in American history—not a story of war and carnage and devastation, but a victory of peace, a record of salvaged humanity, of rehabilitated industry, of national stability, of which any representative government might be proud. I rise to call attention, Mr. Chairman, to the achievement of an administration in which every follower of the principles of Thomas Jefferson may well take pride and which 100 years from now will be looked upon as one of the most remarkable developments in the economic history of this age and of this Republic.

It is not the first time a Democratic administration has been called upon to meet great emergencies. A Democratic administration conducted the World War and handled millions of men and billions of dollars so successfully that when hostile committees of this House, bent on making political capital out of the war, spent $157,000 trying to impeach that record and traveled all over the United States and Europe at Government expense, with a microscope and a fine-toothed comb they could not find a single corrupt dollar or a single man against whom they could bring a charge or prefer any charge whatever. While I deplore war, I am proud as an American citizen of that splendid record of efficiency and integrity.

Under a like responsibility, Mr. Chairman, we have spent $21,000,000,000 to meet an acute emergency and we are disposing of it effectively and with dispatch. And again a committee of the House has employed every resource in an effort to find something to criticize. They have met and adjourned, and met and adjourned until they have exhausted every witness and until every inquisitor on the committee has asked every question he could think of and then has read long lists of questions prepared by everybody outside the committee who wanted information. And now when we are prepared for the great denouement—after all the flambuoyant previews and all the billboard announcements to the newspapers—the two ranking critics of the administration and the W. P. A., who have just spoken—instead of reporting sensational disclosures—the corruption and misappropriation of funds and widespread venality we had been lead to expect, tell us here in strident tones of a little building at the world's fair, of a few dozen actors in a Chicago show, of an airport in New York. The mountain has labored and brought forth a mouse.

After we have spent $21,000,000,000; after we have provided employment for millions of American citizens; after we have saved untold thousands of American families from suffering and privation, if not actual starvation; after we have put hope back into the eyes of men, and courage back in the hearts of women, and laughter on the lips of children; after we have saved every city from tumult and riot and perhaps the Nation itself from the most serious consequences, all they can find to denounce, in the 4 years, in the billions of expenditures, in the entire United States of America, is a show, an exhibition building, and an airport. It is the most astonishing anticlimax in the annals of congressional investigations.

Now, Mr. Chairman, what is the occasion for all this tempest in a teapot? The unemployment problem is an old one. Even back in 1929 when the industry of the country was running at top speed and production attained an all-time high there were still 2,000,000 unemployed. In 1933 it was 15,000,000 and today it is 11,000,000 people—people able to work, people anxious and willing to work, but people for whom no work could be found, people whose families through no fault of their own were without food, clothing, and shelter. The situation had to be met. And this administration met it—met it so effectively that we have today a calm, orderly, confident people, whose daily mounting prosperity is an answer to every question asked here today.

It was amusing to hear the gentleman from Virginia, standing like Horatius at the bridge, exclaim dramatically, "We stand by the position which we took and we will not yield!" Why, my friends, they yield when they come on this floor. Their very presence here is a plea of mea culpa. The President of the United States said the situation required $875,000,000. The committee, apparently for political reasons and without considering the merits of the proposition, or at least without submitting evidence to support the statement, said he did not need $150,000,000 of the amount.

They stood on that proposition. Now, they come today to admit they were wrong. The very introduction of this resolution concedes they were wrong and the President was right. Like that illustrious character in Don Juan:

> A little while she strove and much repented,
> And whispering, "I will ne'r consent"—consented.

Now, they take a new stand. The President assures the Congress $150,000,000 is needed, and all the testimony adduced before the committee corroborates that estimate. But the gentlemen now say only $100,000,000 is needed. And they are just as wrong and the President is just as right this time as the last time.

In this connection it has been said here that the President's figures were arrived at unscientifically—a surprising statement, in view of the statistical data submitted by the Bureau of the Budget. But let us compare the method by which the $150,000,000 was determined. As has been related, half a dozen members of the subcommittee got together and added and divided their respective bids until $150,000,000 was reached. They might with equal consistency have matched dollars or rolled dice to determine the cut.

But let us take up categorically the bill of complaints in the order advanced here this afternoon.

The first charge is that when men were taken off the rolls other men were put on. Certainly. That is the purpose for which W. P. A. was created. Over 850,000 men have been certified as eligible but have been denied work because, as was stated in the President's message of February 7, the number on employment was to be reduced to 3,000,000 men for February and March. The 850,000 certified and waiting employment is only a fraction of the eligibles.

Many States discontinued certification when the limit of 3,000,000 men was reached and the estimate of the W. P. A. today is that there are not less than 2,000,000 men who are as eligible to employment as any who are on the rolls.

As a matter of fact the reduction from $875,000,000 to $725,000,000, with its accompanying legislative restrictions, even if we now allow the full $150,000,000 has greatly handicapped the work and occasioned a heavy loss. Whereas W. P. A. testified they would have separated approximately 7 percent the restrictions held them to a maximum of 5 percent. The uncertainty as to the amount ultimately available prevented the adoption of long-time plans, an important consideration in such work, and lost large sums in sponsor's funds as local authorities could not constantly revise plans and the W. P. A. had to stand losses occasioned by such changes. The inexcusable delay of the subcommittee in holding hearings and reaching a decision has caused the W. P. A. to repeatedly modify its program, and letters and telegrams changing instructions have gone to State administrators three or four times in the last 2 weeks which would have been unnecessary if the committee had not delayed its hearings and its action on the Budget recommendation.

On February 7, and again on March 14, the President dispatched urgent messages to Congress explaining the situation and the need for prompt action. The subcommittee refused to hold hearings until long after the Budget estimate was submitted, and when they met adjourned early and adjourned over days on which they might have met, and after hearings were concluded refused to meet and adopt a report. While the Works Progress Administration and the Nation waited, while the jobs and bread of people all over the country hung in the balance, they would not say "yes", and they would not say "no." The Director repeatedly called attention to the dead line on which he would have to telegraph instructions to fire the first 400,000 men. We could have disposed of the whole matter one way or the other 2 weeks ago in ample time for the Administrator to adjust his program before reaching the dead line; and here, on March 29, 10 days after hearings were finished and a 2-hour session would have brought the measure on the floor, we are just taking it up.

And right here may I refer to the ability and efficiency with which Colonel Harrington, the Administrator of the Works Progress Administration, is handling that difficult position. The dignity and impartiality which characterize his work, and his appearance before the committee, his grasp of the problems of his office, and the reduction which he is effecting in personnel, salaries, and overhead reflect credit on him and the Army service which he adorns. It is significant that in all the extended inquiry by the committee there was never a reflection, either express or implied, on him or his work. I am certain every member of the committee will join me in heartiest commendation of the record he is making as Administrator of W. P. A., and if there is any position in the Governent that is too hot for an ordinary man to hold that is the position.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I much regret that my time is limited so that I cannot yield, as much as I would like to.

And then they complain, both in the report and on the floor, of travel and communication expense, an item which was fully justified by Colonel Harrington, as the hearings will show. On the contrary, they were never able to point to money spent for either purpose without proper authorization and ample justification. Even at that, such details are for the General Accounting Office rather than for Congress, and the reference to such items is evidently in the absence of anything of real consequence to criticize. Of course, the amount when mentioned alone is a large sum, but when considered in relation to a business spending $6,000,000 a day and covering continental and insular United States, it is small in comparison. The real economy with which W. P. A. is being administered is shown by the fact that of every $100 spent only $3.50 is spent for administration. The law allows 5 percent, but only 3½ percent is used. The W. P. A. is proportionately one of the most economically administered of all the emergency activities of the Government.

And then let us take up that much-discussed New York building "costing $300,000." (The actual cost to W. P. A. was $250,000, but we will let that go.)

All over the country community buildings, auditoriums, and similar municipal facilities are being built with relief funds.

This is a permanent building and comes out of the quota of the State of New York. In addition to the off-site costs of material, it has provided useful work during its construction to an average of 350 men in a city faced with one of the Nation's most serious unemployment problems.

The exhibit consists of W. P. A. demonstration projects normally conducted by the W. P. A. in New York City. They are projects which would otherwise have been carried on elsewhere in the city and are made by certified W. P. A. workers, including needy women. The exhibition of every phase of W. P. A. work either by projects or photographs is characteristic of W. P. A. The people who pay for this work should know just how the money is being spent, and the W. P. A. is throwing open its entire program to the public at the world's fair, where more people will have the opportunity to see it than in any other location which could be selected. W. P. A. has nothing to conceal. Its records are open and its work is open and it accounts for every dollar and justifies the expenditure to all who will visit this $300,000 building in New York this year.

It is significant that the committee in commenting on the vast building program carried on by the W. P. A. in every part of the country should make no note of the thousands of schools, hospitals, bridges, public buildings, and other useful and permanent structures constructed by W. P. A. and should be able to find in all that huge program only one building to criticize, the $300,000 building in New York. That is a pretty good record. If W. P. A. can hit the bull's-eye $99\frac{99}{100}$ percent like that every time, the critics are welcome to the one one-hundredth percent, although the New York building is more than justified. What other business of like magnitude has that high a record for immunity to criticism?

And the criticism of the beauty project is just as far beside the mark. Does not the committee know that the beauty and cosmetic business ranks as one of the major industries of the country? Its total business grosses an enormous amount, and when W. P. A. prepares men and women to carry on the industry and provides work for operators who are unemployed, it is contributing to rehabilitation and recovery as much as if it had found them employment in the construction of a road or the erection of a building.

But let us consider the specific instance to which the gentleman from Virginia refers, and which he says absorbed "$100,000 of relief funds." Here is a telegram in response to references to the item in the hearings before the committee:

COLUMBUS, OHIO, March 31, 1939.

CLARENCE CANNON,
House of Representatives:

Recent allegations referring to unwise use of Federal funds in Cleveland State hospital projects absolutely false. Actual expenditure for beauty operators less than $2,000 a year. Newspaper reports erroneous. The therapeutic projects in welfare institutions are much needed and show a wise and careful expenditure of money.

J. FREMONT BATEMAN,
Commissioner of Mental Diseases,
Department of Public Welfare, State of Ohio.

The telegram is from the most authoritative source from which information could be secured and speaks for itself. The committee spokesman said the amount used was $100,000. The Department of Public Welfare of the State of Ohio says it was $2,000, and fully justifies even that meager expenditure. It is the usual exaggeration of unimportant trivialities—$2,000 out of a total of $21,000,000,000—and misinterpreted at that.

And the gentleman speaks with indignation of the swing Mikado. His artistic sensibilities are offended by this vulgar music of the hoi polloi. The committee proposes to establish itself a self-constituted censor of musical tastes, and suggests abolishing low-brow attractions of this character and resurrecting Lavender and Old Lace, to inculcate a classical appreciation of music among the masses. Evidently the box office point of view is of no consequence as the committee entirely overlooks the fact that the Mikado has been a money-making project from the first and is taking in more money every night than it costs the Government. The production of the Mikado is not costing the W. P. A. or the Government a penny. Instead it is a source of revenue. They did not tell you that. They do not have that in their report.

And just as unfair and misleading is that statement that these actors have refused private employment. What is the truth about the matter? They were offered 2 weeks' employment—no more. Offered 2 weeks' employment by a producer who wanted to capitalize the remarkable popularity of the production built up by W. P. A., and tried to take over the show with the intention of discharging the troupe at the end of 2 weeks and substituting local talent with expensive costumes and scenery in a $3.30 show instead of the $1.10 show W. P. A. was putting on.

There are only two or three dozen people involved in the whole transaction out of 3,000,000 people on the W. P. A. rolls, and yet this is all the committee could find to criticize—a project that is more than paying its own way.

Let me add while we are on the subject, in response to the jibes which have been cast at the recreational projects, that they represent a business and a profession which probably contributes as much to the general welfare as any which have been recognized in the W. P. A. program. It would be a sad world in which to live if all entertainment and diversion, all joy and laughter, were taken out of it. Our insane asylums and psychopathic wards would be congested within 15 days. "Life is more than meat, and the body is more than raiment."

And the testimony of our beloved colleague Congressman BLOOM, of New York, who appeared before the committee as the representative of producers of New York City, was that there is no competition between this production and any other now showing or which might show in New York City. So much for that.

But the project on which the ranking members of the committee on both sides of the aisle wax particularly eloquent is the North Beach Airport of New York. And I know you will be surprised when you know the whole story.

Mr. CULLEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from New York, the ranking member of the Committtee on Ways and Means and the dean of the New York delegation.

Mr. CULLEN. Is not the gentleman in receipt of a telegram from the mayor of the city of New York, a telegram which I incorporated in my remarks in the RECORD today?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. I have a telegram from Mayor LaGuardia, the telegram to which the gentleman refers, and shall be glad to include it in my remarks. I thank the gentleman from New York [Mr. CULLEN] for calling attention to it. It is from Mayor LaGuardia, our former colleague, one of the sincerest and ablest men who ever sat on this floor. During his service here he numbered his personal friends by the number of Members of the House.

Now, I take it for granted, from all indications at this time, that you expect to come to Missouri in 1940 to select the next President of the United States. But if in some unfortunate and misguided moment you should be diverted elsewhere, of all those who have been mentioned as eligible for that high position, there is no one whose record for efficiency and integrity in public office entitles him to more serious consideration than Mayor LaGuardia, of New York.

Here is the telegram to which the gentleman from New York [Mr. CULLEN] refers—received this morning on my way over to the floor. No comment is necessary.

MARCH 29, 1939.

CLARENCE CANNON,
House of Representatives:

In reply to several inquiries from former colleagues, I am sending you information concerning North Beach Airport. This project is without doubt the largest undertaken by W. P. A. Everyone connected with it may well be proud of it. This includes the approval of the project, the design, engineering, and every man who worked on it. There have been many misrepresentations concerning it by petty politicians and disappointed landmongers, as well as incompetents who could not qualify for a job. The project and everything concerning it speaks for itself. In the first place, the relation between the United States Government and sponsors of W. P. A. projects was not at all followed here. The city's contribution is beyond any sponsor's contribution anywhere in the country.

For your information please be advised that the city has expended and authorized no less than $16,350,000. This is actual cash, all expended but about $1,350,000, already committed. I understand that it has been stated that workers are working 5 days a week regularly. This is on contract work for which the city is paying 100 percent, such as pile driving, foundations, bulkheads, and dredging. It is true that some of the skilled workers on W. P. A. are paid a dollar and a half an hour. That is not our fault. That is because Congress required all skilled mechanics to be paid the prevailing rate of wages, and it is necessary, therefore, to pay the prevailing rate as they exist and as certified in New York City.

As to overtime it is necessary in three trades to work extra hours in order that their work may keep pace with the forty-odd other trades involved in a construction of this magnitude. Electricians are working 5 days a week. Ornamental ironworkers are working 3 extra days a month, in other words, paying them the prevailing rate of wages as provided by act of Congress, they can work but 7 days a month within the maximum allowed. They are now working 3 extra days a month. The structural ironworkers are working 5 extra days a month. They can work but 12 days a month within the maximum allowed. We expect to open North Beach Airport before Congress adjourns and cordially invite critics and supporters to visit this great project.

I am sure every Member of the House will be proud of his contribution to this necessary addition to the national net of airports for commercial and defensive use. Incidentally the city received no direct benefit of contribution of Federal Government, for rentals and charges are calculated on actual city expenditures, and Government's contribution therefore reflecting in aid to subsidized air-mail and subsidized commercial aviation. Should you desire any additional information, will be glad to furnish it or will come down personally and answer any question any Member may desire to put. Regards to all.

F. H. LAGUARDIA, Mayor.

The city of New York itself is spending $16,350,000 on this project, covering thousands of times the small items mentioned by the representatives of the committee here this afternoon.

But a more important consideration—this is really a national project. It provides an indispensable facility to modern air traffic which is open to the service of every public and private air line operating in America. It provides needed facilities for trans-Atlantic and transcontinental air travel and, most pertinent of all just at this time, is constructed with especial reference to the needs of national defense and will be equipped to care for both military and naval aircraft in time of war.

Mr. SIROVICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. As much as I should like to yield to my good friend from New York, I hope he will excuse me just at this time. If he will defer his inquiry, I shall be glad to yield a little later.

Before I take up the last—and the only germane argument presented by the report of the committee—permit me to animadvert to the rather puzzling statement by the gentleman from Virginia to the effect that the administrative expenses of the W. P. A. were more than administrative expenses of eight other agencies which he listed. It is a peculiar suggestion, because there is no basis of comparison. It is as intelligible as if he had said one elephant is larger than six oranges. None of the eight agencies which he mentions do any construction work of any kind, and that is the business of the W. P. A. If you are going to compare by percentages, the only possible basis of comparison, if any, the eight agencies spend 100 percent in administrative expenses, while the W. P. A. spends only 3¼ percent. It is allowed 5 percent for administrative expenses under the law, but has steadily reduced its overhead and is still reducing it, until today it is barely 3¼ percent. How many private enterprises of anything like the same magnitude are operating on that close a margin? And it is heartening to know that the testimony before the committee shows that Colonel Harrington, since the first of the year, has reduced personnel, has reduced salaries, has reduced overhead, and is reducing the W. P. A. rolls. What finer comment can be made on administrative expenditure?

All this talk about taking money away from hungry children to pay overhead is in keeping with the rest of the large fund of apocryphal information adduced in this inquiry. Out of every $100 spent by W. P. A., only $3.25 is spent for administration, and even that small sum is constantly shrinking.

I might also refer, in passing, to the charge of political manipulation which the committee has not emphasized, but which has been made by others on the floor. It is only necessary to quote the following paragraph from the recent message of President Roosevelt:

> It is my belief that improper political practices can be eliminated only by the imposition of rigid statutory regulations and penalties by the Congress, and that this should be done. Such penalties should be imposed not only upon persons within the administrative organization of the Works Progress Administration but also upon outsiders who have in fact, in many instances, been the principal offenders in this regard. My only reservation in this matter is that no legislation should be enacted which will in any way deprive workers on the Works Progress Administration program of the civil rights to which they are entitled in common with other citizens.

And to refer the House to the order issued by Colonel Harrington under which every employee has been summarily divorced from political positions and political activities inconsonant with the most stringent construction of the functions and objectives of W. P. A. If any Member of the House will cite any instance of failure to observe this order to the letter, the recalcitrant will be fired in 24 hours. Charges and counter charges have been made by both parties in the past. Some of them were based on facts and some of them were not. But even then they were local excrescences for which the W. P. A. in its Nation-wide jurisdiction during its mushroom days could not reach. Today, with its standardized routine and its established Army efficiency, the situation is quite different, and unwarranted political activities will be dealt with promptly and effectively.

Now, Mr. Chairman, we come to the crux of the matter, the difference between $150,000,000 and $100,000,000, which is the real issue before the Congress. Let it be understood in the beginning that we are not appropriating dollars here so much as we are appropriating jobs, and, of course, back of the jobs, food and clothing for dependent families.

The report is strangely silent on the one fact which above all others is a determining factor in this discussion—the fact that W. P. A. is today employing hardly more than half the men who are eligible to the W. P. A. rolls and who comply with every qualification of those for whom the W. P. A. was created to serve. Mr. Howard Hunter, Deputy Administrator of W. P. A., said in a national broadcast, February 25, 1939, that in addition to those already certified there was still another million able-bodied people, anxious to work and with no employment, who had not even been certified. States have discontinued ccrtification and it was estimated last week that the number of eligibles whom the W. P. A. cannot take care of, but who are as much entitled to W. P. A. employment as any on the rolls was close to 2,000,000. And these are not bums or career men, all statements to the contrary notwithstanding. They have been in industry for years making good wages and now are thrown out in the streets while their families suffer. A sainted clergyman, looking at a man in the gutter said, "There but for the grace of God go I." We may well remember when we speak contemptuously of the unfortunate applicants for W. P. A. work, "There but for the grace of God go I." It is not a matter of skill or industry or sobriety; it is a matter of fortune or misfortune over which few of them have any control.

A new machine, an iron efficiency, a shift in the market for a particular product and the most provident may be out looking for another job with none to be had. If this appropriation is reduced from $150,000,000 to $100,000,000 not only will it be impossible to take on any of these extra 2,000,000 eligibles but many of those now on the rolls must be thrown out. What does that mean in concrete terms? I asked Colonel Harrington on two occasions, as the record will show, what it meant, and he said the only way they could reduce $5,000,000 was by firing breadwinners for whom no work was available in private industry for months to come, or to reduce the hours of labor or the rates of pay, which in brief meant less food on the table. And his statement has not been successfully challenged. What is the effect of reducing the food ration? Why, in the last year of President Hoover's administration he announced to the Nation after receiving the report of the White House conference on child health and protection, that 6,000,000 children in America were improperly nourished.

Secretary Wallace said over a Nation-wide radio hook-up on February 5:

> Malnutrition is widespread in America.
> Millions of American families do not have adequate diets.
> In spite of the great accomplishments of private and public effort to date, we have to admit the existence of malnutrition in millions of homes. If Government can make a genuine contribution toward solving this problem within the next few years, we shall have made one of the greatest steps forward in modern times.

The United States Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that one-tenth of the white families in all regions can afford only $1.25 to $1.87 a person per week for food, and such diets are necessarily lacking in indispensable elements.

The Department of Agriculture, in a release under date of February 26, says the diets of low-paid wage earners and low-salaried clerical workers, not to mention the unemployed, are deficient in needed minerals and vitamins.

Then I have here a report from a survey which shows that a surprising percentage of the students of the University of Missouri, who come from at least the middle-income families of the State, are suffering from some form of malnutrition.

And here is a representative letter from one of the most eminent physicians of St. Louis, a child specialist, who writes:

> As one who daily has the opportunity to see the effects of meager diets and poor living conditions on the children of the unemployed, I urge the adoption of measures to provide sufficient employment to meet the requirements of the next 2 or 3 months at least.

Mr. Chairman, an adult can endure a period of starvation and recover with no permanent effects. But a child starved at the formative period of its physical and mental development never attains his full mental or physical powers.

The most precious national asset is not our gold buried in Kentucky, our great industrial and transportation systems, our vast wealth of forest and mines. The most priceless possession and responsibility of America are the children who must take our places tomorrow. We cannot afford to permanently handicap them in order to shave off this comparatively small sum in the passage of this bill today. [Applause.]

I do not want to mention here the wealth produced by the W. P. A., visible in every city and hamlet, the schools, the sanitary systems, the highways—the greatest accretion of communal and national wealth ever produced by any nation in so short a period of time—all of which would have been unattainable but for this beneficent system devised primarily to provide work for the unemployed.

Through all the years to come it will serve and bless the American people in a richer, happier, more fruitful civilization. I do not want to speak of the great impetus it has given to business, commerce, and industry. It has kept the cash registers ringing from the retail stores to the factories, and has fattened the pay envelopes of the workers and the dividends of the entrepreneurs of every corporation in the land. Big business approves it. The labor unions endorse it. Its severest critics are those who oppose it here today. But, Mr. Chairman, no partisanship can smear, no disparagement can obscure, no calumny can detract from the glory of achievement, from the record of honesty and efficiency and integrity which is bridging over one of the greatest economic crises in American history.

I trust every Member will consider carefully before voting to take away a dollar from the appropriation asked by the Budget for the completing of this epoch-making program. [Applause.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from New York [Mr. FAY].

Mr. FAY. Mr. Chairman, I am going to vote for the $150,000,000 appropriation. The people of my district are essentially very poor people and the dismissals that would follow as a result of not passing the $150,000,000 would cause widespread misery.

This is a question which comes straight home to many of the families that I have the honor to represent in this House, residents of the Sixteenth Congressional District of Manhattan. And when I say that this question comes straight home to these families I am using no idle figure of speech. I mean just that. We are dealing here with a question touching directly upon the only available source of livelihood for many of these families; we are dealing with a question which may mean the difference between preserving and breaking up a large number of homes in my district; we are dealing with a question which affects the proper care and nourishment of children in my district.

This is a condition that is facing 25,000 W. P. A. workers in New York City as a result of the $150,000,000 reduction in the relief appropriation. That condition is destitution. Up in New York City, in W. P. A. headquarters, they are now making out the dismissal notices which will remove 25,000 workers from the rolls as of April 1. Mayor LaGuardia has stated that he has not the money to place these dismissed workers on relief.

What are the 100,000 men, women, and children, dependent upon this income to do? This is a condition that faces us in New York City. You are going to find similar situations developing throughout the country. What in the name of humanity is this Congress up to that they can talk about economies in the face of such impending widespread misery?

The Democratic Party has been recognized as the champion of the underprivileged. It has been the political vehicle whereby they have attempted to voice their needs. The Democratic Party is in control of both Houses of this Congress and will have to take the responsibility for the actions of this Congress. But, forgetting party responsibility, there is here a personal responsibility upon the Members of Congress because destitution is a matter which affects people, regardless of race, creed, color, or party affiliations.

Were the appropriation of $150,000,000 for relief funds a political question I could well wish that those who are opposing the appropriation on the plea of economy be permitted to reap the whirlwind of their sowing, but I know only too well from personal experience not only the misery and privation that will involve the families of those dismissed from the rolls of the W. P. A. in my district, but the hardship that will be inflicted upon the storekeepers and small tradesmen who supply their needs.

For reasons of humanity and common sense I am voting to appropriate the additional $150,000,000 that is necessary to prevent this lay-off in my district and your districts.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I now yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS F. FORD].

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment to increase the W. P. A. fund by $150,000,000 instead of $100,000,000, reported by the Appropriations Committee. We all know that there is a so-called economy bloc in this House. That position is one that they must, and I suppose do, justify, on the ground of protecting the Treasury of the United States.

I cannot agree with that position, because I feel that we are dealing with human beings and if I must choose between protecting helpless human beings and protecting the United States Treasury, I for one, am going to vote to protect the human beings.

Our Republican friends are making economy their campaign issue, or in other words are willing to play politics with human misery.

You are welcome to your issue, gentlemen; I want none of it. I am for the preservation of human values; I want mothers and little children to be fed and clothed and housed; I want my country to be rich in happy citizens, for it is in the fostering and protecting of our people that our Nation's greatness lies.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I now yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DUNN].

Mr. DUNN. Mr. Chairman, we have been informed that 30,000,000 people of the United States are in need of food, shelter, and clothing. I have not any doubt that this statement is true. How much relief can we give these unfortunates with $100,000,000? Very little. The President has asked Congress for $150,000,000. I want to go on record stating that I intend to vote for this amount. No man or woman in our country should be compelled to go hungry—yet there are millions who are in need of the necessities of life. Our country has great abundance of everything that is necessary to take care of our people, therefore, it is the duty of we Members in Congress to appropriate funds to provide adequately for those who are unable to obtain employment.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. PITTENGER].

Mr. PITTENGER. Mr. Chairman, I have listened with a great deal of interest to the remarks on both sides of the House on this question of relief funds. I know a great many Members want to be heard and my remarks will be brief. I have the honor to represent a district that is vitally interested in the problem of additional relief appropriations. I represent the northern Minnesota district, and that district wants $150,000,000 additional funds now, so that if these funds are properly administered a vast army of the unemployed can get some work-relief help which they are now denied. I say to the membership of this House that this issue is nonpolitical, and I have to disagree with some of my colleagues who forget that the statement has been made here today that there are still 12,000,000 unemployed in this country. Under the New Deal experiment which was to lead to recovery, what has happened? There has been no recovery. The reverse is true. There is more unemployment—there are more relief problems among the people of my section than ever before. I would like to vote for legislation that would do away with politics that gentlemen have admitted is in the W. P. A., and do away with waste, but we face a fact, not a theory, and in order that the people may have more jobs, until we can get away from these experiments in Government and give business a chance to operate, and thus create additional jobs and take care of the unemployed, I feel we ought to vote these additional appropriations.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PITTENGER. Yes.

Mr. KNUTSON. The gentleman is not in favor of the W. P. A. as a permanent set-up, is he?

Mr. PITTENGER. I am not in favor of any permanent set-up of any kind in relief work, because we ought to get back to a prosperous condition when we do not need this temporary relief work.

Mr. KNUTSON. The gentleman is referring now to 1926, 1927, and 1928?

Mr. PITTENGER. I am referring to the days when the relief rolls were not on the increase.

Mr. KNUTSON. And before we gave our markets away?

Mr. PITTENGER. Before we gave our markets away. One step toward recovery will be to get rid of these reciprocal tariffs and let us have our own markets for our own people.

Mr. Chairman, when the question of increased appropriations for the unemployed and for work relief was before Congress some time ago I favored the $875,000,000 figure rather than the $725,000,000 figure, because under the New Deal policies business conditions have become worse and unemployment has increased. I voted for the $725,000,000 because it was a question of voting for that or nothing. A request has now come for an additional $150,000,000, and I hope that Congress grants relief in that amount. Unemployment is a condition and not a theory. All over the country in the industrial centers and elsewhere men and women are out of work, and there are no jobs to be had. This may be a part of the more abundant life, but it is tragic to say the least. From every point in my district the municipalities, counties, cities, villages, and individuals, have contacted me and pointed out the need of additional relief funds so that jobs can be provided for the unemployed.

I have before me a letter. It is from a housewife. She says that there are four in the family—herself, her husband, and two grown daughters. For over a year they have sought employment, but no New Deal jobs are available. These folks are citizens and not aliens. Their case is typical of hundreds of cases in every locality in my district. We cannot fail our honest, hard working, loyal citizens, such as these folks, in these desperate, hard times the country is experiencing, with New Deal poverty and want everywhere. I have numerous letters from worthy and industrious young people over the district. Some tell me their fathers are on relief or W. P. A., and struggling along the best they can. There is no place at home for the young folks, and in the outside world they cannot find employment. And so they appeal to me for some solution of their difficulty. So long as we have the present relief and unemployment set-up, it is our responsibility to extend temporary help to our American citizens who are in misfortune. I urge that additional funds be voted.

But I would also urge, Mr. Chairman, that this Congress take steps to eliminate the politics, the waste, and extravagance and other evils that have grown up under W. P. A. The funds that we appropriate should go 100 cents on the dollar for the help of unemployed men and women. The money appropriated by Congress should not be dissipated in overhead expense or in pay checks for politicians. If the money is economically handled, men and women who are now unable to get jobs will be given a chance.

I have repeatedly said that the matter of relief and work for the unemployed should be left to the local municipalities. They know their problems best. They will have no additional overhead in taking care of this unemployment question. They should handle the expenditure of funds, and they should determine who has the meritorious claim to jobs provided by relief funds. Local municipalities also know what projects are of value to the community. Federal funds should be furnished them on some proper basis, having due regard for the number of unemployed for whom jobs ought to be provided. Federal regulations and red tape applicable to one part of the country are not applicable to another section. I have before me a communication from the owner of a small business. This letter is typical of many I have received. It protests against the present management of W. P. A. My friend says:

> One of our employees voluntarily quit her job to go on N. Y. A. Another quit for fear that her private job would jeopardize her husband's W. P. A. job. A man employed by one of our relatives quit his job and went on W. P. A. A friend of ours continues on a W. P. A. job, although a private job awaits him whenever he chooses to take it.

And so from many sources I have received complaints about favoritisim, pull, and politics in connection with W. P. A. relief jobs and corresponding appropriations, by whatever agency administered, should only continue until such time as private industry can offer employment and take up the slack that finds millions of men at this time in the army of the unemployed.

Of course, Mr. Chairman, the solution to this question and the things that will have to be done in order to make it unnecessary to appropriate any more money such as we should do today is rather simple, but it is going to have to be done. Federal taxes and all taxes and the burdens that government places on business will have to be decreased. Waste and extravagant spending will have to cease. Spending yourself into prosperity is a false delusion. Economy and relief from the tax burden point the way toward the road to recovery. Business cannot and will not be able to move forward until that point of view is adopted by the Government. The only way the unemployed can have jobs is for the wheels of industry to start turning. When industry removes the sign "closed" and puts up the sign "men wanted" then prosperous conditions will again return to the United States. Until we discard a multitude of New Deal experiments which seek to hamper business and grab its earnings under the guise of taxes, things will get worse and worse and the doors of opportunity will remain closed to the unemployed. Some of this New Deal legislation, with honest but mistaken motives behind it, has harmed rather than helped the workingmen whom it was intended to benefit.

I have received many letters from the district that reach these same conclusions just discussed. One letter in substance says not to "bring home the bacon" but to keep in mind that people are tired of New Deal taxes and penalties and handicaps, and that sensible people want economy in government and lower taxes. And then the author of this letter says that the manufacturer, the merchant, the small-business man, and everyone who hires people to work must again be permitted to operate at a profit, for only in that way will they be able to employ people, establish pay rolls, and pay wages, and thus create a purchasing public that will restore something like the prosperity we have been promised from the day they burned up the pigs on the theory that a shortage would make prosperity to the late idea that pump priming, or pulling yourself up by the bootstraps, would create permanent jobs.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH].

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I rise to make a statement elaborating somewhat the description of the New York World's Fair incident as recited by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM], and in order that the RECORD may show and the House may understand the background of this situation. It will be remembered that the Seventy-fifth Congress passed a joint resolution establishing the United States World's Fair Commission and appropriated for the carrying on of its work the sum of $3,000,000. That resolution provided most distinctly that the Commission should have charge of the participation of the Federal Government in the New York World's Fair, in all its departments, agencies, bureaus, and branches, and the Commission was instructed to organize the exhibition on the part of the Federal Government in a creditable manner. The Commission was appointed and I happen to be appointed a member of it. It organized itself, and the President, under the resolution, appointed its executive officers. Since then the Commission has proceeded with its work in the expenditure of the budgeted sum of $3,000,000, which has been very, very carefully expended, subject to the audit of the Comptroller General, and our contracts subject to the supervision and general guidance of the Procurement Division of the Treasury.

The building referred to by the gentleman from Virginia is about 98 percent completed. The exhibits which are to be shown in it on April 30 next are 95 percent set up or are in the packing boxes on the floor ready for installation. At the outset of our deliberations it was suggested to us by no less a personage than the President of the United States that instead of adopting the old practice of having each department exhibit examples of its work or its activities, the exhibits of the Government should be organized on the basis of themes. The Commission believed that was the better way to display to the American people the activities of the Government. So 12 themes were adopted, and every department of the Government, including W. P. A., was invited to contribute suggestions with respect to any one of the themes in which it might be interested.

The themes are such as national defense, conservation, transportation, social welfare, industry, and so forth. Every department of the Government but one, every agency of the Government but one has cooperated with the United States Commission. The single exception is W. P. A. They have paid not the slightest attention to the spirit of this act, but, as you have heard, have gone out on their own and are putting in their own exhibition—in my judgment, a direct violation of the spirit of this statute, which, if copied by other departments of the Government, would wreck the whole thing and result in atrocious extravagance. But nothing can stop these people.

Now, it has been suggested by some of their defenders and suggested in the hearings before the Committee on Appropriations that they have done this because they found they could not get sufficient floor space in the Federal building. The exhibition is not measured by square feet of floor space. It is measured on the theme system, and W. P. A. operations are already included in four of the themes. Those themes are social welfare, education, arts and recreation, industry, and, indirectly, in the theme of "shelter." In other words, they have received proper recognition in the exhibition as a part of the great Government of the United States. We never had the slightest intimation that they would proceed to put up a separate building. We did not know of it actually until it was published in the newspapers 2 weeks ago. I learned only yesterday the building was commenced shortly before the new year.

I challenge the moral right, if not the legal right, of the W. P. A. to have gone into this thing, in the face of the provisions of the joint resolution of the Congress which confides to the United States Commission the sole jurisdiction to manage the exhibitions of the Federal Government.

Mr. GEYER of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I yield.

Mr. GEYER of California. Was this done under Mr. Hopkins or under Colonel Harrington?

Mr. WADSWORTH. It was started under Hopkins and it is continued and defended by Colonel Harrington.

Mr. GEYER of California. The gentleman feels, then, that Colonel Harrington ought to take the responsibility for this, and all these people be discriminated against because of a so-called mistake?

Mr. WADSWORTH. So-called. [Laughter.]

Mr. GEYER of California. I repeat, "so-called."

Mr. WADSWORTH. I suppose it is too late to undo this wretched thing, but does the gentleman believe that is the way for an agency of the Government of the United States to behave, in view of the request of the President of the United States originally that our exhibition should be organized in the way I have described, and in view of the terms, the explicit terms, of the joint resolution of the Congress?

Mr. GEYER of California. No. But in answer to the gentlemen I will say that we should not decide that hungry people should remain hungry.

Mr. WADSWORTH. That is not the point. Are we going to spend money legally or illegally? That is the point. Those people had no right to do this thing.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I yield.

Mr. HOOK. The gentleman is so set in his ways, why could he not ask for a ruling of the Comptroller General as to whether or not these funds are illegally spent if he is so sure of his point?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I do not object at all to inquiring of the Comptroller General. I have no idea how he would pass upon it.

Mr. HOOK. The gentleman is so sincere in his point.

Mr. WADSWORTH. All right. I will address a letter to him.

Mr. HOOK. The gentleman should go to the Comptroller General and ask for such an opinion.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I only heard of this thing in its full detail yesterday. I have consulted with the executive officers of the Commission, who say they never heard of it until they read of it in the newspapers. There is no Member of this House who will contend that this is an orderly way of doing business for the United States Government. These people are disorderly. They care not one whit about orderly government. This is a perfect example of it. Why do they do this? It is to build propaganda in a desperate endeavor to make W. P. A. a permanent institution in the United States.

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I yield.

Mr. DINGELL. The gentleman does not argue the legal right? The gentleman is really arguing about the moral right of these people to go out and do as they please?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I question the legal right. Not being a lawyer, I cannot pass upon it definitely and finally. I certainly challenge the moral right for them to do this.

Mr. DINGELL. I understand. I am trying to amplify the thought the gentleman has in mind.

Mr. McGRANERY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I yield.

Mr. McGRANERY. The gentleman said this only came to his attention yesterday?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I read of it first in the newspapers several days ago. I could scarcely believe it. Then, when this bill was being considered by the Appropriations Committee, I made inquiry of our exhibition offices in New York, and I learned the facts.

Mr. McGRANERY. So that the facts as presented by the gentleman this morning which arouse his ire have just come to his attention? He has not had an opportunity to search and find the real basis or truth other than the communication he received yesterday?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I have read the joint resolution of the Congress creating this Commission, and I understand the intent of the Congress in creating it, namely, that the Commission should have charge of all exhibits of the Federal Government.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SACKS].

Mr. SACKS. Mr. Chairman, I shall vote for the $150,000,000 the President asks to carry the relief burden to the end of the fiscal year.

Mr. Chairman, sometimes in our debate on measures pending before this House we are inclined to let factionalism, sectionalism, or just plain prejudice obscure the fundamental principles involved. Sometimes it appears that the one word "economy" is the 1939 magic carpet upon which a public official can obtain or maintain popularity with the people.

That may be true—and I have no doubt that it is true—among certain sections of the populace.

Gentlemen, it is the part of the demagogue to ride these magic carpets to popularity. Many nimble-footed gentlemen display uncanny agility as they hop from one carpet to another as the days go by.

When peoples' lives are at stake and when the morale of millions of Americans is threatened, I personally prefer standing with my feet planted on the ground rather than balancing precariously upon some magic carpet.

The issue today is not whether we are to please some rich farmer or great industrialist or powerful newspaper publisher. The issue is whether certain American men, women, and children will maintain their self-respect and their social usefulness.

The Works Progress Administration was never intended to be economical in terms of dollars and cents and it was never intended to be efficient by ordinary standards. But in a broader sense this organization has been more economical and more efficient than any great bank or industry can ever hope to be. The Works Progress Administration has been efficient in saving our citizens from utter despair and has been economical in protecting our greatest national resource—the morale of our people.

Gentlemen, the talk today is of national defense. The cry is that we must be prepared to stand against the aggressive dictators. Loathsome and dangerous as those dictators are, and as are the ideologies for which they stand, our peril from them is not as great as is our peril from those who would sabotage the Works Progress Administration. You can have no national defense without national morale. I know men on the dole cannot maintain their morale. Raking leaves, laying sewers, painting murals, sewing clothes, keeps hands busy and minds occupied. American people want work. American business has been unable to supply it. Without work the hardiness of our social structure will disappear. I say to you that it is worth any figure for lovers of democracy to maintain national morale.

That is what we are voting on today, gentlemen. We are voting today whether to encourage a short-sighted few who are trying for economy at the expense of national morale, or whether to continue our attempts to hold this Nation together by doing what private business has been unable to do.

I favor and I will vote for the $150,000,000 requested by the President to continue W. P. A. at its needed pace until the end of the fiscal year. A vote against that figure is a vote to turn American citizens' thoughts to foreign ideologies and phony cure-alls which the false Messiahs of Europe and the leaders of our own lunatic fringe contend will solve the problems of democracy. A reduction in W. P. A. once before almost upset our recovery. A reduction now may easily be the deathblow to our recover. Every discontented, idle, embittered American is a threat to our civilization and our happiness.

Let him who votes for economy today answer to the mothers and the wives who see their menfolk turn with idleness from sturdy American workers into disgruntled, demoralized bits of humanity, who never again will be fit to play their parts as citizens or builders of our civilization. Let him who is zealous to protect our Nation and our democracy, to foster the American spirit among the underprivileged masses of this Nation, vote with me for this full appropriation of $150,000,000. [Applause.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from California [Mr. GEYER].

Mr. GEYER of California. Mr. Chairman, I am vitally interested in this W. P. A. problem. I shall vote for the one hundred and fifty million and really believe that that amount is far from being adequate to meet the needs that our fine American people are now facing. In the brief space of time allotted to me I wish to answer some of the arguments that are being used here on this floor to discredit the W. P. A. and thereby keep the appropriation at a low mark.

THEY DO WANT WORK

Time and again it has been charged that these people who are on W. P. A. really do not want to work. I have had a very close acquaintanceship with the W. P. A. problems in my district ever since its inception, and when I say that these people are ready, willing, and anxious to accept jobs in private industry, I believe that I know whereof I speak. Every one of my colleagues, I am sure, unless you come from the silk-stocking districts, have had literally hundreds of these people interview you in your offices imploring that you give them your assistance to find work. Examine your files and you will find that your mail is literally filled with pleas for assistance of a like nature. I tell you what you already know—they are good American citizens and ask only for the right of a job that will guarantee to them a decent living wage.

EXTRAVAGANCE OF W. P. A.

We are told by those who are unsympathetic to the one hundred and fifty million that the W. P. A. has been extravagant. Comparisons are made based upon only half-truths. It has been charged here that the administrative expense is too high. Committee hearings plainly show us that this expense was but 3 percent of the total, which is one of the lowest of all Government agencies.

FEDERAL THEATER PROJECT

There has been much criticism levied at the Federal Theater Project. In 1933, when the New Deal came into being, there were literally thousands of our actors on the streets without means of sustenance. These people were given work at the only job they knew how to do—the production and staging of theatrical performances. True, this does not produce bread and butter so far as the product is concerned; but since when in these days of enforced leisure is it considered a crime to contribute to the entertainment and education of our people?

EATING AND STARVING BY SHIFTS

Some Members claim that people have been on the rolls since the inception of the W. P. A. and that now they should be taken off, regardless of whether they have a job or not, and let others eat for a while. But I do not subscribe to the doctrine that democracy should work in shifts, alternately feeding and starving the American people in shifts. I can see in the army of unemployed which remains with us only a challenge to put all of our people to work as quickly as possible, thus increasing purchasing power and speeding the recovery process.

MOST REPUBLICANS OPPOSE W. P. A.

Most of my Republican colleagues are pleading for reduction of the W. P. A. appropriation below the one hundred million provided for in this bill as brought from committee. Some even go so far as to advocate no appropriation. All over this country during the last campaign the people were told that the Democrats were not giving the W. P. A. people high enough wages, and if the Republicans were elected to office they could expect to be much better treated. Evidence to that effect in the form of election material has been presented on the floor of this House in previous debates. Is this the way promises are kept?

CONFIDENCE

You say what we need is more confidence; then business will employ the people. What about 1932, when Mr. Hoover was in the chair? Certainly business had plenty of confidence then. Why did we not employ all the people then? Do you think for one moment that business is going to have your confidence when people have less money to spend? Every one of the businessmen is "on relief," whether he knows it or not. Every time he hears the ring of the bell in his cash register some portion of that money that he deposits therein comes either directly or indirectly from some form of relief—work relief or direct relief.

W. P. A. AND DISGRACE

Time and again from the Well of this Chamber have we heard Members refer to the disgrace of being on W. P. A. The American public, if they hold this absurd belief, should lose no time in reconstructing it. These people are out of work through no fault of their own, and, as far as I can see, the man working on W. P. A. projects has a right to hold his head as high as anyone else. If there is any shame connected with W. P. A., that shame lies with this body for not being willing to so reorganize our social and economic structure that all may find work in private employment.

W. P. A. AND AMERICANISM

It has been stated many times here in this House that the Workers' Alliance is an organization that is un-American in character. This is the same old excuse that is usually given for the failure to do what duty demands. The unemployed people have the same right to organize and exert pressure for their own benefit as any other group of people has. Merely because these people have exercised that right is no reason to make charges which I feel sure cannot be substantiated. If this were a fact, I maintain that the easiest way to cure this situation would be to give these people the rights that are guaranteed to them under this Constitution. We will never promote Americanism by slapping people in the face either literally or figuratively. When democracy is actually working there is no danger of people turning either to the right or to the left.

PITIFUL CONDITION OF PEOPLE

We have been told many times that one-third of our people are "ill-fed, ill-clad, and ill-housed." Many surveys prove to us that the children of W. P. A. workers are terribly undernourished. Yet some of us while basking in the sunshine of abundance are willing to crowd out into the cold the helpless women and children of the land.

W. P. A. AND BUSINESS

Many small-business men throughout the country and within my district are complaining that they need more customers. They realize that every time W. P. A. appropriations are reduced their balance shifts to the wrong side of the ledger. These businessmen have a right to make a profit and thereby be enabled to support their families and to employ other people who desire to do likewise. If we desired deliberately to send the business spiral downward, we could choose no better way than to reduce the amount of money that these needy people must of necessity spend in order to live.

Mr. Chairman, I feel very deeply on this subject, and regret that time has allowed me to hit only the high places. I hope that the Members of this House will consider this problem as it should be considered—a matter of their own responsibility to their fellowman and to their country. I hope they will decide that of the billions of dollars that have been voted by both Republicans and Democrats surely this one hundred and fifty million should by rights go to these people who are in no position to care for themselves.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. LUDLOW].

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Chairman, when I arrived at the House today I received the disquieting news that dissatisfied elements in this Chamber have launched a strong movement to defeat the pending bill, which appropriates $100,000,000 for relief of the unemployed during the remainder of the current fiscal year, or failing in that, to reduce the amount to be appropriated to the vanishing point.

I hope the movement will not succeed. This bill ought to pass. The most appealing humanitarian considerations require its passage. We could not cut off relief in this abrupt manner without inflicting the most heart-rending injuries upon those who are incapable of protecting themselves in the maelstrom of economic maladjustments that has brought millions of our fellow citizens into its swirl. These people, who are as good as you or I, need a helping hand until they can help themselves, and until that time comes they should be objects of our tenderest solicitude. The plain, blunt fact is that unless this bill passes thousands upon thousands of families will sink into dire want; thousands upon thousands of innocent children will cry for their daily bread.

No, Mr. Chairman, this bill should not be defeated. Its defeat would involve too sudden and violent a dislocation of our relief system. It should be passed in the exact amount reported by our committee, because it is a just bill, a moderate bill, which recognizes the humanities immediately involved in our relief situation, helping those whc need assistance, while at the same time it points the way to an ultimate transfer of the employment problem to business and industry where it belongs.

Mr. Chairman, recovery in this country is a complex puzzle into which many factors enter. A sensible handling of the relief problem is one of the most important of these factors. But it is only one factor. We must go further than that. There can be no real recovery, no real and permanent prosperity until industry gets back into full swing, with confidence in itself and confidence in the future, capable and willing to function in its ordained sphere, and to take over into regular jobs millions now barely existing on the Works Progress Administration rolls, also giving work to an untold number of employables who are barely managing to hold body and soul together on the pitiful pittances of food and clothing handed out by township trustees and charity organizations.

We cannot consider relief as a detached and unrelated subject, because it is related in the closest and most intimate way to business and industry. If we help business and industry to get on their feet and thus open a reservoir of regular jobs we are making a very important contribution to the solution of this very relief problem which is now on our doorstep and we are rendering as direct and valuable a service to the unfortunate victim of unemployment as if we placed him on the W. P. A. work-relief roll; indeed, infinitely more so, in my opinion, because it is the God-given right of every American citizen to have regular work in the line for which he is fitted, without any tinge of governmental charity. [Applause.] There is not a right-thinking person in America who would not rather have a regular job than a Government, synthetic, made-to-order job.

We should therefore approach the relief problem that is presently before us with the thought in mind not only of providing amply for the present needs of the unemployed but of going just as far as possible to correct the maladjustments which are continually making it impossible for millions of splendid Americans to get any kind of work in private industry. We should think not only in terms of relief to those who are now distressed but also in terms of what we can do to promote national recovery, to the end that all of the productive and creative forces that have been atrophied for years may be unleashed to perform their normal services and give employment and thus to contribute to the full limit of their possibilities in restoring a state of happiness, contentment, and prosperity among our people.

The point I am trying to make is that the time has come when we should tackle this problem of relief not only on one front but on all of its fronts. If we deal with it adequately, if we deal with it as it deserves to be dealt with, we will deal with it from the angle of removing the elemental causes of unemployment, as well as from the standpoint of making ample provision for the present victims of unemployment.

Of course, under the best of conditions we shall always have some millions of unemployed; but I am hoping and praying that the time will not be far distant when business and industry can take over the main relief load and we can get rid of these shots in the arm, these gigantic relief appropriations which are mere palliatives and soon wear off, leaving the country gasping and struggling for breath until another huge relief appropriation can be voted. We should be thinking of approaching the subject in a more fundamental way, in a way that will cure instead of lull the patient with temporary anesthesia. [Applause.] We shall be forced sooner or later to do this very thing, for the enormous deficits we are piling up cannot be continued forever. Why not make a start now?

The road to success, in an effort to revivify the business and industrial instrumentalities upon which normal employment so much depends, is not difficult of discernment. It lies in the general direction of reduced governmental expenditures, of relief from oppressive taxation, of freedom from undue governmental interference, and of an approach, at least, to a time when we shall have a balanced Budget. In view of the thousand and one pressures for increased rather than reduced governmental expenditures, the way I have outlined is the hard way, but, in my judgment, it is the only way to bring about recovery and normal employment.

I yield to no one in my sympathy and solicitude for the millions who, try as hard as they may, cannot get work at the present time, and I will vote from the Treasury every dollar actually needed to relieve hunger and suffering, however colossal the sum may be.

When I made my first race for Congress, now long ago, I told our people that when it comes to an alternative between dollars and cents on the one hand and the humanities on the other hand, my vote and my voice and my influence, for whatever it may be worth, will always be on the side of the humanities. That is where I stand today, and that is where I always hope to stand, God helping me, as unshakable as the Rock of Gibraltar. Holding that view, I want to see brought about as soon as practicable the transfer of our unemployed to industrial pay rolls, when they can look forward to a regular income at a saving wage, with a bright future, and only a bitter memory of Government leaf-raking jobs.

In the consideration of the relief problem associated with this bill and later during the discussion that will take place over the formulation of the relief program for 1940, I would like to see a sound and constructive approach made toward the ultimate complete liquidation of the Works Progress Administration, the transferral not to be made, however, until private business and industry are in strong enough a position to take over the relief load. I believe this to be possible without unusual suffering, and I believe it would mean much for the future of America.

I think some such thought must also be in the back of the head of Col. F. C. Harrington, the able Works Progress Administrator. For verification I call your attention to pages 68 and 81 of the hearings, from which I quote as follows:

Mr. LUDLOW. Colonel, you have a broad vision of this entire subject. What could you suggest that could be done to stimulate and encourage business to take over this relief work? It seems to me that is the problem we ought to be considering, or one of the problems.

Colonel HARRINGTON. Well, it is a problem that is under consideration by the Federal Government, but I must say that my own responsibilities are pretty considerable, and I would prefer not to embark on a discussion of taxation or——

Mr. LUDLOW. I just wondered whether you envisioned a time when the W. P. A. would be liquidated?

Colonel HARRINGTON. I do.

Mr. LUDLOW. Of course, you would prefer to see every person get a job in industry, if that is possible, I take it, would you not?

Colonel HARRINGTON. Yes.

Mr. JOHNSON of West Virginia. Do you see any chance in the future in the light of the past, that the W. P. A., in your lifetime or mine, is going to close up?

Colonel HARRINGTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. LUDLOW. Would you elaborate on that answer?

Colonel HARRINGTON. I cannot elaborate on it much. I was answering the question by giving my opinion.

Mr. JOHNSON of West Virginia. When, in your judgment, will it close up or grow less?

Colonel HARRINGTON. I think it will be less by July 1, 1940. I would judge that by that time it could be cut in half.

I think Colonel Harrington's prophecy, on page 81 of the hearings, that the W. P. A. can be cut in half by July 1, 1940, is one of the brightest indications of the present relief outlook, and I cite also the following colloquy taken from the hearings, page 82:

Mr. WOODRUM. If that be true, would we not begin by some program of pulling the rolls down, rather than pulling them up to the arbitrary level of 3,000,000?

Colonel HARRINGTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. WOODRUM. When should we begin that program?

Colonel HARRINGTON. I began it on the 15th of March. I put in the record yesterday instructions that were sent out, effective March 15, to begin reductions.

So we have a start already made toward supplanting W. P. A. with something more substantial and that at least is encouraging. And right here let me say that if we are to continue the W. P. A., I do not know of anyone I would rather have to manage it than Colonel Harrington. He is a keen, able Army officer with fine executive capacity.

His modest Army salary, which is his only compensation, is less than the salary of a number of his subordinates, and he is interested only in doing a good job. To know him is to be willing to underwrite his honesty and sincerity of purpose in everything he undertakes.

As I conceive the situation, we have a dual duty to perform today in fixing the amount to be appropriated in this deficiency relief bill. First of all we have a duty to see that adequate provision is made for the employables who have no means of support and who, despite every effort, cannot find work. Second, we have an obligation to shape our relief program so that business and industry may begin to take heart, and so that a start may be made to revive the processes of normal recovery and transfer the millions who are eking out a miserable existence on relief rolls to regular, dependable jobs at the higher wages which business and industry are capable of paying when business and industry are functioning normally.

I believe that we will perform this dual duty in the best way that is humanly possible if we appropriate $100,000,000 to carry the W. P. A. relief load during the remainder of this fiscal year. If we fix this as the relief appropriation, we not only will make adequate provision under a wise and careful administration for those who need the Government's help to insure a living for themselves and their loved ones, but we will also be giving business and industry the break they so much need to help them to get on their feet and to carry on.

No one who takes the trouble to survey the enormous Federal relief outlay for this fiscal year can charge that Congress is niggardly or heartless or recreant to its obligations to the unemployed, for this additional amount of $100,000,000 will raise the total available for the current fiscal year to $2,163,868,406. Compare that stupendous sum with the expenditures in prior fiscal years, as follows:

1936	$1,270,235,065
1937	1,833,456,971
1938	1,427,701,991

If I thought that a reduction of this estimated appropriation by $50,000,000 would result in throwing off of the employment rolls any worthy persons who are entitled to W. P. A. employment, I would not support that reduction for a moment; but I am satisfied that the matter can and should be handled administratively so that not one such person need be displaced. [Applause.]

Let us analyze the testimony to see how many cuts can be made in the estimate of $150,000,000 without doing injury to those on the relief rolls.

In the first place, it is estimated by Colonel Harrington that 88,975 will be dropped as being no longer in need, based on a review of the rolls now in progress. This should result in a saving of $16,282,425 during the 3 months from April 1 to July 1.

In the second place, Colonel Harrington stated—see page 25 of the hearings—that there are 55,000 persons employed on W. P. A. projects who are entitled to social-security benefits; and if they come off the rolls, the saving for the same period on that account would be $10,065,000.

In the third place, 30,000 aliens went off the rolls on March 6, and this reduced the charge against the appropriation between that date and July 1, the beginning of the new fiscal year, in the sum of $7,015,000.

In the fourth place, the entrance of the W. P. A. into the heavy-construction field, particularly building construction, has made necessary a larger outlay for materials than a sound policy would seem to indicate, for it is axiomatic that the larger the amount spent for materials the less must be the amount spent for wages. On the average, for every $100 of relief funds paid out by the W. P. A., $10.50, or more than 10 percent, goes for materials. Many of us who heard the testimony believe that the material cost could well be cut down to $5 or $6 per $100, in which event the additional amount that would be made available for employment would far exceed the difference between the sum of the three items quoted above and the $50,000,000 by which the Budget estimate for relief has been reduced in the pending bill. In other words, the sum total of the four items would exceed the committee's reduction in the Budget estimate and no reduction in the W. P. A. employment roll below the number originally estimated would be required if the appropriation is fixed at $100,000,000.

The above-mentioned deductions which make it easily possible to reduce the W. P. A. appropriation $50,000,000 without interference with the program visualized by the President in his original recommendation of $875,000,000 do not take into consideration the additional fact, which argues for a further reduction, that the W. P. A. rolls are constantly being diminished by deaths, voluntary resignations, and discharges. Colonel Harrington testified that in January last there were 214,492 separations from W. P. A. employment, of which 105,031 were voluntary and 109,461 were discharges, and he cited this as a typical month for separations on an employment basis of approximately 3,000,000. It is obvious that if the vacancies thus created are not filled, W. P. A. can be reduced expeditiously without injury to any worthy person on the rolls.

Aside from the spread of employment that would be effected through a saving in the cost of materials, there was testimony to show that it would be sound practice to take the W. P. A. out of the heavy building construction field. On page 255 of the hearings is an illuminating table furnished by Colonel Harrington, which shows that building projects of a total value of $2,385,025,735 had been approved by the President up to February 28, 1939, and that only 5.6 percent of the total was included in the smaller projects under $25,000 each, while 79.6 percent of the total value was in large projects of $100,000 each and over, which shows how strongly the W. P. A. has gone in for heavy building construction. The employment of cheap W. P. A. unskilled labor in these building operations that usually require the services of highly skilled workmen is breaking down the regular crafts, dragging down labor standards, demoralizing union labor, and in altogether too many instances is pauperizing skilled artisans and throwing them on the relief rolls. This condition should be corrected, and the way to correct it would be for the W. P. A. to keep out of the building field entirely or confine its operations to projects of $25,000 in value or less.

I think most of the members of our subcommittee were impressed with the possibility of great savings in administrative costs by closer and more careful supervision. Six million dollars a month for administrative expenses, or $72,000,000 a year, seems ridiculously high. Of this about $5,000,000 a month, or $60,000,000 a year, is for personal services to pay an army of administrative employees, including 1,900 in Washington and 32,600 in the field.

The item of travel and subsistence has been running about $500,000 a month or $6,000,000 a year. Surely these terrific administrative costs will stand a deep cut and the savings thus effected can well be applied to spread additional work relief for those in actual distress.

In some details of administration we encountered revelations of a surprising nature, an instance in point being the use of $250,000 of W. P. A. funds to construct a building on the world's fair grounds in New York City. By the time the fair is over, which will be about the time the paint gets dry, the building will become the property of New York City without any strings attached, a gracious gift from the W. P. A., without a cent of cost to the metropolis of New York. It would seem rather ludicrous to tax the people of Indiana, Arkansas, Colorado, and other States, where the per capita wealth is small compared to the per capita wealth in New York, to make this munificent present of a building, with theater attached, to the greatest and richest city in the Western Hemisphere, but this is one of the wonders of the W. P. A. that was never very satisfactorily explained to our committee.

What must the people of Mississippi, who have a per capita income of $170, think of a proposal to use the money of the taxpayers of the United States to construct a magnificent building and present it as a gift to New York, where the average citizen has an income of $700, according to the Brookings Institution? The same authority, quoting from the latest survey, states that the per capita income of all of the people of the United States is $432. These are the people who are taxed to pay for the quarter of a million dollar building which the W. P. A. is presenting with its compliments to the New Yorkers, who have a per capita income $268 greater than for the country at large, which pays for the gift. Surely there is something wrong with that picture. It has created the impression in our committee that a tighter supervision over administrative expenditures would go a long way to take the tuck out of W. P. A. extravagance and to lighten the load on the already overburdened taxpayers.

As a member of the subcommittee on deficiencies, I listened to every word of testimony presented on this relief bill and weighed all of the facts and arguments; I have tried to weigh the evidence impartially and judicially. I believe the W. P. A. is bogged down with administrative costs and that a heavy cut should be made in its highly paid supervisory personnel. If this is done, there will be more money to pass around and employ those who need relief. In surveying this relief problem let us think not in terms of W. P. A. alone but in terms of general recovery. I want my constituents to be able to look forward to something better than W. P. A. jobs all their lives. I want them to have steady employment in regular jobs so they may live happily, with a sense of security and provide their children with the finer and better things of life. I give you my considered opinion, after hearing all of the testimony, that this appropriation of $100,000,000 will take care of the relief needs adequately and by encouraging honest business will help to chart the way to a better day in America. [Applause.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. BURDICK].

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Chairman, I have no complaint against the gentleman from Virginia or any other Member in this Congress. I think every Congressman tries to represent the people who send him here. While I do not agree with the philosophy or method of legislation held by the gentleman from Virginia, I surely cannot blame him. I do blame the people of Virginia.

Virginia, the cradle of this Republic; Virginia, which gave us such men as Patrick Henry, George Washington, James Monroe, James Madison, John Marshall, John Randolph, Robert E. Lee, and Stonewall Jackson. I am proud of Virginia's past; I am proud of the great men she has had. I hope Viriginia will again become great and extend her hand to those in distress—those who are hungry and without homes.

We have different views; and until the people of this country are educated by information so that they may unitedly know the philosophy they should follow we will have a Congress such as we have now, doing what we have been doing.

We could have avoided this session the other day had you followed the directions of the President, but there are a lot of Republicans here who will not follow the directions of the President, right or wrong. I am not one of them, however. Whenever the President is right I am willing to get up here and say yes; and he has been right on this appropriation for relief all the time. [Applause.]

A lot of the Members have complained about the W. P. A. and that they got the worst of it in campaigns. Mr. Chairman, they have done the same thing in my State to my colleague and myself that they have done in other States, peddled cards urging people to vote the Democratic ticket, but up there in North Dakota the people are intelligent—they know how to vote. [Laughter.]

I subscribe to the doctrine propounded by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON] that when children are hungry and undernourished we have no right to complain because the W. P. A. put a building up somewhere. Why destroy the whole organization because one mistake has been made?

You say, "Let business have some confidence. Leave business alone." Where was confidence in 1932 when business had been operating this country for years? There was not any business, it was gone, and we were very close to chaos itself.

As a Republican I am mighty proud of the fact that we still have this Government, and my duty in this Congress and my ambition is to preserve this Government and make it better; but when we have hungry millions in this country I am going to pay no attention to anyone who says, "For God's sake, balance the Budget. See how the Democrats are spending the money!" That is not to be considered in this situation at all. We as Republicans will get the respect of the people of this country in a greater degree if we are willing to follow the President any time he is right. I have always reserved the right to vote against him when I thought he was wrong.

When we cut out this item of $150,000,000 when the relief bill was passed we were in the wrong. The fact that the general sentiment in this House is to vote $100,000,000 on this bill is an open confession that we were wrong before. One hundred fifty millions is now asked in this extra bill, and if we cut that to one hundred million we will be wrong again. It will come up again if the relief situation continues to be as serious as it is today.

When the agricultural appropriation bill was before this body the first of this week, the House refused to allow 90 percent parity price to farmers. This House left the farmers defenseless and to become victims of foreclosure and dispossession. Where will they go? There is only one place for them, and that is on relief. After we have made the farmers victims, we now refuse to provide for them. This philosophy will not be tolerated in this country. Those who begrudgingly vote a dollar for relief but in the same breath will vote ten dollars for war preparations, are pursuing a course that means the inevitable collapse of this democratic experiment of free government.

There is absolutely no occasion to have a single hungry man, woman, or child in the United States. There is absolutely no occasion for people who want to work to be refused a chance to do so. All of our citizens have the right to live, and the moment we concoct any philosophy that will long deny the right we are contributing to the overthrow of this Government. The simon pure patriot, the simon pure conservative, who wants to balance the Budget while the people starve is an open enemy of this democracy. These conservatives profess to be Christians, but they do not know the Golden Rule. They do not understand, because they have never been hungry; they have never been without shoes; they have never slept on hay mattresses; they have never shivered with the cold; their children have never been undernourished. I have been through it all myself, hence no party line, no political expediency, will deter me from making a stand for the poor. It is bad enough for us to have so blundered in government that such a situation has come to pass, but, being here, our plain duty is to feed the victims of our own negligence.

Confidence in business. Business had this country at their mercy prior to 1932, and you see what they did with it.

Big business representatives have already testified before Congress that if let alone to operate free of what they call Government interference, that not over 3,000,000 of the unemployed could be put to work. If they are right, what are we going to do with the other 8,000,000 out of work? Now, what reason have we to believe that if we left business alone all these millions would be employed? We are accusing each other when neither one of us is to blame. Do you know what is the matter? We will get nowhere accusing the Republicans or accusing the Democrats. The fact is that we have entered a new era in the history of this country. This interest system that we have protected for 150 years has come to the end of the trail. The people cannot make money enough in this country to pay interest and taxes; new inventions come in daily and thousands are forced out of employment. Instead of the number of unemployed being less next year than they are this year I am willing to stand here in this Congress and prophesy that the number of unemployed will increase every year because this system we have followed has exploited the country until there is nothing more to exploit. I say to you further as a Republican and representing, as I believe, the majority view of the Republicans of my State, that we look upon the unemployment situation as a permanent institution in this country. The sooner we get to work to outline useful necessary work and give every man and woman in the United States who wants to work a chance to work, the sooner we will settle our depression.

There is no buying power down at the bottom of the social heap. We refuse to put it there. We refuse the farmers a parity price that will establish a full third of the buying power of the Nation. We do more than that, we not only strip the farmer of his buying power, but make him an object of charity which others must feed. We refuse the Townsend recovery program which will put over a billion dollars in buying power down among the people every month, to circulate among all classes, bringing jobs and employment to the millions who now must eat the crumbs handed over by a begrudging Congress; we refuse to interfere with the interest system that now takes one-third of every dollar handed over to buy merchandise, and the tax burden is made heavier because we must tax to pay interest on the public debt, all of which is absolutely unnecessary. As a result 51 percent of every dollar we spend today goes to pay interest and taxes to raise interest. If we had the sense of pupils in the common schools we would issue our own money with no interest and make it available to the people without the intervening system that lives on interest. The interest shark is more of an outlaw than Jesse James ever was. Jesse James robbed railroad trains but he never broke a railroad; he robbed banks but he never closed one.

We should issue Treasury notes, call in the outstanding bonds, pay them in currency and save $1,500,000,000 every year in interest. Do this and the balancing of the Budget will be a simple mathematical computation and will add no new taxes. But we will not do it, no sir, we are conservatives, we are the patriots of this country. We would sooner let this great free democracy sink into bottomless oblivion than interfere with the interest system. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COCHRAN].

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, it has always been my policy in approaching legislation to consider it from a national rather than from a local standpoint. During the week, although I have not a farmer in my district, I supported the farm bill. I know that if the farmers have money to spend they will buy what we manufacture in the cities; and I also know that when the people in the cities have money to buy, the first thing they will spend the money for is proper food, and that is beneficial to the farmer. I know there can be no lasting prosperity until the farmer has purchasing power.

The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM] made an excellent speech this morning—from his standpoint. He cited where relief money that was paid for the construction of buildings and quoted the salaries paid the employees. I venture to say there is not a congressional district in the United States where some kind of buildings are not being constructed by the W. P. A. It has been done since its inception, and the gentleman from Virginia knows it. The prevailing wage has been paid. Why? Because you said it had to be paid. Do not blame Colonel Harrington or other W. P. A. officials; blame yourselves, because you by your voice and vote specifically provided that when members of the building trades were employed in construction of buildings on W. P. A. projects that the prevailing scale of wages in the community must be paid. This, I understand, was done over the objection of former Administrator Harry Hopkins, but it was done by Congress, not by W. P. A. officials.

In support of this statement I suggest you read your Relief Act of 1937. There you will find instructions to the Works Progress Administration to pay the prevailing rate of wage. Therefore, I say to my friend, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM], when they comply with the law, do not criticize them.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to discuss for a moment one paragraph of this report in particular. In justification for the reduction, the committee calls attention to some of the testimony and quotes from Colonel Harrington's testimony. I read:

> There are probably about 55,000 employed on Works Progress Administration projects who are eligible for assistance under the aid for dependent children.

And so forth. When I discussed a subject on the floor of the House I endeavor to get some facts and reach the conclusion that my argument is sound before I approach the question. That is exactly what I have done in this instance.

When it became evident that we were not going to have sufficient money to carry on the W. P. A. in the manner it had been carried on during the fall and early winter months, an order went out, and I say an order went out because I have a copy of the order here, wherein the various State directors were advised that where a person was on W. P. A. who was eligible for unemployment compensation or aid for dependent children they were to be separated from the roll.

We passed the McCormack amendment when the last bill was pending, and while that amendment might not have been worded so as to have made it compulsory to keep those people on the rolls who were then employed, nevertheless it was the intent of the McCormack amendment, and it was the intent of the gentleman from Massachusetts who offered it, as he stated on the floor of the House, they were to be retained. I confirmed that when I spoke to him on the subject this morning. The House practically was unanimous in agreeing to the amendment, feeling it would protect this class.

What happened in my city? From 1,250 to 1,500 women with dependent children were taken off the rolls because they were eligible for State assistance. What assistance could they get from the State? If the money was available, they could get one-third or one-half, at the most, of what they were earning on W. P. A., but, unfortunately, the money was not available in Missouri, and when they were separated from their jobs on W. P. A. they received nothing. You know and I know the State security commission can only spend what is appropriated by the State legislature. So here you find from 1,250 to 1,500 mothers with children dropped by W. P. A. with no income whatsoever. Do you want to go on record as approving that?

Mr. Chairman, let me refer now to people who were entitled to unemployment compensation. What happened in that case? The unemployment compensation to which they were entitled amounted to $4, $6, or $8 a week. They were told to apply for it and were taken off the rolls as soon as the State commission advised they were eligible. The order specifically stated off they must go.

I tried to get Colonel Harrington to agree with me that those people who had families should be entitled to earn during the month at least the difference between that which they would receive for aid to dependent children and under the unemployment compensation act of the States and the amount they were receiving from the W. P. A. prior to the time they were taken off the roll. That certainly appears to me to be a fair suggestion. "No," was the answer. He could not agree, and the dependent mothers, as well as those entitled to unemployment benefits, were discharged during the coldest month in the year.

The average pay for laborers in St. Louis is $55. I ask you in all seriousness, do you want a man with a family of children to support that family in a big city on, say, $25 a month? Mr. Chairman, place yourself in that man's position. That is all I ask you to do. How would you like to support your wife and children on $25 a month? Of course, you would not, but that is just what has happened because of our action. As for myself I tried with others to keep the amount at the figure Colonel Harrington asked so this would not happen, but we were not successful.

I defy anyone to assail the argument I have made regarding the people entitled to aid for dependent children and unemployment-compensation benefits. You cannot question my statement, because you know it is true, but for the information of the Members and the country I am going to quote from the orders sent out.

On January 7, 1939, order No. 173 was sent out. It reads as follows:

> That persons eligible for unemployment-compensation benefits who are currently employed on the works program shall be expected to file claim for their unemployment-compensation benefits. Employment of such persons on the works program shall not be affected because they are eligible for these benefits until determination by the State unemployment-compensation agency that the worker would be entitled to such benefits in the absence of works-program employment. After this determination the worker shall be separated from employment on the works program and shall not be considered as eligible for reemployment during the waiting period nor during the period during which compensation benefits are paid, the worker shall be entitled to reemployment on the works program in the same manner as persons returning from private employment.

Even during the waiting period they had to go off the rolls. They did not even leave them on until they received their first check.

What did Colonel Harrington say to my appeal? I read from his letter:

> It is assumed that Congress intended, through the provisions of the Social Security Act, to assist States in providing means by which persons employed in insured industries might, during periods of employment, help build up a fund through which they could be assisted during periods of unemployment.
>
> The Works Progress Administration does not have sufficient funds to provide work for all persons whose need is primarily due to unemployment. It can only assist, within certain limitations, those persons for whom no other provisions have been made. For this reason this Administration cannot assume the responsibility of providing employment for persons who are eligible for unemployment compensation benefits.
>
> Your suggestion that project workers who perfect their claims for unemployment compensation benefits but who receive from them a sum less than the security wage they earned on projects operated by this Administration, be permitted part-time employment on such projects, has been considered. It is believed that such a plan would be contrary to the provisions of the various State unemployment compensation acts. A great many States have taken the position that work on projects operated by this Administration is employment within the terms of the State unemployment compensation act, and that even part-time work on such projects would render workers ineligible for unemployment compensation benefits.

Mr. Chairman, when the mothers with dependent children were dismissed they immediately went to the State social-security office in St. Louis and appealed for aid. Due to the fact that the Missouri Legislature did not provide sufficient money for administrative expenditures they did not have employees who could interview them. I do not know the exact number but between 1,250 and 1,500 mothers were dismissed. It mattered not if they had 1 or 10 children. In the St. Louis office at the time nearly 5,000 applications for aid from mothers were pending when these separations occurred. Many of the mothers with their children stood outside the relief office all day. They secured wash tubs and built fires in them to keep warm. I know this because the pictures were printed in the St. Louis papers. Pictures do not lie. This situation resulted because Congress did not provide sufficient money to keep these mothers on the W. P. A. rolls.

You can double or triple my taxes if you desire if that be necessary to take care of these unfortunate people. I will pay it willingly. Let some of the businessmen who clamor for reductions in these expenditures take care of these mothers if they do not want the Government to look after them. They did not want something for nothing but were willing to work. If it was their mother or our mother they might look at it in a different way.

Mr. Chairman, I can see the handwriting on the wall. I have been here too long not to be able to realize what is going to happen when the bill is reached for amendment. Many amendments will be offered, including one by the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZPATRICK], who will move to increase the amount to $150,000,000, which Colonel Harrington says is necessary to prevent wholesale separations from the relief rolls. You are going to get at most $100,000,000, and it might be that we will be required to call the roll to get $100,000,000; but, thank God, this resolution is so written that we can get a roll call on the $100,000,000. I wish we could get a roll call on the $150,000,000. [Applause.] You might and will vote in the Committee of the Whole against $150,000,000, but you do not dare go on record against $100,000,000. I will vote for $150,000,000.

The Republican Members on my left promised the people of the country everything at the last election. So did I, insofar as promising to vote for appropriations sufficient to take care of W. P. A. until private industry was able to place these unfortunate people back to work. I am going to keep my word. Further, I told them in advance of the election, "If you want a man representing you in Congress who will not stand by the President of the United States, then vote for somebody else. Do not vote for COCHRAN." That is what I told them before the election, and I have never broken a promise made my people, and I do not intend to do so. They sent me back and they want me to keep my word. They will not be disappointed in me, regardless of how many with comfortable incomes yell for a balanced Budget.

Mr. Chairman, to those who do not come from large centers like some of us do, I say look at this question from a national and not from a local standpoint, just as you wanted us to look at the farm question the other day from a national rather than a local standpoint. I repeat what I said a moment ago. I voted with you. I voted for the farmers. I have always supported farm bills, with one exception, and the only exception since I have been a Member of this House was the old McNary-Haugen agricultural bill. There are a lot of Members on both sides of the House representing farm districts still here who voted as I did on the McNary-Haugen bill. Treat our people in the cities as you want us to assist your farmers. That is all we ask. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. O'CONNOR].

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, I have read the evidence presented before the committee. That evidence not only justifies, in my judgment, but demands that this House vote $150,000,000 for the needy of the country. I, for one, am going to vote for the $150,000,000 appropriation when it comes before us.

Mr. Chairman, I want to read a telegram which I just received from Butte, Mont., as follows:

BUTTE, MONT., March 27, 1939.

Congressman J. F. O'CONNOR:

Six hundred citizens at mass meeting tonight voted demand immediate passage of additional $150,000,000 for W. P. A. to prevent acute suffering of unemployed here. Scheduled lay-offs will cost our community $100,000 per month in purchasing power. This will bankrupt local merchants.

H. WURST,
Secretary, Joint Committee Butte Workers' Alliance and Butte Miners' Union.

Today we are considering an appropriation for 3,000,000 persons employed on the W. P. A. whose very bread and milk depends upon our action on the measure now before the House.

It is the height of futility for any Member of this House to argue against the necessity of the passage of the $150,000,000 amendment. It is not only impossible but inhuman for any government to attempt to economize by refusing to provide the necessary food and shelter for needy babies, women, and men. Let us not economize at the cost of the health of our children who some day will be called upon to run the affairs of our Government.

It is all well and good for our Republican friends to argue, for political purposes only, that we can never expect to balance the Budget if we continue to appropriate large sums of money for relief. But will any Member of this House deny that first of all it is more important to balance vacuous stomachs with wholesome food? When we attempt to balance the Budget let us leave humanity off the scales.

I am in favor of consolidation of all public-works agencies under one head or department to the end that overhead expenses will be reduced, thereby saving in cost of administration and at the same time increasing the wages of the men who do the work.

I receive scores of communications in my office daily protesting against the administrative and overhead expenses of the Works Progress Administration. It is my firm belief that the greater percentage of funds appropriated for the W. P. A. should go to the men who actually do the work, not the white-collar workers. I have also received many protests that the W. P. A. is not giving preference to war veterans as provided in the regulations covering the program.

We are now considering the second appropriation for the W. P. A. during the current session and soon we will have under consideration the appropriation for next year. No Federal agency, whether temporary or permanent, can operate efficiently and satisfactorily from day to day. The Works Progress Administration must have a sufficient amount of funds on hand so as to plan a public-works program which will contribute to the permanent stability of our Nation.

No class of persons can live from day to day and remain good citizens. Without present stability there can be no sound future. It is not my intention to imply that any person should look to a future on the relief roll, but at the same time we must take care of our needy persons until they are able to find employment in private industry and not depend upon the Government for their subsistence.

It is easy enough for private industry to blame policies and programs of the Federal Government for their inability to make room for a greater number of laborers. It is easy enough for our Republican colleagues on the floor of the House to orate on the necessity of a balanced Budget. My desire for a balanced Budget is as great as any Member in this House, but we must apply "hoss sense" in our balancing methods.

The heart of the problem is that we have the leaders of Republican business and a Democratic administration, and presumably never the twain shall meet. We have seen what Republican business and a Republican administration together can do. The common man rejected that twosome in 1932. And today we find the same agencies, the leaders of Republican business and a Republican minority, working against the interests of the common man. Is it possible that the heavy hand of powerful national Republican leaders is pressing down on the Republican minority?

This House voted an appropriation of a half billion dollars for implements of war. Today we are appropriating for peace, internal peace.

We will not be faced with appropriating money for the Works Progress Administration and other relief agencies on the floor of this House when private industry opens its doors and works hand in hand with the Government to reduce our relief rolls. But we will have the relief problem on our hands until that absorption takes place. And that absorption cannot be done by the Federal Government alone.

The ironical phase of the appropriation bill now before the House is that if we appropriate $150,000,000, even then 350,000 persons will be dropped from W. P. A. rolls between now and the latter part of June, according to announcement by Colonel Harrington. The Works Progress Administration informs me that it would require $186,000,000 to carry the relief load without cuts to July of this year. Our action on the W. P. A. bill will determine whether or not we shall have more or less human suffering among our needy people. [Applause.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield one-half minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZPATRICK].

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Chairman, I call the attention of the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] to the statement he made when the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM] yielded to me for a question. I asked the gentleman from Virginia how the taxes paid into the Federal Treasury from the State of New York compared with the relief money given to the State.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] answered my question by stating that New York received more money than it paid in. I was informed by the Treasury Department that the amount of money in taxes paid by the State of New York in 1938 to the Federal Government was $1,085,612,964.67. From the W. P. A. I received the information that the amount of money the State of New York received from W. P. A. for 1938 was $265,275,049. In other words, the amount received was about 25 percent of the total taxes paid by the State of New York to the Federal Government.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself one-half minute.

The taxes paid in the State of New York are very largely paid by large corporations whose stockholders are in other States.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BENDER].

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Chairman, I have here on the table some of the mail I have received in support of the additional $150,000,000 appropriation for W. P. A. This mail is in the form of printed post cards that someone has supplied to the people who are sending them in. In most cases the addresses on these postcards are not the addresses of the persons who sent them, as I know, because I have answered every one of them and invariably the mail is returned to me as "nondeliverable" because of insufficient address.

I have been getting this mail ever since January 13. This post card of January 13 indicates that unless the $875,000,000 is voted 10,000 people in my home city of Cleveland will be taken off the W. P. A. rolls. Another card in this series states "Please, Congressman, demand stop for W. P. A. layoffs." This measure had not even been voted on then. At that time over 10,000 persons had been laid off the W. P. A. pay rolls between election time and January 13. What happened during the month of November to cause a wholesale lay-off of over 10,000 of our fellow townsmen from the W. P. A. rolls?

I am entirely in sympathy with the needs of the poor people in my home city and my home State. I served in the Ohio Senate for a 10-year period before I came here. During my entire political career back in Cleveland I have always taken the side of the underdog, and the laboring classes, organized and unorganized.

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BENDER. I will not yield.

I object to and I protest against either the President or the Administration using the poor people of this country as a political football.

Here is another notice that comes from the Workers' Alliance, one of several thousand I have here—all coming from the Workers' Alliance. Where do they get the money to finance this sort of thing? I understand the Workers' Alliance is a branch of the Communist organization. Here is a leaflet that came to me today.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BENDER. I will not yield.

Will you be one of the million who will get a "403" lay-off order on April 1?

Imagine the poor people of this country being told that if we fail to vote $150,000,000 over a million people will be laid off on April 1. This bill cannot even be voted out by April 1, because the Senate must consider it.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BENDER. No. I will yield after I get through with this statement.

I say to you that if all the monkey business were taken out of W. P. A., if all the hokum were taken out of it, and if the poor people for whom this money is earmarked would really get the money, we would not have a request for $150,000,000 now. [Applause.]

I have in my hand a clipping taken from a Nebraska newspaper, the Omaha Evening World-Herald. The main article on this day carries the headline, "Diapers distributed to aged on relief here 'to get rid of them.'"

Charges the W. P. A. sewing center here has made so many thousand diapers that State officials are distributing them as surplus commodities to the aged were made by E. F. Magaret, county relief director, and County Commissioners Jacobberger, Bergman, and Burns in a conference with State assistance officials today.

Mr. Magaret brought up the diapers, the $5,000 worth of Surplus Commodity Corporation potatoes that rotted in Omaha, and other matters to show that local control was more efficient in relief than "remote control" from Lincoln, Nebr., or Washington.

"So many diapers were made that the Surplus Commodities distribution management was alarmed," said Mr. Magaret. "Orders went out to get rid of them before the public found out."

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BENDER. No. [Reading:]

Lately the old-age people on relief have been getting diapers in their surplus-commodities packages. Old men asking overalls were surprised to find diapers in their packages.

[Laughter.]

Can you imagine yourself as an old fellow out of work and in need of a pair of pants or overalls? Your Government sends you a package. You beam with expectancy when the mailman comes with that package. You say, "Well, here is Uncle Sam coming to my rescue." Then instead of giving you a pair of overalls they send you a couple of diapers. I will agree that a diaper is a very useful garment but not for an old person. What in the world do they think we are, a nation of Mahatma Gandhis? [Laughter.]

Another demonstration of this sort of absurdity occurred right in my home city of Cleveland. Here is a letter I received today, dated March 27, on this letterhead, "Marionettes that amuse; Franc Still, Theater of the Wooden Soldier":

CLEVELAND, OHIO, March 27, 1939.

HON. GEORGE BENDER,
Cleveland, Ohio.

DEAR MR. BENDER: In reference to our telephone conversation of today. The Federal Theater for Youth is and has been operating here in Cleveland for the past 2 years, charging the children 10 cents admission and taking 50 percent of the proceeds. This has caused me to have no employment for several people who are now on relief I have been told. One, I am sure, and he will not leave for he tells me that he is making $15 a week and knows he will be able to keep it steady the year around. I offered him a job for the next 3 months, paying $16 and a bonus.

I feel the Government has allowed this, at the same time taking several hundred each year in taxes from me. They may have to feed these people, but they do not have to set them up in business to compete with me. If they must produce plays the Government should bear all the expense and let them play for nothing or let them try to sell their production for the price they would have to get if the show had to carry the total cost. They would have to get $200 per day for a cast of 40, as they claim they need to produce their plays. Then the production cost would have to be considered. The short of the whole thing is I have a marionette production with three people employed; we have around $3,000 tied up in equipment, and were the first to produce good marionette shows to play on a 50-50 basis, 10-cent admission. The show takes a 50 percent jolt through the average year, this and around $3,000 in salaries make you have to really get going. This Federal bunch threw five representatives in the field early in the school year. The schools of Cleveland have a board ruling of two paid entertainments per year, they were not satisfied with one in each school, every place they could they placed the two. Now the schools will barely write off one show. How can the Government hope to ever solve the problem of unemployment when they do not consider the loss they cause by doing such things. I put my earnings from last year into a new show and cannot sell it. The only reason is the principals think they are getting much more for their money; they do not stop to think that these same children will be working when they are my age to pay for these shows. Really costing around $300 per day. The cost appearing to be only $10 per performance and 50 percent over the 10.

I would like very much to offer one of my trucks to the Federal Theater. If they will put me on their pay roll at the salary of a director, and take the people that have worked for me that are now forced to resort to the relief rolls, pay them, and assure them their jobs, I can beat this price with a marionette show. I can play for $5 per school, and do fine. The fact is if they don't move this bunch of bums—they shouldn't be called actors—out of the way, I will soon apply for some kind of aid for myself and family of three. It is quite foolish for me to try to fight against such odds, I suppose, but I think I have a right to vent some feelings.

Please, Mr. BENDER, this letter was written in haste, as I wanted you to get the story. I do hope you will see things in a just manner. If I am too harsh in some statements it is because things have been made awful hard for me. I sincerely wish you can do something to better things for me, and if you do you may count on me for help when and if you ever need it.

With best wishes I remain,

Yours truly,

FRANC STILL.

P. S.—I would like to know who or what has happened to the moneys this group has taken out of the schools; what to do to get it made public.

Mr. Chairman, the essential thing for us to do is to investigate before we invest money in more of this foolishness. I could cite hundreds of similar cases, if I had the time, because I have investigated them.

Every investigation costs the taxpayers of this country money; and before any Congressman or Senator votes for this expensive business, he must ask himself very conscientiously, "Is it necessary?" Just now W. P. A. is being prepared for a thorough and sweeping check-up. After all, any businessman operating a $2,500,000,000 enterprise would be justified in wanting to know something about its management. Our Congress is certainly equally justified in demanding the facts on our Works Progress Administration.

There is reason for this inquiry. In every phase of relief work, wherever public funds are being expended with prodigal liberality, the temptation toward dishonesty or fraud is present in constantly expanding degree. In New York, for example, the hue and cry is out for one Charlie Smith, who was head boss of some 600 guards on a W. P. A. project; Mr. Smith is accused of having "sold" jobs on his force. At this time Colonel Somervell, W. P. A. administrator for the New York area, declared that at least 15 instances of the "sale" of jobs had been revealed. Expanding his activities, Mr. Smith had even gone so far as to "sell" appointments to the positions of stenographers and examiners.

In west New York, across the Hudson River, direct relief offices, from whose rolls are selected the W. P. A. workers of tomorrow, are being subjected to a bit of painstaking scrutiny. A report recently submitted to the mayor of the town described the following practices:

1. Issuance of relief orders to apparently nonexistent individuals who cannot be located at the addresses shown in the relief records in the United States Post Office or the election registrar's lists.

2. Continued use and issuance of orders in the names of persons who are employed and who voluntarily requested their severance from relief rolls, either verbally or in writing, and who have not been recipients of public assistance for long periods of time.

3. Issuance of relief orders in the name of a person in C. C. C. camp, which relief he did not receive.

4. Issuance or orders in the names of persons who have moved from west New York to other municipalities and counties but who are self-supporting and have not received relief orders so issued.

5. Issuance of relief orders for and supposed delivery of coal to relief clients who reside in apartment houses, heated by central heating plants, and who deny receipt thereof.

6. Issuance of relief orders and supposed delivery of coal to clients who heat and cook with oil only and deny receipt thereof.

7. Continued issuance of orders for medical prescriptions to individuals who have not been recipients thereof, drawn on and paid to a specific druggist on supposed authority of a specific physician.

8. Continued issuance of relief orders in the names of persons employed by W. P. A., who have not been recipients of public assistance for long periods of time.

The foregoing contentions—

State the investigators—have been substantiated by exhaustive investigations, including statements voluntarily made by individuals. Forgery, conspiracy, misrepresentation, and fraud are clearly indicated by the attached cases and supporting data.

All this from one relatively small area, coupled with a growing suspicion of widespread "chiseling," "inadequate supervision," and "the perpetuation of relief" makes the investigation of W. P. A. an urgent necessity. In July, Congress will be asked to make a new appropriation for several billions of dollars to finance the jobs of 3,000,000 men and women. There are disputes over the accuracy of the number. There are rumors that the rolls have been padded for political purposes in many important political centers. There are whispers of fraud from New Mexico to New York.

The investigation is necessary. Let it be informative rather than sensational. Let it present the facts as they really are so that the Nation may make up its mind on the basis of the truth, rather than hysteria.

I have applied for thousands of my fellow townsmen for jobs on W. P. A. and I have been successful in getting some of them on. You cannot possibly imagine the suffering that our people have experienced under the administration of our Federal affairs we have had in recent years. W. P. A. is nothing for a poor person. How can you live on $15 a week and pay $2 or $3 a week to get to and from a project in a city like Cleveland? Instead of legislating in a piecemeal fashion we ought to have a major operation. Instead of voting all this money from time to time as you tried to do the other day—why, they were voting on this $60,000,000, and, as the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM] said, that bill was going through this House like a cat goes through a dog show. I am very proud of him for calling that to our attention. He showed us how foolish we were in voting the money without knowing anything about it. That is the reason we have had these crazy things in our legislation here, and we vote money this way and that way because the Workers' Alliance or some other organization puts the heat on, without thinking about solving our unemployment proposition in a sensible American way. Every person and every laborer in this country is worthy of his hire. Give the people of this country a real breathing spell. Give the workers regular jobs at regular pay. Take Government out of business and business will provide the jobs. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SWEENEY].

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to announce my intention to support the additional deficiency appropriation of $150,000,000; the amount recommended by the President of the United States. The Members of Congress and the Nation know that at times I have been in disagreement with some of the policies of the President. I support him as a matter of conscience and conviction, when I think he is right. I oppose him when I think he is wrong. Today I repeat with every emphasis at my command what I have stated thousands of times since Franklin D. Roosevelt was elected to the Presidency, that he is fundamentally sound in urging the National Government to assume its responsibility and its obligation to feed, clothe, shelter, and furnish employment to thousands of our fellow citizens who are the victims of this man-made depression. This obligation must continue, whether we like it or not, until such time as industry assumes its responsibility in absorbing the unemployed; and we meet the challenge of the machine age which is partially responsible for our present social and economic ills.

Mr. Chairman, the Appropriation Committee has experienced a change of heart since we considered last January the W. P. A. deficiency program. At that time despite the pleas of the mayors of more than 88 cities of the United States, and the pleas of the President of the United States for the amount of $875,000,000 to carry on the operations of this agency to the end of the fiscal year, the committee urged, and the House passed by a majority, supported by almost every member of the Republican minority, the slashing of one hundred and fifty million from the amount requested by the President.

It was evident that the penny-wise and pound-foolish so-called economy program of the committee and the Republican Members of the House would only serve to hasten consideration of the subsequent appeal that came from the Executive to restore the $150,000,000. By some strange process of reasoning the committee just a few weeks ago said this agency of the Government could get along until the end of the year on the sum of $725,000,000, but today states we will allow you $100,000,000, but not the full amount required by those who have made a factual and accurate study of the necessities of the Works Progress Administration. Why this change of heart? I believe it is because they have heard from the folks back home, and they want to make some amends for their action of last January.

Criticism has been presented here today that the National Government has spent since the depression has set in, all told, $21,000,000,000 for all purposes to meet the emergency; that approximately $7,000,000,000 has been spent by the Works Progress Administration. I hate to visualize just what would have happened to the Nation if we had not spent this money. Millions of unemployed, facing hunger and starvation, would have been driven to revolution overnight; and God alone knows what damage the Nation would have sustained in the loss of life and property, in addition to the destruction of our national morale and possibly our democratic form of government. "It could happen here," as vividly described by our colleague the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. BURDICK].

All of us know there is considerable waste and inefficiency in the administration of the W. P. A. money. Because of this it ill becomes the Congress to take it out on the poor fellows who labor with picks and shovels for a mere pittance in an effort to support their families. The W. P. A. workers are our brothers. They have a God-given right to the opportunity to earn a living and maintain their self-respect. From this working class comes the large families. They do not practice birth control. They furnish the soldiers for the Nation's cannon fodder in time of war.

I hold no brief for the administrative staff of the W. P. A., and I am in accord with my colleague the distinguished gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BENDER], who just addressed you, that there ought to be a searching investigation into the administrative activities of this department of the Government. I hope when that time comes that the distinguished gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM], with whom I am in disagreement today over the amount of the appropriation necessary, will be the chairman of that committee. I shall take him to places in Cleveland, Ohio, where there are known Communists on the W. P. A. pay rolls. A few weeks ago by legislation you kicked out the aliens employed on W. P. A., and you put the Communists in their places. I will take the distinguished gentleman to the W. P. A. in Cleveland, where there are scores and scores of married women drawing good salaries, whose husbands are working in private industry earning substantial incomes. I shall call to the attention of the committee a married woman in Cleveland, Ohio, receiving from the W. P. A. in salary over $200 a month, while her husband earns $10,000 a year as director of the Cleveland orchestra.

I shall bring to the attention of the committee a situation that occurred during the summer of 1938 before the election, when the two sons of a Republican leader in Cleveland, a member of the mayor's cabinet in that city and a millionaire, were working on W. P. A., drawing the sums of $265 a month. It was primarily through my efforts an investigation was had, and these men were forced to resign from their lucrative positions and qualified distressed citizens filled their places.

Our Republican friends talk a lot about the Democrats playing politics with the W. P. A. I cannot speak for the rest of the country, but I say emphatically without fear of contradiction that the entire machinery of the W. P. A. in Ohio is run by Republicans. The Republican mayor of the city of Cleveland, through his agents, utilized the relief stations to certify applicants for W. P. A. work, and many passed who had money in bank and income from property. Every Republican politician in Cleveland, Ohio, who means anything to the political machine, somehow manages to find a job on the W. P. A.

My good friends, the gentleman from Ohio, Congressman BENDER, is honest when he says he got jobs in Cleveland as a Republican. More power to him! He got almost 7,500 jobs, and I ask him if that is not a fact?

Mr. BENDER. Yes.

Mr. SWEENEY. I ask you on the Democratic side how many jobs you Democrats got in your respective States from the W. P. A.? This condition in Ohio was brought about by a so-called Democrat who is the administrator of the W. P. A. for Ohio, Dr. Carl Watson. He defends his administration on the ground that he holds the cost of administration down to 2 percent. I am here to state publicly that out of the 2 percent cost 1.99 is being spent to keep on the pay roll, with few exceptions, every conceivable sort of freak social worker and parasite, to which the administrator caters. A Member of Congress is denied by the State administrator and by the National Administrator factual information. They refused to submit the names of those employed, at least they have until the recent committee hearing. Many of the local supervisors are arrogant, discourteous, and in many cases abusive to the many applicants who throng the employment offices seeking an opportunity to work.

I am speaking principally of the conditions as they existed during the year of 1938, when after the adjournment of Congress I interviewed each day on an average 100 persons seeking W. P. A. employment or registering complaint concerning conditions. I do not know Colonel Harrington, the new Administrator, but from every report I am satisfied he is an honest, conscientious public servant, who will attempt to clean out this horrible mess that existed before he took over the responsibility of administering the W. P. A.

I opposed the rule which preceded the consideration of this measure here today. It was one of the worst gag rules ever presented during my experience as a Member of Congress. I trust the opportunity will be present, but I am fearful it will not, to have a roll-call vote on the question of restoring the full amount of $150,000,000 to the appropriation. If our Republican friends and some Democrats who want to shirk their responsibility can shed bitter tears for the W. P. A. worker before election, let them be unafraid to go on record on a roll-call vote in expressing their affection for these distressed citizens when the measure is up for final adoption.

Finally, I suggest to the committee soon to investigate the W. P. A. that hereafter all legitimate complaints of mismanagement, discrimination, or graft in this agency be investigated by the Department of Justice, under the able Attorney General, the Honorable Frank Murphy. As it stands today, the W. P. A. officials investigate each other, and, being bound by the ties of fraternalism and social contact, the inevitable result, with few exceptions, has been a whitewash in each instance.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BENDER].

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Chairman, in answer to my good friend, the gentleman from Ohio, MARTIN SWEENEY, and we are good friends, I did write, not 7,500 times but over 10,000 times to the administration in Cleveland asking that citizens who came to my office be placed on W. P. A. I cannot tell you how many of them got jobs, because I am still writing for many of them to get in, but I will say this to you. When the gentleman states that the administration of W. P. A. is in the hands of Republicans, what he says is not so, because an investigation made by the Cleveland Plain Dealer, a local Democratic newspaper, showed that over 90 percent of the people handling W. P. A. were registered Democrats and active members of the Democratic Party.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. LEMKE].

Mr. LEMKE. Mr. Chairman, I shall support the amendment to this bill to raise the appropriation from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000, and when I do that I realize that there has been some abuse, but this is an appropriation bill and not a bill to correct abuse. Further, I say to my friends on this side of the aisle that they also made promises as well as the friends on the other side of the aisle, and one promise you made and wrote into law in 1933 was to give the farmers parity prices, and the other day you joined the friends on my side of the aisle and "when and iffed" and euchred us out of that measly little $250,000,000 that would have been only a drop in the bucket. The Secretary of Agriculture has stated that if the cost-of-production bill passed Congress the farmer would get an income of about $15,000,000,000 in place of some $7,000,000,000. That is really parity and that is what we are entitled to, but we do not expect to get it from the United States Treasury. We expect to get it from those who consume the products produced by the farmer, his wife, and his children.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEMKE. Yes.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I for one voted for the $250,000,000, and I voted for it because I believed they were entitled to it.

Mr. LEMKE. And I congratulate the gentleman. I say at this time that that $250,000,000 is only a drop in the bucket. The farmers are entitled to an increased income of $7,000,000,000 in order to get cost of production, and if you will support the cost-of-production bill which the Agricultural Committee of the Senate voted out unanimously today, then we will get the money from those who ought to pay it, from those who consume it, and not from the United States Treasury.

Further, I am one of those who feel that the able chairman of the Committee on Appropriations should bring out a bill here to correct the abuse.

There are some abuses, but there are abuses in all of these things when you have to deal with 11,450,000 people. It is no small job to do that. The report of the minority of the committee shows that in February 1939 there were 11,470,000 unemployed and 32,627,000 employed. In other words, we have one-fourth of the men and women who are capable of working classed as unemployed, a thing that ought to be an insult to our intelligence.

There are 435 Members here who have been fiddling around here ever since I have been a Member of Congress, and all the time there has been legislation pending which would have made this relief unnecessary if we had gotten together and worked as we should have to make these men and women self-supporting and self-sustaining. Until we do that I shall vote for relief and continue to vote for it, whether it is a million dollars or a billion dollars, to take care of people who are in misery and who are hungry.

To set forth the situation in the Nation, not as it is in the District of Columbia but as it is in the Middle West, I shall quote from a letter received from the Governor of my State, John Moses, a good Democrat:

DEAR MR. LEMKE: As you know, our people are facing a very serious situation if Congress fails to appropriate $150,000,000 to carry on the Works Progress Administration through till the 30th of June. I have had several conferences with the State administrator, Thomas H. Moodie, and am advised that out of the 14,000 men now employed on W. P. A. 2,100 will be dismissed by April 1 if additional money is not made available. As a consequence, through these men and their families, not less than 10,000 people will be dependent on the State relief agencies, which at this time will mean the practical break down of the State agencies and will mean an additional drain on the State welfare board finances which will be well-nigh unbearable.

Gentlemen should remember that in these Western States there has not been a crop for 10 years in some places.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from North Dakota has expired.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FADDIS].

Mr. FADDIS. Mr. Chairman, if it were possible to do so, I would like to offer an amendment to this bill providing that a million dollars be earmarked for the purpose of the Works Progress Administration sending a commission to China to study their methods of national rehabilitation. I am sure, Mr. Chairman, we could learn some very valuable lessons in this respect from the so-called "heathen Chinee."

Mr. Chairman, I wish it to be distinctly understood that I am not advocating that we apply the Chinese standards of living to the solution of our unemployment.

Mr. Chairman, I am not attempting to appear either humorous or sarcastic. I am serious. For the past 4 years, under the system of "rubber stamp" writing of blank checks of whatever amount asked for, we have been doing this Nation an injustice. We have been doing all of the people an injustice, but we have been working a special injustice upon the unemployed of this Nation. After all, they are deserving of the same care and protection that any other class of our citizens receive. They are entitled to the protection of their Government, and they have not been receiving it.

We, the Congress, are to blame. Instead of insisting upon what we knew was right we have followed the path of least resistance and have acquiesced in a program which has destroyed the moral fiber of each and every man who has come in contact with it. We have written blank checks which have been put in the hands of impractical, sentimental, theoretical socialistic-minded spendthrifts, who under the influence of the communistic-controlled Workers' Alliance, have engaged in a paternalistic program which has almost wrecked our Nation morally, financially, industrially, and economically. In return for this money we have left nothing of lasting effect unless you care to count the W. P. A. building at the New York World's Fair or the swing Mikado.

With all this expenditure of money, as far as I know, we have not settled one family on land where they can make a living for themselves or started one industry to make any group of our unemployed self-supporting. In January the Congress did, by its refusal to grant the full sum demanded for the remainder of this fiscal year, succeed in getting the W. P. A. to eliminate from its rolls some 80,000 chiselers and many thousands of aliens. We feel that we are making some progress. No one wishes to see any unemployed person suffer any distress, but we, as representatives of the taxpayers of this Nation, must also protect their interests.

Let us turn for a moment to the other side of the world. China, that sleeping giant has been aroused from her lethargy of centuries and is becoming really progressive. In the midst of a war on her own territory she is carrying on the war and at the same time shifting her population about and rehabilitating her nation and her people. Cut off very largely from supplies from outside, she is "rolling her own."

For centuries she has been faced with an industrial situation far worse than any with which we have ever been faced. Then on top of that a war—and a war of invasion at that. Millions upon millions of her citizens forced to migrate for thousands of miles. Did the Government of that nation choose to take the path of least resistance and place these people on a dole and forever destroy their moral fiber? Not so. They have been provided with land upon which to raise their living. They have been provided with industries with which to supply themselves with the necessities of life, to make supplies for the army and commodities for export. They are carrying on a policy which will win the war and which when the war has ended will leave China a really progressive nation.

They are building up while we are tearing down because under the spur of dire necessity they have ceased to dream of the past and are living in the present. They are putting to work the time-tested axiom of government—the people must support the government, and not the government support the people. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania yields back 5 minutes.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. LAMBERTSON].

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, the liberal of the La Follette and Teddy Roosevelt school was the fellow who believed in taking away special privilege, but the liberal of today, under the definition of the New Deal, is the spender and the one who keeps on spending to cure every ill imaginable.

Throughout 144 years of the existence of our Government we did not feed anybody out of the Federal Treasury, and practically nobody starved. If we had not appropriated these billions and billions in the last few years there would have been another way they would have been fed. If the President had followed his promised economy of the first month and practiced economy, except for soldiers, and carried it forward and reduced Government expenses 25 percent, we would have been on the road to recovery and there would not have been these billions spent, and nobody would have starved. It was 144 years before we fed anybody. Were there not poor people in the nineties and the eighties and the seventies? Is it not funny when you think of it in the light of today that nobody starved to death in this country and the Government never fed any of them for 144 years, but all at once billions and billions and billions, imperative, necessary, and all that sort of thing?

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. No; I cannot yield. I have too much to say in my own time.

The request for $875,000,000 as it came before our committee was not arrived at on any scientific basis. Understand that. Some of them talked a billion; some talked nine hundred million; some eight; some seven; some six—down behind the doors where they were trying to decide on a figure. It was not arrived at by any scientific calculation. They finally hit on $875,000,000, and they came up here and agreed to stand by it. That is the evidence before the committee.

Mr. HEALEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. No; I cannot.

We thought that out of the waste we could see on the surface, from what the evidence disclosed, we could save $150,000,000; and the committee brought it in. There has not been a finer reaction in 10 years from my people than there was to that action.

Mr. HEALEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. No; I cannot.

There was not a finer reaction to anything that this Congress ever did than the reaction to cutting off $150,000,000. That reaction was from a rural section which I represent. There has not been anything exceeding it in the 10 years I have been in this Congress. What happened? The very afternoon that bill was signed by the President he said, "We have got to have $150,000,000 more." They had not had time to develop any evidence. It was that determination to have everything he asked for. In his first inaugural he said, "You know, Teddy has said at some time that nobody could bat over 75 percent," and he would admit it; but he has never admitted once that he was ever wrong. This is the last determination, the last stand, where he is determined to have his way, just as he did last week on the reorganization bill.

Mr. LEAVY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. No; I cannot. I wish I could.

The thing involved is somebody's determination. This $150,000,000 here is not so much for relief as it is to satisfy the determination. If it had not been for so many millions of money put into fool things like that project in St. Louis and others of a similar nature, we would not have to consider this $150,000,000 at all. We have had so many dozen—half a hundred things just like that, where relief money went to real-estate owners and did not feed even one hungry soul, one hungry mouth. We have had so much of that.

Spring is here. Out in the country they work 3 days a week and receive just as much pay as the farmer ever paid for 6 days' work. They would rather work the 3 days and let the farmer go look for his labor some place else or not have it at all. We ought to take them off relief. We ought to force W. P. A. workers in the rural sections to go to work on the farms as they used to, and there is nothing that would be finer for them than for us to turn this bill down.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 additional minute to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I did not vote for parity, yet I represent a rural section. Parity is not going to do this thing. Giving people candy is not going to solve the farm problem; it is not going to solve the relief problem. We have been spending money recklessly for 6 years and we are worse off than when we started. Is it not time to change and try something else?

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I cannot yield. As I say, we are worse off than ever. It is time we started to do some thinking, time that we planned what we know would develop confidence that will release the billions that are stored up in banks and hoarded. Restore confidence so that those idle dollars will come out and be used for the employment of people. This is the only way we can ever come to a satisfactory recovery. Feeding people is not going to do it. Let us put first things first; let us put people back to work.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. VOORHIS].

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, if we wanted to talk about fundamental things, of course, we would be talking about a monetary system, tax program, and pension program which would be effective in bringing about that balance between the consuming power of the people of this country and their power to produce without which a free economic system cannot survive. I am not going into a long economic argument about that this afternoon, but I can say that conditions in this country for everyone will be worse to the extent that you deny purchasing power to the people, and they will be better to the extent that you enable people who otherwise will not have purchasing power to have enough at least to buy food, clothing, and shelter. One dollar paid in W. P. A. wages means $1 more of demand for goods of farms and industries.

The issue, Mr. Chairman, is not whether W. P. A. should or should not spend money for building airports, or should or should not spend money for building outhouses. I think these two projects are about the two extremes that we could imagine. One gentleman has objected to one, another gentleman to the other. Somewhere between the two there ought to be found the kind of project that is acceptable to all. But I wonder whether that is possible and am compelled to conclude that some Members of the House really desire not so much one kind of project or another as the destruction of the whole works program and a return to the dole for the unemployed.

All thoughtful Members, I am sure, would far rather have our unemployed people doing useful work instead of sitting around idle. I am in favor of improvement of this program, as I am sure Colonel Harrington is, but I feel that the arguments that have been advanced against this program this afternoon are just about as inconsequential as the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON] has described them. I wish every Member of the House could reread his speech before he votes on this bill and amendments to it.

The man that I am concerned about is the man who needs a job and cannot get one. Beside him all the rest of this talk is unimportant. There are 8,000,000 of those men in this country who are not on the W. P. A. today. And yet the committee proposes a further cut. In my district most of these men are over 50 years of age—beyond the age where industry will hire them or where civil service will let them take an examination. This average W. P. A. worker has a family to support and he wants to work, he does not want to be idle. He is as good an American as you or I. I figured up that there are about 1,000 such people in my district alone, heads of families, who are going to be thrown out of jobs unless we appropriate not $100,000,000 but $150,000,000 today. I do not believe it is quite fair to them for us to say that the W. P. A. has things the matter with it and therefore we will condemn them to direct relief. Remember these folks need "confidence" too! After all, Congress has had 6 years in which to direct the conduct of W. P. A. and handle it in a constructive way, to lay down standards whereby this program should be carried on, to pass a careful legislative act regarding a public works program.

I am in favor of doing that, I have always been in favor of doing that, and I have even introduced bills to do it. But I am not in favor of excusing our failure to do that by taking it out on the poor people of this country at this time. When we considered the W. P. A. appropriation bill in February we were told we should cut the President's figure and that if we did the people would go back to work in private industry. We did cut it. And today there are almost 2,000,000 people eligible in every way and in need of W. P. A. work who cannot get it.

It is Congress' responsibility to see to it that so far as possible equal justice is done to all. That is the reason I voted for parity payments. It is the reason I am for $150,000,000 for W. P. A.; not because I think it is a perfect solution but because I think that until we get down to business and solve this economic problem that we have got to do the things necessary to be done to prevent injustice. I am in favor of spending money to save people rather than spending people to save money. We are told by the gentleman from Tennessee that there has been a revival of employment according to A. F. of L. figures. If so, let us not kill that revival by making a mistake in this appropriation bill.

I think there may be this to be thought of in this connection too, and I say it earnestly, that after all the American people are inclined to cast their ballots at elections in accordance with the general economic conditions that pertain at a certain time. We all know that. I would regret very deeply to think that a single Member of Congress would fail to do a thing which would improve the economic circumstances of this country. I would hate to think that anyone here would fail to do what is best for the relief of economic conditions in this country. I would hate to think that anyone would play politics with human need. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WIGGLESWORTH].

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Chairman, during the past 6 years this Congress has appropriated over $55,000,000,000. Since July of 1935 we have made available to W. P. A. the sum of about six and one-half billion dollars. During the present fiscal year and for the same purpose we have made available over $2,000,000,000. Yet we are confronted today with a situation reflected in eleven and one-half million of our fellow citizens out of employment, 1,700,000 on direct relief, and 3,000,000 on the rolls of the W. P. A.

Mr. Chairman, to my mind this is a tragic picture—a picture which eloquently condemns policies which we have been pursuing in this country in recent years, policies which, in my judgment, have served to hamstring legitimate enterprise throughout the length and breadth of the Nation, and to deprive millions of American men and women of real jobs at decent wages under decent working conditions. In my judgment, the W. P. A. problem will never be solved until these policies have been discontinued or changed so as to permit honest industry in America to again function.

Mr. Chairman, I believe that every Member of this House is sincerely in favor of adequate relief for those in need in these terrible times. Those in need must be given a helping hand and Uncle Sam must shoulder his fair share of this burden. I think it is also apparent that this House is overwhelmingly opposed to the present system of relief or to the administration of that system which now stands before the Nation charged with waste and extravagance, with the scandalous misuse of money made available for those in need, with the actual fostering of subversive propaganda against the Government itself.

All of us are familiar with the so-called Sheppard report, some 440 pages in length, and with the scandalous abuse which that report developed in State after State, much of it attributable to W. P. A. in connection with the last campaign. I call attention in this connection to the testimony of one of our Democratic colleagues, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. ALLEN], who gave your committee evidence from his own congressional district along similar lines to that appearing in the report in respect to Pennsylvania as a whole.

We are all familiar also with the report of the Dies committee and with the evidence found in that report with respect to the writers' project of the W. P. A. and the fostering, under that project, of subversive propaganda even against the National Government itself. I call attention in this connection to the following letter appearing at page 211 of the House hearings, written some years ago, to be sure, but written nevertheless to the editor of the Nation by Mr. Henry B. Alsberg, national director of the writers' project, at a salary heretofore of $7,200:

NEW YORK, October 11.

To the EDITOR OF THE NATION.

SIR: The recent series of prison revolts, especially that of the Colorado convicts, directs attention to our entire system of penology. Most penologists already admit that conditions in our jails are unspeakable; the great majority of us, however, have no familiarity with these conditions and go on happily, never reflecting that upward of 200,000 Americans are always in jail and about 5,000,000 have at one time or another been submitted to demoralizing jail conditions.

In a short letter like this one I can only outline certain suggestions which are usually pushed aside as absurdly fantastic, but which have, nevertheless, been brought nearer reality by the acts of the convicts themselves:

1. Reform must be won by the convicts themselves. The history of prison scandals of over a century proves how little is accomplished from the outside. No class has ever won rights except through its own efforts. Witness the case of trade-unionism, women's rights, conscientious objectors, and political prisoners in Russia and elsewhere in Europe. Already the epidemic of prison revolts has aroused the public and forced Messrs. Hoover, Roosevelt, and other notables to advocate reform.

2. Convicts constitute a class with as great a community of interests as any other class.

3. It would not therefore be difficult to develop class consciousness among criminals. In fact, it already exists.

4. But the right kind of class consciousness does not yet exist among criminals. In order to attain it they must slough off their own sense of guilt and must develop a conviction that they are victims of society, not culprits. Most of us are already cynically sure that only the poor, stupid, or mentally diseased get into jail, and that it is almost impossible to make a multimillionaire serve real "time." Statistics prove conclusively that the vast majority of prison inmates are recruited from the poor. The criminal, however, must develop an active conviction that poverty and lack of opportunity are his greatest crimes, and that therefore he is entitled to treatment better, not worse, than that accorded wild animals in captivity.

5. Propaganda for this kind of class consciousness among criminals will have to be made by our young radicals touched by the plight of this great crucified mass of fellow men. They will also have to do the organizing, both inside and outside jail, at least in the beginning. And they will constitute the link between "criminal" and "noncriminal" public opinion.

6. Convicts must not engage in bloody aggressive prison rebellions. The blood must be shed by their jailers, provoked by a determined, passive resistance modeled on that of the conscientious objectors and European politicals, hunger strikes, refusal to cooperate, willingness to die rather than go on under unjust and degrading treatment. Very soon the morale of the better prison wardens, officials, and public will break down in the face of such determination, and the right to humane treatment and to organize for defense of that right will be accorded the criminals. I look forward to the time when every convict, inside or outside jail, will have his union card.

HENRY G. ALSBERG.

I call attention also to the recent Senate hearings, page 217, where will be found evidence of the construction with W. P. A. money of supposed school buildings, which were turned over almost immediately for $1 or a nominal consideration to this or that corporation to be used for the manufacture of hosiery.

The $300,000 world's fair building and the Mikado episode, denying employment to those in need in New York, have already been referred to.

The hearings held in January contain evidence of some 64 major investigations by W. P. A. itself, resulting in the dismissal, suspension, or reprimand of no less than 72 of its own administrative or supervisory officials.

These are some of the incidents which have built up in the country the conviction that the administration of W. P. A. in many places has been guilty of scandalous misuse of money appropriated for the needy. These and similar incidents, with which we are all familiar, have led to the overwhelming vote a few days ago in this House, there being only 27 votes in the negative, in favor of a real investigation of the W. P. A.

Mr. Chairman, I am not going into detail in respect to the record that has already been covered. We are all familiar with the build-up of the W. P. A. rolls from about 2,600,000 last June to 3,257,000 on November 12, just after the campaign. We all appreciate that this build-up occurred in spite of increase in employment during the same period of 1,100,000 and despite an increase in the Federal Reserve bank index of production of about 21 percent. The build-up, of course, was far in excess of that predicted by Harry Hopkins in his testimony before the committee in May or June of last year.

There has also been emphasized today the fact that this build-up after the first and immediate reduction following the campaign has not been materially decreased in recent months. About 3,000,000 persons have been carried on the rolls although during the months of September to January, inclusive, some 1,200,000 persons left the rolls, about 50 percent of them, I believe, voluntarily. The total carried this January is about a million more than in last January. The index of production in January this year, however, was about 26 percent in excess of that of a year ago.

The total funds made available for W. P. A. since its inception have been as follows: For the fiscal year 1936, one billion two hundred million; for the next year, one billion eight hundred million; for the succeeding year, one billion four hundred million; and for the present fiscal year regardless of the pending appropriation, well over $2,000,000,000. The amount appropriated for the present fiscal year is greater than for any other year.

If you add the cost of direct relief to that of W. P. A., Uncle Sam is today shouldering about 72 percent of the burden.

Mr. Chairman, I rose to make a specific suggestion at this time. In January when we were considering this matter I recommended to the House that we appropriate every cent required for the winter months immediately; that we appoint an investigating committee immediately, that further appropriations be made in the light of that investigation. It seemed to me that it was sound to investigate first and appropriate afterward. I supported a motion to recommit on this basis. Had the motion carried no one need have left the W. P. A. rolls during the winter months.

Mr. Chairman, I submit that the same general principle is sound and applicable today. I submit that it should be a perfectly easy matter to put this principle into effect by a simple amendment to the resolution approved on February 6, 1939. A similar proposal has been made in the other body by the distinguished senior Senator from Michigan.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 3 additional minutes.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Chairman, the resolution referred to required the W. P. A. to so apportion the available appropriation that it should cover the entire period from February 4, 1939, to June 30, 1939, the end of the present fiscal year.

According to Colonel Harrington, he has now available sufficient funds to carry him to June 7 if this particular proviso be amended. See letter to Senator VANDENBERG, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, pages 3337–3338. If we accept the reasoning of the report of the committee on this appropriation and add $50,000,000, Colonel Harrington should have in his hands without further appropriation sufficient funds to carry him to June 15, or 2 weeks before the end of the present fiscal year. All that is required is to change the date, June 30, 1939, in the February 4 resolution so that it shall read June 7 or 15, 1939.

The adoption of this simple amendment would eliminate any necessity for appropriating $150,000,000, $100,000,000, $50,000,000, or any other amount whatsoever at this time. It would also eliminate any arbitrary reduction in the number of persons whom the President desires to carry on the W. P. A. rolls. It would afford an opportunity to Colonel Harrington, who has only recently taken charge of W. P. A., to consider further possible economies and to complete the survey of the W. P. A. rolls which he was instructed to complete under the terms of the February 4 resolution. Finally, it would permit the investigation now authorized by the House to proceed for the full period of 10 weeks, with a view to further economies or appropriate revision of the entire system of relief.

By that time the appropriation for the fiscal year 1940 will have to be under active consideration. If further funds should prove essential for the final 2 weeks of the fiscal year, the matter can be considered in connection with that appropriation and in the light of the investigation.

I suggest, Mr. Chairman, that the proposed amendment would afford the simplest method of solving the problem under consideration.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. MILLER].

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, the easiest thing for any Member of this House to do is to support the suggestion of voting the $150,000,000 and proceed to forget all about it. I come from a district containing two large industrial cities and several smaller communities. I am not at this time thinking about any mistakes that might have been made in the past or any money that might have been wasted but trying to keep in mind only the present and future need and best interest of all the people of my district and of the United States.

I have given more serious thought and study to this proposed appropriation than I have given to any matter yet presented to this Congress. I have read every word in the 300-page report of the hearings held on this resolution, and I can find nothing in the testimony that convinces me this additional W. P. A. appropriation is needed or justified.

A few short weeks ago Congress, after lengthy debate, voted seven hundred and twenty-five million to continue W. P. A. from February 7 to June 30. At that time Congress felt that this was all that was really needed. The same day the President signed the bill providing seven hundred and twenty-five million he issued a statement to the effect that he would insist on Congress voting $150,000,000 more for W. P. A. He made no study or investigation of the need.

I represent a district in which you will find more than 20 typical New England towns as well as two large industrial cities. One of these cities is also the insurance center of the United States. The life-insurance companies are really trustees for millions of our citizens—trustees trying to protect the life savings of millions of Americans.

In the campaign of 1938 I promised my people that I would vote for whatever was needed to continue W. P. A. until some better plan of relief administration was devised or until work relief was no longer needed. That promise I kept when I voted seven hundred and twenty-five millions for 5 months of relief.

At no time since 1933 has the Federal Government provided work relief for more than one-third of the unemployed. No one can deny that at the present time many of our States, cities, and towns are in a better financial position than is the Federal Government. Many of them are better able to provide needed work relief than is the Federal Government.

In considering this W. P. A. appropriation I have driven from my mind all knowledge of the money that has been wasted in the past. I have tried to forget how the pay roll of W. P. A. was loaded for the few months prior to the elections last November. We are concerned today with the present and future need of the W. P. A. I am remindful of the saying of an old white-haired nurse I once had caring for me. She was required to give me a treatment that was very painful. As she worked over me she would often say, "To be kind it is often necessary to be cruel." That is still true. Some are going to be hurt if this appropriation fails, but no one is going to go hungry or cold and no one is going to suffer as much as will millions of our citizens if we go on year after year piling up huge debts. If that continues, the day of reckoning will come and we will have either repudiation or wild inflation of the kind we saw in Germany, inflation that will mean ruin for all of us, inflation that will mean a thousand rubber dollars which will not buy a loaf of bread. Where is the gain if by trying to provide work relief for another hundred thousand men and women we bring ruin on all of our citizens?

If every possible dollar of the seven hundred and twenty-five million we recently appropriated for W. P. A. could go to the needy unemployed, this proposed additional appropriation would not be needed. Cut out the waste. Cut from the rolls the wardheelers who are now on W. P. A. administrative pay rolls drawing larger salaries than they had ever drawn before. Why should one man with training and experience be swinging a pick in a ditch, while another man whose only qualification is the fact he has the right political connections be paid twice as much per month to boss the job? Why not go back to the old E. R. A. budget system by which millions of dollars could be saved? I believe that in every town, city, county, and State you could find men who would volunteer their services as a patriotic duty to aid in the honest administration of relief funds.

Every Member of this House knows men in his own district who have been spoiled by being on relief too long. Men who have lost their nerve, who have lost the fighting spirit, who have lost the spark needed to cause them to really try to improve their position. One such man wrote to me a while ago after being laid off a W. P. A. project. After complaining about his lay-off he ended his letter by saying:

> I have been on C. W. A., F. E. R. A., and W. P. A. for almost 4 years. Perhaps this is the best thing that could happen to me as now I will have to go out and look for a real job in private industry.

How many such men are there in the United States? One might be led to believe that we had not already appropriated seven hundred and twenty-five millions for the W. P. A., only a short time back, to listen to some of the debate on this appropriation.

One hundred and fifty million or a hundred million dollars is still a lot of money. I was surprised to hear a Member of this House, speaking here in the Well the other day when we were considering a two hundred and fifty million appropriation for parity payments to the farmers, refer to it as "this small sum of money," and today hear another Member refer to "a measly $150,000,000." They did not really mean what they said, but I submit a million dollars will some day be a measly sum if we ever start the printing presses turning out dollars. It is a dangerous attitude to foster, this consideration of large sums of money as being insignificant and paltry.

As my time draws to a close I will say to you I have confidence that Colonel Harrington will, if denied this appropriation, institute the needed economies in such a way that none will suffer. If this is not done, and those most in need of work are removed from the W. P. A. pay rolls, it will be the fault of the Administration, and the people back home will know where to place the blame.

I am convinced that if this House will stand firmly by the cuts in the cost of government recently voted, if we will deny this unnecessary appropriation, we will have done more for the millions of unemployed than has yet been accomplished. The piling up of debt has not solved the problem. Surely we are right in trying a new method—economy; in that way we will show the employers of labor that we are aware of the dangers ahead, and we will find less unemployed by July 1 than we have had for years. Let us not take the easy way, but let us show our courage, and I am sure the American people will approve our stand and go forward out of this depression.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOOK].

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Chairman, I have heard many discussions here on the proposition that the W. P. A. is not needed and that what we should do is provide jobs in industry for the unemployed. I call the attention of the Members of this House, if they are sincere in thinking along those lines, to the fact that they should give real consideration to the bill H. R. 933, which in my opinion will provide 9,000,000 jobs in industry at regular wages, which will provide a decent living for the men and women of this Nation and, more particularly, the youth between 21 and 30 who are utterly the forgotten men and women today. I want it strictly understood that I am in favor of the $150,000,000 amendment that is to be offered to this bill.

This Congress should be ashamed of its actions, or rather the actions of some of those who claim to represent the people, starving people, and why? You men and women of this House are responsible because you sit idly by and let these things go on. Change your monetary system to chase the money changers out of the temple; put 9,000,000 men to work by adopting my bill—H. R. 933. In the meantime we must have W. P. A. and money to properly administer it so as to save people from starvation. Dr. Whiteshield, a very fine character, a real man from my district, is the author of a poem which is appropriate here:

HUNGER

In every land and every clime the wolf of hunger strays
And gorges on incompetence as terror haunts their ways,
A widow with her ragged brood in desperate struggles keep Starvation just beyond the door, while you in comfort sleep.

The maid is scorned who paints the cheek, to hide the hunger's pale
And sells herself for wanton gold, how can she be so frail?
Ah! could you read her fright'ed soul, ere fatal step she took,
You would not so contented be within your cozy nook.

O woman dear and feted man, cast off your golden chain
That will not let you stoop to serve your fellow man in pain.
Your span upon this earth is short, then let it not be said,
"You lived for self, and self alone, for you're a long time dead."

I dreamed that in this land of ours, rude poverty was slain,
All want was banished evermore, no children cried in vain,
A voice of heavenly music said, "No more you'll hear in scorn
That man's inhumanity to man, make countless thousands mourn."

The people of my district are getting the measly sum of $44 per month, and when I ask that they be raised to $60 to $65 per month I am told there is not money enough to do so. Please be human and help us get the money so that men and women can at least be kept from hunger and suffering Do not penalize the worker for the mistakes of those in charge of the supervision. I fully realize that under the stringent gag rule adopted that we are precluded from offering an amendment to change the rate of pay. If it were open for such an amendment, I would offer it. Those of the so-called economy bloc—that is a phantom thing—are against any parliamentary procedure that would force a roll call to show how they vote on record. They have the voice of Jacob but hand of Esau—hypocrisy supreme.

The W. P. A. has done a wonderful job; one that will go down into the annals of history as the greatest work ever attempted in the name of humanity. What would your businessmen or the laboring men do without it until a better program is formulated to take its place? I am partisan in favor of labor and the common man. I care not what abuse may be heaped upon me from the followers of those who represent the wealthy parasites who live off the profits made from the sweat and the blood of the American workman.

I was interested in the statement of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BENDER], a Republican, concerning politics, and also in the statement of another gentleman from Ohio, who informed the Committee that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BENDER] received about 7,500 jobs from the W. P. A. Here is a Republican who named 7,500 jobs on W. P. A. howling about politics. Inasmuch as the gentleman was elected, then, by the W. P. A., I hope he votes for the $150,000,000 when it comes before the Committee. Oh, but he will not, because under this rule he does not have to vote on record. Shame on such tactics. The laboring man should know his enemy and act accordingly.

I was also interested in the statement of the gentleman from New York with regard to the world's fair. In that statement he criticized the W. P. A. for their activity with regard to the New York World's Fair and informed us that the thing he criticizes was going on before January 1.

He is a member of the World's Fair Commission, and if anything wrong was going on since January 1 and he only discovered it yesterday he certainly must have been derelict in his duty as a member of that Commission. We should have a change in the Commission by his own admission.

I am also interested in the remarks of some of the rest of the gentlemen who opposed this bill. Let me inform you that the philosophy of some of them may have been developed back in their own States. As an illustration, the State of Virginia is the only State in the Union that has not complied with the Social Security Act in order to provide an old-age pension, and the only one that does not have direct relief.

I will vote for $150,000,000 and hope it will pass and then hope consideration will be given to my proposal that has been approved in the news items of the Labor magazine of Tuesday, April 4. May I explain my plan?

I have been very much interested in the statements of Mr. Eccles, Chairman of the Federal Reserve System, and the statements of several of the legislators with regard thereto.

I am firmly convinced that we will not meet the problem of a balanced Budget or the problem of balanced economy until 9,000,000 people are put back to work in the regular channels of industry, commerce, and agriculture at once and assuring the continuance of the new jobs for at least 3 years. Until these people are put back to work in the lines where their training and skills can be used efficiently there will be no basic recovery.

There is no doubt that in 1933 we had to meet the situation then existing by Federal benefits through the very methods that have been practiced in the past. The W. P. A. and its predecessor, the E. R. A., relieved human want on a vast scale and managed a tremendous program of made work, but it was not designed as a plan to do away with unemployment. The purpose of all this Federal subsidy was to create purchasing power. To a certain extent purchasing power was created and there was quite a spirited recovery up to 1937. The employment of men and women on made work brought about a distribution of Government money direct to consumers, and, as I said, to that extent stimulated consumer buying and wholesale and retail trade, but this made work did not create the maximum of collateral or related occupations employment in the ordinary channels of industry and commerce. It did not restore the balanced occupational relationship that is the basis of healthy recovery.

The only way to overcome unemployment is to create enough jobs in enough different lines or occupations to provide chances for every kind of training, ability, or aptitude to get to work. Furthermore, the new jobs must be opened up in all occupations at one and the same time if the necessary balance between increased production and increased purchasing power is to be attained.

I fully realize that there have been so many proposals for business recovery in recent years that a weary public mind no longer gives willing attention to any. Meanwhile the unemployment problem is slowly crowding to the front and compelling recognition as the central factor in the recession.

There are three possible policies to be considered.

First. Are we to accept the optimistic prophecies of early recovery through the liquidation of present inventories and the subsequent revival of manufacturing without stopping to reflect that 7 months of industrial operation at the 1937 rate would build up even larger undigested inventories again?

Second. Are we to assume that the present level of unemployment is normal and that 10,000,000 unemployed need not worry us so long as 30,000,000 are employed and go along with increased appropriations for W. P. A. accordingly, expand the made work and the dole programs to prevent actual starvation but leave from 15 to 20 percent of the total population at bare subsistence?

I do not think that either one of these plans will bring about the desired recovery.

Third. There is the plan that we must adopt and that is a plan that will aim at putting every person to work who is able to work and wants to work back at regular jobs where their productive capacities will be united with the existing industrial plant and the commercial or agricultural organizations of every-day society; where they will produce goods that have an immediate cash exchange value in the channels of trade—using a Government subsidy to the workers thus employed, instead of appropriating Government funds for unemployment or made work.

The loss to the Nation caused by unemployment is colossal. Compare the present army of 10,000,000 unemployed with the 8,454,918 workers in factories in 1935, when the wage earners were paid $9,836,044,674. If the 10,000,000 idle persons are worth as much to society today as the eight and a half million who work, then the actual loss in purchasing power is approximately $10,000,000,000 in this year. The loss is as much as the entire Budget of the Federal Government.

In addition to this indirect loss must be added the direct expenditures for W. P. A. and unemployment insurance, as well as a considerable part of the cost of direct relief which would be met by the relatives of those now on relief, if the family bread winners were regularly employed.

A fair estimate of the Government's cash outlay, arising from unemployment, would be two and a half billion dollars.

We must have a Government program that will stop the loss caused by unemployment. The depression of 1930 and the recession of 1938 have reduced the incomes and spendable savings of the masses of people so profoundly that Government will have to be the moving force to start all industry and all collateral reemployment at one and the same time. Nothing short of universal teamwork can overcome unemployment as it exists today. We must have Government help. We must have the help of industry. A good illustration of the fact that no one industry can bring about recovery, even though it operates full time, is the experience of the automotive industry. What the automotive industry was unable to accomplish in 1936 and 1937 is beyond the power of any other line of employment to accomplish. It is a delusion to think that a program of public works or a house-building program in itself, standing by itself, without complete cooperation of industry, will solve unemployment. Either program might start boldly enough, but it would be many months—and this has been proven—before the money filtered into the channels of commerce far enough to provide employment for domestic workers or professional people or salesmen or the thousands of other occupations only distantly connected with road building or construction. In the gap that is thus created industry has failed to operate. Thus we still have unemployment even though billions have been expended by a well-meaning government and a well-meaning administration. This lag completely absorbs the momentum of the original program before action is communicated to the whole economic structure.

The unemployment problem affects so many people of such diverse occupational training or aptitudes that no one industry, no matter how big, is able to drag the whole industrial, commercial, agricultural, professional, and white-collar occupations along with it. No partial remedy will meet the present need.

We must set up a governmental program which follows, if set up for a minimum of 3 years, will be sweeping enough to overcome the entire unemployment problem as it exists. The net cost to society would be far less than any plan of Nation-wide relief or made work. The program that I am about to submit I feel is logical and defensible from a business or a political standpoint:

First. We must first exempt from taxation such part of industrial earnings as are used in extensions, improvements, or renewals of the plant. A precise definition of these purposes could be prepared by a committee of businessmen.

Second. We must provide means for the extension of credit to finance the increased stocks of raw materials and finished inventories that would arise from the expansion of employment. This would meet the demands of small business and big business alike. This extension of credit should be broken down to such an extent that the small-business man will be given the same opportunity to finance himself as the large monopolies have. This, to a certain extent, will mean a complete revamping of our monetary system. The needs of the railroads for betterments that would result in the economy of operation or improvements of service would be met. At this time I feel that the Interstate Commerce Commission should give full and complete study to the postalization of railroads. Loans for building construction are in the same category; that is, should be extended credit.

Third. I might say that I fully believe and, in fact, a complete study from a statistical and economic point of view has proven, that the two plans above would fall short of the goal of creating 3,000,000 new jobs in manufacturing and 6,000,000 new jobs in collateral occupations. Therefore, the Government must stimulate employment by offering to pay a definite percentage of the wages of persons given new jobs in conformity with quotas set up in each class of industry or service occupation. This could be done by creating a commission which would handle the Government's end in conjunction with industry. The Commission should be authorized to enter into voluntary agreements with employers under the terms of which the Government, through the Commission, will agree to pay 40 percent of the wages of employees who are hired under the provisions as set forth and in accordance with the rules and regulations as laid down. An employer who would participate shall be required to certify under oath the number of employees at work on November 1, 1937, or at some base period, together with the hours worked and the wages paid on that date. The Government should not pay any portion of the wages represented by the basic employment figure but should pay the 40 percent of wages of employees added to the pay roll over and above the basic employment figure, which, in short, is that the Government will subsidize by 40 percent the additional employment over and above the basic period, such payments to be made directly to the employees under regulations as the Government may prescribe.

The Government should be able to require employers to observe wage and hour standards as a condition precedent to conferring the benefits of this act upon such employers, and may promulgate regulations favoring the establishment of annual wages in specified industries. This would not only go to subsidizing those added to the present factory pay rolls but to all industrial, agricultural, domestic, and personal services and, in fact, all lines of employment. For instance, it would go even so far that if a housewife hired a maid, where she did not have a maid before, the Government would subsidize to the extent of 40 percent of the maid's wages. The grand total of 9,000,000 new jobs would be created and thus would completely absorb all unemployed persons able to work and wanting to work. The allocation of the new job quotas among different occupations would be in proportion to the numbers actually employed in such occupations in reasonably healthy times.

Fourth. A comprehensive plan in addition to this should be instituted for training young workers for industry and retraining older workers who find their skills obsoleted because of new machines. Lack of vocational training and retraining has kept hundreds of thousands of individuals practically unemployable since the depression started. Complete reemployment is not possible without some means of vocational training.

Fifth. As a means of completely mopping up unemployment, encouragement should be given to (a) self-help agricultural-industrial cooperatives, where marginal workers cannot meet the demands of industry because of age or physical disability, so that they may make a portion of the things they consume; and (b) limited programs of public works by direct grants of the Federal Government designed to serve regions where industrial or commercial reemployment cannot be had because of the absence of industrial plants or where agriculture is not the prime means of employment.

Sixth. After this has been done there should be a joint congressional committee of, as a suggestion, 10 Members of Congress and 10 from the Senate, set up with a staff of clerks and technical experts to make a careful study of the industrial, agricultural, and commercial factors which enter into the economic structure and ascertain what must be done to bring into balance all the essential elements of an economy of abundance. The plan thus evolved should be ready to be laid before Congress prior to the expiration of the 3-year term of the temporary plan above outlined.

I fully realize that we cannot immediately cut off the W. P. A. and made work without severe repercussion. This plan above mentioned should work so as to gradually take men and women off of relief and place them in private employment. If this plan were put into effect it would be but a very short time until W. P. A. would be completely wiped out because of the absorption of the unemployed in private industry.

You will note that I have said that 9,000,000 jobs are enough to take care of all the unemployed. According to the recent unemployed registration eleven to twelve million people were registered in the unemployed census or indicated by the enumerative count or estimated by automotive agencies. This does not mean that we need ten or twelve million jobs to take care of them because in thousands of families the younger and older members registered for work when they are seeking jobs only until the breadwinner of the family is once more on the regular pay roll. I believe 9,000,000 new jobs will absorb all the people in America who want regular jobs and are able to work. These 9,000,000 new jobs can be created within the horizon of the existing industrial, commercial, and agricultural organization and they can be created within 3 months if the interdependent elements of production and consumption are brought into action at one time and in the right balance.

The 9,000,000 jobs, in order to balance each other, would have to be distributed among the established occupations in essentially the same ratio as each line of work bears with the other lines in normal healthy times; thus the definite ratio between the number of people needed on the farms to produce the foodstuffs and the industrial or white-collar classes of the cities. Similarly, there is a constant ratio between the suppliers of raw materials and the workers who fabricate the finished product. The number of workers engaged in taking ore from the iron ranges, the crews on the vessels that transport it to the Cleveland Ore Erie docks, the trainmen needed on railroads to haul the ore to the docks, the mills, or haul the steel to market must be determined by the activity of the steel mills. In much the same way there is a balance between the automobile factories and the number of truckers employed in hauling away the finished cars, the number of salesmen in garages who find customers, the clerks in finance companies who handle installments, the insurance agents who write the risks, the lawyers who try the damage suits, and the hospitals that patch up the injured in accidents. In the immediate neighborhood of the factories the number of people employed in making automobiles determines even such seemingly insignificant matters as the number of waitresses hired by the quick-lunch counters on the side streets. You will readily see that for every one job created in the factory, three collateral jobs will be created.

The importance of this relationship between occupations has been underestimated and overestimated repeatedly in the past 8 years when the unemployment problem has been under discussion. Clearly the dominant element in making employment for the army of potential workers in the Nation is the number of people who find work in the factory. It follows, however, that the continued employment in factories is impossible unless the goods which are manufactured can be sold. Therefore, mass consumption is necessary to mass production.

It is the pay roll of one occupation which makes the bulk of the effective demand for the products of other occupations. It is an error to assume that one industry, even though it should be the general automobile industry, can go into production regardless of the stagnation of other lines. That gallant effort was made in 1936 and 1937 but the sale of cars came to an abrupt halt when the reserves of the automobile companies, the capital sales agencies, and the credit of the ultimate consumers was absorbed. Therefore, with the textile industries, the building industries, the mining industries, transportation lines, and industry as a whole paying less wages than in 1929 and employing fewer workers, the market for new cars had to suffer. The result was complete stagnation of that great industry.

The W. P. A. or its predecessor, the E. R. A., or any similar plan of relief does not protect the industrious and thrifty worker and his hard-earned savings when a recession strikes him. It is a mistake to assume that everybody out of work immediately goes on relief. The W. P. A. today carries about 3,000,000 workers on its rolls. Thus there are about 8,000,000 unemployed that are carrying on without public aid of any kind. When their savings have gone, if economic conditions are allowed to drift, the numbers on direct relief and made work increases. The self-respecting 8,000,000 will resent being forced on relief. Their resentment may become very important to business and politics.

The reason that a program of public works falls short of bringing about a healthy prosperity or a balanced occupational relationship is that the product has no immediate exchangeability. Highways, sewers, or schoolhouse repairs may be desirable additions to the community equipment but they cannot be dropped into the channels of trade nor made to circulate. When Government money from W. P. A., P. W. A., or any other source goes into highway or building, it becomes a frozen asset. Although the wage dollar may enter the channels of finance and circulate, the product is static and this means just pouring more wage dollars without any immediate recovery. Broadly speaking, business cannot return to normal as long as 20 percent of the available working force of the Nation remains unproductive or engages in work that does not circulate. It is impossible for the workers to carry the unemployed 20 percent on their backs and also meet the entire business overhead. There should be set up in cooperation with a Government program and the National Reemployment Commission State committees to deal with the 169,111 manufacturing industries. County, municipal, or community committees should be set up and charged with the task of enumerating all employers outside of the census of manufacturers listed.

Work in offices, clerking in stores, other kinds of selling, trucking and delivery, garage service, specified kinds of farm work, domestic service, and a thousand other kinds of jobs would be cleared through community committees. These community committees would become active agencies to stimulate purchasing of homes and may act as a liaison in obtaining Government loans or guaranties for the purpose. Committees made up of local citizens who would serve without pay or at a modest per diem would bring the responsibility for reemployment to the doorsteps of the people. Every citizen would have a satisfying part to perform in meeting a most important economic problem that troubles human society. The public would learn that it is responsible for its economic conditions as well as for its political control. Over and above all other things, I believe the most important thing is that we would gainfully employ that great mass of youth between the ages of 21 to 30, so that they may go along and become a real part of society, toward the end of having homes, rearing families, and becoming a real happy asset to the Nation's life.

The cost of this program if 3,000,000 new jobs were created in manufacturing and the Government contributed 40 percent of the wages of the new jobs would require approximately $3,900,000,000 to meet the new pay roll of which the Government would supply $1,560,000,000. If 6,000,000 new jobs were created in collateral operations assuming the wages to average the same as in industry, the Government contributed 40 percent of the wages, it would call for $3,120,000,000 of Government money to meet its share. The grand total Government contribution to employment would be somewhere in the neighborhood of four and four and one-half billion dollars a year.

For each 40 percent contributed by the Government for new jobs would bring forth 60 percent from the employers. The total wage fund in manufacturing would be increased by approximately $4,000,000,000 a year, which would be added to the buying power of the masses. A fair estimate of the value of the goods produced by the new jobs in factories would be $18,000,000,000, of which $8,000,000,000 would represent new value arising from the processes of manufacture. When this $8,000,000,000 of new goods value is added to the new pay roll, it makes a total of $12,000,000,000 of new buying and therefore new consuming power for the people. The new jobs and occupations collateral to manufacture would produce a pay roll of approximately $7,800,000,000; combining this with the twelve billion arising from manufacturing would make a total of $20,000,000,000 new buying power. This is equal to one-third of the estimated national income in 1936, and this is primary buying power in the hands of the masses. This, treated as addition to the national buying power, would be multiplied two and one-half times in considering its effect upon the business of the Nation. The effect on every line of human activity that would come from pouring $20,000,000,000 of new buying power into the current business cannot be measured in words. Therefore, the contribution of $4,000,000,000 of Government funds would be a marvelous investment. As industry would swing into increased production, the tendency of prices of goods in competitive lines would be down.

When a factory operates at mere capacity the overhead cost per unit of product declines. Prices can be reduced without cutting the consumer margin of profit. Real wages would be raised. Even if the dollar wage remains stationary the cost of living would tend downward as an abundance of goods enters the markets. American exporters would find themselves in better condition to meet competitors in neutral markets. This would be one way of meeting the German economic aggression policy on the world markets. The goods that farmers would buy doubtless would be reduced in price while the market for foodstuffs would expand. The increased demand would absorb American agricultural production and if American agricultural production can be absorbed the farmer will need very little Government help other than to see that there is a balance between agriculture and industry. The increase in the national income would more than offset the Government's subsidy. There might be a surplus production in some lines during the first months of this recovery plan during the time the buying power of the masses of the people was being built up but as I said liberal credit arrangements should be made to carry the goods until the market absorbs them. In the larger sense of surplus production there is no likelihood of making more of the good things of life than the American people would enjoy if they could buy them. So long as one-third of the population has less to eat and wear than the most meager living requires the bogey of overproduction can be ignored. The market for any article can be broadened more effectively by increasing the incomes of the masses than merely by cutting the prices. The limits of price cuts are much narrower than the possibilities of enlarging the incomes of a nation of industrious people located on the richest continent of the globe. The wage earner, the housewife, and the children of this Nation will be raised into a realm of a happy state when the breadwinner is put to work at a decent and a fair salary and not be forced to carry on with W. P. A. wages; and when we have a satisfied people, a happy people, and a normal, healthy condition we will have the greatest defense of democracy that could be possible. In order to preserve democracy in this Nation we must have a happy and contented people and it is my honest opinion that the above program will bring about that condition and save democracy in these United States for ourselves and our posterity.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute to say to the gentleman from Michigan that he is badly mistaken in his information. The State of Virginia has complied with the Social Security Act.

Mr. HOOK. How long since?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Well, it has complied with it.

Mr. HOOK. How long since?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. At the last session of its legislature, a year or two ago; and the State of Virginia has direct relief. So my friend ought to check up a little bit on his information.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Virginia has expired.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. WARREN, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 246) making a further additional appropriation for work relief and relief for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, had come to no resolution thereon.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend the remarks I made today and to include certain tables from the record.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members who spoke on the bill may be permitted to revise and extend their own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

HOUR OF MEETING TOMORROW

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock a. m. tomorrow.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Monday next, after the disposition of matters on the Speaker's desk and the legislative business of the day, I may be permitted to address the House for 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. KIRWAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD by including therein a story from Colliers.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. SCHWERT and Mr. NORRELL asked and were given permission to revise and extend their own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. SACKS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by including therein a speech made by my colleague the gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER] over the Columbia Broadcasting System on Thursday, March 23.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to include a brief editorial from the St. Louis Star Times.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SHANLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks made on the appropriation bill last week, and to include certain extracts.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include a radio address I delivered on March 24 over the Columbia network.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks made today and to include certain excerpts from the hearings on the bill under consideration.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks made today and to include certain tables.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. JOHNS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to include therein a joint resolution memorializing Congress for a higher tariff on dairy products.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to insert a joint resolution of the Wisconsin Legislature memorializing Congress to pass an agricultural equality bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

GENERAL LEAVE TO PRINT

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to extend their own remarks upon the relief bill under consideration.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

RATIFICATION OF FIRST 10 AMENDMENTS TO CONSTITUTION BY GEORGIA

The SPEAKER laid before the House a communication from the Clerk of the House, transmitting a concurrent resolution of the Assembly of the State of Georgia ratifying the first 10 amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

ENROLLED BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled an enrolled bill and an enrolled joint resolution of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H. R. 4425. An act to provide for reorganizing agencies of the Government, and for other purposes; and

H. J. Res. 250. Joint resolution making an additional appropriation for the fiscal year 1939 for expenditure by the United States Employees' Compensation Commission in accordance with section 16 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938.

BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTION PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee did on this day present to the President, for his approval, a bill and a joint resolution of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 4425. An act to provide for reorganizing agencies of the Government, and for other purposes; and

H. J. Res. 250. Joint resolution making an additional appropriation for the fiscal year 1939 for expenditure by the United States Employees' Compensation Commission in accordance with section 16 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 9 minutes p. m.) the House, under its previous order, adjourned until tomorrow, Friday, March 31, 1939, at 11 o'clock a. m.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS

Public hearings will continue on Friday, March 31, 1939, at 10 a. m., on social-security legislation, in the Ways and Means Committee room in the New House Office Building.

COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce at 10 a. m. Friday, March 31, 1939. Business to be considered: Railroad legislation—H. R. 2531.

There will be a meeting of the Business Research Subcommittee of the Commitee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce at 10 a. m. Monday, April 3, 1939. Business to be considered: Hearing on H. R. 3395—business-research bill.

There will be a meeting of the subcommittee of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee on the trust-indenture bill (H. R. 5220). The hearings are to be held in the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee room, beginning April 4, 1939, at 10 a. m. The hearings will be continued on April 5 and 6. Proponents of the bill will be heard on the 4th and opponents on the 5th and 6th.

COMMITTEE ON RIVERS AND HARBORS

The Committee on Rivers and Harbors will meet Tuesday, April 4, 1939, at 10:30 a. m., to continue hearings on the project for the Connecticut River, Conn. and Mass.

COMMITTEE ON MERCHANT MARINE AND FISHERIES

The Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries will hold public hearings in room 219, House Office Building, at 10 a. m., on the bills and dates listed below:

Tuesday, April 4, 1939:

H. R. 3209, making it a misdemeanor to stow away on vessels; H. R. 3398, regarding the down payment for construction of new vessels; H. R. 3935, relating to the discharge of seamen.

Wednesday, April 5, 1939:

H. R. 3052, uniform insignia for Naval Reserve radio operators; H. R. 1010, intercoastal subsidy bill (WELCH).

Thursday, April 6, 1939:

H. R. 1011, acquisition of drydock facilities for United States Maritime Commission on San Francisco Bay (WELCH); H. R. 2870, acquisition of drydock facilities for United States Maritime Commission at Los Angeles (THOMAS F. FORD); H. R. 3040, acquisition of drydock facilities for United States Maritime Commission at Los Angeles (GEYER of California).

Tuesday, April 11, 1939:

H. R. 1783, inspection of hulls of sail vessels and barges (BLAND); H. R. 1785, motorboat bill (BLAND); H. R. 1795, motorboat bill (HENDRICKS); H. R. 1809, inspection of motorboats, 15 gross tons up (MAGNUSON); H. R. 2398, regarding pilots on yachts (ANGELL); H. R. 3837, inspection of motorboats, 15 gross tons up (CONNERY).

Thursday, April 13, 1939:

H. R. 4220, load-line bill for seagoing vessels (BLAND).

Tuesday, April 18, 1939:

H. R. 2404, surgeon and hospital on vessels (SIROVICH); H. R. 2660, limitation of liability (SIROVICH); House Joint Resolution 153 and House Joint Resolution 194, investigate conditions pertaining to lascar seamen (SIROVICH).

COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, in the committee rooms, Capitol, Tuesday, April 4, 1939, at 10 a. m., for the consideration of H. R. 5031 for the relief of the sufferers from the earthquake in Chile and discussion as to the procedure with reference to amendments to the neutrality law.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

593. A letter from the President of the Board of Commissioners, District of Columbia, transmitting the draft of a proposed bill to provide for the widening of Wisconsin Avenue, in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

594. A letter from the Postmaster General, transmitting the facts in the claim of Mr. John E. Garrett, postmaster at Dwight, Ill., for credit on account of a loss sustained in the burglary of the post office at that place November 9, 1937; to the Committee on Claims.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. SCHULTE: Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. H. R. 5077. A bill for the relief of Anthoula S. Maskas; without amendment (Rept. No. 355). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. LESINSKI: Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. Senate Joint Resolution 72. Joint resolution readmitting Mary Cohen Bienvenu to citizenship; without amendment (Rept. No. 356). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. SMITH of Washington:

H. R. 5446. A bill to authorize the acquisition, rehabilitation, and operation of the facilities for the public in the Olympic National Park, in the State of Washington, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. DISNEY:

H. R. 5447. A bill authorizing the President to invite the States of the Union and foreign countries to participate in the International Petroleum Exposition at Tulsa, Okla., to be held May 18 to May 25, 1940; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. HARTLEY:

H. R. 5448. A bill to amend existing law to restore 100 percent of compensation previously payable to veterans under the World War Veterans' Act; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

By Mr. MAY:

H. R. 5449 (by request). A bill making inapplicable certain reversionary provisions in the act of March 4, 1923 (42 Stat. 1450), and a certain deed executed by the Secretary of War, in the matter of a lease to be entered into by the United States for the use of a part of the former Fort Armistead Military Reservation for air navigation purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. McCORMACK:

H. R. 5450. A bill to extend the time within which applications for benefits under the World War Adjusted Compensation Act, as amended, may be filed; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MUNDT:

H. R. 5451. A bill to authorize the consolidation of the lands on the Sisseton Indian Reservation, N. Dak. and S. Dak., and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. RANKIN:

H. R. 5452. A bill to provide certain benefits for World War veterans and their dependents, and for other purposes; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

By Mr. BOYKIN:

H. R. 5453. A bill to extend the benefits of the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended, to office deputy marshals of the United States; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. FLAHERTY:

H. R. 5454. A bill to provide for cancelation of citizenship and deportation in the case of certain naturalized citizens of the United States because of the advocacy of political doctrines subversive of the best interests of the United States; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

H. R. 5455. A bill to provide that it shall be a criminal offense to advise, advocate, or teach principles of government based in whole or in part in opposition to or discrimination against people of any religious creed, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia:

H. J. Res. 250. Joint resolution making an additional appropriation for the fiscal year 1939 for expenditure by the United States Employees' Compensation Commission in accordance with section 16 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938; to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri:

H. J. Res. 251. Joint resolution designating August 19 of each year as National Aviation Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. WHELCHEL:

H. J. Res. 252. Joint resolution to provide for the consideration of certain recommendations for decorations by the United States for services rendered during the World War; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WALLGREN:

H. J. Res. 253. Joint resolution designating August 19 of each year National Aviation Day; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

MEMORIALS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, memorials were presented and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States to consider their Assembly Joint Resolution No. 21, to place a tariff on dairy products sufficiently high to protect the American dairy farmers; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States to consider their Assembly Joint Resolution No. 22, with reference to Senate bill 570 and the Agricultural Equality Act of 1939; to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States to consider their Joint Resolution No. 13, Senate File No. 303, to repay certain funds exacted from the citizens of the State of Minnesota under the Agricultural Adjustment Act; to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Illinois, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States to consider their House Joint Resolution No. 22, to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Mississippi River at or near the city of Chester, Ill.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts, memorializing the President and the Congress of the United States to consider their resolution in favor of legislation providing for the reimbursement by the Federal Government of cities and towns for the amount of welfare aid and relief granted by them to aliens; to the Committee on Appropriations.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BUCKLER of Minnesota:

H. R. 5456. A bill for the relief of George Holtegard; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CHURCH:

H. R. 5457. A bill for the relief of Margaret Perry; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CROSSER:

H. R. 5458. A bill for the relief of Ernest Baker; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CULKIN:

H. R. 5459. A bill for the relief of George F. Lewis, administrator of the estate of Margaret R. Lewis; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. DIRKSEN:

H. R. 5460. A bill granting an increase of pension to Virginia B. Schenck; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HALL:

H. R. 5461. A bill for the relief of Robert A. Baker; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. HARTLEY:

H. R. 5462. A bill for the relief of Calliope Minaca Pilavakis; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

H. R. 5463. A bill for the relief of Frank Gaybrant, otherwise known as Frank Corticelli; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. JARMAN:

H. R. 5464. A bill for the relief of Don E. Hicks; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. KILDAY:

H. R. 5465. A bill for the relief of E. Sullivan; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. McLEOD:

H. R. 5466. A bill for the relief of Winfield S. Hall; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. REECE of Tennessee:

H. R. 5467. A bill for the relief of Robert Hill; to the Committee on Claims.

H. R. 5468. A bill for the relief of Alda Steele; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado:

H. R. 5469. A bill for the relief of Alta M. Cassietto; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WALTER:

H. R. 5470. A bill for the relief of Felix White, Karol Statkewicz, Sabos Mankus, and Frank Raul; to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

2181. By Mr. ALEXANDER: Petition of the State Legislature of Minnesota; to the Committee on Agriculture.

2182. By Mr. CONNERY: Resolution of the General Court of Massachusetts, memorializing Congress in favor of legislation providing for the reimbursement by the Federal Government of cities and towns for the amount of welfare aid and relief granted by them to aliens; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2183. By Mr. CURTIS: Resolution of the city of Hastings, Nebr.; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2184. By Mr. FITZPATRICK: Resolution adopted by the New York Printing Pressmen's Union, No. 51, on March 24, favoring the President's $150,000,000 Works Progress Administration deficiency appropriation; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2185. Also, petition of Charles D. McGuire, Bronx, New York City, N. Y., and others, urging the passage of House Joint Resolution 94, introduced by Hon. HAMILTON FISH, of New York, with reference to a referendum by the people of the United States as to our entering or not entering into a foreign war; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2186. By Mr. HALL: Petition of sundry citizens of Long Island, N. Y., urging embargo on war supplies to Japan: to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2187. Also, petition of sundry residents of Bohemia and other villages of Long Island, N. Y., protesting against German invasion of Czechoslovakia, and urging continuance of recognition of status of Czechoslovakian Minister to the United States; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2188. By Mr. HOUSTON: Petition of members of the First Church of Brethren, Wichita, Kans., relative to the prevention of war and urging adoption of the war-referendum amendment; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2189. By Mr. JOHNS: Petition of Robert J. Hanrahan and 83 other regular and substitute clerks and carriers of Green Bay, Wis., petitioning and earnestly requesting that the House Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads be urged to return a favorable report on House bill 4093, a bill having for its purpose the betterment of conditions for substitute employees, also that you give this measure your full support upon the floor of the House that hereby a speedy enactment of this measure may be brought about; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

2190. Also, petition of George Van Hoof, and 70 other citizens of Kaukauna, Wis., petitioning that in writing the new Neutrality Act there should be incorporated such clauses which will provide undeclared war, foreign propaganda, secret diplomatic commitments, financial commitments, and the selling of arms, munitions, and military equipment; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2191. By Mr. MARTIN J. KENNEDY: Petition of the New York State Conservation Council, urging support for restoration of Budget recommendation for Dutch elm disease control in agricultural appropriation bill; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2192. Also, petition of Syracuse (N. Y.) Lodge No. 381, International Association of Machinists, urging support of House bill 4862; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2193. Also, petition of Liberty Lodge, No. 226, International Association of Machinists, New York City, urging support of House bill 4862; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2194. Also, petition of the State of Maine Legislative Board, Brotherhood of Firemen and Enginemen, South Portland, Maine, urging passage of House bill 4862; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2195. Also, petition of Fidelity Lodge, No. 7, International Association of Machinists, Birmingham, Ala., urging support of House bill 4862; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2196. Also, petition of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Troy, N. Y., urging support of House bill 4862; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2197. Also, petition of the American Train Dispatchers Association, Evansville, Ind., urging support of House bill 4862; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2198. Also, petition of the Italian Chamber of Commerce in New York, concerning the Food, Drug, and Cosmetics Act of June 25, 1938, section 902; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2199. By Mr. KEOGH: Petition of the Mining and Metallurgical Society of America, New York City, concerning essential minerals for national defense; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

2200. By Mr. KING: Petition of the Brewery Workers' Union of the Hawaiian Islands, American Federation of Labor, regarding proposed amendments to the Wagner Labor Relations Act; to the Committee on Labor.

2201. By Mr. KRAMER: Resolution of the Modern Iron Works, Ltd., of Los Angeles, relative to the National Labor Relations Act; to the Committee on Labor.

2202. Also, resolution of the Motion Picture Relief Fund, Inc., of Los Angeles, relative to discharged persons of the Federal theater project; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2203. By Mr. MARSHALL: Petition of William Thorpe, of Lorain, Ohio, relative to the need for the passage of the $150,000,000 requested by the President for additional Works Progress Administration funds to give all Americans who need and want work the right to work; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2204. By Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts: Memorial of the General Court of Massachusetts, favoring legislation providing for reimbursement by the Federal Government of cities and towns for the amount of welfare aid to aliens; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2205. By Mr. MERRITT: Resolution of the Dunkirk Yacht Club, of Dunkirk, N. Y., stating that they realize the need and desirability of a Coast Guard station for the promotion of safety in navigation, both commercially and for pleasure craft, and agreeing to give all its cooperation in the furthering of the establishment of a Coast Guard station and will extend any other assistance necessary therein; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2206. By Mr. PFEIFER: Petition of the American Manufacturing Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., opposing the Fulmer bill (H. R. 57), the Cotton Net Weight Act; to the Committee on Agriculture.

2207. Also, petition of the Carolina Bagging Co., Henderson, N. C., opposing the passage of House bill 57, the Cotton Net Weight Act; to the Committee on Agriculture.

2208. By Mr. RISK: Resolution of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, Department of Rhode Island, endorsing the establishing and maintenance within the State of Rhode Island of a 400-bed neuropsychiatric hospital as proposed in House bill 4091; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

2209. Also, resolution of the Department of Rhode Island, the American Legion, endorsing the establishing and maintenance within the State of Rhode Island of a 400-bed neuropsychiatric hospital as proposed in House bill 4091; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

2210. By Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts: Petition of the General Court of Massachusetts, memoralizing Congress in favor of legislation providing for the reimbursement by the Federal Government of cities and towns for the amount of welfare aid and relief granted by them to aliens; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2211. By Mr. SANDAGER: Joint resolution of the Rhode Island General Assembly, favoring the erection of a United States Veterans' Administration neuropsychiatric hospital and domiciliary facility within and for the State of Rhode Island; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

2212. By Mr. SCHAEFER of Illinois: Petition of Local No. 37, Progressive Miners of America, Harvey Stroud, president, Staunton, Ill., urging early consideration of amendments to the Wagner Labor Relations Act as offered in the United States Senate by the Honorable DAVID I. WALSH, of Massachusetts; to the Committee on Labor.

2213. By Mr. SCHIFFLER: Petition of Rev. John Arthur Visser, Vance Memorial Church, Wheeling, W. Va., urging that ministers be excluded from the Social Security Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2214. By Mr. THILL: Resolution of the Federated Czech Societies of Milwaukee, signed by Joseph Blatecky, and the Federated Slovak Societies of Milwaukee, signed by Isadore A. Svetz, protesting against the extermination of the rights of nations and individuals in Europe by the Nazi Government of Germany, and advocating that forces be mobilized to reestablish the Republic of Czechoslovakia and its proper constitutional institutions; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2215. By the SPEAKER: Petition of H. Richman, San Francisco, Calif., and others, petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to Works Progress Administration deficiency appropriation; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2216. Also, petition of the city of Chelsea, Mass., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to the Reciprocal Trade Treaty; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2217. Also, petition of the United Packinghouse Workers of America, Local Union No. 79, Estherville, Iowa, petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to the Wagner Act, known as Labor's Magna Carta; to the Committee on Labor.

2218. Also, petition of the Mining and Metallurgical Society of America, of New York, petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to essential minerals for national defense; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

SENATE

FRIDAY, MARCH 31, 1939

(Legislative day of Tuesday, March 28, 1939)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, minister, Foundry Methodist Episcopal Church, of Washington, D. C., offered the following prayer:

O Thou Eternal Father of us all, for this dedicated moment we would lift our lives, our duties, and our tasks into the white light of Thy presence. In this revered Chamber of national deliberation and decision we pray for clean hands, pure hearts, unbiased minds, and wise action, that this Nation, amid confusions and perplexities, may find its way to better and juster days.

Keep us from selfish living in a dangerous and difficult time. Save us from the hatred and prejudice that blow like a tempest across the world. For every echo of the world's evil tempers within our own hearts we repent in sackcloth and ashes. Save us from mean excuses, cheap defenses, and low self-deceits when we fall short of our own ideals. Broaden the areas of our sympathies exposed to the world's woes. May we blaze with indignation at strength that strangles weakness and might that crushes freedom.

We beseech Thee to stay the hands of all who love war and strengthen the hands of all who merit the benediction of the peacemakers. Give us vision, give us wisdom, give us courage in these troubled times, that here in a brotherhood that knows nothing of border or breed or birth we may take righteous courses and come to saving ends.

We ask it in the name which is above every name. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. BARKLEY, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Thursday, March 30, 1939, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. MINTON. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Davis	La Follette	Reynolds
Andrews	Donahey	Lodge	Russell
Ashurst	Downey	Logan	Schwartz
Austin	Ellender	Lucas	Schwellenbach
Bankhead	Frazier	Lundeen	Sheppard
Barkley	George	McKellar	Shipstead
Bilbo	Gillette	McNary	Smathers
Borah	Glass	Maloney	Smith
Bridges	Green	Mead	Stewart
Brown	Guffey	Miller	Taft
Bulow	Gurney	Minton	Thomas, Okla.
Burke	Harrison	Murray	Thomas, Utah
Byrd	Hatch	Neely	Townsend
Byrnes	Hayden	Norris	Vandenberg
Capper	Herring	O'Mahoney	Wheeler
Chavez	Holman	Overton	White
Clark, Idaho	Hughes	Pepper	Wiley
Clark, Mo.	Johnson, Calif.	Pittman
Connally	Johnson, Colo.	Radcliffe
Danaher	King	Reed

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HOLT] is detained from the Senate because of illness in his family.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], the Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE], the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN], the Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], and the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] are absent on important public business.

The Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. LEE], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS], and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] are unavoidably detained.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce that my colleague the junior Senator from Vermont [Mr. GIBSON] is necessarily absent.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Seventy-seven Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

ADDITIONAL LANDS, PAPAGO INDIAN RESERVATION, ARIZ.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to add certain lands to the Papago Indian Reservation in Arizona, which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

HARBOR OF ST. THOMAS, V. I.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Assistant Secretary of the Interior, transmitting copy of a resolution adopted by the St. Thomas Harbor Board, Virgin Islands, favoring an appropriation to undertake work in connection with the improvement of the harbor of St. Thomas, V. I., which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following resolution of the General Court of Massachusetts, which was referred to the Committee on Claims:

Resolutions memorializing Congress in favor of legislation providing for the reimbursement by the Federal Government of cities and towns for the amount of welfare aid and relief granted by them to aliens

Resolved, That the General Court of Massachusetts hereby urges the Congress of the United States to enact legislation providing for the reimbursement by the Federal Government of cities and towns for the amount of welfare aid and relief granted by them to aliens; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be sent forthwith by the Secretary of the Commonwealth to the President of the United States, to the Presiding Officer of each branch of Congress, and to the Members thereof from this Commonwealth.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following joint resolution of the Legislature of New Jersey, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys:

Joint resolution relative to memorializing the Congress of the United States to refuse enactment of legislation which would becloud the sovereign rights of the State of New Jersey in its submerged lands

Whereas, upon the formation of the United States of America, the States, as independent sovereignties, reserved to themselves all the right, title, and interest in and to the submerged lands and tidelands bordering upon their respective territories and, with the expenditure of public funds, have devoted such lands to harbor developments and other State purposes, or through grants and arrangements made with their municipalities and public agencies and with their citizens have devoted said lands to other public and private uses and such sovereign rights of the States have never heretofore been questioned; and

Whereas legislation has been introduced in the Congress of the United States, particularly Senate Joint Resolution No. 24, introduced by the Honorable GERALD P. NYE, United States Senator from the State of North Dakota, wherein it is asserted that the Federal Government possesses the title to or holds an interest in submerged lands and tidelands bordering upon the various States of the Union, and it is proposed to direct the Attorney General of the United States to institute legal actions in the courts to litigate such asserted titles or interests; and

Where any such litigation will becloud the rights and title of the respective States, prejudice their progress in developing such lands for State and local uses, both public and private, endanger existing investments, and threaten loss of the income which the State of New Jersey derives from riparian grants and leases, which is devoted to maintenance of the public educational facilities of this State; and

Whereas the enactment of such legislation is, in the opinion of this legislature, undesirable and contrary to the public interests: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey:

1. That the Legislature of the State of New Jersey respectfully urges and petitions the Congress of the United States to refuse enactment of either Senate Joint Resolution No. 24 or any other bill or resolution which may similarly seek to establish the asserted claim of the Federal Government to any title or interest in such riparian lands, tidelands, or submerged lands of the State of New Jersey, other than such lands which may have been heretofore expressly granted it by this State or under its authority.

2. That the secretary of state be and he is hereby directed to transmit copies of this joint resolution to the President of the United States, the Vice President, and to the Senators and Representatives of the State of New Jersey in the Congress.

3. This joint resolution shall take effect immediately.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a resolution of the Board of Harbor Commissioners of Milwaukee, Wis., endorsing the recommendations for the 1940 allotment for river and harbor improvements as submitted by the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors, War Department, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also laid before the Senate a memorial of sundry citizens of the States of Kentucky and Ohio remonstrating against amendment of the National Labor Relations Act, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also laid before he Senate a petition of sundry citizens of Brooklyn, N. Y., praying for the repeal of the Neutrality Act or, in the event the Neutrality Act be not repealed, that it be amended so as to distinguish between the aggressor and the victim of aggression, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also laid before the Senate a petition of sundry citizens of Brooklyn, N. Y., praying for the enactment of the so-called Gavagan-Wagner-Van Nuys-Capper antilynching bill, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, I ask consent to present petitions addressed to the Congress by people of Pennsylvania on the question of prohibiting the advertisement of alcoholic beverages by press and radio, with the request that they be appropriately referred.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the petitions presented by the Senator from Pennsylvania will be received and referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. CONNALLY presented petitions of sundry citizens of the State of Texas, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the advertising of alcoholic beverages by press and radio, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. HOLMAN presented petitions of sundry citizens of the State of Oregon praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the advertising of alcoholic beverages by press and radio, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. MALONEY presented petitions of sundry citizens of the State of Connecticut, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the advertising of alcoholic beverages by press and radio, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. TAFT presented petitions of sundry citizens of the State of Ohio, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the advertising of alcoholic beverages by press and radio, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, I have received a large number of petitions signed by citizens of the State of Pennsylvania, representing every county in the State, asking action on bills pending before Congress relating to the prohibition of the advertising of alcoholic beverages through the press and radio. There are so many of these that I ask that one of the petitions, which I ask consent to present, be referred to the committee considering these bills and that the committee shall call upon me for all of them when the hearings are provided for.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the petition referred to by the Senator from Pennsylvania will be received and referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. MEAD presented a resolution of the Board of Supervisors of Erie County, N. Y., protesting against the enactment of House bill 7, providing for the withdrawal of water from the Chicago Drainage Canal in excess of the amount established by United States Supreme Court decree, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of the State of New York, praying for the enactment of legislation providing optional retirement in the Postal Service, with pension, after 30 years' service, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

Mr. LUCAS presented the following joint resolution of the Legislature of Illinois, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce:

House Joint Resolution 22

Whereas there is now pending in the Congress of the United States House Resolution No. 4370, introduced in the House of Representatives on February 21, 1939, which resolution authorizes the city of Chester, Ill., to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Mississippi River at or near said city; and

Whereas the construction of such bridge is of great importance to a large portion of the inhabitants of this State and to numerous persons of other States; and

Whereas the construction of such bridge would promote interstate commerce, improve the postal service, and be of value for military purposes: Therefore be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the Sixty-first General Assembly of the State of Illinois (the senate concurring herein), That the Congress of the United States be, and is hereby, memorialized and requested to give favorable consideration to the aforesaid resolution and to enact it at an early date; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this preamble and resolution be forwarded by the secretary of state to the President of the United States, the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and to each Member of Congress from the State of Illinois.

VIOLATIONS OF CIVIL LIBERTIES

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate a resolution adopted by the annual session of the National Grange held at Portland, Oreg., November 16, 1938, in reference to the continuation of the so-called Civil Liberties Committee of the Senate.

There being no objection, the resolution was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Resolved, That the National Grange urge the continuation and support by Congress of the Civil Liberties Committee.

RESOLUTIONS OF FARMERS' HOLIDAY ASSOCIATION

Mr. SHIPSTEAD presented a resolution adopted by a meeting of various units of the Farmers' Holiday Association of Lac qui Parle County, Minn., which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas during recent years of extreme drought and crop failure the majority of farmers in this and neighboring communities were compelled by such adversity to procure loans for seed, feed, and other crop-production expenses, and have since been unable to repay the said loans and liens by reason of further crop failures and inequitably depressed prices for farm produce, and whereas collection of said loans and liens, will almost certainly result in virtual bankruptcy of many farmers and small-business men in foreclosures on farms and in reduction of many otherwise self-supporting farm families to poverty and a relief status: Be it

Resolved by the representatives of the various units of Farmers' Holiday Association of Lac qui Parle County here assembled, That Congress be entreated to pass speedy legislation to cancel and discharge, and abate collection of, all of such loans and liens now in default.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD also presented a resolution adopted by a meeting of various units of the Farmers' Holiday Association of Lac qui Parle County, Minn., which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas for several years agriculture has suffered severe economic stringency by reason of acutely depressed business and financial conditions of the Nation at large by reason of low prices for farm produce and increasing costs of farming equipment and supplies and by reason of unusual natural conditions of drought, flood, and disease resulting in crop failures; and

Whereas it is certain that until cost of production of farm produce is guaranteed to the producer thereof such conditions will still prevail to the extent that all owner-operators of farm land will eventually lose their lands and be reduced to a state approximating peonage: Be it

Resolved by the representatives of the various units of Farmers' Holiday Association here assembled, That Congress be emphatically urged and entreated to adopt the so-called Shipstead resolution for readjustment of Federal Land Bank and Land Bank Commissioner mortgages, barring deficiency judgments upon foreclosures thereof and permitting repurchase of foreclosed lands by the original owners thereof, and that Congress pass the so-called Frazier-Lemke bill for refinancing of real-estate mortgages at rates of interest not exceeding 1½ percent per annum and on reasonable terms of repayment not exceeding 1½ percent of principal repayment per year; be it further

Resolved, That Congress be urged to sponsor and adopt a constructive plan by tariff, subsidy, grant, guaranty, or otherwise such as will assure to producers of agriculture products the fair cost of the production thereof plus a reasonable margin of profit to assure said producers of an existence on a reasonable and wholesome standard of living.

DUMPING OF GERMAN WOOD PULP INTO THE UNITED STATES

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have referred to the Committee on Finance and printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, at the appropriate place, correspondence of mine bearing on the astounding fact that cheap commercial products from Germany are, according to this correspondent, being dumped into the United States.

There being no objection, the correspondence was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MOUNT TOM SULPHITE PULP CO.,
Mount Tom, Mass., March 21, 1939.

The Honorable HENRY CABOT LODGE, JR.,
United States Senator from Massachusetts,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We are addressing this communication to you on behalf of ourselves as manufacturers and as a member of the United States Pulp Producers' Association, an organization which represents, primarily, the United States manufacturers of wood pulp produced for sale.

We have every reason to believe that German-owned and German-controlled wood-pulp mills are selling their chemical pulps in the United States and elsewhere at less than their fair value, as defined by the Antidumping Act, and with resultant injury to the United States wood-pulp industry. We, therefore, respectfully request that you investigate this matter, with the view to terminating this injury to the wood-pulp industry of the United States.

Reliable evidence indicates that the German Government has established the following prices for the sale of German pulps in Germany:

	Reichsmarks per long ton
Prime bleached sulphite pulp	240
Prime unbleached sulphite pulp	200

These values are the equivalent of $85.71 and $71.43, respectively, when converted into short tons at 40 cents per reichsmark.

These same German pulps are being offered for sale in the United States at prices ranging from about $45 to $50 per short ton, Atlantic seaboard, for bleached sulphite and from about $35 to $40 for unbleached sulphite.

This competition forces United States pulp producers to offer strictly comparable pulps at approximately these same prices, which represent the unprofitable levels to which the domestic mills' prices have been driven by import competition from European producers enjoying relatively low labor costs, depreciated currencies, ocean freight-rate advantages, and other direct and indirect subsidies.

Further evidence of such subsidized German competition in this market may be seen in the fact that German pulp mills have bought, and still are buying, large quantities of eastern Canadian pulpwood at prices which result in a delivered cost to pulp mill in Germany, which is more for pulpwood alone, per ton of pulp, than they are offering their pulps for in the United States market.

In this connection it might also be pointed out that during 1938 our modern, low-cost, and efficient mills which produce pulp for the market were forced to curtail their operations by at least 50 percent. Even they cannot meet this intensified European competition and continue to pay existing wage scales and Federal, State, and local taxes.

In view of this violation of the antidumping statute, through sales of German pulps in this market at less than those prevailing in the German home market and with resultant injury to the wood-pulp industry of the United States, it is therefore urgently requested that you authorize a prompt investigation of this situation with the view to levying the special dumping duties provided for by the Antidumping Act on all imports of foreign pulps subject to such action and thus extending to the United States pulp industry that same measure of prctection afforded other domestic industries under your recent action in providing for countervailing duties on other imports from Germany.

It would be appreciated if you would keep me informed as to action which you may take in this matter.

Very truly yours,

MOUNT TOM SULPHITE PULP CO.,
A. H. SHOWALTER, Vice President.

MARCH 30, 1939.

Hon. JAMES H. MOYLE,
Commissioner of Customs,
Treasury Department, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. COMMISSIONER: I enclose for your attention and advice a letter received from the Mount Tom Sulphite Pulp Co.

I believe you will agree that the situation described therein is most serious and if allowed to continue and to grow must have ruinous results for all those who earn their living in American industry.

I cannot believe that it is the desire of the administration to allow the German Government to do this thing to the American worker, and I hope you will notify me that prompt steps have been taken to stop this practice at once.

Very sincerely yours,

H. C. LODGE, JR.

FOREIGN TRADE OF UNITED STATES WITH GERMANY, 1900–38

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, we learn from the press that our President is placing a 25-percent penalty upon German trade in America—we have already placed restrictions upon German trade until our trade has fallen from $500,000,000 a year to $100,000,000, and now we are to add further restriction and further cripple our German trade and add more hundreds of thousands to our unemployed. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at the proper place certain figures in connection with the aggregate value of the foreign trade of the United States with Germany from 1900 to 1938. In that connection, we have made certain restrictions which France and Great Britain have not made. Great Britain and France placed no penalty and we intrude ourselves and want to regulate the world. The figures are submitted for study. Great Britain and France will benefit but we will suffer. We cannot afford to do that; we are being misled to the destruction of our own trade.

There being no objection, the table submitted by Mr. LUNDEEN was ordered to be printed in the RECORD as follows:

Aggregate value of foreign trade of United States with Germany, 1900–38

Year	Exports from United States to Germany[1]	Imports
1900	$187,347,889	$97,374,700
1901	191,780,427	100,445,902
1902	173,148,280	101,997,523
1903	193,841,636	119,772,511
1904	214,780,992	109,188,554
1905	194,220,472	118,268,356
1906	234,742,102	135,142,996
1907	256,595,663	161,543,556
1908	276,922,089	142,935,547
1909	235,324,140	143,525,828
1910	249,555,926	168,805,137
1911	294,847,562	165,636,669
1912	330,450,830	186,042,644
1913	351,930,541	184,211,352
1914	158,294,986	149,389,366
1915	11,777,858	44,953,285
1916	2,260,634	5,819,472
1917	3,275	159,352
1918		317,706
1919	92,761,314	10,608,141
1920	311,437,000	88,836,000
1921	372,380,000	80,280,000
1922	316,114,000	117,498,000
1923	316,837,000	161,193,000
1924	440,418,000	139,253,000
1925	470,344,000	164,251,000
1926	364,162,000	198,495,000
1927	481,681,000	200,554,000
1928	467,260,000	222,130,000
1929	410,449,000	254,688,000
1930	278,269,000	176,981,000
1931	166,050,000	127,039,000
1932	133,668,000	73,572,000
1933	140,024,000	78,185,000
1934	108,738,000	68,805,000
1935	91,981,000	77,792,000
1936	101,956,000	79,679,000
1937	126,342,536	92,468,111
1938[2]	107,588,308	64,537,217
1938 (by months):
January	8,946,197	5,813,325
February	7,855,595	4,119,271
March	8,161,219	4,373,608
April	9,168,860	4,614,229
May	7,280,348	4,828,893
June	6,329,916	4,534,036
July	5,620,201	4,393,014
August	10,269,821	5,627,194
September	12,056,976	5,793,890
October	10,165,625	7,288,593
November	8,620,095	6,923,267
December	8,316,640	6,256,417
Total for 1938	102,791,493	64,565,737

[1] Includes reexports.
[2] Total of the 12 monthly figures does not equal total of the year. Monthly figures were preliminary.

Source: U. S. Statistical Abstract, 1910, 1919, 1923, 1930, 1933, 1937; Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Monthly Summary of Foreign Commerce, January through December 1938.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

As in executive session,

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of several postmasters.

Mr. HARRISON, from the Committee on Finance, reported favorably the nomination of Fred H. Brown, of New Hampshire, to be Comptroller General of the United States for a term of 15 years.

Mr. SHEPPARD, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported favorably the nomination of Brig. Gen. Francis Vincent Logan, Massachusetts National Guard, to be brigadier general, National Guard of the United States.

He also, from the same committee, reported favorably the nomination of Capt. Cornelius Emmett O'Connor, Air Corps, for appointment to temporary rank as major in the Air Corps of the Regular Army from March 20, 1939.

He also, from the same committee, reported favorably the nominations of a citizen for appointment and several officers for appointment, by transfer or promotion in the Regular Army.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the reports will be received and placed on the Executive Calendar.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. WHEELER (for himself and Mr. TRUMAN):

S. 2016. A bill to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

By Mr. WHEELER:

S. 2017. A bill to amend the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, approved June 25, 1938; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

S. 2018. A bill for the relief of Nile Shaw and Edgar C. Bardin; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. REYNOLDS:

S. 2019. A bill for the relief of Frank A. Fain; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 2020. A bill to amend Public Law No. 383, Seventy-third Congress (48 Stat. L. 984), relating to Indians, by exempting from the provisions of such act the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians located in the State of North Carolina; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. THOMAS of Utah:

S. 2021. A bill to authorize the Department of Labor to continue to make special statistical studies upon payment of the cost thereof, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

(Mr. MILLER introduced Senate bill 2022, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor, and appears under a separate heading.)

By Mr. HERRING:

S. 2023. A bill for the relief of C. L. Herren; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. WHITE (for Mr. HALE):

S. 2024. A bill for the relief of Clarence Leroy Witham; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

S. 2025. A bill granting a pension to Margaret A. Silva; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. MALONEY:

S. 2026. A bill for the relief of Francis M. Johnston; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. ANDREWS:

S. 2027. A bill for the relief of John Marinis, Nicolaos Elias, Ihoanis or Jean Demetre Votsitsanos, and Michael Votsitsanos; to the Committee on Immigration.

By Mr. FRAZIER:

S. 2028. A bill creating a commission to study proposals for a national system of express motorways, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

By Mr. MEAD:

S. 2029. A bill authorizing a preliminary examination and survey in the Mohawk River Valley, N. Y.; to the Committee on Commerce.

S. 2030. A bill for the relief of Mira Friedberg (Mira Dworecka); to the Committee on Immigration.

S. 2031. A bill authorizing the Secretary of War to bestow the Silver Star upon Michael J. Quinn; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. O'MAHONEY (for himself and Mr. MEAD):

S. 2032. A bill to place postmasters of the fourth class on an annual salary basis, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

By Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma:

S. J. Res. 109. Joint resolution proposing a plan for the adjustment of the claim of the State of Oklahoma against the United States arising from the tax exemption of Indian lands and the products thereof, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

AMENDMENT OF WAGE AND HOUR LAW

Mr. MILLER. I ask unanimous consent to introduce a bill to amend the Fair Labor Standards Act, and to accompany the bill I have prepared a short statement which I should like to have incorporated in the RECORD at the proper point as explanatory of the amendments I am proposing.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the bill will be received and properly referred, and the statement presented by the Senator from Arkansas will be printed in the RECORD.

The bill (S. 2022) to amend sections 6, 7, and 13 of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

The statement presented by Mr. MILLER is as follows:

STATEMENT OF SENATOR JOHN E. MILLER, OF ARKANSAS, RELATING TO THE AMENDMENTS PROPOSED BY HIM TO THE FAIR LABOR STANDARDS ACT OF 1938

Section 1 of the bill exempts clerical employees, such as bookkeepers, stenographers, pay-roll clerks, auditors, cost accountants, purchasing agents, statisticians, or other office help regularly employed on a straight salary basis and given annual vacations with pay, from the operations of sections 6 and 7 of the present act.

Section 2 of the bill exempts service institutions, such as wholesale grocers, from the provisions of section 7 of the act, provided the employee is paid not less than 1½ times the regular wage for any workweek in excess of 44 hours.

Section 3 repeals section 7 (c) of the present act.

Section 4 clarifies and spells out the full scope of the exemptions provided in the present act in section 13 (a).

The amendment proposed to section 13 (a) (10) has the endorsement and approval of the leading farm organizations, such as the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Cooperative Milk Producers Federation, the National Cooperative Council, the National Grange, and other organizations interested in agricultural pursuits.

The exemption provisions of the present law require the Administrator to define "area of production" for the purpose of making certain wage and hour exemptions operative. The Administrator has found it difficult to define the term "area of production." The definition which he has issued and amended fails to carry out the intention of the Congress, and is in fact more restrictive of the exemption than the debate and discussion prior to the enactment of the bill warrants. In the report of the Administrator issued on December 22, 1938, he stated:

"The Administrator does not feel that in the absence of an express mandate from Congress the issuance of a broader general definition would be justified in view of the serious consequences that would attend such a definition as to many industries."

Section 7 (c) of the present act relates to exemptions from maximum-hour provisions for seasonal industries, but it has been found that many seasonal industries operate for longer periods of time than the minimum of 14 weeks provided in the act, and that furthermore efforts of such industries to extend the season of their operations in order to spread the overhead costs over a longer period and a larger volume of product are seriously interfered with by the present provisions of section 7 (c), the seasonal industries provision.

The other exemptions relate to employees who enjoy steady yearly employment. Everyone knows that in the distributing business the labor is not continuous through the hours of work, and there are frequent intervals of idleness. Therefore a 44-hour week should be permitted in wholesale establishments. The same is true with reference to clerical employees who have steady employment and who receive annual vacations with pay.

AMENDMENT TO PEACE ACT

Mr. PITTMAN submitted an amendment in the nature of a substitute intended to be proposed by him to the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 97) to be known as the "Peace Act of 1939," which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed.

AMENDMENT TO AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. GUFFEY submitted an amendment proposing to increase the appropriation for investigation in forest economics (under section 10), from $121,295 to $139,295, intended to be proposed by him to House bill 5269, the Agricultural Department appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

TEMPORARY ASSISTANT CLERK, COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS

Mr. PITTMAN submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 114), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Foreign Relations hereby is authorized to employ for the remainder of the present session an assistant clerk to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate at the rate of $1,800 per annum.

COLONIAL SWEDES—ADDRESS BY SENATOR JOHNSON OF COLORADO

[Mr. HUGHES asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address delivered by Senator JOHNSON of Colorado, on the occasion of the celebration of the three hundred and first anniversary of the landing of the Swedes on the Delaware River, which appears in the Appendix.]

THE BUILDING CONSTRUCTION INDUSTRY—ADDRESS BY SENATOR BRIDGES

[Mr. GURNEY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address on the subject of The Building Construction Industry in the United States, delivered by Senator BRIDGES at Washington, D. C., on March 30, 1939, which appears in the Appendix.]

"AMERICANITY"—ARTICLE BY F. M. KERCHEVILLE

[Mr. HATCH asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article entitled "Americanity," by F. M. Kercheville, of the University of New Mexico, published in American Speech of the issue of February 1939, which appears in the Appendix.]

NAVAJO INDIANS IN SOUTHWEST UNITED STATES

[Mr. CHAVEZ asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article published in the Saturday Evening Post of April 1, 1939, entitled "Thunder Over the Southwest," by Flora W. Seymour, which appears in the Appendix.]

IMPROBABILITY OF ATTACKS BY AIR

[Mr. LUNDEEN asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article published in the Christian Science Monitor on March 30, 1939, under the headline, Attacks by Air on United States Viewed as Improbable, which appears in the Appendix.]

THE PERIL OF PEASANTRY—ARTICLE BY JOHN NAPIER DYER

[Mr. REYNOLDS asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article on the subject The Peril of Peasantry, by John Napier Dyer, which appears in the Appendix.]

"WHY THE PREFERENCE FOR STALIN?"—EDITORIAL FROM NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

[Mr. REYNOLDS asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial from the New York Daily News of March 24, 1939, entitled "Why the Preference for Stalin?" which appears in the Appendix.]

ACQUISITION OF STOCKS OF STRATEGIC MILITARY MATERIALS, ETC.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 572) to provide for the common defense by acquiring stocks of strategic and critical raw materials, concentrates, and alloys essential to the needs of industry for the manufacture of supplies for the armed forces and the civilian population in time of a national emergency, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there be no further amendments to be offered the question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah obtained the floor.

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I do.

Mr. BILBO. I simply wish to know if I may offer my amendment at this time.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. The amendment, I think, is in order at this time; but I should like to make a statement first, if I may.

Mr. BILBO. Very well.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, yesterday, when the vote was taken on the Byrnes amendment, I noted at the time the vote was taken that about one-third of the Members of the Senate did not vote. I did not change my vote in order to move a reconsideration. I purposely refrained from doing so, because I had announced at the beginning of the discussion of the bill that the amount of the appropriation would of necessity be in conference, for there was a disagreement between the Senate and the House in regard to the amount. So the adoption of the Byrnes amendment has not interfered in the least with the necessity of the amount being in conference.

The Assistant Secretary of War this morning sent me a statement which I desire to read to the Senate, so that it will become part of the RECORD, and will be available to the conferees:

MEMORANDUM FOR HON. ELBERT D. THOMAS, UNITED STATES SENATE

MARCH 31, 1939.

Subject: Strategic materials bill.

(1) It is noted in reading the RECORD of the Senate proceedings on March 30 on the strategic materials bill that certain erroneous information as to the opinion of the War Department was placed in the RECORD and doubtless had considerable influence in reducing the total authorization in the bill from $100,000,000 to $40,000,000. It is to correct this information that this memorandum is being furnished you.

(2) The opinion of the War Department, which was expressed recently by the Assistant Secretary of War and other representatives to the House Military Affairs Committee at its hearings on the subject, was that a total of $100,000,000 was the minimum that was considered desirable to authorize for stock piles of strategic materials.

(3) To the knowledge of the War Department the President has never expressed himself either for or against such a maximum authorization. The President, however, did state to the Assistant Secretary of War that his budgetary program did not permit more than $10,000,000 appropriation for stock-pile purposes during the next fiscal year. The President did not indicate any program of appropriations beyond the next fiscal year.

(4) In view of the above information and the essentiality of the strategic materials legislation to a national-defense program, the War Department believes that the full $100,000,000 authorization for expenditure within a 4-year period should be made. Appropriations provided within this authorization would then become available in accordance with the President's budgetary program.

Mr. President, I now yield to the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, before the Senator takes his seat, may I ask him a question?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Yes.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator has referred to the contemplated action of the Senate conferees. I am sure he does not mean to imply that the Senate conferees are not bound by the action of the Senate yesterday.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I am implying nothing. I am merely repeating what I said; and I answer the Senator from Michigan today in exactly the same way that I answered him the other day. The Senate is entitled to information with regard to the facts as they are today. The President has made it known—and that was pointed out yesterday in answer to the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES]—that he did not want more than $10,000,000 spent the first fiscal year; but he has never made a statement about the outside limit for the 4 years.

One of the departments reported the matter in this way: They would like to leave to the discretion of the board which handles these things the time to buy during the 4-year period.

This statement is made merely for the information of the Senate.

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President——

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield to the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. BILBO. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 5, line 6, after the word "under," it is proposed to insert "the preceding provisions of."

At the end of the bill, it is proposed to insert the following new section:

SEC. 8. (a) The Commodity Credit Corporation is authorized and directed to acquire title to (1) any cotton from the 1934 crop remaining as security for loans made or arranged for by the Corporation and (2) such cotton from the 1937 to 1938 crops remaining as security for loans made or arranged for by the Corporation as will, when added to the cotton of the 1934 crop held or acquired by the Corporation, make a total of 7,000,000 bales. No such cotton shall, without the consent of the owner thereof, be acquired prior to the maturity date of the loan secured by it or in a manner inconsistent with the provisions of the loan agreement executed in connection with such loan. The Commodity Credit Corporation, to the extent necessary in order to carry out the provisions of this section, shall assume and discharge all or any part of the obligations, including accrued interest and carrying charges, of the borrower with respect to any cotton held as security for a loan made or arranged for by the Corporation.

(b) The Commodity Credit Corporation shall transfer title to any cotton of the 1934 crop held by it and any cotton acquired by it under the provisions of subsection (a) of this section to the Secretary of War. The Secretary of War shall take possession of such cotton and shall store it in warehouses located on military reservations, and at such other places as he may deem proper. Such cotton shall be retained in storage by the Secretary for the purpose of maintaining a reserve supply adequate to meet the needs of the United States in the event of war or other national emergency which might require the United States to obtain large quantities of cotton.

(c) The Secretary of War is authorized to construct such warehouses and to employ such personnel as he may find to be necessary for the purpose of providing for the storage of any cotton acquired by him under the provisions of this section.

(d) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary in order to enable the Secretary of War to carry out the provisions of subsections (b) and (c) of this section.

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, in offering this amendment I desire to have it distinctly understood that I am in full sympathy with the purposes of the bill, because I think it is a wise, sane, workable piece of legislation that deserves the support by every person who is in favor of national defense. I also desire to have it understood that in offering this amendment dealing with the storage of cotton as a means of national defense I am not contending that cotton is a strategic or critical material. It is, however, a material which is absolutely essential in the conduct of any war. It is unthinkable to make provision for the national defense unless we have on hand not only strategic and critical materials as needed but also the other things which are absolutely essential to the successful conduct of a war.

The amendment provides briefly only that we direct the Commodity Credit Corporation to turn over to the War Department 7,000,000 bales of Government cotton, with the direction that it be stored and kept for use in case of a war.

Before preparing the amendment I wrote the Secretary of War and asked him to tell me how many bales of cotton would be required in case it should be necessary to carry on a war for any appreciable length of time. I have his letter of January 12, in which he estimates that for a 2-year major war 3,250,000 bales of cotton would be required for the Army and the Navy. So my amendment provides sufficient cotton for carrying on a major war for a period of about 4 years or a little more.

As to the necessity of cotton in carrying on a war, the Secretary states that cotton must be used for clothing, webbing, tentage, bedding, medical supplies, and various other purposes.

I desire to make this further observation about cotton: Cotton is the only farm product I know anything about which will not deteriorate when stored. We have records of cotton which has been properly stored for 60, 75, or 100 years, and the textile strength of the cotton at the end of 75 or 100 years was just as good as it was the day it was stored. So cotton is one farm product which, if stored properly, can remain in storage indefinitely without deteriorating. I am afraid that much cannot be said of some of the materials that it is proposed to store under this bill. I know it is the custom of the War Department and the Navy Department from time to time to buy great quantities of powder and of shells, and they are stored at our arsenals as a matter of precaution, in order to have supplies of such munitions on hand in case of an emergency. In a few years these materials will deteriorate; but cotton is an essential war material which will not deteriorate in 75 or 100 years.

Someone has said something about cost. If my amendment is adopted, and 7,000,000 bales of cotton are stored as provided in the amendment, it will cost practically nothing in the way of an appropriation at this time, because the Government today owns, or will own by the 1st of July, 11,300,000 bales of American-grown cotton. The Government advanced a loan on this cotton. The money has already been paid out, and there will be no additional cost, with the exception of the warehouses necessary to store the cotton; and I understand that the Government has a great many suitable warehouses for storing cotton already constructed, and some of them are empty.

In carrying out the provisions of this amendment the only cost to be incurred will be for the building of warehouses and the transportation of the cotton from where it is stored now, in private warehouses, to the storehouses to be provided by the War Department.

It may be of interest to Senators to know that the taxpayers of this country are spending from thirty million to thirty-five million dollars a year for the storage of the cotton which we now own. I have not the figures, and I have been trying to get them from the War Department, and have a promise of getting them tomorrow, but I think I am safe in saying that the expense of carrying the storage of the 11,300,000 bales of cotton for 1 year would be sufficient to build all the warehouses necessary to store the 7,000,000 bales provided for in my amendment. So it will be a money-saving proposition to the Government, because after we build these warehouses they will be of useful service in the years to come—I know we will need them if we have a war—they will be a permanent investment, and by storing cotton in the Government-owned warehouses we will cut off the expense to the Government of thirty or thirty-five million dollars now going to the private warehouses of the country for the storage of the cotton.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BILBO. I am glad to yield.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I am, of course, much interested in anything involving the purchase of cotton. It is my understanding that the Senator has offered an amendment to the pending bill providing for the purchase by the Government of the United States of cotton for future storage for use in an emergency.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, there are some on this side of the Chamber who would like to hear the debate, and we cannot on account of the noise in the Chamber.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. BILBO. The amendment does not provide for the purchase of the cotton. We have already bought it. The amendment merely provides that the cotton we now control, the title to which will pass to the Government by the 1st of July, shall be turned over to the War Department with instructions to store 7,000,000 bales for purposes of national defense in case of an emergency.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Is the Senator suggesting that the Government expend a sufficient amount of money to construct warehouses?

Mr. BILBO. That is provided in the amendment. The authorization for whatever funds are necessary will be placed in a deficiency bill as it comes along if the amendment should be adopted.

Mr. REYNOLDS. The inquiry arose in my mind whether, if we did that, we would not again be finding the Government competing with private business, about which we hear so much these days. That is the query I had in mind when I rose.

Mr. BILBO. Technically, I suppose the Senator is correct, that this would be interfering with private business.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BILBO. Permit me first to answer the question. The bill we have under consideration provides that all the strategic and necessary materials which we are to buy from foreign countries, and the production of which we are to develop in this country, which shall be stored for war purposes, shall be stored in Government-owned warehouses, and I am merely following out the policy of the bill.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Will the Senator yield now?

Mr. BILBO. I yield for a question.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Yesterday an amendment was adopted which reduced the amount of the authorization to $40,000,000, $10,000,000 a year.

Mr. BILBO. Yes.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Would the cost of constructing the warehouses come out of the $40,000,000?

Mr. BILBO. Certainly not.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Does the Senator's amendment provide for an authorization in addition to that?

Mr. BILBO. It does.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Mississippi yield to me?

Mr. BILBO. I am delighted to yield to the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. McNARY. I am not quarreling with the objective of the Senator from Mississippi. It is the practical application of the amendment to present and future conditions that concerns me. If the 7,000,000 bales were stored and taken out of the channels of commerce, naturally that would produce a vacuum, and the result would be an elevation in the price level of cotton. Doubtless, that is what the Senator has in mind.

Mr. BILBO. That is one of the objectives, which I will discuss later.

Mr. McNARY. I do not desire to anticipate the argument. There has been so much confusion that I could not tell just what the Senator was saying. However, I wish to say that his objectives are plain and are meritorious, and are entitled to careful consideration; but I doubt very much whether his proposal is practical, so far as I am able to read and study the amendment. I wish to ask a question or two, if I may, at this point.

I understand that the carrying charge on a bale of cotton per annum is about $4.50, which is nearly a cent a pound. Would the carrying charges be lessened any by placing the cotton in storage in warehouses owned by the Government and controlled by the Military Establishment?

Mr. BILBO. Yes; they would be a great deal less, because the only expense then would be the policing of the warehouse where the cotton was stored, and whatever necessary overhead expense there was.

Mr. McNARY. That hardly answers the inquiry satisfactorily to me. Depreciation must take place in the quality of the cotton, insurance must be carried, interest accumulates, and there is the expense of the control of the cotton to be met. All those factors would be present, unless there were a desire to subsidize the cotton while in the warehouse through some provision which is not found in the pending bill. There is no provision made for the construction of warehouses or for taking care of the carrying charges over a period of years. That is a calculation which the Senator must have in mind when proposing and discussing his amendment.

Mr. BILBO. The amendment authorizes the Secretary of War to proceed with the construction of whatever warehouses would be necessary to store this amount of cotton. There might be ample room in the warehouses now owned by the War Department to enable it to store this cotton; but I am not advised on that point.

Mr. McNARY. The point which occurs to me as probably the most vital, and one which causes me to hesitate in favorable consideration of the amendment, is that there would be 7,000,000 bales of cotton taken out of the channels of trade and concentrated, hanging over the price level, a reduction in the amount of cotton in the channels of trade, and a storage of the cotton. Would not that have a depressing effect upon the future value of cotton?

Mr. BILBO. Is the Senator asking a question?

Mr. McNARY. Yes; that is a question.

Mr. BILBO. I could not hear the Senator, there is so much noise.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, some effort should be made to maintain order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will not Senators on both sides of the Chamber who are carrying on conversations please retire?

Mr. McNARY. I think the Senator understands the question all right; there is no doubt about that. I think the difficulty he is experiencing is in making answer to the question.

If 7,000,000 bales of cotton were stored in a Government-owned warehouse, and it were left there indefinitely—as it probably would be—would not the mere fact of the physical presence, the physical existence, of that cotton have a depressing effect upon the current price of cotton?

Mr. BILBO. That is the question?

Mr. McNARY. That is the question.

Mr. BILBO. It is my deliberate judgment that if this cotton were turned over to the War Department it would not deteriorate from storage; it would be purchased at a very reasonable price, below the cost of production, and no future Congress would attempt to remove that cotton or sell that cotton from the warehouse, and take it away from the War Department, because the War Department would know that we had one of the materials most essential in carrying on a war, in case of an emergency, and there would be no disposition on the part of any one connected with the War Department to get rid of it. So far as any future Congress disturbing it is concerned, that is unthinkable, for the reason that future Congresses will have just as much sense and be just as patriotic and as greatly concerned for the welfare of about two and a half million cotton growers as is the present Congress, as evidenced by the adoption of the amendment. There would be no fear in the minds of the cotton dealers, of the cotton speculators, exporters, or textile mills, that this cotton would be thrown on the market. It would be forgotten. It would be frozen indefinitely. In case we had a war, whatever part of the cotton was not used would rise in price. The Senator knows that after every war the prices of products of this kind always go sky high, and the Government would make a handsome profit on whatever was left.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, will the Senator bear with me a moment longer?

Mr. BILBO. I shall be delighted.

Mr. McNARY. I am afraid the memory of the speculator or the purchaser would be greener than is anticipated by the Senator. The speculator never forgets. There is one thing the fellow who buys always has in mind, namely, the amount of the commodity he purchases which is in existence.

Let me make one further observation, and I beg the Senator's pardon for taking his time. Assuming the country gets over the fear of war and conditions become stabilized in a few years, a feeling of security returns to the public mind, and the 7,000,000 bales are still in the warehouse, say 5 years from now; would not Congress be likely to put the cotton on the market when there was no fright or fear of war?

Mr. BILBO. I can imagine only one condition under which any Congress would disturb such storage. If cotton were to go sky high in price, as it has gone after every war, it might then be that some Congress economically disposed would want to take the cotton out of storage and realize the cash on it. But that is a wild speculation, and I think the Senator himself is speculating as to what might happen. I believe that if cotton were stored in warehouses, under the control of the War Department, it would have no more effect on the world price of cotton than the iron ore which lies in a rich mine in our country would affect the price of steel.

Mr. McNARY. I have always thought that experience was a signboard indicating what will happen tomorrow, and that after we study the past we may have some notion of what may be expected in the future. Let me say to the Senator that I recall that during the administration of President Hoover Congress passed what is known as the Farm Marketing Act of 1929. One of the provisions in that measure created a Farm Board. That Farm Board acquired at 74 cents a bushel 315,000,000 bushels of wheat. It acquired 1,500,000 bales of cotton. It pegged prices at the figures at which it acquired the wheat and cotton and held the wheat and cotton for 2 years, until the collapse came. Why did the collapse come? Because the market understood that a disturbing volume of cotton and a nervous quantity of wheat had been impounded, and as the result of that physical existence of wheat and cotton the price of wheat fell from 74 cents a bushel to 38 cents a bushel, and there was a corresponding decline in the price of cotton.

There we have a simple illustration of psychology as it affects the market. If 1,500,000 bales of cotton disturbed the price in 1929 and 1930, 7,000,000 bales in existence would have doubled the pressure.

It so happened I was a Member of the Senate in those days, and it was I, as chairman of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, who presented an argument on the Marketing Act of 1929, and subsequently I had to make a report to the Congress that all the $500,000,000 had been dissipated and lost for the very reasons I have now assigned. If the Senator's amendment were written into the bill, in my opinion a similar catastrophe would result.

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, I greatly appreciate the observation of the distinguished Senator on the other side of the Chamber. I think it is well that every proposition should be thoroughly analyzed and criticized; it is helpful in order to reach the golden mean and a proper conclusion; but, with all due deference to the distinguished Senator from Oregon, I do not think his observations are pertinent to the proposals I am making. What the Republican administration did in its attempt to solve the agricultural problem back in the 1920's has no connection with the proposals I am now making.

Mr. President, in further response to the Senator's observations, I call attention to the fact that, with the exception of cotton, the farm products with which the old Republican Farm Board of the 1920's was dealing were perishable farm products. Cotton is not perishable and will not deteriorate when properly stored.

Furthermore, the farm products which were under the charge of the old Farm Board in those days, and which the Senator seems to think affected the price, were there for the purpose of being resold; they were there for the purpose of being turned loose at the opportune time. My amendment proposes turning over to the War Department an imperishable material to be stored, as tin and iron are stored, to be used in case of war, with no suggestion whatsoever of its being released or turned back to the Congress to be disposed of in some other way.

Mr. McNARY. The Senator now is trying to avoid the force of my argument by saying that he wants it stored indefinitely. Does the Senator want it stored in perpetuity so it can never be taken out? If, so, let me say that the Senator, to be consistent, should propose an amendment to that effect.

Mr. BILBO. No; I do not want to store it indefinitely.

Mr. McNARY. How long does the Senator want to store it?

Mr. BILBO. I want to store it for use of the War Department during the duration of any war in which this country may be engaged.

Mr. McNARY. Until we have a war?

Mr. BILBO. Yes.

Mr. McNARY. That probably will be long after this building has moldered into dust. The Senator had better make it in perpetuity.

Mr. BILBO. I trust the Senator is correct. But if we are not going to have trouble how are we going to justify the expenditure of the billions we have voted even during the present session of Congress? Whether we have war or not, as I told the Senator previously, in the course of time the price of cotton goes in cycles as does the price of real estate. There will come a time possibly when we will be sure of entering upon the millenium, when it will be wise to release this cotton and put it into trade.

Mr. President, briefly this cotton has cost the Government, with storage, about 9 cents a pound. That amounts to $45 a bale. Seven million bales would be equivalent to $315,000,000. That is the asset we would turn over to the War Department. It would be a liquid asset. It would be just as liquid, and just as valuable an asset, and just as safe, as the gold that is buried at Fort Knox, Ky. We can have the assurance that in the warehouses of the War Department or the Navy Department will be stored an element or material which will not deteriorate, which will last for the next hundred years, and which was worth $315,000,000 when it was stored.

Mr. President, in view of the chaotic conditions existing in the world today, threatening a disturbance, if it were necessary that our Nation fight in defense of its very life, if it were forced to go out at the beginning of a war and during a war to buy the cotton necessary to carry on war, we would, if we should fail to adopt the amendment, have to pay twice as much for it as the Government has paid for this cotton. So we should be ready to spend $700,000,000 in case we have to buy this amount of cotton in another war, having failed to do so now.

Mr. President, I want to put into the RECORD at this point some statistics or facts which stand out in bold relief in the discussion about cotton, which may be helpful and constitute a predicate for the argument why the amendment should be adopted.

On July 31, 1939, the world carry-over of American cotton will be 14,250,000 bales. That is a million bales more than the record carry-over of July 1932.

The Government-loan cotton today is 11,350,000 bales. The heretofore normal average export of American cotton was between 7,250,000 and 7,500,000 bales. This year I am informed it will be in the neighborhood of 3,500,000 bales.

The 5-year average acreage up to 1931 was 41,424,000 acres, with an annual production of 14,667,000 bales during that 5-year period. The acreage in 1938 was only 28,000,000 acres. Therefore we have cut the acreage more than 13,000,000 acres, and at the same time we have reduced the number of bales about 3,000,000 bales a year by this cut in acreage.

In the 10 years ending July 31, 1938, foreign production increased from 10,000,000 to 18,000,000 bales. World consumption of cotton increased in 10 years from 25,000,000 bales to about 30,000,000 bales. During the past 6 years the parity income of cotton producers should have been $1,250,000,000 annually on a 12,000,000-bale crop; but the income this year has been only $750,000,000 for the cotton, with soil-conservation and adjustment payments of $150,000,000 from the Federal Government, making $900,000,000 for 2,500,000 farm families, or a gross income of $360 per family. Out of this $360 these families had to pay the cost of production and the cost of marketing and then maintain their families. I merely mention these facts to show the awful conditions which confront the cotton farmer and the necessity of heroic treatment in properly solving the cotton problem.

I should like to place in the RECORD at this point the record of supply and distribution of cotton stocks. In the United States on August 1, 1938, there were 11,446,000 bales of cotton. The production for 1938–39 was 11,621,000 bales, or a total of 23,067,000. That is the total supply.

The consumption in the United States up to January 1, 1939, was 3,332,000 bales. Exports were 2,205,000 bales, making a total of 5,537,000.

Stocks in the United States on January 31, 1939, were 17,530,000 bales. Impounded on account of Government loans are 11,350,000 bales. Mill stocks today are 1,600,000, making a total of 12,950,000.

Available for marketing purposes on February 1, 1939, were 4,580,000 bales. If domestic consumption and export continue at the rate of the first 6 months the distribution will be 4,463,000 bales, leaving a total available stock of 117,000 bales.

The cotton situation has given every Senator from a cotton-producing State a thousand headaches. We have had 15 or 20 different solutions offered by the 15 or 20 Senators from the cotton-growing States. We have had propaganda from every source on earth about how to solve the cotton problem which confronts the American people today. I was glad to hear the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY] say that the cotton problem is not a sectional problem. It is not a local problem. It is a national problem, a problem in which every citizen of the country is interested.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. STEWART in the chair). Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. BILBO. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. A moment ago the Senator made the statement that practically every Senator from a cotton-growing State had a different solution of the cotton problem.

Mr. BILBO. To begin with; yes.

Mr. LUCAS. I should like to know whether or not the Senators from the cotton-producing States have ever attempted to reach an agreement in conference as to how the problem should be solved.

Mr. BILBO. We met in January, and I think we have met two or three times each week since then.

Mr. LUCAS. And those Senators have never been able to agree?

Mr. BILBO. We have never been able completely to agree in the attempt to solve the problem, though everyone appreciates the necessity of a solution. The President has announced a program. I am sorry to say that I cannot agree with the export subsidy plan suggested by the President. I take it the President received this solution from the Farm Bureau Federation, headed by Mr. O'Neal, of Chicago. I have just received a letter from the head of the Mississippi Cooperative Cotton Association, and I wish to place in the RECORD his observations about the foreign export plan. He says:

> The export subsidy would not in any way assist the cotton farmer. The farmers of Mississippi are almost unanimous in their opposition to the export subsidy for the following reasons:
>
> 1. That it provides cheap cotton to foreign nations at the expense of the American consumers and American taxpayers.
>
> 2. That it would encourage similar action by other exporting countries.
>
> 3. That the probable cost would not justify the small increase in exports which will be obtained.
>
> 4. That it will seriously threaten the success of the reciprocal trade program, since the American cotton producer must depend upon foreign markets for approximately 50 percent of his outlet for cotton.
>
> If the industry is to be maintained on the present basis, it is the feeling of the farmers of Mississippi that any money that is appropriated by Congress should be made available to make additional payments to producers in excess of the world price in the way of compensation to offset the penalty of the tariff. It is believed to be a greater advantage to the cotton farmers of Mississippi to continue a program of reciprocal trade agreements which will guarantee free trade between this and other nations in the exportation of cotton.

I cannot give my consent to a subsidy on the exportation of cotton. I cannot see how it would help the cotton producers. I have a suspicion—and I have been afraid that in Washington, where we are gathered together to try to solve these problems, we are subjected to influences, arguments, and propaganda which are not at all times in the interest of the producers, the real farmers, the men who do the work.

The other day I received a letter from one of the outstanding economists of the South in which he made this striking statement:

> There is only one object in producing cotton, and that is to sell it to consumers at home and abroad.

That is not a detached statement from this distinguished economist. That is a whole paragraph by itself, and I think in that one paragraph he announced the viewpoint, the feeling, the interest, and the sentiment which control a great many persons who have been trying to solve the cotton problem for the cotton farmers of the South. Let me repeat the statement:

> There is only one object in producing cotton, and that is to sell it to consumers at home and abroad.

I am at a loss to know just how much glory and profit the cotton producers of the South will receive from dumping cotton upon foreign countries by reason of the taxpayers of this country paying a substantial subsidy to the farmers in order to induce foreigners to buy our cotton. A subsidy on the exportation of cotton, without an equal subsidy to the processors or textile mills of the United States, is manifestly unfair to the processors of this country, because if the cotton spinners or processors of Japan, Italy, France, Germany, Great Britain, and Belgium can buy our cotton at a lower price as a result of the taxpayers of America subsidizing the exporter, whatever the mechanics of the operation might be, the spinner or processor in the foreign country, where cheaper labor exists than in our cotton mills and processing plants in this country, is enabled to take America's cheap cotton, with Europe's cheap labor, and manufacture a cheap fabric to be sold to consumers in foreign countries at a price lower than that made to the consumers of America, where the cotton is produced. Most certainly it is unfair to the textile mills of the United States, because it destroys at one fell swoop all the export trade they might have in the sale of their manufactured products. So, I do not see any wisdom in it. I do not see any equity in it. I do not see any righteousness in the proposal.

If we subsidize the exporters in the sale to foreign markets of all or a part of the 11,300,000 bales of cotton to be dumped on the cotton markets of the world, so surely as we do it the world-market price of cotton will go to the bottom. We are now planting the crop for 1939 in America, and in a few months that crop will be on the market. If we destroy the world price of cotton through the process of a subsidy; if we wreck that price and bring it down below the present farm-loan value as set up in our Farm Act of 1938, at the close of this year the United States Government will have to take over the entire cotton crop of 1939, and we will find ourselves just where we are today, with another 12,000,000 bales taken over under the loan value as fixed by the Farm Act of 1938.

There are only two ways to save the Government from taking over the 1939 crop. One way is to subsidize the farmer with a parity payment, as suggested by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] in his bill, which would make the plan so attractive to him that he would sell his cotton in the open channels of trade, instead of unloading it on the Government under the loan feature of the act of 1938.

Mr. President, as we all know, the other House has killed the parity appropriation of $250,000,000. In the Senate we may be able to restore it, but I do not know whether such action on the part of the Senate would be accepted by the House. However, with the defeat of the $250,000,000 parity appropriation by the House, the fact remains that it is now too late to adopt the plan of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD], which proposes to turn back to the farmers at 3 cents a pound cotton from the present Government holdings in order to reduce the crop for this year. It is too late to do that now, because the cotton farmers of the South have already bought their fertilizer, they have already plowed the ground, they have already made their plans, and in some parts have already planted the cotton itself. So it is too late to go through with that scheme.

Therefore, if the Congress is not going to accept the proposition advanced by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] of paying a subsidy or making a parity payment to the farmer to make it sufficiently attractive for him to sell his cotton in the open channels instead of loaning it to the Government, or, in effect, selling it to the Government, then the plan I propose is the only way by which we can save the cotton situation, for it is admitted by all the experts, it is admitted by all those interested in cotton, that if we will store 7,000,000 bales of cotton with the War Department and "freeze" it and put it there to stay, and let the cotton world know that it will not be removed—and it would not be removed—we will have solved the cotton problem; the price of cotton will at once go beyond the present loan value fixed by the Government, because the cotton processors of America and of the world need and would buy the cotton we would have left. As a matter of fact, there are now about four and one-half million bales of free cotton.

Senators may talk about the European spinners wanting American cotton because it is a better grade, but why do they not buy it? I will tell you, Mr. President, why they have not bought it. They have not bought it because they have been expecting, they have been planning and dreaming of the thing that is happening right now—an attempt to subsidize the exportation of cotton to the mills of Europe so that they could get it at a cheap price. That is one reason why they have not bought it. The cotton mills of America, I understand, have in their stocks about 2,000,000 bales, possibly less than that. We have four and one-half million bales of free cotton. I will admit about 500,000 bales of it are "dog" cotton, which the processor cannot even spin. It is cotton that the speculators have used throughout all the years to manipulate the trade and affect the price of cotton, the market, by its presence.

They report it, but it is not worth having. The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH], who is a cotton expert, knows that to be true. However, as a matter of fact, we have about 4,000,000 bales of free cotton today, and if the European mills want it, why have they not bought it? If American spinners want it, why do they not buy it? They have been hanging around the Capitol since the 1st of January dreaming and planning and scheming to have something done so that they could get the cotton on which loans have been made by the Government, amounting to eleven and a half million bales, below the price the Government has put into the cotton. That is what has been happening. If we will take 7,000,000 bales of this cotton and turn it over to the War Department and "freeze" it and let it stay there—and no future Congress will remove it; I know they will not remove it next year because the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] and I will be here and we know how to filibuster—it will not affect that delicate thing which is called "the market"; it will not affect the price; it will not have an influence on it; but by removing this cotton from the present available supply there will be sufficient cotton left in the hands of the Government, with the free cotton, to meet the demands of the American spinners and the Europeans who want cotton; the price of cotton will go beyond the loan value fixed in the act of 1938, and the crop of 1939 will bring a decent price—far above the loan figure—under which the cotton producers of the South can live.

It may be said by my friend from Utah that my proposition is not germane to the pending bill; that the bill does not undertake to store anything except strategic and critical war materials; but I wisn to tell the Senator that, while he may need strategic and critical materials to carry on the war he is getting ready for, he will have a hell of a time carrying on a war without cotton.

So he had better accept my amendment and permit this cotton to be stored. In doing that we will provide for the national defense and save about two and a half million cotton farmers of the South who today are in misery, who are in bankruptcy, who are being destroyed. The adoption of my amendment will save the situation.

Mr. President, I shall not attempt to prophesy, but if something like this is not done, and we proceed with the export subsidy plan that is now in the air, when we get back here next January we will find a sad condition, and we will find a South that will be aroused against the administration and against anyone who is a party to legislation that, if enacted, would destroy the price of cotton, that would wreck the price of cotton, and put us in worse condition than we now are. Of course, the farmer will get the loan figure, but the Government will be left holding the bag. However, by adopting my amendment we will save the Government and we will save the cotton farmer.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, if I properly understand the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi, it is an amendment which, in a few words, would provide that the Government shall store on military or naval reservations, in keeping with the way in which strategic materials will be stored, $300,000,000 worth of cotton for which the Government now, in some way or other, is responsible. I believe that that is the sum and substance of the amendment.

First of all, Mr. President, it must be pointed out that under no circumstances of which we can conceive today, in anticipation of a war, at least, would cotton become a strategic material. It is an essential material. I should not like to quote the words the Senator used when he suggested that I would have "a hell of a time carrying on a war without cotton," but will merely remark that I "would have a hell of a time" carrying it on with cotton. However, it is not cotton or the lack of cotton, but it is war that brings us this type of problem. So the argument is hardly logical at this place.

I am loathe to step in and attempt to debate, on this bill especially, the economics of our cotton situation, but I must, at least, point out one or two factors which have to do with the economics of our cotton crop. Those who produce new wealth, such as cotton farmers, prosper when many others are able to produce great wealth in other parts of the world. When a period comes in which the consumers of the world are in such a position that they themselves cannot produce wealth, of necessity they cannot buy cotton. They cannot buy anything else. Cotton, which is so universally used in the world, is used in largest quantity where there are the most people to use it.

For 2½ years—indeed, for twenty-odd years, we may say—the part of the world which is ultimately the consumer of all our surpluses has not been able to buy, due to civil war and strife. That part of the world has been placed upon an economic basis which made it impossible for its people to obtain even their simplest clothing needs. There has been trouble throughout all Asia, which, of course, has been the ultimate consumer of all surpluses at all times in the history of the world because that is where most of the consumers live.

The cotton problem of the United States will be settled within 6 months after peace is restored to the Far East. That is the ultimate factor. If the Senator from Mississippi wishes to do something constructive and humanitarian which will bring prosperity to the cotton farmers of America, he should work for peace in the Far East. The other great consumers—not the ultimate consumers but the consumers who use, and who buy, and who furnish our market—have been disturbed not only by the threat of war but by a complete let-down in their capital. Storage is not indulged in, because loans are hard to get. We know that in our own country, so far as cotton is concerned, the ordinary retailer never carries on hand any more than sufficient for his immediate needs, whereas a little while ago, because conditions were deemed stable, every retailer of dry goods always carried on hand a great amount of reserve.

Those are the basic conditions; those are our troubles—no capital among some of the consumers, and no ability to obtain wealth with which to buy among the ultimate consumers.

The suggestion is now made that the Government take over $300,000,000 worth of cotton and store it in conformity with the theory of the strategic-materials bill, which would permit the President of the United States, under the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] to sell the cotton at any time the President deemed it inadvisable or unnecessary to hold the cotton in storage in order to meet the requirements of the bill. So we are relieved of even the worry of the threat of a filibuster on the part of the Senator from Mississippi and the colleague whom he named.

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I shall be glad to yield.

Mr. BILBO. The Senator says an amendment has been made to the bill which gives the President power to sell the materials which it is proposed to buy under the bill. I was not aware that the bill had been amended. I was going by the copy I have before me.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. The amendment was accepted 2 or 3 days ago. It was offered by the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. BILBO. If that be true, the Senator's observation is correct; and in that case I certainly should want to modify my amendment so as to take cotton out of the jurisdiction of the amendment.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I was sure the Senator would. That is why I have brought out the matter. I am sure the Senator sees that the whole objective which I know he has in mind, instead of being furthered by his amendment, might actually be hurt by his amendment.

Therefore, Mr. President, I suggest that the Senate reject the amendment of the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, I desire to add, as part of my remarks, a statement which I have been able to get from one of the departments as to the cost of the warehouses necessary to store 7,000,000 bales of cotton. It is not an exact estimate, but it is a rough estimate that the Department is willing to stand upon. It will cost three and a half million dollars to build the permanent storehouses necessary to carry 7,000,000 bales of cotton after it has been compressed.

Mr. President, I understand that the bill has been amended in the respect just stated by the Senator from Utah. That is a fact I did not know about. I was governed by the original text of the bill. I understand that the amendment has been accepted, and is a part of the bill. That being true, if under the bill as it now stands the cotton, if stored, may be offered for immediate sale at the discretion of one person, I withdraw my amendment, and will not even ask for a vote on it, because I do not entertain any hope of being able to remove from the bill the amendment which has been placed in it.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, the Senator from Mississippi has withdrawn his amendment. May I ask what is now before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to further amendment.

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, in withdrawing the amendment I wish to announce that it will be my purpose to introduce the amendment in the form of a separate bill and let it come before the Senate in that form, because I have a suspicion that before we get through this session there will be some need for a bill of that kind in order to solve the cotton problem.

I have felt all along that my amendment was not germane to the pending bill, because it dealt with a different question. At the same time, the adoption of the amendment to this bill would do two things: It would not only provide a definite war supply, in case of a 4-year major war, at no cost to the Government, but at the same time it would solve a great problem that is giving the whole country a headache.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I am in complete sympathy with the Senator from Mississippi. I hope and trust that the cotton problem will be solved.

Mr. President, this morning the Maritime Commission sent to me an amendment which they asked that I offer to the bill. The amendment simply provides that when materials bought from foreign countries have to be shipped upon the high seas they shall be shipped in American bottoms. The Senator who introduced the bill, and, I am sure, the committee, felt, of course, that the laws of the land which provide that supplies for the Army and the Navy which are brought overseas must be carried in American bottoms applies to this bill also, because these strategic materials are fundamentally supplies for the Army and the Navy, indirectly if not directly. Therefore, the theory of the amendment is not out of harmony with the present law. The theory of the amendment is very much in harmony with the present law.

While the amendment I am about to offer has not been before the committee and has not been considered by the committee, I see no objection to the Senate accepting it. Therefore, I offer it for the present consideration of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah offers an amendment, which will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 4, at the end of section 6, it is proposed to insert the following new section:

SEC. 7. In the acquisition of stocks of materials, as herein authorized, the agency charged with the duty of acquiring the same shall, as to the materials acquired outside the United States, require that such materials be shipped in vessels of the United States. No other vessels shall be employed in the transportation by sea of materials which shall be purchased and acquired under this act, unless the said agency, upon certification by the United States Maritime Commission, shall find that (1) no vessels of the United States are available, or (2) that the rates of freight charges by said vessels are excessive and unreasonable, or unless the said agency shall find, upon certification by the Army and Navy Munitions Board, that the exigencies of national defense otherwise require.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I ask for the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I should like to ask the the Senator a question regarding the amendment. The amendment uses the words "vessels of the United States." What is the interpretation of that phrase? Does it mean vessels operated by the United States Maritime Commission, or does it mean any vessels under United States registry?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. My interpretation—I do not know whether or not it is correct, because I have had no chance to look into the matter—is that a vessel of the United States is one flying the American flag. That is my understanding of the matter.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I wish to inquire of the Senator who has offered the amendment about the last part of it:

Or unless the said agency shall find, upon certification by the Army and Navy Munitions Board, that the exigencies of national defense otherwise require.

I wonder if the Senator has considered that matter fully and whether he regards it as the proper place to put this discretion—this great decision, as it might be—in the event, for example, that the lanes of transportation of rubber were closed to American vessels and the only way in which we could obtain rubber would be by getting it through vessels of other nationals or vessels under charter of other countries. Has the Senator considered that such a situation might arise that it would be desirable to have the matter in the discretion of the Secretary of War or the Secretary of the Navy, or both of them, instead of the decision of the Army and Navy Munitions Board?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, in answer to the first question, of course, as the Senator knows, I have not given this proposal full consideration. As I stated, it has just been handed to me.

In answer to the second question, it seemed on reading that the Army and Navy Munitions Board, which is set up under the direction of the Army and the Navy, and which has charge of the direct handling of all these strategic materials, of course, under the authority of the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy, is a perfectly consistent place for this authority to rest, realizing that the Board would not use its own discretion without consulting the two Secretaries concerned.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for another question?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I am glad to yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. I wish to assume in the question that the United States is not at war, that the United States is at peace, but that the troubles of other nations create such a situation as to cut off an essential supply necessary to keep in operation some large industry in the United States. Assume that to be so, and that the natural effect of cutting off that supply is to lower the standard of living of all those in the United States who are engaged in the particular endeavor concerned, which depends so much on the importation of the commodity involved. Is the amendment so drawn that in such an emergency the importation could be made in vessels flying a foreign flag, or must we be limited to transportation only in vessels flying the American flag?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. If I may answer the question, I think the amendment is harmonious in theory with the present law. With the law in regard to the transportation of supplies for the Army and Navy as it is, and with the other safeguards to take care of emergencies, it seems to me that any contingency such as that the Senator has pointed out could be met. If not, the amendment would be very ill-advised, because there are many parts of the world from which we get some small quantities of strategic materials, not those particularly used in manufacturing, but materials which we need, where probably the American flag on a boat has not been seen for many years, nothing but a tramp steamer once in a while arriving at such a port. Therefore the question which the Senator asks is an important one, and if, for example, we should find ourselves confronted with such a contingency, the amendment would be extremely bad. But this is the way the law reads today:

Vessels employed for transporting supplies for Army and Navy.

And there is a limitation, which, of course, does not hold for these other materials:

Vessels of the United States, or belonging to the United States, and no others, shall be employed in the transportation by sea of coal, provisions, fodder, or supplies of any description, purchased pursuant to law, for the use of the Army or Navy unless the President shall find that the rates of freight charges by said vessels are excessive and unreasonable, in which case contracts shall be made as otherwise provided by law: Provided, That no greater charges be made by such vessels for transportation of articles for the use of the said Army and Navy than are made by such vessels for transportation of like goods for private parties or companies.

There is that limitation with regard to purchases of supplies for either the Army or the Navy. Material which is used by our manufacturers, to which the Senator has referred, might or might not be strategic and might or might not be coming in under the direction of the Army or Navy Board. If a material were not coming in in accordance with the provisions and appropriations set forth in the proposed legislation, it, of course, would not be a material controlled by the American law in either case. So the contingency about which the Senator speaks, it seems to me, is probably hardly possible.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I am glad to yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. I desire the Senator to understand that my questions are not at all critical in their character.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. The Senator from Utah understands that already, and appreciates it.

Mr. AUSTIN. The questions are for the purpose of eliciting information, and I have one further question. Does the Senator understand that if, when the Senate agrees to the amendment, if the Senate should agree to the amendment, the whole subject would be new and would be in disagreement between the House and the Senate, and might be further studied in conference?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I imagine that, as the House happens to be following the course of the bill, the amendment will reach the House committee before the bill is reported to the floor of the House, and there will be opportunity for consideration in the committee. My first thought—and probably it is a valid thought now—after having made the amendment known to the Senate and having gotten it into the RECORD, is that it would be well to leave it for consideration of the House committee, to leave it just as it is. I know that I have done all that could be expected of one in charge of a bill. So that if the Senator, who is a member of the subcommittee, feels that it would be better for us, in the parliamentary situation, not to agree to the amendment at this time, but just leave it pending, that would be perfectly satisfactory to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I think that is a very wise suggestion, because for my part I am not satisfied with my imperfect understanding of the amendment, and I would very much rather have it left so that it would be subject to careful consideration.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, that is satisfactory to me. In connection with the amendment I ask that there be printed in the RECORD for the benefit of the Senate the laws regarding this point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GURNEY in the chair). Is there objection?

There being no objection, the laws were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stat. 518)

SEC. 1365. Vessels employed for transporting supplies for Army and Navy: Vessels of the United States, or belonging to the United States, and no others, shall be employed in the transportation by sea of coal, provisions, fodder, or supplies of any description, purchased pursuant to law, for the use of the Army or Navy unless the President shall find that the rates of freight charges by said vessels are excessive and unreasonable, in which case contracts shall be made as otherwise provided by law: Provided, That no greater charges be made by such vessels for transportation of articles for the use of the said Army and Navy than are made by such vessels for transportation of like goods for private parties or companies (U. S. A., title 10).

SEC. 528. Transportation of supplies: Vessels of the United States, or belonging to the United States, and no others, shall be employed in the transportation by sea of coal, provisions, fodder, or supplies of any description, purchased pursuant to law, for the use of the Navy unless the President shall find that the rates of freight charges by such vessels are excessive and unreasonable: Provided, That no greater charges be made by such vessels for transportation for the use of the said Navy than are made by such vessels for transportation of like goods for private parties or companies (U. S. C. A., title 34).

Public Resolution No. 17, Seventy-third Congress (approved March 26, 1934)

Resolved, etc., That it is the sense of Congress that in any loans made by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation or any other instrumentality of the Government to foster the exporting of agricultural or other products, provision shall be made that such products shall be carried exclusively in vessels of the United States, unless, as to any or all of such products, the Shipping Board Bureau, after investigation, shall certify to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation or any other instrumentality of the Government that vessels of the United States are not available in sufficient numbers or in sufficient tonnage capacity, or on necessary sailing schedules, or at reasonable rates.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry? Has the amendment been withdrawn?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment has not been formally withdrawn. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I understood the amendment was withdrawn.

Mr. KING. It was my understanding, Mr. President, that my colleague would not press the adoption of the amendment. If he does, I desire to submit a few observations. I think the suggestion which has been offered—that the House can take cognizance of the facts from the RECORD—would be sufficient information to enable them to make a further study of the matter in the consideration of the bill. Personally, I should not feel like voting for the amendment because I can conceive of some obstacles. I think it would interfere in part with some arrangements which might be made for exchange of commodities under the reciprocal-trade agreements. I have visited some of the mines in the Caucasus Mountains in Russia, where large quantities of manganese are produced. The Russians have ships. If we acquired some manganese from Russia, I am sure the Russians would insist upon having it transported in their own vessels; and if we insisted, as a condition precedent to purchase, that the manganese should be transported in our vessels, the Russians would perhaps charge a price which would be almost prohibitive. I think it would be disadvantageous for us to have in our law a provision that we could not acquire the commodities that are called for under the bill unless they were transported under certain conditions in American vessels. I think it would be better to study the question a little further before we made the provision a part of our statutes.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I would appreciate a ruling of the Chair which would leave the question in the RECORD without prejudice and without action.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah formally withdraw the amendment?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I can formally withdraw it if that will satisfy the end aimed at in the remarks made by the Senator from Vermont, the senior Senator from Utah, and myself.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I understood our colleague to mean that the amendment would be withdrawn, and that the RECORD would show what has taken place. The House would have the advantage of what the RECORD shows about it. So, if the Senator will withdraw the amendment, it will not take it out of the RECORD physically but it will take it out of consideration, and out of the way of parliamentary procedure. If he will do that, I think it will be a good way of handling the matter.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I withdraw the amendment.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Utah if he will consider, at the time the matter is under consideration, renumbering the amendment he has suggested, so as to make it No. 6 (b). If he will refer to section 7, with subdivisions (a) and (b), in the bill as it is now drawn, he will find that it does not deal with the suggested provision in any form. As the Senator explained yesterday, subsection (b) of section 7 deals entirely with the development of mines. Consequently if transportation will be handled as appears in section 6, it would seem that the Senator's amendment should be a further subdivision of section 6 rather than be numbered section 7. I respectfully call that to the Senator's attention.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I thank the Senator from Connecticut.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GURNEY in the chair). The bill is still before the Senate and open to further amendment.

If there be no further amendment, the question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading and read the third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. McNARY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Danaher	La Follette	Radcliffe
Andrews	Davis	Lodge	Reynolds
Ashurst	Ellender	Logan	Russell
Austin	Frazier	Lucas	Schwartz
Bankhead	George	Lundeen	Schwellenbach
Barkley	Gillette	McKellar	Sheppard
Bilbo	Glass	McNary	Shipstead
Borah	Green	Maloney	Smathers
Bridges	Guffey	Mead	Smith
Brown	Gurney	Miller	Stewart
Bulow	Harrison	Minton	Taft
Burke	Hatch	Murray	Thomas, Utah
Byrd	Hayden	Neely	Townsend
Byrnes	Herring	Norris	Vandenberg
Capper	Holman	O'Mahoney	Wheeler
Chavez	Hughes	Overton	White
Clark, Mo.	Johnson, Colo.	Pepper	Wiley
Connally	King	Pittman

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Seventy-one Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

The question is on the passage of the bill.

Mr. McNARY. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk called the roll.

Mr. BYRNES (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE]. I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS] and permit my vote to stand.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HOLT] is detained from the Senate because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GERRY] is unavoidably detained. I am advised that if present and voting, he would vote "yea."

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS], the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING], and the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY] are detained in important committee meetings.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], the Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE], the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY], the Senator from Idaho [Mr. CLARK], the Senator from California [Mr. DOWNEY], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. LEE], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN], the Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], and the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] are absent on important public business.

The Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS], and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] are unavoidably detained.

Mr. AUSTIN. My colleague [Mr. GIBSON] is necessarily absent. If present, he would vote "yea."

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BARBOUR] is unavoidably detained. He has a general pair with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL].

I am advised that the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE], if present, would vote "yea."

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY] has a general pair with the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING].

The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. NYE] has a pair with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN]. If present, the Senator from North Dakota would vote "nay," and the Senator from Missouri would vote "yea."

The Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON] has a general pair with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS].

The Senator from Kansas [Mr. REED] is temporarily detained. He has a general pair with the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH].

The result was announced—yeas 56, nays 13, as follows:

YEAS—56

Adams	Connally	La Follette	Pepper
Andrews	Ellender	Logan	Radcliffe
Ashurst	George	Lucas	Reynolds
Austin	Gillette	Lundeen	Russell
Bankhead	Glass	McKellar	Schwartz
Barkley	Green	Maloney	Schwellenbach
Bilbo	Guffey	Mead	Sheppard
Bridges	Gurney	Miller	Shipstead
Brown	Harrison	Minton	Smathers
Bulow	Hatch	Murray	Smith
Byrd	Hayden	Neely	Stewart
Byrnes	Herring	Norris	Taft
Chavez	Hughes	O'Mahoney	Thomas, Utah
Clark, Mo.	Johnson, Colo.	Overton	Wheeler

NAYS—13

Borah	Davis	Lodge	Vandenberg
Burke	Frazier	McNary	White
Capper	Holman	Townsend	Wiley
Danaher

NOT VOTING—27

Bailey	Gerry	Lee	Tobey
Barbour	Gibson	Lewis	Truman
Bone	Hale	McCarran	Tydings
Caraway	Hill	Nye	Van Nuys
Clark, Idaho	Holt	Pittman	Wagner
Donahey	Johnson, Calif.	Reed	Walsh
Downey	King	Thomas, Okla.

So the bill (S. 572) was passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to provide for the common defense by acquiring stocks of strategic and critical materials essential to the needs of industry for the manufacture of supplies for the armed forces and the civilian population in time of a national emergency, and to encourage, as far as possible, the further development of strategic and critical materials within the United States for common defense."

SALE OF COTTON ABROAD BELOW COST

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. A resolution (S. Res. 107) opposing sales of American cotton during the present world crisis to foreign purchasers below the cost of production.

Mr. GEORGE obtained the floor.

TAXATION OF THE COMPENSATION OF PUBLIC OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES—AMENDMENT

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President——

Mr. GEORGE. I yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Yesterday I had printed and asked to have lie on the table an amendment intended to be offered by me to House bill 3790, the tax bill which will be before the Senate on Monday. In view of the extreme importance of the issue involved in the amendment, which seeks to extend the scope of the bill to income from securities as well as income from salaries, and in view of the inquiries which have been made with regard to it, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be printed in the body of the RECORD at this point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. CLARK of Missouri to the bill (H. R. 3790) relating to the taxation of the compensation of public officers and employees was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

On page 6, at the end of line 3, add a new title reading as follows:

"TITLE III

"SEC. 301. (a) Section 22 (b) (4) of the Internal Revenue Code is amended to read as follows:

"'(4) Tax-free interest: Interest upon (A) obligations of the United States or its possessions, or (B) the obligations of any State, Territory, or any political subdivision thereof, or of the District of Columbia, or (C) the obligations of any instrumentality of the United States or possessions thereof, or (D) the obligations of any instrumentality of any State, Territory, or any political subdivision thereof, or of the District of Columbia, shall be included in gross income; except that there shall be excluded from gross income the interest upon such obligations issued prior to the date of the enactment of the Public Salary Tax Act of 1939. Every person owning any of the obligations enumerated in clause (A), (B), (C), or (D) and issued prior to the date of the enactment of the Public Salary Tax Act of 1939 shall, in the return required by this chapter, submit a statement showing the number and amount of such obligations owned by him and the income received therefrom, in such form and with such information as the Commissioner may require. In the case of obligations of the United States issued after September 1, 1917 (other than postal-savings certificates of deposit), and in case of obligations of a corporation organized under act of Congress, the interest shall be exempt—

"'(A) only if such obligations were issued prior to the date of the enactment of the Public Salary Tax Act of 1939; and

"'(B) only if and to the extent provided in the respective acts authorizing the issue thereof, as amended and supplemented; and shall be excluded from gross income only if and to the extent it is wholly exempt from the taxes imposed by this chapter;'

"Paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 25 (a) of the Internal Revenue Code are amended to read as follows:

"'(1) Interest on United States obligations: The amount received as interest upon obligations of the United States issued prior to the date of the enactment of the Public Salary Tax Act of 1939 which is included in gross income under section 22.

"'(2) Interest on obligations of instrumentalities of the United States: The amount received as interest on obligations of a corporation organized under act of Congress, issued prior to the date of the enactment of the Public Salary Tax Act of 1939 if (A) such corporation is an instrumentality of the United States; and (B) such interest is included in gross income under section 22; and (C) under the act authorizing the issue thereof, as amended and supplemented, such interest is exempt from normal tax.'

"SEC. 302. The United States hereby consents to the application of a nondiscriminatory income tax, now or hereafter imposed by any State or local taxing authority, to interest, upon obligations of the United States, any Territory or possession or political subdivision thereof, the District of Columbia, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing, (1) if such obligations were issued on or after the date of the enactment of the Public Salary Tax Act of 1939 and (2) if such State or duly constituted taxing authority has jurisdiction to tax such interest."

SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE ON FORESTRY

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, at the last session a concurrent resolution was passed creating a Joint Committee on Forestry. That committee was ordered to report on the 1st of April 1939. Former Senator McAdoo was appointed chairman of the committee. He went home and entered his campaign, and so the committee has not performed the duties which it was directed to perform. It did not become organized. As I have said, former Senator McAdoo was chairman, and former Senator Pope was the next ranking member. No action was taken. The House has adopted a concurrent resolution continuing the authority of the committee for a year. The Senate also has such a resolution on the calendar. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the House resolution (H. Con. Res. 11).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. GEORGE. With the understanding that it does not displace the unfinished business, I have no objection.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I spoke to the majority leader about the matter.

Mr. MCNARY. I understand the resolution merely extends the time in which to make a report.

Mr. BANKHEAD. That is correct. As the Senator knows, the committee did not become organized. The Senator is on the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of House Concurrent Resolution 11?

There being no objection, the resolution (H. Con. Res. 11) was considered and agreed to, as follows:

House Concurrent Resolution 11

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the special joint committee, which was authorized and directed to study and make investigation of the present and prospective situation with respect to the forest land of the United States, its condition, ownership, and management, as it affects a balanced timber budget, watershed protection, flood control, and the other commodities and social economic benefits which may be derived from such land, be authorized to continue the investigation begun under Senate Concurrent Resolution 31 of the Seventy-fifth Congress and for such purposes said committee shall have the same power and authority as were conferred upon it by Senate Concurrent Resolution 31 of the Seventy-fifth Congress, and shall report to the Congress as soon as practicable, and not later than April 1, 1940, the results of its investigation together with its recommendation for necessary legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Senate Concurrent Resolution 5 is indefinitely postponed.

HEARINGS BEFORE COMMITTEE ON RULES

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, without displacing the unfinished business, I ask unanimous consent that Senate Resolution 88, providing authority to the Committee on Rules to conduct hearings, which I report back favorably without amendment from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, be considered at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of Senate Resolution 88?

There being no objection, the resolution (S. Res. 88) submitted by Mr. NEELY on February 27, 1939, was considered, and agreed to as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Rules, or any subcommittee thereof, hereby is authorized, during the Seventy-sixth Congress, to send for persons, books, and papers; to administer oaths; and to employ a stenographer at a cost not exceeding 25 cents per hundred words to report such hearings as may be had on any subject before said committee, the expense thereof to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate; and that the committee, or any subcommittee thereof, may sit during the sessions or recesses of the Senate.

SENATOR FROM TENNESSEE

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. LOGAN. I desire to submit a report from the Committee on Privileges and Elections and if the Senator from Georgia will permit, I should like to make a brief explanation of it.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, this is a privileged resolution, and it is agreeable that it be presented now and disposed of if it leads to no debate, and with the understanding, of course, that it does not displace the pending measure. I do not think it would, anyway, because, as I have said, it is a privileged resolution, as I understand, of the highest order.

Mr. LOGAN. It is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the report submitted by the Senator from Kentucky from the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

The Chief Clerk read the report (Rept. No. 242), as follows:

UNITED STATES SENATE—REPORT OF COMMITTEE—JOHN R. NEAL, CONTESTANT, AGAINST TOM STEWART, CONTESTEE

We, your Committee on Privileges and Elections, beg leave to report that we have given careful consideration to the petition and supplemental petition filed by the contestant in the above-captioned proceedings and have concluded that the petition and supplemental petition should be dismissed, and that no further consideration should be given to the contest. Therefore we recommend that the following resolution be adopted by the Senate:

Resolved, That the contest of John R. Neal against Tom Stewart, Senator from the State of Tennessee, be, and the same is hereby, dismissed.

COMMITTEE ON PRIVILEGES AND ELECTIONS.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, a contest was filed in the Senate by Dr. Neal against Senator Stewart. He alleged numerous violations of the laws of Tennessee in connection with the primary election held last summer in which Mr. Stewart received the nomination for Senator. Dr. Neal was also a candidate in that primary. I believe about 300,000, or perhaps more than 300,000, votes were polled. The contestant received something over 4,000 votes. His charges, as stated in his petition and supplemental petition, largely related to the expenditure of money. It was evident, after careful examination of the petitions, that the contestant could not hope to establish that he was nominated.

The Sheppard committee considered all the complaints that were filed by the contestant and reported that there was nothing in any of the complaints which, in any way, cast any doubt on the election of Senator Stewart, and in most instances found no basis for the complaints which had been made. As I have said, this proceeding related wholly to a primary election, although the general election followed, and there was an allegation that more money was expended than was authorized by the statutes of Tennessee. Tennessee has a procedure whereby the courts may determine who has been legally nominated at a primary election. So the committee felt that it should not go into these matters as they had to do with a primary, and because the Sheppard committee have fully reported on them.

The contestee, Senator Stewart, tendered an answer in which he specifically denied all the allegations, but, in view of the fact that the committee reached the conclusion that there was nothing which would justify the committee to go further into the matter, the answer was only lodged with the papers and not filed. So I move the adoption of the resolution submitted with the report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NEELY in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the resolution reported by the Committee on Privileges and Elections and embodied in the report of the committee.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I have been endeavoring for about 15 or 20 minutes to secure recognition. I never like to secure recognition when a vote is about to be taken on another matter. Is it contemplated that there will be a vote on the question which has now been presented to the Senate? If so, I do not want to interfere with it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Has the able Senator from Kentucky asked for the immediate consideration of the resolution?

Mr. LOGAN. I asked for the immediate consideration, in the first place, although it is a privileged resolution which I submitted with the report, a resolution which, it seems to me, without advising with anyone else, I may say it is necessary for the Senate to adopt.

Mr. McNARY. I have conferred with the able Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN], a member of the committee, and I have no objection to the immediate consideration of the resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution (S. Res. 115) was agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the contest of John R. Neal against Tom Stewart, Senator from the State of Tennessee, be, and the same is hereby, dismissed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. PEPPER and Mr. HATCH addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Georgia yield and, if so, to whom?

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I thought the Senator from Florida had the floor, and I desired to ask him to yield. If the Senator from Georgia has the floor, I will ask if he will yield to me for a moment?

Mr. GEORGE. I have been trying to yield to the Senator from Florida, because he has been anxious to procure the floor for some time. I now yield to him.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida yield to me to present an article for the RECORD?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

(Mr. HATCH asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article on "Americanity," by F. M. Kercheville, which appears in the Appendix.)

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President——

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, will the Senator from Georgia yield to me?

Mr. GEORGE. I have yielded to the Senator from Florida.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I have got to attend a committee meeting, and I would appreciate it if the Senator from Delaware would present the matter he has in mind a little later.

Mr. HUGHES. Very well.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, may we have audible proceedings? The Chair should enforce the rule so that Senators may be heard.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair hopes that the Senate may have audible proceedings, and also that order may be maintained in the Chamber, so that Senators may be heard. But there is no rule by virtue of which the Presiding Officer can compel a Senator to elevate his voice. The Senator from Georgia has the floor.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. We cannot hear the Chair. What is the proposition?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, the Senator from Florida regards himself as being yielded to by the Senator from Georgia, who, he thinks, has the floor properly, but if I might be indulged for a few moments I would appreciate the courtesy.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, the Senator having the floor can yield only for a question. We are going to have orderly procedure or there will not be any business transacted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the Senator from Oregon insists upon his assertion—which is the equivalent of a point of order—the rule will be enforced, and the occupant of the floor will lose it if he yields, except for a question.

REDUCTION OF COTTON SURPLUS

Mr. GEORGE. Then I submit a request. I ask unanimous consent that Senate bill 1514, providing in the interest of the general welfare for an appropriate reduction of the burdensome oversupply of American cotton, and for further encouragement of soil conservation and soil improvement by making payments in kind in cotton, and for other purposes, be made the unfinished business when the Senate shall next convene.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. GEORGE. I include in the request that the pending resolution be temporarily laid aside. I make the request that Senate bill 1514 be made the unfinished business for Monday next, if I may be permitted so to state, with the consent of the leader of the majority.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, the parliamentary situation is about as follows:

The resolution submitted by the able Senator from Georgia was carried beyond 2 o'clock on Tuesday, and therefore inherited the status of unfinished business. The Senator is now asking unanimous consent to supplant that resolution by a bill. With the proper understanding that no action shall be taken on it today or tomorrow, I am willing that the bill the Senator mentions shall be made the unfinished business for Monday; but in the meantime some disposition should be made of the resolution submitted by the Senator from Georgia. Otherwise, he will be in the critical position that at any time he may desire or choose to act he may ask for the regular order, and the unfinished business will go back to the calendar and his resolution will come up. That is an unsatisfactory and uncertain status to have here, involving as it will two or three cotton measures.

Let me suggest that a motion be made to proceed to the consideration of the Bankhead cotton bill. That will then displace the George resolution, and will leave us in a clean-cut status, with one bill before the Senate.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that on Monday the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1514, known as the Bankhead bill. I desire to state that that will, of course, displace the pending resolution. I am quite content to have that done if the bill to which I have referred be made the unfinished business, because that bill contemplates affirmative action with reference to the loan cotton held by the Government.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. If that request is acceded to, the Senator's resolution then will no longer enjoy a privileged status as being the unfinished business, but will go to the calendar, and, of course, may be brought up by motion at any future time if the Senator desires to make such a motion; but it will not remain hanging over the Senate as the unfinished business.

Mr. GEORGE. Yes; I understand that. I have not objected to taking up anything——

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, that statement must be qualified. The resolution would not be hanging over the Senate as the unfinished business on Monday, but between now and Monday it would be the unfinished business. For that reason I do not want the George resolution to be pending if the Senate is going to take a recess. I do not want action taken upon it prior to action upon the Bankhead bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator that it is not contemplated that we shall have a session tomorrow. It is my purpose to move either a recess or an adjournment until Monday.

Mr. McNARY. With the understanding that the George resolution may remain in its present status, but that no action shall be taken thereon, and that the Bankhead bill shall be made the unfinished business for Monday, I find myself in very great agreement with that suggestion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Georgia, as amended by the suggestions of the Senator from Oregon? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

PROPOSED REDUCTION IN RELIEF ROLLS

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I want to be assured that I understand just exactly what is contemplated.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? I merely desire to place a matter in the RECORD.

Mr. PEPPER. No; for the time being I refuse to yield, until I make a statement.

Just a few minutes ago, following a procedure that has been universal since I have been here, except in some particular situation, the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] graciously offered to yield to the Senator from Florida to enable him to make a comment of 5 or 7 or 8 minutes on a certain point. The Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY] objected to anything except a question. Is that going to be a precedent in the Senate? If it is, I want to know.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield to the Senator from Oregon for a question. [A pause.] Does the Senator from Oregon propose to ask a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair cannot answer that inquiry.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I am not interested at all.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I have a telegram from Mr. Roy Schroder, who is the administrator of the Works Progress Administration in my State. This telegram, dated the 22d of March, reads as follows:

> Re telegram, according to instructions that I have from national headquarters in Washington, it will be necessary to release 7,000 people from the Florida relief rolls, starting on April 3, unless additional funds become available. It is my further understanding that the region of which Florida is a part is scheduled for a reduction of 57,000 individuals. To accomplish this cut in Florida it will be necessary to stop numerous projects now under way and also cancel arrangements made within the past week to start others of importance. The reductions will affect all classes of employees, such as administrative, skilled, unskilled, and those certified for relief.

Mr. President, perhaps I have undue agitation about seeing 7,000 persons in my State next Monday morning deprived of jobs, in addition to the 23,000 in the same State who are already certified and have never had an opportunity to obtain W. P. A. work at all. We face here in the Congress a situation in which the President has requested an additional appropriation of $150,000,000. We have had notice since January 1 that if this appropriation were not voted by the Congress a great number of persons would be turned off the present W. P. A. rolls. Yet Congress has faced the matter with the complacency with which a comfortable gentleman, sitting by his fireside in the evening, might imagine the wintry blasts outside his cozy home.

We all know that by next Monday the relief appropriation is not going to be passed on by the Congress, and we have no reason to doubt the statement made by the administrative officials that these reductions are to be put into effect at that time. The only conclusion I can draw, therefore, is that the Congress is not very much agitated about whether or not new thousands go into the ranks of the unemployed.

I desire to call attention to this fact, Mr. President, so that those who believe that business confidence will be improved by having more millions of unemployed in the country may have a practical test of their philosophy; so that it may be seen whether or not those who believe that business confidence will be increased by a reduction in the number of persons given made work are justified in the belief they entertain, and whether or not the increase day by day of this long line of American citizens who cannot get a chance to earn an honest day's living by an honest day's work is going to improve the stability and the security of the position of the American people.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. I should like to say that I thoroughly agree with the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A point of order has been made against a Senator's yielding except for a question.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Why not remain here today and tomorrow and see that this program is put through?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I will say that I rose primarily to bring this fact to the attention of the Senate and to submit the following resolution:

SENATE RESOLUTION 116

Resolved, That the Administrator of the Works Progress Administration is hereby requested to see to it that no needy person is discharged from the relief rolls of the Works Progress Administration except for cause other than lack of funds until the funds appropriated by the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938 are exhausted.

I shall refer to the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act itself to indicate the sentiment of the Congress that they did not intend that persons should leave the relief rolls of the country. In that relief appropriation the Congress made that very clear by using language to the effect that until April 1 there should not be a reduction of more than 5 percent in the number of persons now upon the rolls of the Works Progress Administration. I presume the Congress has not changed its opinion.

I remember that when the relief appropriation bill was being considered, the chairman of the subcommittee, the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS], answered a direct query made by the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BARBOUR] who stood here in his place and asked the chairman of the subcommittee the direct question, "Will the effect of reducing the amount of this appropriation be that persons shall be let off the rolls in my State?" The chairman of the subcommittee answered, with equal lack of equivocation, "There will not be a reduction." When the relief appropriation was passed, we were not presented the question here, of whether or not we wanted to cut off persons from the relief rolls. The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] and the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] said that the money we were appropriating would accomplish the same result as the full amount asked, and therefore that neither the Senator from New Jersey nor the Senator from any other State need be agitated about the passage of the bill as recommended by the Appropriations Committee.

I should like to know whether the committee members have changed their minds; whether the experience of the past weeks has vindicated the confidence they had that this limited amount of money would give jobs in the future to the persons already employed. But in the face of this announcement by the relief administrator of my State, in response to my inquiry, and in view of the general information we have here to the same effect, I have no reason to doubt that next Monday morning in my State 7,000 breadwinners will be turned away from the work they have had, little and inadequate as it has been, to go back to homes where there is no employed breadwinner.

I am agitated about that condition. Perhaps others are not, but I am agitated to the point that I have requested the W. P. A. Administrator and the chairman of the State board of public welfare to keep a check upon what happens to these 7,000 persons beginning next Monday morning. I want to ascertain whether we have lived up to the commitment we made to the American people that we were not going to let anybody starve in this country.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield for a question.

Mr. CONNALLY. Am I to understand the Senator to say that the proposed reduction applies merely to the State of Florida, or is it a part of the program all over the country?

Mr. PEPPER. It is a part of the general reduction, but 7,000 is Florida's pro rata of the general reduction. I will further state that I have not obtained the figures from other States, because I knew Senators would know the reduction was general and that they would perhaps already have information regarding their own States; but here we sit complacently and comfortably, Mr. President, while the persons down there who have looked to us for the meager sustenance they have enjoyed are being deprived even of that.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

FIFTY THOUSAND IN THE GREAT STATE OF MINNESOTA PROTEST

Mr. LUNDEEN. In the State of Minnesota some 10,000 persons will be taken off the rolls; and, multiplying that by 4 or 5, there are forty or fifty thousand of our fine and good American cititzens in Minnesota who will face this very serious situation.

Oh, yes; I see some Senators shaking their heads about that. Perhaps not all those on the rolls are bona fide subjects of relief. Perhaps a few ought not to be on the rolls. Perhaps that is so; but why make the vast majority who are innocent suffer because there are a few unworthy persons of that type on the rolls?

I agree with the Senator from Florida. He is making an eloquent plea, and I hope the Senate will listen to him.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, it has always interested me to read and to hear these comments that we are doing somebody a great injustice because there are a few persons on the relief rolls who perhaps should not be there, and to realize that the persons who make that complaint never say a word in behalf of the millions of persons who ought to be there, but who have never had a chance to get there.

I have heard some of my distinguished colleagues, and I have heard some of the so-called great statesmen of the United States, stand up and complain about public profligacy and extravagance, and about the abolition of our institutions, sacred as they are, by giving jobs to a few people who perhaps could keep body and soul together without that meager sustenance. Yet I have not seen those people even agitated, as, for example, in my State, by the information that there are 23,000 more who are certified by competent and honest State agencies who have never yet had a chance to earn a dollar upon the works program.

There seems to be such a difference of opinion about this matter that I do not know at all that I am right. I suppose none of us has any answer to the troubles in the economic dilemma which confronts us these days, but I thought it would be interesting to keep track of what happened to those 7,000 people who are let off the rolls in Florida. I wish I had a picture of them and could bring that picture back to the Senate, I will say, 1 week after next Monday. Many of them have yielded prematurely to the ravages of disease, perhaps because of lack of adequate nourishment. I do not think my State is behind in comparison with the other States of the Southeast, at least, yet the head of the nutrition department of the University of Florida told me a few months ago that she had a story which she had to tell to some one because it was agitating her constantly. The story was that she had investigated 10,000 rural children in the rural schools of Florida and had found that over half of those rural children were so undernourished that they had haemoglobin so inadequate that in one instance, a few days before, her case worker had seen a pale little girl collapse in death in the schoolroom from the exertion of mounting a short flight of steps to get a drink of water.

I do not like to say these things about my State, because I have a great affection for it and a great pride in it, but I venture to say that that is not an unusual situation.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. REYNOLDS. In reference to the unfortunate children of the Senator's State I wish to make the observation that there are unfortunate children, many orphans, in every State of the Union, and in that connection I suggest that we take care of the orphans of America, our own children here at home, before we consider taking care of 20,000 children from Germany, whom the senior Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] is desirous of bringing into this country, resulting in the resolution which he introduced the other day.

In addition to that, if the Senator from Florida will pardon me, in reference to the unfortunate children of America who are on the W. P. A. rolls, I am in entire sympathy generally with what the able Senator from Florida has just stated in regard to that. Insofar as the junior Senator from North Carolina is concerned, I propose to vote for the aid of the unfortunates of America as long as we have unfortunates in our country. I propose to vote for such appropriations as I believe to be necessary to aid the unfortunates of America, and I want to tell the Senator why. In this Congress I have voted with a majority of the Senators for tremendous appropriations, millions of dollars, mounting into billions of dollars, for national defense, being of the opinion—and I am not afraid to admit it—that no nation is going to attack the United States. In my opinion there is just about as much chance of Hitler and Mussolini attacking the United States as there was a chance for Al Smith to bring the Pope over to the United States from Rome in 1928, when our friends the enemies circulated the report over the country that if Al Smith were elected President, he would bring the Pope from Rome and put him in the White House, and he would move down to the Raleigh Hotel to live. [Laughter.]

In voting for these billions of dollars for national defense, I voted for the appropriations because the administration wanted them, because a majority of the American people wanted it done, because many of them, as I have stated, believed that Hitler and Mussolini were coming over here to take us, and I so voted because I wanted to appease them. Now I am ready to appease the appetites of the poor unfortunate people of America, and I am going to vote for appropriations so long as there are hungry people in this country.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida yield in order that I may ask the Senator from North Carolina a question?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. Evidently the Senator from North Carolina does not agree with the Senator from South Carolina, who said, in the course of his remarks yesterday afternoon:

> Of course we get very economical when it comes to certain fundamentals—

He was speaking about war expenditures—

> but we can pour out billions of dollars to support people who never contribute one iota to the progress or welfare of the country.

Evidently the Senator from North Carolina does not agree with that statement of the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I do not. I state unhesitatingly that in my opinion many of the hundreds and thousands who unfortunately have been forced upon the W. P. A. rolls of this country have contributed as much to the success of this Nation as any man in this Chamber. They are just unfortunate.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida yield for just one more question?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. Then I take it that the Senator from North Carolina does not agree with the Senator from South Carolina when he states that we "spend billions and billions of dollars for no other purpose in the wide world than to make the recipients of their largess remember them on election day. There is not a Senator who will deny that that is the purpose."

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, what we say here does not obscure the truth. I reiterate every word I said in that speech yesterday, and in the hearts of all men here they know that their so-called humanitarian philanthropy is based on vote getting.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, I deny that statement, and say that, so far as I am concerned, I have never voted for a dollar to feed and clothe and house the hungry people of this country for the purpose of getting votes, and I do not believe any other Senator has done so.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, I call for the regular order.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Regular order!

Mr. SMITH. Oh, I knew I would arouse something when I told the truth.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I make the point of order that the Senator from Florida is in possession of the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order, and Senators who are not engaged in debate will please take their seats.

Mr. BANKHEAD. A parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There will be no proceedings until order shall have been restored. The Senate will be in order.

The Senator from Alabama is recognized.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, just keep them off me, if order is desired.

The PRESIDING OFFICER rapped with his gavel.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Who has the floor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama is recognized to submit a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Who has the floor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] has the floor.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield for a question, if that is all I am permitted to do.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I should like to ask the Senator from Florida whether the remark made by the Senator from South Carolina, which cast aspersion upon every Member of this body, which attempted to impute bad motives of every Member of this body, does not in his opinion constitute the greatest insult that has ever been uttered upon the floor of this body to the Members of this body since he has been a Member of it?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President——

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield for a question.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I leave it to every man here to search his own heart. It is so easy to rise and show righteous indignation because someone had the nerve to tell the truth. That is all this is. Let each man go down in his own heart——

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President——

Mr. SMITH. I will be through in just a moment.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I yielded to the Senator from South Carolina to ask a question. If the point of order is not to be made that I lose the floor, I shall not object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon has already made the point of order against the Senator's yielding except for a question. Does the Senator from Florida desire to preserve his parliamentary rights in this matter?

Mr. PEPPER. I do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Then the Senator should refuse to yield except for a question.

Mr. SMITH. I have no further question to ask. I leave it to the conscience of every man on this floor. He knows, when he goes home——

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida refuses to yield.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I refuse to yield any further.

We are told in the Scriptures that there was a certain sect, called Pharisees, who were accustomed to turn their faces toward a God they imagined to exist, and thank God for their own righteousness.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I have heard many times in my life of individuals who thought they were the world's only honest men, and if I could satisfy my conscience that I was able to look into the face of a man who had a monopoly on honesty, I would think that I had visualized something that so far transcended all the marvels of the world that it was almost a temporary glimpse into eternity I had been able to enjoy. But I will say that I have seen many Senators—young Senators, middle-aged Senators, and Senators who were my elders, I have seen Senators from all parts of the country—and generally speaking, Mr. President, I have seen no one who would cause an exception to the opinion that I have always entertained that no man had a monopoly upon wisdom or righteousness or conscientiousness. It would be a sordid experience in the history of the United States for us to come to a period when there was only one honest man in our country, that there was only one man who had been able to follow the delicate thread of truth that wound its labyrinthine length through the affairs of men. I do not think we have arrived at that condition even now.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Did I understand the Senator from Florida to say that he understood that the Senator from South Carolina claims that he never promised anything to anybody to get a vote? He did not say that at all. He just said what his opinion of the rest of us was as to issues that are supposed to affect us in our jurisdiction. He did not say that he is sanctimonious and honest, and that the things that appeal to other politicians do not touch him at all. He should not be placed in that light.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I have heard of but one candidate in my political experience who ran on the platform that never in all his life had he done anything wrong, and that gentleman was defeated.

I do not have any quarrel with Senators who have a difference of opinion about this matter. I have recently read and refreshed my mind upon the very able letter written by the junior Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] to the Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. There are two sides to the argument as to whether we gain by deficit spending or whether we lose. There are two sides to the question of whether the Federal Public Works would have perhaps some undermining influence upon private business, or even perhaps upon private morals. I do not quarrel with any man who disagrees with me about any one of those fundamental questions. But I think no man has a right to charge his colleagues with perfidy and viciousness and sinister motives because they happen to feel, as many of us do, that it is not only in accordance with our Christian obligations to our fellow men to offer succor to them but it is better for the general welfare that with public funds we try to create work which does not exist with private funds alone.

Mr. President, it may be that the secret of this difficult matter has been discovered. I have here in my hand the American Mercury for April 1939, and the article to which I refer is headed Shall We Drown the Unemployed? The author proceeds to a consideration of what gain the country should have if we drown the unemployed. He starts off with the thesis that we have in the United States—or had in 1937 at least—130,000,000 people, and that we had about 11,000,000 unemployed. Deducting the unemployed whom he should drown first from the total number of the population, our remaining population should be 119,000,000. But it is estimated that those 11,000,000 people had dependents to the extent of 16,500,000, so, of course, we would gain nothing merely by drowning the fellow who was on the relief rolls and leaving his dependents. So, of course, we would have to drown the dependents also. Deducting those from the remaining population we would have a revised United States population of 102,500,000. But they tell us that the very reduction of that number of people would throw out of employment at least another 5,000,000 people engaged directly and indirectly from the gains of those who were employed previously in the system.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question only?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I wish to ask the Senator a question In view of the unemployment situation in this country, in respect to which the Senator has just mentioned that we have about 11,000,000 people out of employment at the present time, and in view of the fact, as the Senator knows, that, in addition thereto, we have about 26,000,000 people who are working part time, is it the Senator's opinion that the situation in this country would be helped if we were to stop all immigration into our country until every American had been employed?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, the Senator from North Carolina——

Mr. REYNOLDS. I was just asking the Senator a question.

Mr. PEPPER. The answer to that question, Mr. President, is, first, "yes," and then, "no." [Laughter.]

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Will the Senator be good enough to advise as to why he employs the word "no"?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I did not intend——

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, if the Senator will pardon me, I withdraw the question. I am getting into the immigration question now.

Mr. PEPPER. I started to say a moment ago that the Senator from North Carolina had perhaps had more influence than anyone else in the Congress for the inclusion of the amendment which went into the act by which all aliens were removed from the relief rolls of the country; and while, of course, I seem to remember something about the brotherhood of man that does not altogether end at boundaries of nations, and I remember that there were instances after the World War when we sent our money and our food and our clothing abroad to people who lived in other countries, who were hungry, and whom we saved from starvation; yet I am perfectly willing to accept the theory that we should first look after our own people, notwithstanding the fact that many people from abroad, as all of us once were, have made many valuable contributions to America in many ways.

I started to say, Mr. President, that that would bring the people of the country down to ninety-seven and one-half million. Then there would be an additional number of seven and a half million persons who were dependent upon the 5,000,000 unemployed who would be drowned in the second instance, and that would leave a revised United States population of only 90,000,000.

And so on down the line. As we drown additional unemployed, and then drown their dependents, we would have to drown next the people who had previously been employed in making materials that were acquired, consumed, and used by the people we formerly drowned.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a question?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. I see that in this drowning process the one whose article the Senator is quoting from proposes that we drown or dispose of at least 40,000,000 people. Has he given any consideration to who is going to pay the expense of drowning these 40,000,000 people? I should like to know whether or not the States are going to bear this burden of drowning their own people, or whether the Federal Government is going to be saddled with the burden of drowning these 40,000,000 people?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I rather expect in a matter of that sort the reserved power of the States should operate, because when you deal with the lives of people, that is outside of the scope of the Federal power, except when you want to enlist them in war and the like. So, perhaps some of us would be willing to leave that responsibility to the local authorities.

The only difficulty is that it would be a little more painful to the local people to carry out this drowning process, and this perhaps is one case at least where the remote Federal Government should step in and relieve the local people of this painful experience.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a question?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. I am wondering if the Senator, when he provides that these people shall be drowned by Federal authorities, will provide that the drowners shall be selected under civil service, or whether they shall be taken from among those whose jobs have been given out by the party in power. [Laughter.]

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I was about to ask the Senate to imagine a situation whereby the drowning resolution might come before the Senate, and after due deliberation, that the Senate might adopt an amendment whereby there should be no need for certification to ascertain the number and the identity of those who ought to be drowned, but each Senator should perhaps be allowed to make up a favored list under the patronage system that perhaps might be offered to the public executioner in such a case. And there might be instances where Senators out of their privy purse would be able to make a contribution to the expense of that doleful operation.

Mr. President, I do not know, but I suppose the resolution will have to go over until the next calendar day, at least until Monday, before it can be considered.

Mr. GILLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a serious question?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. GILLETTE. The Senator, both in his suggested resolution and in his remarks, by sentiments that do him credit, has expressed grave concern over the 7,000 people who may be removed from the relief rolls in Florida, and he suggested worry over their possible condition 10 days from now. Is not the Senator, both in the resolution and in his remarks, failing to show proper concern for the 23,000 people in the State whom he says have for months been in destitute condition and been on the rolls, but have not received work of any kind? Why is the Senator failing to take them into consideration in the resolution that he is presenting?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I am grateful to the Senator from Iowa for raising that point. Of course, to answer the question directly, the 7,000 about whom I was talking have been working upon the W. P. A. rolls. It is not a question of letting these 7,000 off and taking in 7,000 more who have not had a chance to work heretofore. It means that the total number working is reduced by 7,000.

The Senator has put his finger on the sensitive point. When this appropriation was up here before many of the Senators on the floor—and I had the honor to be one of them—reminded our committee that the W. P. A. had given us the information that there were 750,000 certified relief clients in this country who never had had a chance to work. The committee—and nobody else in an effective way—concerned itself with these people. We know that we have perhaps 11,000,000 unemployed. Nobody disputes that fact; and yet we do not seriously concern ourselves about them. The feeble few who were obtaining a livelihood are being cut off; 7,000 of them in my State will be cut off next Monday morning.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. Does the Senator know that since the 750,000 figure was given during the consideration of the previous relief bill the list has increased to 850,000, so that there are now 850,000 on the eligible certified lists in all the States who are unable to obtain work even under the present program of the W. P. A.?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I am glad to have that additional information.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Does the Senator know of any reason why we cannot remain in session today and tomorrow and do whatever is necessary in the way of legislation to bring about the remedy which the Senator proposes?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I will say that, as I understand the rules, the resolution must lie on the table a day.

Let us consider what is going to happen. Some say, "It is only another reduction in the W. P. A. rolls." Many persons say they are sorry. Others say the W. P. A. is spending too much money, anyway. Consider the element of uncertainty which enters into the lives of those people. I heard the junior Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] make a statement to the effect—and it has been corroborated by experience—that much of the benefit we should have derived from the public spending program has not been derived because everybody was expecting the expenditure to be cut off at any time and was trying to make the most of it while it was there. If we had given assurance to businessmen, manufacturers, and merchants that they could lay up inventories and count upon a steady stream of Federal money, I venture to say that the expenditure would have achieved more good than it has.

Although we talk about business confidence being desirable, we are doing everything we can, by omission or commission, to allow that confidence to deteriorate. What about the merchants in a particular community? I wonder if they are going to lay in stocks of goods after they receive information that the relief rolls are about to be reduced? Let me state an experience which I had in my State last summer. I happened to be in a certain community, and I asked a businessman in that community if those in business there had been able to detect any benefit from the relief program. He said, "Senator, I will tell you an interesting fact. The deposits in the local bank went up, in dollars, exactly to the amount of the W. P. A. pay roll in this community."

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President——

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Were those deposits made by the men who worked on the W. P. A. or by the merchants who sold the groceries?

Mr. PEPPER. They were based upon the money going into circulation in the community through the agency of the W. P. A.

Mr. CHAVEZ. How much would the average man who works for the W. P. A. at $44 a month be able to deposit?

Mr. PEPPER. I see the Senator's point. Of course, he does not deposit it directly; but when he buys merchandise he puts it into circulation in the community, and it finds its way into the community's depositary of money, the bank.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Is the Senator now talking about the man who receives $44 a month? Is the man who receives $44 a month from the W. P. A. able to deposit a dime?

Mr. PEPPER. I dare say he is not, directly; but the merchant who sells goods to a thousand W. P. A. workers who receive $44 a month does have some money to put in the bank.

Mr. CHAVEZ. The merchant who sells the goods is able to deposit money in the bank.

Mr. PEPPER. Yes.

Mr. CHAVEZ. But the man who receives $44 a month, at the end of the project, at the end of the time that he has been working for $44 a month, is in exactly the same position in which he started.

Mr. PEPPER. He is not exactly at the same point, because he has made a living, or a sort of living, during that time.

Mr. CHAVEZ. He has existed.

Mr. PEPPER. Yes. I am the last man in the world to say that what he is receiving is anything like an adequate amount.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. REYNOLDS. A moment ago I heard the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] advise the Senator from Florida to the effect that within the past several months more than 100,000 persons had made application for provision by way of the W. P. A. rolls. May I ask the Senator from Florida to what he attributes the increase mentioned by the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. PEPPER. Of course, general conditions may have something to do with it. The whole thing falls into something of a vicious cycle, Mr. President. I am one of those who think that perhaps the diminishing amount of expenditure by the Federal Government may have something to do with it, and that the diminished purchasing power which follows in the wake of the number who have already been released from the W. P. A. rolls since December, and taken out of the economic system, may have something to do with that unhappy result.

Mr. President, I had hoped that this session of Congress would see debates that were almost comparable in importance and merit with the debates of the Constitutional Convention. The Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS], and many other honorable and very able Senators, entertain a different view from that which I and other Senators entertain. I should like to see the question debated in the Senate by men who have knowledge of it, and who have sincerity in their hearts about the vitality of this question to American welfare. I should like to have its effect upon the economic system considered, and I should like to have its effect upon the morale of the people of America adequately considered.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield for a question.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Will the Senator from Florida tell me how much morale, how much hope, can be experienced by the average American man, either in Florida or New Mexico, on $44 a month on a temporary project?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I know, and the Senator knows, that in time of war men often do without food, and many times men have subsisted upon a meager diet. However, everyone recognizes that a little food is better than none at all.

Mr. CHAVEZ. If that is the situation, why should we worry about the bank deposits of the man who sells groceries to those working for $44 a month on the W. P. A.?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, we worry about him—using the word "worry" in the sense I mentioned a moment ago—because the policy we pursue is designed to help everybody, and not a particular class of our people. I do not think that the man who receives $44 a month derives any more benefit from the $44 of pay-roll expenditure than the merchants in the town, with whom he spends it. Therefore when we help him to buy goods from the retailer, the wholesaler, and the manufacturer, we are not partisan in our munificence to the people of this country.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield for a question.

Mr. WILEY. The Senator will remember that about a week ago the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] introduced a resolution. I spoke on that resolution. I heard nothing from the Senator on the subject at that time. The resolution related to a remedy of the very situation of which the Senator is now speaking, because it would have made available money to be spent up to June 7, thus making it unnecessary to remove anyone from the rolls in Florida or any other State at this time. I am wondering if the Senator is now speaking to that point. Is he speaking on his resolution, or is he speaking on the Vandenberg resolution?

Mr. PEPPER. Naturally I was speaking upon my resolution, which has points of difference from the Vandenberg resolution.

Mr. President, the thing in which I am interested is the achievement of the purpose which we all have in view. If the Vandenberg resolution will more effectively than any other keep employed those now working on the W. P. A. program of the Federal Government, I am for that resolution; and I am for anybody else's resolution which will achieve the necessary purpose.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield for a question.

Mr. BARKLEY. Would not the Vandenberg resolution, if adopted, create the same situation on June 7 which now confronts us because of the failure of Congress to appropriate the amount of money necessary to keep the needy from going off the pay roll? Is it not true that this very situation was predicted and foreseen by many of those who advocated the larger appropriation 6 weeks ago? Is it not true that the predictions of those who opposed the appropriation, to the effect that industry would absorb unemployment to an extent which would make it unnecessary to appropriate more money, have turned out to be inaccurate? Are we not now confronted with a situation which would not have existed, and would not exist on June 7, or any other day between now and July 1, if Congress had appropriated the amount which the Executive and the agencies charged with the responsibility advocated?

Mr. PEPPER. Exactly so, Mr. President.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield for a question.

Mr. MINTON. Is it not true that the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] and the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY] both voted against the full appropriation, and that if we had had the full appropriation in the first instance we would not have needed the Vandenberg resolution, or the support of the Senator from Wisconsin for the Vandenberg resolution?

Mr. PEPPER. That is true, Mr. President.

Now, just this statement in conclusion:

The American people are entitled to know the attitude of the United States Congress. In the debate on the $875,000,000 appropriation, the subcommittee presented what I thought were conflicting recommendations or expressions of opinion. On the one hand, they said we had to reduce public expenditures to bring about recovery; we had to have economy; we had to stop deficit spending; we had to live within our means; we had to balance the Budget; and they said that business could never revive without the confidence that would come from the assurance that we had quit this foolish policy of spending in which many did not believe. Upon that theory, perhaps, a good many Senators voted not to appropriate $875,000,000.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield for a question.

Mr. CHAVEZ. The Senator from Florida was elected by the people of Florida.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Just a moment.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I am going to ask a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair again invites attention to the fact that the minority leader, the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MCNARY], has made a point of order against the Senator from Florida's yielding for anything excepting a question. Under the rules and precedents, if the Senator yields for any other purpose, he will lose the floor.

Mr. PEPPER. I yield only for a question.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President——

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky will state it.

Mr. BARKLEY. Does the enforcement of that rule mean that a Senator may not, as the basis for a question which he desires to ask, make a simple statement?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is of the opinion that under the privilege of asking a question it is not permissible for a Senator to make a statement which may be expanded into an interminable address.

Mr. BARKLEY. That does not answer the question which I propounded, which I think is a legitimate parliamentary inquiry. May a Senator desiring to ask a question make a simple statement upon which his question is based, or must he ask the question first and then explain it?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In the opinion of the Chair, the point of order precludes the making of a statement, regardless of its simplicity, as a basis for an inquiry.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas will state it.

Mr. CONNALLY. I desire to ask the Chair if a point of order does not have to be made at the time the supposed offense occurs. May a Senator make a standing point of order, and just make one for the session, or the day?

I understand that a point of order must be made when the infraction of the rule occurs. I do not understand that the Senator from Oregon, when the Senate meets some day, may say, "I make a point of order," and go on and leave it; so I invoke that rule. The Senator's time is his own; and if he wants to yield for any purpose, he has a right to yield until some Senator rises and makes the point of order that he is yielding for something other than a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon [Mr. MCNARY] made the point of order that the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] could not yield for anything but a question. The Chair is informed by the eminent Parliamentarian (Mr. Watkins) that under the precedents of the Senate that point of order is effective for the remainder of today's session.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, the session started last January and it will probably end next July, so the point of order is a standing order against the Senator from Florida alone. [Laughter.]

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If this legislative day's session should continue till July and the Senator from Florida should speak continuously until that time, he would still be subject to the present point of order. [Laughter.]

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield for a question.

Mr. CHAVEZ. It will be a question. Where do the W. P. A. authorities in Washington, for instance, get any authority to represent the people of my State, or the people of my colleague's State, with reference to what Congress should do for the public good?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I am not speaking at the instance of the W. P. A. I am speaking upon my own responsibility as a Senator from Florida; and I was pointing out that the W. P. A. officials had told me that the administrative effect of the existing law would be that next Monday 7,000 persons in my State would have to get off the relief rolls.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I desire to conclude. I yield to the Senator from Georgia for a question.

Mr. RUSSELL. I wish to ask a brief question.

Mr. PEPPER. I yield for that purpose.

Mr. RUSSELL. Has the Senator from Florida given any consideration to the manner of distribution of funds by the Works Progress Administration in fixing compensation, which makes it necessary for the Senator from Florida to vote $2 per capita to keep one person on the Works Progress roll in other States, whereas only $1 would be paid to the Works Progress Administration workers in his own State?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I will say that the Senator from Georgia well remembers that I joined him in his very tremendous efforts, when the relief measure was being considered, to obviate that discrimination against the people of our section of the country. I feel that it is grossly unfair for us to have a wage scale and a remuneration there which in many instances is only from one-third to one-fourth what is being paid for similar work in other sections of the country.

Mr. RUSSELL. The Senator realizes, then, that when he votes a dollar to keep a W. P. A. worker on the rolls in his own State, it is necessary for him to vote two or three dollars to keep one worker on the rolls of another State?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, even in the face of that discrimination while I deplore that necessity, I should even be willing to do that if I could help our people with the $1 they would be able to get.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I have to go to a committee meeting. If the Senator will ask only one question, and then allow me to yield the floor, I shall be glad.

Mr. REYNOLDS. As a matter of fact, it is not in the form of a question; it is in the form of a statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator may yield for a question only.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I want the Senator to know that I am in entire sympathy with him; but I also want the Senator to know that I know that North Carolina gets less per man than any other State in the Union, and I want something done about it.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, the first point I made a while ago—and Senators will forgive me if I decline to yield any further at this time—was that there are a great many Senators and a great many Members of the House of Representatives who do not want to appropriate any more money because they do not believe in such appropriation. They think such policy is injurious to the general welfare of the country. If that is the attitude of the Congress, if that sentiment dominates the Congress, the people of America are entitled to know it. They are also entitled to know whether or not we sat here unconcerned and complacent about what actually was to be the result of our policy.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. PEPPER. Will the Senator pardon me if I do not yield at this time?

So, Mr. President, I send to the desk my resolution, and I give notice that at the earliest possible time under the rules I shall expect to call it up for consideration. Unless the chairman of the subcommittee and unless the subcommittee itself have changed their opinions, even they should be in favor of the resolution, for I understood when the relief measure was before the Senate that they did not want anybody to be cut off the relief rolls; at least no more than 5 percent of the number of unemployed.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. LUNDEEN. I should like to ask the Senator a question.

Mr. PEPPER. Yes; I yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. The resolution being submitted, if we were in session tomorrow, the Senator could call it up, could he not?

Mr. PEPPER. That is true.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Why not remain in session tomorrow?

Mr. PEPPER. I certainly should like to see that done; so far as I am individually concerned——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The present parliamentary situation is such that the Senator cannot introduce his joint resolution without unanimous consent. Does the Senator ask such consent?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to submit the resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. KING. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah objects.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I give notice to my friends who have a different point of view that I am going to try to bring back to them some information about the 7,000 persons who are about to go off the relief rolls in my State. I want Senators to be able to judge of their own moral conscience as to whether they have any responsibility for what happens to these unfortunate persons.

It is an easy thing for a Senator living in a comfortable apartment, amid comfortable surroundings, fully clad, with food given to him in plentitude, as we have it, to say, "Upon matters of broad general policy I have a certain opinion"; but it is a more startling manifestation of the conviction of a man's heart that with tragedy staring him in the face, he appears unconcerned about what may happen to his fellow citizens.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President——

Mr. PEPPER. I want to say in conclusion to the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH]—for the integrity of whose views I have a very high regard—that in my personal opinion the Senator belongs to an old day in his country. His opinions have ceased to be the current opinions of his country. He has an attitude toward public questions that was appropriate to a certain era in the country's development; and I never saw a man who in his heart entertained those views more honestly, or expressed them more ably, than does the Senator from South Carolina. There may be temporary occasions of short duration when the pendulum will swing toward the Senator's point of view; but I entertain the belief that it will never actually get there, and that when it approaches that point it will not stay there long, because of the complexity of our country.

I come from the same tradition that the Senator from South Carolina comes from. My forefathers fought in the same glorious gray uniform in which his forefathers fought. They are buried in the same holy soil in which the Senator's ancestors honorably lie. Though younger than the Senator, I myself have some affection for that part of the country which is our birthplace, and to which we are attached. But, Mr. President, I know that the only way in which the section in which I live can ever hope to mount the ladder of substantial progress and stable economic existence is by somebody else's helping it. We cannot do it by ourselves. The only effective way by which the numerous economic forces which play upon our section can be brought into anything like harmony with the remainder of the country is through the Federal system, which is a unit of economy, and to assist us as an integral part of the whole for the legitimate benefit of the whole.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, since the Senator has referred to me——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield for a question, and then I will yield the floor to the Senator.

Mr. SMITH. This is not a question, Mr. President.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, if the Senator will allow me for just a moment, I am concluding, and then I will yield the floor.

Mr. SMITH. I just want to reply to what the Senator has said.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. PEPPER. Will the Senator from New Mexico pardon me if I do not yield for that purpose at this time? Then I will yield the floor.

So, Mr. President, I say to my friend the Senator from South Carolina that I do not accuse him of dishonesty. I do not accuse him of perfidy. I do not accuse him of material considerations only, and I do not think he has a right to accuse me.

Mr. SMITH. I did not.

Mr. PEPPER. I was born in poverty, Mr. President; and, like many others here, I have had my own tedious course along life's highway. I have good reason to sympathize with a good many of the men who do not have jobs, and many of them who do not even have food and medicine and the means of subsistence. Because I want to help those men a little, because in the long run I would rather help them a little and let the deficit grow a little more, and I would be able to lie down at the end of the day a little more comfortably than otherwise; I do not think the Senator has a right to impugn my motives or the integrity of my purposes. My election is over for 6 years, just like the Senator's election. He was elected against the administration. I was elected for it. Let posterity determine which one was the wiser appeal that was made.

I think perhaps, therefore, we can all live in harmony. We can all express our views. We can all be equally sincere without any of us necessarily impugning the integrity of the other.

Mr. President, I ask to have printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks a short article from the American Mercury for April 1939, by Fred C. Kelly, entitled "Shall We Drown the Unemployed?"

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SHALL WE DROWN THE UNEMPLOYED?

(By Fred C. Kelly)

The other day one of our Senators proposed exporting 2,000,000 Negroes to Liberia, on the theory that the Government would then have 2,000,000 fewer recipients of P. W. A. and relief money. Thus an old fallacy persists in our august Congress, as it does elsewhere. If, say those who currently encourage this fallacy, everyone now on public works, relief, and so on were banished (or persuaded to drown themselves, as so many have) the Government would be able to stop the huge relief and public-works payments, balance the Budget, and, most important of all, lighten the tax load on John Citizen, Esq. This notion, for all its beauty, is sheer nonsense. Facts and figures show that removal of the present unemployed would only create a new batch requiring care.

Here are a few figures statisticians have prepared, proving that unemployment is not an independent problem, but one which has interrelationships with other aspects of our whole national economy. According to the 1930 census there were forty-eight and eight-tenths million gainful workers in the United States, out of a total population of 123,000,000. The average number of dependents for each gainful worker is thus about 1.5. If we assume that the 11,000,000 workers currently unemployed have the average number of dependents (of course, many are ahead of the average) about twenty-seven and five-tenths million persons may be classed as unemployed or dependent on the unemployed—about 21 percent of the total population. So if the unemployed workers were drowned their dependents would still remain. We should have to dispose of these dependents, too, or else the cost of relief would decrease only slightly, and the Government would lose the compensating value of those now on public works.

About 2,500,000 are on Federal work projects; another 1,500,000 families and single persons are receiving relief from State and local agencies. In addition 1,500,000 are receiving aid under Social Security. Since 1933, Government expenditures for relief and security have been more than $13,000,000,000. Of this, more than $9,000,000,000 went for wages, direct relief, or social-security payments, and the rest largely for materials, such as iron, steel, lumber, cloth, paint, cement, and tools.

If the unemployed had all been deported or drowned, those expenditures would not have been made. Thirteen billion dollars would not have trickled in various directions, and no part of it would have reached the local grocer or hardware dealer. Indeed, total retail trade in 1937 was only a little more than three times that amount. It begins to look as if business might suffer a substantial loss if all the unemployed were eliminated.

Statisticians say that for every man employed on public works an average of 2 to 2.5 are kept at work behind the lines. In other words, millions of workers in factories or on farms supplying materials and food have jobs only because millions of other workers have jobs on relief paid for by the Government. It is estimated that if we deported all the unemployed, including the two and five-tenths millions on work projects, about 5,000,000 new unemployed would lose their jobs. That drastic cure for unemployment would cause more unemployment. If the 5,000,000 new unemployed had one and five-tenths dependents apiece, and we continued to deport everybody who was unemployed, we might then have a score something like this:

	Millions of persons
United States population (1937)	130.0
Less unemployed deported or drowned	11.0
	119.0
Less dependents	16.5
Revised United States population	102.5
Less new unemployed	5.0
	97.5
Less new dependents	7.5
Revised United States population	90.0

Thus we have eliminated 16,000,000 unemployed and 24,000,000 dependents. At first glimpse the unemployment problem should now be much simplified. But new difficulties might arise. With only 90,000,000 customers, instead of 130,000,000, business would have difficulty in making profits. There would be such excess of both factories and dwelling houses that rents would decline, landlords would be delinquent in taxes and unable to pay mortgages, property values would naturally fall, banks and insurance companies would have a tough time of it trying to liquidate their foreclosed properties. Business and industry would discharge workers and widespread unemployment would raise its ugly head once again. If public works today provide indirect employment for from 2 to 2.5 other men, surely the income of a privately employed worker provides a job for at least one other worker. Assuming that to be true, then the 5,000,000 thrown out of jobs by the elimination of the original unemployed would put 5,000,000 more people out of work, and these would doubtless have the average number of dependents. If we got rid of all these, the score would be, in millions:

Revised United States population	90.0
Less new unemployed deported	5.0
	85.0
Less new dependents deported	7.5
Revised United States population	77.5

With our population now down to only 77,500,000, we are getting back to the good old days, and all should be well. But with fifty-two and five-tenths millions fewer customers, many business institutions would have difficulty in maintaining dividends. They would have to retrench and make every possible saving. Every employee not actually needed would be dismissed. Another mass deportation or "liquidation" might follow. Assuming once more the ratio of one worker indirectly employed for each one directly employed, the last deportation of 5,000,000 would create a new set of 5,000,000 out of work. Deporting them along with their dependents, the new score would be:

Revised United States population	77.5
Less new unemployed eliminated	5.0
	72.5
Less new dependents got rid of	7.5
Revised United States population	65.0

Our population is now getting down toward that of England or France, but England and France have unemployment, and so would we. A new crowd would be thrown out of work because it was no longer needed to supply goods used by the last group we got rid of.

But before we went that far maybe even the most conservative among us would quit worrying about deporting or drowning people as a solution for our problem.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a moment?

Mr. PEPPER. Yes; I yield.

Mr. KING. If the Senator will have his resolution brought to the attention of the appropriate committee, I shall be very happy to join with him. I think we ought not to take it up now, that the resolution ought to go to the committee; and I shall join with the Senator in having his resolution go to the appropriate committee, but not today. I thought we would take it up on Monday.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. May the Chair inquire whether the Senator from Utah objected to the submission of the resolution? The Chair understood that some Senator objected to the submission of the resolution.

Mr. KING. I assumed that the Senator desired to have the Senate take up the resolution today, and I thought that ought not to be done. I thought the resolution ought to go to the committee. If the Senator submits it for that purpose, I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senator from Florida——

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, let me say to my friend the Senator from Utah that if this were a new proposal, if it were one as to which the committee had not already declared as a policy that reduction should not take place, I should think perhaps it would be altogether appropriate that the resolution should go to the committee; but since all that the resolution proposes to do is to keep the matter in status quo, and since the policy of the committee has been expressed in a way consonant with the resolution, and since it would probably result in greater delay and perhaps more confusion if the resolution were sent to a committee, I hoped Senators might express their opinions upon it directly, without its going to a committee.

That is the reason why I preferred that it remain upon the calendar.

Mr. KING. I have no objection to the Senator's offering it; but I did not want to have it taken up for consideration without the appropriate committee's considering it, or full opportunity being given the Senate to consider it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the resolution will be considered as having been read twice and referred to the Special Committee on Unemployment and Relief, of which the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] is the chairman.

Mr. AUSTIN. If I can get the attention of the Chair, I will object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont objects.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President——

Mr. PEPPER. A point of order. Am I not correct? Did the Senator from Utah object previously only to the resolution's going to a committee, or to its introduction?

Mr. KING. I thought the Senator intended to ask to have it taken up for consideration today, and I felt that that should not be done. I have no objection to the introduction of the resolution and to its going to a committee.

Mr. PEPPER. That is what I thought was the objection of the Senator from Utah. So, if that be true, the resolution has already been introduced, and the objection comes too late. When I first began to speak, as the RECORD will show, I asked consent, and I did not think the Senator from Utah intended to object to the introduction of the resolution.

Mr. KING. No.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah has withdrawn his objection, but the Senator from Vermont has objected to the introduction of the resolution.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I understood that the eminent Senator from Florida would get his resolution printed and have it lie on the table, and nothing more, and I have no objection to that course being taken.

Mr. PEPPER. I had no intention of calling it up this afternoon.

Mr. AUSTIN. I did not want it considered this afternoon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In existing circumstances it could not be considered without unanimous consent.

Mr. BARKLEY. Let me make a statement. Of course, the Senator could not offer his resolution, nor could any other Senator, at this stage of the day's proceedings, offer a resolution, except by unanimous consent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. BARKLEY. That sort of consent is generally given. The Senator from Florida, as I understood, had not asked unanimous consent that the resolution be considered today. If he had, that would have been subject to objection.

Mr. PEPPER. No, Mr. President; I had not.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator asked that it be submitted and lie on the table. If the Senator asked for its present consideration, objection would lie on the part of any Senator.

Mr. PEPPER. If Senators will look at the RECORD, they will see that I stated that I was aware that under the rules it would have to lie over, and I intended that.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I wish to make a brief statement about the whole situation. I presume the House of Representatives will today pass an appropriation, whether it will be $100,000,000 or $150,000,000 or less or more I cannot say, but before we recess or adjourn I shall ask unanimous consent that the Secretary of the Senate be authorized to receive the message from the House on that bill when it comes to the Senate, and that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

I do not know how long the Committee on Appropriations will consider the bill. I hope it will not delay its consideration. I regret, as I am sure we all regret, at least those of us who believe that the Government has some obligation in connection with this situation, that it will be necessary on next Monday or tomorrow to discharge thousands of people who are now working on the W. P. A. program, and I hope that, without regard to any resolution, we will pass the appropriation, whatever it may be, soon enough so that the W. P. A. authorities may feel justified in rescinding the order they have already issued, to be effective tomorrow or Monday; I think it is to be effective tomorrow. This whole question will come up when that appropriation bill is returned to the Senate by the Committee on Appropriations, and I suppose, as was true on the former occasion, Senators will express their views with respect to it.

I wish to say another word while I am on my feet. I regret that the Senator from South Carolina made the remarks he made yesterday and which to some extent he repeated today. It is always impossible to draw a straight line in the Senate and be certain that all on the right is statesmanlike and all on the left is political. The Senator has asked me to search my conscience, and I am willing to do so, provided he does not search it for me, as I want to search it myself; but with whatever sort of microscope I might search my own conscience, I do not know whether I would always be right in concluding that, consciously or unconsciously, I had not voted here in some particular instance dependent upon whether my vote pleased my constituents, and whether that pleasure would be recorded and registered at some election.

But if those of us who voted for the appropriation that was passed 6 weeks ago, and those of us who will vote for some sort of an appropriation when the matter comes up again, are to be accused—and I am sure the Senator did not mean what his words really imported—of voting for appropriations with which to put people on the pay roll with no other view in mind except to get their votes on the day of election; if we are to be made the object of that criticism and that accusation, then, of course, there might be retaliation on the part of some Senators who might accuse another Senator of voting for some other bill, dependent upon how many votes it would register for him in his own State. So it is not really fair, and I do not think the Senator in his cool moments would regard it as fair, to make the general broadside criticism which I gathered from his remarks, made under the stress of an honest emotion, I will say, but an emotion just the same—that we are all actuated by the selfish desire to see how many votes we can get by voting for relief and relief appropriations.

As the Senator from Florida stated, we all have our human weaknesses. None of us is perfect. As Artemus Ward, the great American humorist, once said, "One man has as much human nature as another, if not more." I think that applies in this Chamber as well as on the outside, and I hope that, whatever our opinions may be with respect to the merits of legislation, whether it is an appropriation bill to provide work, or a tariff bill, or an agricultural bill dealing with cotton, tobacco, corn, wheat, rye, or anything else, no matter what sort of a bill it is, we can at least concede to our colleagues honest intentions and a fair desire to serve our people, because accusations of this sort invite accusations in return.

However much I have differed from the Senator from South Carolina, for whom I have a genuine affection, regardless of our political differences on the floor, I have never charged, nor have I ever in my heart thought, that he was actuated primarily and fundamentally in any vote he cast by his desire to register with his constituents to the extent that they would send him back to this body.

I have read, and we have all read, about the statesmanship of the former days, and we glory in the achievements of men who served here a hundred years ago. I do not believe there is any less honesty, any less integrity, any less broadness of vision and outlook in this body now than there was 50 years or a hundred years ago, for when we read the history of our country we find that many Senators, many Members of both Houses of Congress, were in days gone by accused of improper motives and of lack of integrity to the extent that men challenged others to fight duels out in the suburbs of Washington because of some accusation or some reflection upon them.

I recall reading that John Randolph of Roanoke accused Henry Clay, of my own State, on the floor of either the House or the Senate—and I think it was the Senate, though I am not certain—of being a "blackleg," which in those days was a term of opprobrium. Clay challenged Randolph to a duel, and they went to the edge of Washington somewhere and fought a duel, but neither hit the other, and both were glad of it. After that they did not speak for more than 10 years. One day Clay was going down to Pennsylvania Avenue from the Capitol and John Randolph was coming up the hill. The only sidewalk was a foot plank just wide enough for one man to walk upon. As Clay went down the hill toward where the Peace Monument now stands he met John Randolph walking up on the narrow foot plank. They met each other and glared for a moment, both realizing that one or the other would have to stand aside. Finally Randolph said to Clay, "I never get out of the way of a damned scoundrel." Clay replied, "I always do," and stepped aside. [Laughter.]

Whatever may be our differences in the Senate I rejoice in the belief that we have not yet become so imbued with the idea of dishonesty or a lack of integrity on the part of our colleagues that we are willing to go to the length of accusing them of impropriety, lack of integrity, or lack of good faith.

I believe in the integrity of the Senator from South Carolina; I believe in his good faith; I believe in his honesty, however mistaken I may sometimes think he is on some issue. All I ask is that he accord his colleagues the same consideration his colleagues accord to him.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I wish first to refer to the comment of the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER], although I do not feel very much in a humor to talk at this time.

The Senator says I am living in a past age. God grant that I may be living in a passing age. Are we, in order to meet a condition, to repudiate all the eternal principles—I use my words advisedly—which have been incorporated into the organic structure of our Government and embrace that which all of us have deplored for 150 years, namely, the centralization of the American Commonwealth in Washington? The whole tendency is to bring here the welfare of 48 States, which wisely were granted reserved powers, leaving to each State the regulation and maintenance of the welfare of its citizens.

Here we are aiding and abetting the form of government which we say we are ready to go to Europe to fight, asserting a fear that that form of government will come here, while we are now practically living under that very form of government.

Just reflect on the number of things for which we are pouring out billions of dollars that are outside the provisions of the Constitution of the United States. How many functions and duties that belong to the States themselves have we assumed?

I must admit that I meant no reflection on the Senators when I stated they were playing a political game and were willing to pour out money in the hope of getting votes. I do not make myself any more righteous than anyone else; but I reiterate that statement. You would not do it if you did not think you could get your votes, and you know it. [Laughter.]

If it is a reflection to say that one tries to get votes, then all of us are reflected upon. I have done my best to gain votes by being what I am. It is not much; but what there is, is me. Senators may construe that as they please.

I am sorry that my good friends have been offended. If they like me as I am—if Senators will excuse this personal allusion—I am very glad; but if they despise me because of what I am, they can take it and lump it. I would not sacrifice my convictions, I would not sacrifice my principles, I would not be willing to prostitute my intellectual processes, for all the gifts of the gods.

Mr. President, I have not tried to reflect on my colleagues, but only to say that they are trying to make hay while the sun shines. It is no reflection on them, if they want to go out and get votes by this legitimate method. I do not want to do it that way, Mr. President, and I do not.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SMITH. Yes, Mr. President, the Senator from New Mexico may talk to me. I do not want to confine him simply to asking me a question. The Senator may say what he pleases.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. SMITH. Yes, Mr. President, I yield.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, a peculiar situation exists in the Senate. I come from a people who have always respected their elders. I know that, so far as votes are concerned, my vote is as good as the vote of the Senator from South Carolina. But, so far as I am concerned, whether I agree with the Senator or not, the fact that he has been a Member of the Senate for many years would not, in my opinion, justify me in not having respect for his opinions. I feel that the trouble with this country today is that we do not have proper respect for our elders.

Mr. SMITH. I think that is the truth. They ought to be respected. [Laughter.]

Mr. CHAVEZ. I think we should respect them whether we agree with them or not. And I want to tell the Senator from South Carolina now, that the people of the Senator from New Mexico have been in New Mexico, in what is now continental United States, since 33 years before the ancestors of many of our citizens landed at Plymouth, or even at Jamestown. We respect the Senator from South Carolina for his age, and we respect him for his opinions, although we may not agree with them.

Mr. SMITH. I thank the Senator. I am glad that I have something which commands the respect of people. [Laughter.]

Mr. President, this is a serious matter. I reiterate that I have respect for and confidence in my fellow Senators. They know as well as I do that never before was there inaugurated a movement, disregarding the States, to support all the idle, to guarantee social security, and what not. It has gone further than that. It has actually destroyed the solid South by injecting another feature, which I may discuss when the time comes. Our social security has been destroyed, or an attempt has been made to destroy it, by the injection of a new element, and that, too, under the auspices of the party I have revered and which was our pillar of cloud by day and pillar of fire by night—the old party that actually saved the civilization of the South.

Why this about face? Does anyone deny that it was to get the votes of the unfortunate race? Read the newspapers. We in our beleaguered condition are now left defenseless by both the Republican Party and the Democratic Party. Why was that done?

Mr. President, I hope that my friends here—and I have them—will not think that I was imputing to them any sinister motives. I merely wanted them to be fair and say, "Yes, we hope by this means to get those who were the beneficiaries of our largess to vote for us." You know quite well you would not give it to them if you thought they would not vote for you.

Would you? Let us be honest. Can Senators look me in the face and tell me that they were moved by a great humanitarian feeling?

Mr. President, I do not want the charge made that I ever accused others of doing what I felt I was too righteous to do. It is not a question of personal feeling with me. I have done my best. If there is a God, it will not be very many years, by the statute of limitations, before I will face Him, and standing in that solemn moment I will face Him—and if He is a gentleman He will recognize one when He sees him—I will face Him and let Him judge my sincerity.

I do not believe we have a right in Washington to assume all the burdens we have assumed. Take the illustration I used about joining our ranks with an unfortunate people. Surely Senators knew what that meant to us. What was that for? Was it for their uplift? The Republicans were doing that.

Mr. President, I am sorry if Senators took the speech I made yesterday as a reflection upon their honesty. I thought they would honestly say, "Yes, that is what we did it for." Honest to God, I thought that was what they would say. I thought they would admit that they felt that one was a fool who would not try to get votes. I am objecting to the method of getting them, that is all. I am not going to vote to mulct the taxpayers of America for the purpose of promoting the party to which I belong. I am not going to do it.

Now that personalities have been brought into the debate, let me say that I never could figure out why I like our leader, but I just like BARKLEY—yes, I do. [Laughter.] He said he did not know why he liked me, but—

I do not love thee, Dr. Fell,
The reason why I cannot tell;
But this alone I know full well,
I do not love thee, Dr. Fell.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if the Senator will make an honest effort to find out why he likes me, I will then tell him why I like him.

Mr. SMITH. Before we adjourn I may devote myself to it.

Mr. President, I spoke the truth as I saw it, and, God help me, I will not take it back. All I want to say is that I was not impunging the motives of a single Senator, not one. I think they are just as honest and honorable as I am. I think they are just as sincere in their desires as I am in mine. The only thing is that we are just going in opposite directions.

What sort of statement is it for a man to rise and say, "Why, I voted for all this stuff for pure, genuine humanitarian reasons?" My friend from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS] impresses me as being extraordinarily sincere and honest; but he did not want any soul searching here this afternoon.

Mr. President, one more word and I am through. I am surprised to hear a man from my section of the country say we have outlived the Constitution, that we have outlived the immortal doctrine—I use the word "immortal" correctly—and that we are now launched on an uncharted sea headed for a destination that means progress. As for me I shall remain a States' rights Democrat, and shall continue to maintain that the States may fully exercise all reserved powers, and I shall resist any further encroachment by the Federal Government into that splendid system of government.

Now, Mr. President, if anyone can tell what I have said he is welcome to it.

AUTHORIZATION FOR REPORTING AND SIGNING BILLS, ETC.

Mr. MINTON obtained the floor.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Indiana yield to me for the purpose of submitting a unanimous-consent request?

Mr. MINTON. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am obliged to leave the Senate Chamber at a quarter to 4 o'clock to go down amid the cherry blossoms and put a crown on the head of a very beautiful girl who is to be crowned queen of the cherry blossom festival. I rejoice in the honor which has been conferred upon me by the request that I take part in that ceremony, and I am glad that it will take me amid scenes of peace and beauty, where I am sure there will be no feeling of any sort except that which is actuated by the almost unanimous sentiment of the American people that Washington is their city and that the cherry blossom festival has become a national institution.

Therefore I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate concludes its business today it stand in adjournment until 12 o'clock on next Monday, and that in the meantime committees may be authorized to report bills, resolutions, and nominations; that the Secretary of the Senate may be authorized to receive messages from the House of Representatives; and that the Vice President may be authorized to sign any bills that may become ready for his signature.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed a joint resolution (H. J. Res. 246) making a further additional appropriation for work relief and relief for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 246) making a further additional appropriation for work relief and relief for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

PROPOSED REDUCTION IN RELIEF ROLLS

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NEELY in the chair). Will the Senator from Indiana suspend until the Chair disposes of the pending resolution? Without objection, the resolution which was presented earlier in the day by the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] will be considered as having been submitted by unanimous consent, ordered to be printed, and lie on the table. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 116) submitted by Mr. PEPPER was ordered to lie on the table, as follows:

Resolved, That the Administrator of the Works Progress Administration is hereby requested to see to it that no needy person is discharged from the relief rolls of the Works Progress Administration except for cause other than lack of funds until the funds appropriated by the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938 are exhausted.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, I shall detain the Senate only a few minutes. I shall not throw any bouquets. Neither shall I throw any brickbats.

I shall not speak in defense of Senators, because they can speak for themselves. I merely wish to direct the attention of the Senate to another group included in the remarks of the senior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH], a group which does not enjoy the privilege of this floor. I am sure the Senator does not question the sincerity or the honesty of purpose of any of his colleagues. If he should so far forget himself as to do that, of course, Senators have this forum in which to defend themselves in honorable debate with the great Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. President, it was not Senators whose motives were impugned yesterday and again today. It was not Senators who were held up to scorn. It was not Senators who were lashed by the Senator from South Carolina. That was only incidental. Yesterday the Senator from South Carolina said:

We pour out billions of dollars to support people who never contribute one iota to the progress or welfare of the country.

The rest of his remarks only bore out the thought that the money we were appropriating for the poor unfortunate victims of a depression, not of their own making, was appropriated for those who were unworthy and "who never contributed an iota to this country."

Ah, Mr. President, I know many of these unfortunate people. I know hundreds of them. I know thousands of them. Like the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER], coming as I do out of poverty, I speak of them with sympathy and understanding. So I speak for them this afternoon, and not for great Senators, who can speak for themselves.

I wish to resent the imputation that the money which is appropriated to drive hunger and starvation from the doors of good American citizens, whose only crime is that they cannot get a job to earn their bread by the sweat of their brows, is misspent. I resent the imputation which has been cast upon good American citizens by statements such as those made by the Senator from South Carolina; and I wish to summon to my side, to bear witness to the faith that is in me, a widow in Indianapolis, who wrote me the other day about the W. P. A. program. She is not an isolated case.

She is only one of millions in the United States who feel as she does. She wrote me as follows:

I am an employee of the W. P. A., and this work has helped me wonderfully, and I certainly have appreciated what has been done for me. I am a widow and the mother of one child that is depending on me for support in the home to care for, and will you please extend this work a little longer, as I hate to go back on direct relief, as I am eligible and I want to work, as I have no one to help me in any respect. Thank you.

ETHEL VAUGHN,
713 West Thirteenth Street, Indianapolis, Ind.

I am speaking for the Ethel Vaughns of this country, who tell me and other Senators in their letters that the W. P. A. has saved them, their children, and their families from starvation.

I resent the imputation that Ethel Vaughn and the millions like her contribute no iota to the welfare of this country. I denounce it as a base, gratuitous slander upon millions of good American citizens. So, Mr. President, I am speaking only for those who cannot be heard in this forum.

Perhaps Senators vote to appropriate relief money in order to buy votes. Perhaps we are venal. Perhaps we are low. Perhaps we have no humanitarian purpose in the program. If any Senator says we have not, I am no better than he is. However, Ethel Vaughn thinks differently. We are not buying her vote with the pittance we give her to keep starvation from her door. The people believe that the program is worth while. They believe that their Government is doing something for them that is worth while.

The Senator from South Carolina says that it was a sorry day when the Federal Government stepped in to bring relief to those who could not help themselves and that the States ought to take care of them. Ah, Mr. President, I do not know what the situation is in the great State of South Carolina; I have been through it only a few times in my life; but it did not appear to me to be much more prosperous than is Indiana. I know a little about the State of Indiana. I know that the Federal Government spent between $500,000,000 and $600,000,000 for recovery and relief in the great State of Indiana. Indiana could not have met the effects of the great depression upon those who work. A national calamity threw people out of work all over the country by the thousands. The National Government had to step in and meet the problem. The State of Indiana by itself could not have met it. If Indiana and South Carolina had had to bear the burden of the depression where would the money have come from to pay the bill? Out of the pockets of the taxpayers of the States of Indiana and South Carolina, and nowhere else, because we have nowhere else to look for the money to pay our bills; but Uncle Sam can reach out in 48 States and tax the rich and the well to do all over the country, wherever the wealth of the Nation may find its hiding place, and pay the bills of Uncle Sam. So Uncle Sam has only been carrying out a great humanitarian project because he was faced with a national problem, a national disaster, which only Uncle Sam, in all his power and might, could meet.

Mr. President, I dare say that we shall see the Senator from South Carolina repudiating his own doctrine in a few days. The Senator from South Carolina will be upon the floor in a few days asking, perhaps, parity payment for cotton. Perhaps he will want some cotton given back to the farmers in South Carolina at 3 cents a pound—cotton which they have already sold to the Government for 9 cents a pound. If I took an attitude like that of the Senator from South Carolina, I would say, "Let the people of South Carolina pay their parity payments on cotton. We do not raise any cotton in Indiana. Let the people of South Carolina pay their part of the $90,000,000 which Uncle Sam is going to lose on the cotton transaction. We do not have any cotton in Indiana."

The Senator from South Carolina is correct when he brings in his bills; and the present administration is correct when it looks upon the welfare of the cotton growers in 16 or 17 States in the United States as a national problem and a matter of national concern. With the slight and feeble power that is within me, I will not in the slightest degree stand in the way of parity payments on cotton, or doing what is necessary to save the cotton farmer of the South, or the wheat and the corn farmers on the plains. However, it seems to me that the Senator from South Carolina will be taking an inconsistent position in a very few days when he comes before the Senate and asks that the farmers of South Carolina be helped. God knows they need it. The Senator will admit that they need it, but when he comes and asks for help for the farmers of South Carolina he will not be laying South Carolina's dollars on the line. He will be asking Uncle Sam to help. He will be asking Uncle Sam to bring relief to the distressed people of South Carolina who cannot help themselves. I wish to help them. I shall not stand upon the floor and denounce them when they cry out in their misery and suffering.

So, Mr. President, I enter my protest, not in behalf of Senators, but in behalf of humble people who cannot speak for themselves or help themselves, and who look to us to bring relief to them in the time of their trials and troubles.

RESTRICTION OF IMMIGRATION AND DEPORTATION OF ALIENS

Mr. REYNOLDS obtained the floor.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President——

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield to the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I rise to suggest that perhaps the Senate had better adjourn and go home.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I desire to submit a few remarks to this body.

Mr. McNARY. It can only be done by unanimous consent.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Then I ask unanimous consent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that he be permitted to submit a few remarks. Is there objection?

Mr. McNARY. The Chair says "a few remarks."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair makes no guaranties. The Chair simply repeats the request of the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. McNARY. I have no objection to the Senator making a few remarks.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I refuse to limit them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina amends his request and asks permission to make unlimited remarks.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Unlimited remarks. [Laughter.]

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the Senator from North Carolina may proceed, unlimited.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I naturally assume that the Members of the Senate are desirous of returning to their respective offices for the purpose of answering correspondence or meeting constituents from home, or perhaps driving some of their friends around to see the cherry blossoms. If any of the Members of this body are desirous of so doing, I wish to state that I have no serious objection, because I now expect to direct my remarks to the American people through the columns of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. [Laughter.]

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President——

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield only for a question—I should say, Mr. President, for an intelligent inquiry.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Does the Senator mean to overlook the intelligent group in the press gallery when he says that he addresses the American people only through the columns of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD? [Laughter.]

Mr. REYNOLDS. The Senator from North Carolina is unlike many of his colleagues, particularly his beloved colleague from the State of Washington. The Senator from North Carolina, when he addresses the American people, never glances at the press gallery, as do the Senator from Washington and others of our colleagues.

Mr. President, I am inspired to submit unlimited remarks this afternoon by the subject matter so ably discussed by many Members of the Senate this afternoon, which subject matter incidentally relates to the question of the unemployment problem in this country; and the unemployment problem in this country in turn is related to a subject which is paramount in the minds of the American people today; to wit, the restriction of immigration.

In bringing that all-important subject to the attention of the Members of the Senate, I desire initially at this time to advert to the fact that I introduced in the Senate in the month of January Senate bills 407, 408, 409, 410, and 411. I desire to say in that connection that the five bills, the numbers of which I have just mentioned, have been and are now being considered by a subcommittee of the Immigration Committee of the Senate. I may add that I hope that certainly within 10 days the subcommittee will have reported to the full committee, and I am living in high hope that the full committee may see fit to report to the Senate favorably, without reservation, these five bills of mine.

Mr. President, Senate bill 407, introduced by me, is a bill "to further reduce immigration, to authorize the exclusion of any alien whose entry into the United States is inimical to the public interest, to prohibit the separation of families through the entry of aliens leaving dependents abroad, and for other purposes."

Senate bill 408, introduced by me, is a bill "to provide for the national defense by the registration of aliens in the United States, and for other purposes."

Senate bill 409 has as its object the protection of American labor, and the stimulation of the employment of American citizens on American jobs.

Senate bill 410, likewise introduced by me in January as aforesaid, is a bill to provide for the deportation of aliens subsisting on relief under certain circumstances.

Senate bill 411 provides for the deportation of aliens inimical to the public interest.

These measures, as I stated a moment ago, are Senate bills 407, 408, 409, 410, and 411. I propose this afternoon at my leisure to discuss the question of restricted immigration, the registering and fingerprinting of aliens, the deportation of alien criminals and undesirables, and other features of those subjects in general, and in the discussion thereof I am desirous of bringing to the attention of those present newspaper articles, resolutions, and correspondence furnished to me from time to time.

Especially I bring to the attention of this body a letter under date of March 1, 1939, from Oklahoma City, Okla., on the stationery of the Senate chamber of the State of Oklahoma, signed by Hon. J. William Cordell, secretary of the senate. This letter from Oklahoma is addressed to Hon. JOSH LEE, United States Senator, Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C., and reads as follows:

DEAR SENATOR: Pursuant to the direction of the Oklahoma State Senate, Seventeenth Legislature, I am transmitting herewith a copy of enrolled Senate Resolution No. 17, which was unanimously adopted by the State senate on the 27th day of February 1939, requesting the Federal Congress to direct its attention toward providing legislation which will cause the speedy deportation of all alien residents of this country who do not within a reasonable time signify their willingness, desire, and intention and qualify to assume the obligations of citizenship and become citizens of the United States of America.

Yours very truly,

J. WM. CORDELL,
Secretary of the Senate.

Before asking that the clerk read the resolution furnished me by the Senator from Oklahoma I desire to state that the Senator from Oklahoma turned over this letter to me personally to bring to the attention of the Members of this body, because he was familiar with the fact that I have been doing everything I possibly could in the Senate to strengthen our immigration laws and to prohibit more aliens from coming to this country to take the jobs of Americans. I assume to state that the Senator from Oklahoma was aware of the fact that I was endeavoring as best I could to bring about the deportation of the alien criminals in this country and to have the alien undesirables expelled from our fair land.

I send to the desk the resolution referred to in the letter and respectfully request that it be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the resolution will be read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Senate Resolution 17

Resolution memorializing the Federal Congress to enact adequate legislation providing for speedy deportation of all alien residents who do not signify their willingness, desire, and intention to become citizens of the United States within a reasonable time after entry into the United States of America

Whereas it is estimated that there are approximately 8,000,000 residents within the boundaries of the United States of America who have neither become naturalized nor filed any declaration of intention to become citizens of this Nation; and

Whereas this large group of alien residents provides a fertile field for agitators and organizations who are not in sympathy with the American form of government; and

Whereas it is the sense of the State Senate of the State of Oklahoma that this large group of alien residents should not be permitted to enjoy the freedom and privileges of this Nation without assuming the corresponding duties and obligations of citizenship: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate of the State of Oklahoma, That the Federal Congress be, and it is hereby, requested to direct its attention to this condition and to enact adequate legislation which will provide for speedy deportation of all alien residents of this country who do not within a reasonable time signify their willingness, desire, and intention, and qualify, to assume the obligations of citizenship and become citizens of the United States of America; be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of the State senate be, and he is hereby, directed to transmit properly authenticated copies of this resolution to each branch of the Congress, to each member of the Oklahoma congressional delegation, and to each of the United States Senators from Oklahoma; be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of the State senate forthwith transmit properly authenticated copies of this resolution to each of the legislatures of the several States of the Union, which are now in session, same for their consideration and action if they so desire.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, in connection with that resolution I may in passing advise the Senate that it is my recollection that several weeks ago there was introduced in the House of Representatives a bill providing for the deportation of foreigners upon our shores who have been here for a period of 1 year and who within that time have not made application for American citizenship.

I now send to the desk a resolution which was adopted by the Senate of the State of Maryland in reference to this subject matter of interest to the American people; that is to say, relative to "isms" of the earth, restricted immigration, deportation of alien criminals, and so forth. I ask that the clerk read this resolution adopted by the Senate of the State of Maryland. In that connection, I apologize to the Members of the Senate for the references to myself in the resolution, but I assure them the references are no fault of mine, in that I had no part in suggesting to the senators of the State of Maryland that my name be mentioned therein. I am anxious, however, to have the resolution read at this time to demonstrate the fact that every State in the Union, through its legislative members, is calling upon this national body to do something in reference to the subject which I have endeavored as best I can to bring to the attention of the American people for the benefit of the unemployed in this country and for the benefit of the Government itself.

I therefore ask that the clerk read the resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the resolution will be read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Whereas the constant and ever-increasing manifestations of peoples, groups, and organizations expounding the philosophies and theories of communism, nazi-ism, and fascism; and

Whereas these manifestations are in practically every instance inspired by aliens, or alien-minded people; and

Whereas the philosophy or theory as expounded by representatives of the individual organizations are for the promotion, fostering, and strengthening the doctrines of communism nazi-ism, and fascism in America; and

Whereas the Honorable ROBERT R. REYNOLDS, United States Senator from North Carolina, has caused to be introduced in the United States Senate, legislation in the interest of national defense and for the protection of America in time of war, providing for the registration and fingerprinting of each and every alien now in the United States, or who may hereafter apply for permission to enter the United States, and which is known as S. 408, and legislation providing that any alien or group of aliens whose presence in the United States is inimical to the public interest shall upon warrant of the Secretary of Labor be taken into custody and deported forthwith, which is known as S. 411; and

Whereas the members of the Senate of Maryland, reaffirming their steadfast belief in the principles of true democracy, and abhorring the alien-directed activities, for the purpose of pregnating and demoralizing minds of young and impressionable Americans, with obnoxious and unwarranted "isms": Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Senate of Maryland does hereby extend its appreciation and express its admiration to the Honorable ROBERT R. REYNOLDS, United States Senator from North Carolina, for his patriotic and inspiring legislation to the end that the philosophy of Washington, Jefferson, and Lincoln shall never be replaced with un-American principles as expressed by communism, nazi-ism, and fascism; and be it further

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution the secretary of the senate is hereby instructed to forward copies thereof to the Honorable ROBERT R. REYNOLDS, United States Senator from North Carolina, the Honorable MILLARD E. TYDINGS, and the Honorable GEORGE L. RADCLIFFE, United States Senators from the State of Maryland.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, at the time the Senate of the State of Maryland adopted the resolution just read, remarks were made by State Senator Robert B. Kimble in the Senate of Maryland on the resolution, commending the resolution introduced in the Senate of the United States by me. Again I apologize for asking the clerk to read the remarks of the Honorable Mr. Kimble as a senator of the State of Maryland at the time the resolution was adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the clerk will read, as requested.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

REMARKS OF SENATOR ROBERT B. KIMBLE IN THE SENATE OF MARYLAND ON SENATE RESOLUTION COMMENDING LEGISLATION INTRODUCED IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES BY SENATOR ROBERT R. REYNOLDS, FROM NORTH CAROLINA

Mr. KIMBLE. Mr. President, the resolution just read by the clerk is self-explanatory. However, I do desire to comment briefly on the subject matter. As will be noted, the resolution represents an expression of the Senate of Maryland as concurring with the purposes and objectives of legislation introduced in the United States Senate by the Honorable ROBERT R. REYNOLDS, the distinguished Senator from the State of North Carolina. This legislation, as proposed by Senator REYNOLDS, provides for the mandatory registration and fingerprinting of every alien now in the United States or who may hereafter apply for permission to enter the United States. The objective of the proposed legislation is the strengthening of our national defense. It also provides for the deportation of every alien or group of aliens whose presence or activities are inimical to the public welfare of the United States. Certainly, when the American people are confronted with the daring and dangerous activities of aliens or alien-minded people, in the spreading of foreign propaganda, it is only just and fitting that this august body should give an expression of confidence and admiration to the Senator from North Carolina for his patriotic and inspiring legislation, to the end that the philosophy of Washington, Jefferson, and Lincoln shall never be replaced by the philosophy of communism, fascism or nazi-ism. There is a school of thought that to curb the activities of these propagandists would be to deprive them of the right of free speech and the freedom of assembly. My answer to this is that the Constitution of the United States and the Bill of Rights appended thereto was written for the protection of Americans and American institutions and not for foreign powers or their subjects. Should an alien desire to become a naturalized American citizen there are certain definite requirements which he must comply with; the most important makes it mandatory that he must renounce all bonds of allegiance to his native country. I submit, therefore, that the demonstration by the German-American Bund in the city of New York, where members were clothed in the uniform of the Nazi storm troopers, wearing arm bands on which were displayed the symbol of nazi-ism, the swastika, giving the Nazi salute, and having the audacity to compare Hitler with the Father of Our County, have not renounced their allegiance to their native lands and are not entitled to the privileges and liberties as guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States of America. Because of such daring activities we must assert ourselves against these subversive interests. There are alien interests at this very moment, in every sphere of our everyday life, attempting to drag us into the mephitic cesspool of dictatorship. Millions of dollars are being expended in these United States of ours to increase the interest in the aims and principles of these obnoxious, un-American "isms." Our mighty citadels of learning, both public and private, are being undermined by persons in the pay of and acting under directions from these countries which are attempting to bring about an upheaval in our democratic form of government. Our labor unions, our industries, our professions, and even our National, State, and local Governments are being subjected to this same despicable treatment. Men and women, high in public office, have admitted their support of and affiliation with the political organizations representing these foreign interests in our country. Many others have been accused and have answered neither in the affirmative nor the negative. It is high time that we brought about some definite action to rid ourselves of these undesirables. Do not misunderstand me in my use of the word "alien"; I am not referring to the millions of persons either foreign born or of foreign extraction who came to this country so that they might have a new birth of freedom; you all know to what class I am referring, and the sooner we take measures to rid ourselves of them the better off we will all be. Never forget; it could happen here. We must not permit it to happen here. We must rid ourselves of this alien menace so that, in the words of the Great Emancipator, "Government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I have before me another resolution, from the American Legion in Minnesota. I send it to the desk and ask that it be read, it being the third resolution which has been brought to the attention of of Members of this body today, and, I repeat, I am bringing to the attention of the Senate these resolutions in order that Members of the Congress may know that the American people today are demanding action by their national legislators.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CHAVEZ in the chair). Without objection, the clerk will read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Whereas there is now in excess of 13,000,000 unemployed in the United States placing the future welfare of its citizens in jeopardy; and

Whereas aliens are entering the United States at the rate of more than 179,000 each year adding further to the unsurmountable unemployment problem; and

Whereas nothing has been accomplished to assure our present unemployed employment in the future, and our citizens have been forced to the conclusion that such unemployment will remain a permanent condition in the United States; and

Whereas hundreds of thousands of aliens entering this country are being given "aliens' preference" in the matter of employment, more than 14,000 of whom are now employed by the United States Government alone; and

Whereas among the aliens referred to are hundreds of thousands of so-called habitual aliens who have been in the United States from 10 to 30 years, enjoying all the privileges and immunities of citizenship, but not becoming naturalized and not undertaking or assuming any of the legal responsibilities or duties of citizenship; and

Whereas the continued admission of aliens into the United States will constitute a serious menace to the future welfare of our citizens: Now, therefore, be it hereby

Resolved by the Minneapolis Bearcat Post, No. 504, of the American Legion, Department of Minnesota, at its regular meeting held on the 24th day of February 1939, That all immigration into the United States of America be absolutely and wholly closed to all immigrants of every race and foreign nation whatsoever for a period of at least 10 years or until all employable citizens desiring employment shall have been absorbed into industry; be it hereby further

Resolved, That all elective and appointive officials of the United States, State, county, and municipalities thereof, deny employment to all aliens, and that all aliens now employed be discharged forthwith, and their vacated positions filled by American citizens; be it hereby further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be sent to both the State and National headquarters of the American Legion, to each of the Minnesota Senators and Congressmen, and that the proper officials of the department of Minnesota, the American Legion, be requested to forward a copy of this resolution to the post commanders within the department of Minnesota.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, the American Legion sent copies of the resolution just read to their Representatives in the House and to Senators, as well as to American Legion headquarters in Indianapolis, Ind.

In addition I desire to read a letter addressed to me from Newport News, Va., under date of March 20, 1939, on the letterhead of the welfare committee of the Junior Order United American Mechanics of the State of Virginia, signed by R. B. Barker.

Before reading this letter I desire to take advantage of the opportunity to say that the Junior Order United American Mechanics has around 500,000 active, paid-up members, and they are found in every State of the Union. I know of no organization which has done more to bring about restricted immigration laws than has the Junior Order United American Mechanics, the national secretary of which is Mr. James Wilmeth, who resides in Philadelphia, Pa., and who came to Washington from the City of Brotherly Love a few days ago to testify before the subcommittee of the Committee on Immigration of the United States Senate in behalf of the five bills the captions of which I read a moment ago, having been introduced by me.

The letter reads as follows:

NEWPORT NEWS, VA., March 20, 1939.

Hon. ROBERT RICE REYNOLDS,
United States Senator,
Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR REYNOLDS: On behalf of on extensive membership of native-born Americans in the Old Dominion, whom I officially represent, I want to again express my appreciation of your patriotic efforts in behalf of America and Americans. When the Kerr-Coolidge bill was before Congress you did a remarkable piece of work in killing this piece of atrocious legislation, and, in my opinion, Congress should be considering your needed proposed legislation in registering aliens for their own as well as the protection of all American citizens. The consideration of legislation restricting immigration instead of legislation similar to the Wagner joint resolution (S. J. Res. 64) and staying deportation of aliens and alien criminals should, in my opinion, be the first consideration of the present Congress.

Since becoming interested in the particular subject of immigration restriction, I have noticed recently and have accumulated various newspaper clippings and even letters inserted by the introducer of Senate Joint Resolution 64 in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, which I receive every day through the courtesy of my distinguished Senator, Hon. HARRY FLOOD BYRD. Quite apparently these letters and newspaper articles have a common origin and no doubt a common inspiration.

I enclose herewith my answer to a newspaper editorial which only the other day apeared in the Richmond News-Leader, which editorial came wittingly or unwittingly from the above-mentioned common source; the answer which I enclose appeared in the same newspaper of this date. I hope you will be inclined to insert in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD this answer, which I wrote to show that such expressions of sympathy and generosity for Germans only, does not represent the sentiment of all Virginians.

Very sincerely yours,

R. B. BARKER.

I thank Mr. Barker very much for having addressed this letter to me, and I assure him of my gratitude for the compliments paid to me in the letter. I only hope that I am worthy of them.

In connection with the letter of Mr. Barker, I respectfully ask that a copy of his letter dated Newport News, March 15, 1939, directed to the editor of the Richmond News-Leader, Richmond, Va., be included as a part and portion of my remarks.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NEWPORT NEWS, VA., March 15, 1939.

EDITOR, RICHMOND NEWS LEADER,
Richmond, Va.

DEAR SIR: I have read with much interest your article in the editorial column of your paper yesterday under the heading "Bring Over the Children." The entire situation is a pitiable one to face and to these who may oppose the plan to bring over 20,000 children in 2 years will be classed as everything but a liberal American. The importation of these 20,000 children, as I see it, means:

Twenty thousand foreign children to be admitted outside the quotas.

Twenty thousand additional applicants for American charity which belongs to the children of America.

Twenty thousand potential applicants for entry into eleemosynary and other public institutions supported by American taxpayers.

Twenty thousand additional applicants on their maturity for jobs rightfully belonging to the youth of America.

Twenty thousand immigrant children, if each mated within or without the group, and each mating produced four children, to in turn become parents, would add in five generations, 640,000 offspring to the population of the United States.

Twenty thousand additional applicants for legislation to admit the fathers, mothers, sisters, brothers, cousins, aunts, and uncles of these children in order that their families may be reunited in the United States.

Last fiscal year 252,697 aliens of all classes entered the United States legally, of whom about 30,000 were nonpreference quota immigrant aliens, having no near relatives here and every one of them coming for permanent residence and being a potential job or relief seeker. Germany has a quota of 27,370. Why should that enormous quota be increased by 10,000 next year and the following year as proposed? If it is German orphan refugees that are wanted, then reserve 10,000 of the present German quota.

Out of these resolutions that you propose the American people accept, why accept only the German refugees? What about Ethiopian refugees who are being persecuted by Mussolini? Spanish "reds" who are being persecuted by Franco? What about Arabs persecuted and having their homes taken away from them in Palestine? Chinese "reds" as well as German "reds"? Would you advocate bringing them in also? I think not.

Every other country is making their country for their own people. I think it time America was doing the same thing. It also appears to me that it is time that someone, on behalf of the youth of America, appeal to the American people to oppose such legislation as you endorse in your editorial.

I trust you will allow me space in your paper.

R. B. BARKER,
Chairman, Welfare Committee, Virginia State Counsel, Junior Order United American Mechanics.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I desire at this juncture to call attention to a paragraph of Mr. Barker's letter, first, in reference to the registration and fingerprinting of aliens; second, in reference to the refugee problem, which he has seen fit to mention in the letter.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BILBO in the chair). Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. REYNOLDS. Certainly.

Mr. LUNDEEN. I should like to say to the able Senator that I have never heard anyone put the number of unemployed lower than 10,000,000 in recent days. Many say there are 11,000,000 unemployed, and, as nearly as I can find out, the number must be somewhere around 12,000,000.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, let me say to the Senator that some have estimated the number to be as high as 13,000,000. In furtherance of that statement I may say that I have been informed that, in addition to the 13,000,000 unemployed, there are 26,000,000 who are unemployed part time, and, as the Senator knows, there are 3,000,000 on the W. P. A. rolls, a matter which has been discussed here this afternoon. In addition thereto, I am reliably informed that there are 4,000,000 Americans who are working for the various and sundry political subdivisions in the United States, first, the Federal Government, second, the State governments, third, the municipalities.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. I should like to state to the distinguished Senator from North Carolina that, in my opinion, this is no time to allow to come into our country large numbers of aliens or refugees from other countries. This is a time when we should remember our own people first, when we should take care of our own people first. "He who will not first take care of his own is worse than an infidel," says the Good Book. Let us first take care of our own.

When questions such as this come up I am glad that serious debate is had upon the subject, because frequently these matters are passed through the legislative body, the House and Senate, in very quick order, such as for instance our neutrality law which was brought forward in 1937, as I recall, and passed in a few moments, with very brief consideration, if any, being given to it, and now after a couple of years we are now supposed to find that it is very wrong. I do not want to bring that subject into the present discussion. I think we should have full debate upon it, and full consideration of it, and that we should be willing to listen to both sides of the question.

It seems to me, however, that there is only one side to the question, and that is the American side, because, after all, we are American Senators, we have been placed here by the American people, we stand under the American flag, and our duty is to the people who sent us here, and not to foreign countries and to foreign peoples and to aliens. Our duty is to Americans and Americans only.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I thank the Senator immensely for his contribution. In connection therewith I wish to say to the Senate that there can really be no debate upon this subject, because no one can intelligently take the other side. That is to say, no one can intelligently debate and maintain the side opposite to that taken by the able Senator from Minnesota and myself.

Mr. President, it is not a question of debate. I am not debating anything. I am merely bringing facts to the attention of this body. If anyone, I do not care who it is, wants to discuss these facts with me I shall be delighted to welcome such a discussion upon the floor of the Senate or anywhere else.

Mr. President, my friend from Virginia who complimented me so highly, and to whom I am indebted for those compliments of which I am not worthy, made mention of the fact that he was of the opinion that we should pass my bill calling for the registration and fingerprinting of aliens. Who should object to that? The only people in this country who object to being fingerprinted are some aliens. Why they should object is beyond my comprehension, because every man who was in the military service—and there were during the World War 4,400,000 American boys in uniform and under arms—was fingerprinted. All those in the armed forces of the United States today, during these times of peace—that is say, our soldiers, our marines, our sailors, our Coast Guard men—have been fingerprinted.

Mr. President, in addition to that, the President of the United States a number of years ago was fingerprinted when he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and recently I observed through the columns of the press that all of the members of the White House staff either have been or are to be fingerprinted. I read a newspaper article which I have before me, clipped from a local newspaper of several days ago, which is headed:

All White House employees being fingerprinted.

The article proceeds:

President Roosevelt disclosed at his press conference yesterday that all White House employees are being fingerprinted by Federal Bureau of Investigation agents at his suggestion.

The Chief Executive said that he believes all citizens should be fingerprinted for their own protection.

And the Chief Executive is precisely right in that assertion.

Mr. Roosevelt said he has always been in favor of fingerprinting, and submitted to the process himself 22 years ago, before sailing for France.

The President, chuckling, suggested that it might be well for all members of the press to be fingerprinted, too.

Mr. President, I think it is well for everyone to be fingerprinted. I am very happy indeed that the President of the United States, the Chief Executive himself, has recommended the fingerprinting process, and I am hopeful that the President of the United States may find time to advise the Members of the United States Congress to the effect that he favors my bill, which provides for the registration and fingerprinting of aliens. I do not need to argue to the Senate that the President of the United States does favor my bill; otherwise he would not have made that statement. If the President of the United States did make that statement and at the same time disapproved my bill he would be inconsistent, and the President of the United States, I say, is anything else but inconsistent. I am very grateful to the President of the United States for the recommendation I assume he has made to Congress to pass my bill calling for the registering of and fingerprinting of aliens by way of the statement which he made to the press.

Mr. President, not only is the President of the United States in favor of my bill, but I have a clipping before me from the New York Herald Tribune of recent date, with a cut from a photograph showing the Vice President of the United States, the President of this body, being fingerprinted by the Honorable J. Edgar Hoover, the Director of the Bureau of Investigation. This clipping, which I hold before me, from the New York Herald Tribune, is headed:

Vice President of United States fingerprinted by J. Edgar Hoover.

This is an Associated Press photograph. These words are right under the photograph of our beloved Vice President:

Vice President JOHN N. GARNER (left) heeding President Roosevelt's suggestion that Washington officialdom be fingerprinted has his taken by the head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Laughing over GARNER's shoulder is Senator ROBERT F. WAGNER, while Columnist Walter Winchell is behind Hoover.

I send that newspaper clipping to the desk and ask unanimous consent that a cut be made from the photograph and that it be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD as a part of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(Subsequently it was ruled that the photograph referred to could not be printed in the RECORD without an order of the Joint Committee on Printing.)

Mr. REYNOLDS. I wish to bring to the Senate's attention another subject raised by the letter sent me by a patriotic friend at Newport News, Va. He mentions refugees, and he suggested that we should take care of our own before proceeding to foreign shores to take care of the orphans, unfortunate as they are, in the lands beyond the blue waters of the Atlantic. In that connection I desire again to thank the able and patriotic Senator from the great State of Minnesota [Mr. LUNDEEN] for his statement on that subject.

Mr. President, I am very happy to be provided the opportunity at this particular time of bringing to the attention of the Senate the question of refugees, because today as here I sat, and as there stood the Senator from the State of Florida, he told of the unfortunate youngsters of his State who were not properly nourished and who were not properly clothed, and in his argument he appealed to the Members of this body for funds to be contributed to the W. P. A. I wish to say that I am of the opinion that we should take care of our own orphans and take care of our refugees in this country before we attempt to take care of the orphans or the refugees from other lands of the world.

I speak of refugees. There are 13,000,000 of our people out of employment. I speak of refugees. There are 26,000,000 persons in this country who are employed only part of the time. I speak of orphans. I bring to the attention of the Senate that there are today in every State of the Union thousands and thousands of boys and girls who, poor little things, unfortunately have lost their fathers and their mothers.

The Senate will remember that a moment ago I read a letter from a gentleman in Newport News, Va., who is a member of the Junior Order United American Mechanics. The Junior Order United American Mechanics has in the State of North Carolina a paid-up membership of 53,000 active members. It maintains an orphanage for unfortunate little boys and girls whose fathers and mothers have died, and in Lexington, N. C., are hundreds of unfortunate orphans whose fathers and mothers have died. I say we should take care of the orphans of this country before we reach across the briny waters of the Atlantic and bring to our shores for shelter and protection and maintenance the orphans of Germany, Austria, Czechoslovakia, or any other foreign country.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I am most sympathetic with what the Senator from North Carolina has in mind, but I am wondering whether, in his endeavor to try to reach his high goal with respect to all needy Americans, he has in mind the point I am about to mention. Whether we like it or not, we have had immigration into this country. We have had immigration of Danes, we have had immigration of Germans, and we have had immigration of peoples of other races throughout the world.

Mr. REYNOLDS. And many, many are fine, honorable people.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Yes. Many of them have fought for and even made the supreme sacrifice for our country. I was just wondering whether in a matter such as the Senator from South Carolina has in mind he has taken into consideration that we have in America many persons from foreign lands who are actually first-class Americans, but who, perhaps, have not become citizens. I will state what I am trying to impress upon the Senator from North Carolina. For instance, in my section of the country we do not have the Swedes, we do not have the Irish, we do not have the English, but we have a population which came to New Mexico years before the English population came to this country, and who are now considered in that area as being aliens to this country. What does the Senator think about them?

Mr. REYNOLDS. As a matter of fact, they are as much Americans as are you or I. An alien is an individual who comes from a foreign land to our land and who has never made application for American citizenship. I want to say to the Senator from New Mexico, so that I may not be misunderstood, that I know personally in this country people who have come from Germany, from Austria, from England, from France, from Spain, from Mexico, and from many of the other countries of the earth who have become good American citizens, both men and women, and such people, men and women, who have come from foreign countries to this country are just as fine men and women as I have ever met in all my life in any part of the United States.

When I speak of aliens I speak of foreigners who come from foreign countries to the United States, who are now here, who have never made application for American citizenship, and who never intend to make application for American citizenship. In addressing this body I desire it to be well understood that I cast no reflection upon the fine people from foreign shores who are now here and who have signified their respective intentions to become American citizens. When they do become American citizens we shall welcome them into our fold as we welcome constituents from any State in the entire Union.

Some of the finest people in the world have come from abroad. Our ancestors came from foreign shores. Those fine people aided materially in the development of the country.

We have now reached the point of saturation. We have reached the point where we must look after our own. For the information of the able Senator from New Mexico, I may add that I have received hundreds of letters from and I have talked to scores of foreigners who have taken out American citizenship papers. Those who have already become naturalized are 100 percent in accord with my ideas about closing the gates at this time, because they know that the more who come in, the more competition there will be for us.

Mr. President, I was on the subject of refugees. In connection therewith I ask that there be printed in the RECORD as a part of my remarks an article from the New York Herald Tribune, issue of Sunday, February 19, 1939, entitled "The Future of Refugees," with a subtitle reading as follows:

A CORRESPONDENT SAYS IN DUE TIME THEY WILL COMPETE IN STRUGGLE FOR JOBS

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Herald Tribune of February 19, 1939]

THE FUTURE OF REFUGEES—A CORRESPONDENT SAYS IN DUE TIME THEY WILL COMPETE IN STRUGGLE FOR JOBS

To the NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE:

I have read with great interest your editorial anent the child refugees, and though I am in full agreement that their lot is an unfortunate one, I nevertheless cannot help but comment on a few corollaries that would follow the admission of 20,000 foreign children into this country.

These children would not compete in American labor markets—not now. But in 5 years they will create quite a problem for the American-born child, who will then find himself competing for his heritage. The bill introduced by Senator WAGNER would simply allow these refugee children to be brought in by those already willing to receive and support them. Who are these people? Are they unaware of the fact that there are thousands of children in our own United States who are in need of succor—or aren't these philanthropic-minded persons interested in the needs of American children?

It seems to me that people grow hysterical about the unfortunates of other countries and at the same time are cold and aloof to the needy of their own land. Perhaps this is due to the fact that far greater publicity is given to the unlucky somewhere else. It puffs up the national ego to point out how badly those of other nations are faring, and we feel very magnanimous when we give assistance: our philanthropies have flowered from the flooded wastes of China to the battle-scarred fields of Spain, but we have been so busy taking care of these flowers that the few seed sown in our own backyard have dried and withered.

There still are millions of unemployed in the United States, and thousands of children of the unemployed—children who have quite as much need of help as do the children who are not wanted in Germany. While we must sympathize with these poor youngsters, we must not lose sight of the fact that our first thought should be to our own, that charity begins at home.

There are many, many orphans in our own country, children who have not even the memory of their parents. And the ragged children in the slums of our large cities and in the shacks and hovels of our more rural sections.

Every liner arriving from Germany disembarks refugees on our shores. By various interpretations of the laws, by this means and that, thousands of these people in excess of the quota have been allowed to enter our country. Of course, every one of them has a job awaiting him and so does not become a burden to us, but the man whose job he has taken finds himself on relief. I cannot believe that the jobs were especially created for the incoming refugees; if that is true, why weren't the jobs created years ago for the unemployed American citizens?

You cannot get around it; either the jobs these refugees are getting means an unemployed American for every employed refugee or else it means that jobs can be created for refugees but not for our native sons.

GEORGE ACKER.

LITTLE FERRY, N. J., February 14, 1939.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, another clipping which I ask to have printed as a part of my remarks is a clipping from the New York Post of Wednesday, March 8, 1939, entitled "Refugees on Soil Take in Kinsmen."

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LUNDEEN in the chair). Is there objection?

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Post of March 8, 1939]

REFUGEES ON SOIL TAKE IN KINSMEN—THIRTY-NINE JEWISH FAMILIES ARE HARBORING MORE THAN TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY PERSONS

Progress was reported today by the Jewish Agricultural Society, Inc., 301 East Fourteenth Street, in helping Jews to settle on the soil. Particular attention has been paid in the last year to refugees.

"To help meet the ever-growing pressure of the refugee problem, the society has liberalized its lending policy so as to reach the refugee with small capital, Dr. Gabriel Davidson, general manager, said today:

"It has been found that as soon as a refugee farmer becomes established, he brings to his farm refugee relatives and friends. Thus the farms of thirty-nine families so far settled by the society became havens for more than 250 refugee individuals.

Since its founding the society has granted 12,648 loans aggregating $7,663,000 to Jewish farmers in 40 States, Dr. Davidson said.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I have before me a clipping which was sent to me, evidently from a national weekly magazine, entitled "Social Justice." The column is entitled "Running Refugees," with a subhead "Barge Meets Ship," and another subhead "Jobs For Refugees." I ask to have the article embodied in the RECORD as a part of my observations.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

RUNNING REFUGEES

"An international alien smuggling ring, geared to bring more than 10,000 aliens a year into the United States via the Canadian border, and widely patronized by Jewish refugees, was disclosed through the arraignment of its Canadian director in Brooklyn Federal court." So reads a story in the Washington Herald of January 19. It continues:

"Arrested at Rouses Point, N. Y., Friday night and held incommunicado since then at Ellis Island, Spyros Cyrcos, 38, of Montreal, boasted to Assistant United States Attorney James G. Scileppi that he had conducted at least 25,000 aliens across the border within the last 2 years."

BARGE MEETS SHIP

How about the New York barges that slide out to clandestine meetings with ships anchored off the 12-mile limit to bring in overall-clad refugees with "W. P. A. shovels" in hand? These craft, so one report runs, steam past the Statute of Liberty and Ellis Island, thumbing their noses at such hampering regulations as passports and immigration quotas. We repeat, it is a report. Social Justice puts it down as a wild one. It runs counter to the vigilance of our Immigration Service, the harbor police, and the reputed zeal of officials to keep New York an American city.

What makes it still more incredible, it would be so unnecessary. Refugees are pouring into this country by the thousands on every ship. They enter as visitors under a 6 months' permit. Somebody is going to have an insurmountable task, however, notifying all these guest refugees that their 6 months are up.

JOBS FOR REFUGEES

"How many refugees will you take?" is a routine question asked of Jewish businessmen, not only in seaboard cities but throughout the Middle West as well. In some cases the employers have been told how many Christians should be discharged. Few of them ever resist the committee's suggestions.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I have before me a newspaper clipping in the form of a letter addressed to the editor of the New York Times by Mr. Robert G. Booth, of East Orange, N. J., entitled "Admitting Child Refugees—Wagner Resolution Is Held Likely to Produce Future Problems." I ask that it be printed in the RECORD as a part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

ADMITTING CHILD REFUGEES—WAGNER RESOLUTION IS HELD LIKELY TO PRODUCE FUTURE PROBLEMS

To the EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK TIMES:

In your editorial, Children in the Dark, on Senator WAGNER's proposal to admit 10,000 German-born refugee children to the United States in excess of the quota limit, there are few points which seem to have been overlooked.

You say, "All would be under 14 and so would not compete for employment." What of the future? Perhaps in the next decade, when these children will be of employable ages, we can readily absorb them into our productive enterprises, but perhaps they will deprive thousands of our native-born young people of jobs. Perhaps thousands of them will become burdens on the State, because the law requiring that "their support be guaranteed by responsible individuals or organizations" cannot be construed to mean providing support indefinitely.

These 10,000 are in addition to the regular quota from Germany coming into a land burdened with about 10,000,000 unemployed. It is true that the generosity that pinches is deeper than a thoughtless charity, but our own needs and consideration of the coming years should enter into a decision.

These thousands will place a burden on many of our community educational systems that are none too flush with funds at the present time, which ultimately places a burden on the public, already tax laden.

You say that "they would grow up to be good citizens." This is highly probable, but there are many in this group who will bear a bitter animosity to the regime which deprived them of home or parents, a group which might be too ready to snatch up a cry for foreign aggression when that cry could be prevented by widespread emotional balance.

The purpose of this letter is neither to condemn nor condone the purpose of the Wagner resolution, but is merely to point out that the issues must be faced more squarely than the approach through sentiment alone.

ROBERT G. BOOTH.

EAST ORANGE, N. J.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I have before me an editorial from the New York Post, issue of February 14, 1939, entitled "Reply to Hoover: These, Too, Are Refugees," dealing with the W. P. A. and with the 11,000,000 or so unemployed in the United States today. I ask to have the editorial printed in the RECORD as a part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Post of February 14, 1939]

REPLY TO HOOVER: THESE, TOO, ARE REFUGEES

Do you remember a poster showing a large-eyed child with sunken cheeks and rachitic legs, and an appeal "Help the Armenian Refugees"?

It impressed thousands among the most generous people on earth. We gave—gladly—to the Armenians and many other victims of the economic and political dislocations of the war.

Men were found who moved heaven and earth to accomplish seeming miracles of food distribution. All over middle and eastern Europe and Asia Minor there were American hospitals, American soup kitchens, American clothing depots.

No decent man carped or criticized. Postwar relief is one of the most glorious chapters in American history.

Now we have refugees of our own, men, women, and children driven out of our economic system. Dispossessed sharecroppers sit along a Missouri highway. Jobless factory workers exist week after a week on a dole that barely sustains them.

But many of those who gave freely to the American relief agencies in Europe lead today a chorus of criticism directed against the efforts to aid our own refugees.

They resent the 3,000,000 on W. P. A. They resent the 7,000,000 or more on various forms of direct State and local relief.

Why are they less deserving of our help than the Syrians, the Russians, the Germans we helped after the war?

At its peak the American Relief Administration under Herbert Hoover was feeding 10,491,000 Russians, 1,315,000 Poles, 1,000,000 Germans (through the Friends' Service Committee), 548,000 Czechs and Slovaks, 128,000 Finns, 150,000 Rumanians, 84,000 Estonians, 110,000 Hungarians, and 200,000 Jugoslavs.

The total fed by the A. R. A. at its peak was nearly 15,000,000.

The A. R. A. disbursed a total of $1,600,000,000. This does not include nearly $100,000,000 that we spent for Near East relief.

At its present rate the W. P. A. takes nearly a year to spend as much.

And what we spend for W. P. A. stays in our economic system, keeps circulating through our channels of trade from which our taxes come.

What change has come over us—over Hoover, who last night denounced W. P. A.? Have our hearts become hard? Or is it that suffering can only be appreciated when seen by a telescope?

It is not generally realized that Government aid of various kinds was mounting very rapidly in the United States before the depression began in 1929—and mounting without any complaints.

In 1911, for instance, governmental expenditures for outdoor relief amounted to 4 cents per inhabitant a year in New York and 23 cents in Detroit. By 1919 it had risen to 45 cents in New York and 47 in Detroit.

Then came the Coolidge prosperity era. But the per capita governmental expenditure for relief continued to rise. By 1928 it reached $1.18 in New York, 29 cents in Philadelphia, and $2.08 in Detroit. By 1931 the figures hit $3.12 for New York, $1.76 for Philadelphia, and $9.17 for Detroit.

Though the rise has been sharper since, it was steep even before the depression.

In addition to the huge sums that were spent, without a grumble, for relief both foreign and domestic in the 1920's, the American people kicked in billion after billion in foreign loans. This money was used for bridges, for schools, for housing projects, for business enterprises abroad. Of it, $8,000,000,000 is now estimated to be in default.

Nor does this count the $11,000,000,000 of defaulted war debts.

We don't begrudge it.

But why can't we show a like spirit toward our own people? They, too, are refugees. If we don't help them, who can or will?

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, of course, we are all extremely sorry for the refugee children from foreign lands, 20,000 of whom my beloved colleague the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] is trying to bring in from Germany at the rate of 10,000 a year for a period of 2 years. It is true, Mr. President, that according to the requirements of his resolution the children must now be under the age of 14 years. However, I call attention to the fact that 5 years from now 20,000 children who are now under the age of 14 will be 19 years old, and those 20,000 boys and girls will be competing with the sons and daughters of American fathers and mothers.

Again I say that I prefer first to take care of the boys and girls of America and provide them with jobs, before admitting those from foreign shores to compete for American jobs. Many of us are in sympathy with the refugees. I commend the fine work that many of our societies in America are doing to raise money for the poor refugees.

In that connection, I have before me a clipping from the New York Times, entitled "Union Plans 'Refugee Day'—Thirty-five Thousand in Garment Trade to Give Tomorrow's Pay to Fund." The article reads as follows:

UNION PLANS "REFUGEE DAY"—THIRTY-FIVE THOUSAND IN GARMENT TRADE TO GIVE TOMORROW'S PAY TO FUND

More than 35,000 cloak and suit workers, members of the New York Cloakmakers' Union, an affiliate of the International Ladies' Garment Workers, will devote the full earnings of their work tomorrow to the fund being raised by the union for refugee relief. Earnings for the day are expected to net $250,000.

Although the union does not permit work on Saturdays, arrangements for tomorrow's "refugee day" were made by agreement with the manufacturers. All members of the union, regardless of nationality, will participate.

I commend the fine work being done by the union, because it is being done for poor children who are desirous of coming to the shores of America.

Mr. President, in conclusion I desire to bring to the attention of this body a clipping which I received sometime ago. The printing looks like that of the Washington Times-Herald. The article is entitled:

Girl offers eye to help family.

What a pathetic thing!

Declares she's sincere in asking for $1,500.

The article is illustrated by the most pathetic sort of photograph. Here is a poor, unfortunate girl with four little tots, her little brothers and sisters. She loves them, and she is so deeply interested in providing nourishment for those four little tots that she actually offers to sell her eye to anybody for $1,500 in order to obtain enough money to keep her little brothers and sisters from starving. Under that pathetic photograph the article says:

Four reasons why Carmelina D'Avanzo * * * offers to sell an eye. They are her brothers and sisters * * * Christopher, 4; Marie and Eugene, 16 months; and Vincent, 3.

Mr. President, why do we not help that poor girl and those four little tots before we talk about helping those in other parts of the world who would be brought here by my distinguished colleague from the State of New York [Mr. WAGNER]?

I ask that the article referred to be printed in the RECORD as a part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Times-Herald]

GIRL OFFERS EYE TO HELP FAMILY—DECLARES SHE'S SINCERE IN ASKING FOR $1,500

(By Carol Frink)

Carmelina D'Avanzo, 18-year-old Eastern High School girl, is offering one of her eyes for sale.

She appealed yesterday to the Times-Herald to help her find somebody who would pay $1,500 for a perfect eye.

"This is no crank, but a sincere and desperate person," she wrote. "I am unemployed and I have five younger brothers and sisters. My father is unemployed, too, and there is no food or clothing. That is why I'm doing this. Please help me."

WILLING TO WORK

At the D'Avanzo address in the 300 block of Ninth Street SE., Carmelina answered the door. The first thing you noticed about her were her very large, expressive brown eyes. Madonna eyes, a painter would call them.

"And they are very good eyes," she pointed out, naively. "They were examined in school, and the doctor said they were perfect."

That Carmelina is desperately sincere in her amazing offer is beyond question. She states her case so simply.

"I thought of every other way first," she said. "I have tried and tried to get work. I've clerked in stores and I can type. I'm willing to do any kind of work, but it seems there just isn't any.

"It hurts me to think of losing one of my eyes, but it hurts me more to see the babies cold, hungry, and sick. So you see I really mean to go through with this, and only hope I can find a buyer."

FOUR TODDLERS

The D'Avanzos live in a five-room house with only one small coal stove in the center downstairs room. The plaster is crumbling from the damp walls. They pay $25 a month for these wretched quarters—when they have it to pay.

Four of the children are toddlers, and all of them have chickenpox. These are Christopher, 4, Vincent, 3, and Eugene and Marie, 16-month-old twins. An older brother, Norman, goes to school.

The family has been living on $3 a week, contributed by their church. The church has also sent them small amounts of coal from time to time.

NEEDS CLOTHING

Carmelina, who had 2 years at high school before she left at 15 to find work, has been handicapped in her search for employment by the lack of clothes. She has no stockings and her shoes are shabby, her only coat is a short lightweight jacket.

"I'm not thinking of myself," she said, her eyes filling with tears. "You come to the point where you can't be embarrassed about anything any more. I'm only thinking of those poor little kids; I can't sit here and see them suffer any more."

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I shall close by reading a letter which I have before me. I wish to read the letter myself. The letter is from 33 Oakland Avenue, Lynbrook, Long Island. It is written to Mr. John B. Trevor, president of the American Coalition, an organization of patriotic societies. The American Coalition embraces 125 patriotic societies in America, the names of which are to be found on the back of the letterhead which I have before me. These societies are 100 percent American patriotic societies which are endeavoring to protect the foundations of our country from destruction by alien groups and foreign "isms." I ask that the list of those societies be printed in the RECORD as a part of my remarks. The societies are sponsoring all five of my immigration bills.

There being no objection, the list was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SOCIETIES COOPERATING WITH THE AMERICAN COALITION

Aeronautical Association of America, Inc.
Allied Patriotic Societies, Inc.
American Coalition of New York.
American Defence Council.
American Vigilant Intelligence Federation.
American War Mothers.
American Women Against Communism.
American Women's League.
American Women's Legion of the World War.
Associated Chapters, Order of DeMolay of Pennsylvania.
Associated Farmers of California, Inc.
Auxiliary, Sons of Union Veterans of Civil War.
Better America Federation of California.
California Society, Order of the Founders and Patriots of America.
Colonial Order of the Acorn, New York Chapter.
Congress of States Societies.
Dames of the Loyal Legion of the United States.
Daughters of America, National Council.
Daughters of America, District of Columbia Council.
Daughters of the Defenders of the Republic.
Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War, 1861–65.
Defenders of the Constitution of the United States.
Descendants of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence.
Disabled American Veterans of the World War.
District of Columbia Commandery, Naval and Military Order of the Spanish-American War.
District of Columbia Society, Order Founders and Patriots of America.
First Motor Corps Unit, No. 12, Massachusetts State Guard Veterans.
General Court, Order of the Founders and Patriots of America.
General Pershing Chapter, American War Mothers.
General Society of Mayflower Descendants.
General Society of the War of 1812.
Immigration Study Commission.
Junior American Vigilant Intelligence Federation.
Junior Order United American Mechanics, New Jersey.
Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic.
Larchmont Colony, National Society of New England Women.
Louisiana Coalition of Patriotic Societies.
Massachusetts Society, Order of the Founders and Patriots of America.
Massachusetts Women's Constitutional League.
Metropolitan New York Jurisdiction, Order of DeMolay.
Military Order of Foreign Wars of the United States, National Commandery.
Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, Commandery in Chief.
Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, Commandery of the District of Columbia.
Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, Commandery of the State of New York.
Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, Commandery of the State of Pennsylvania.
Military Order of the World War.
Minute Men of America, Inc.
National Auxiliary, United Spanish War Veterans.
National Camp, Patriotic Order Sons of America.
National Commandery, Naval and Military Order of the Spanish-American War.
National Constitution Day Committee.
National Corps, Army and Navy Union of the United States of America.
National Council, Sons and Daughters of Liberty.
National Patriotic Association.
National Patriotic League.
National Security League, Inc.
National Society, Daughters of the Revolution.
National Society, Daughters of the Union, 1861–65.
National Society of New England Women.
National Society 1917 World War Registrars, Inc.
National Society, Service Star Legion.
National Society, Sons and Daughters of the Pilgrims.
National Society, Sons of the American Revolution.
National Society, United States Daughters of 1812.
National Society, Women Descendants of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company.
National Woman's Relief Corps.
New England Protestant Action League.
New Jersey Society, Order of the Founders and Patriots of America.
New Jersey State Society, Daughters of the Revolution.
New York City Colony, National Society of New England Women.
New York Society, Order of the Founders and Patriots of America.
Old Glory Association.
Old Glory Club of Flatbush, Inc., Beacon No. 1.
Order of Colonial Lords of Manors in America.
Order of Independent Americans, Inc., State Council of Pennsylvania.
Order of Three Crusades, 1096–1192, Inc.
Pennsylvania Society, Order of the Founders and Patriots of America.
Philadelphia Protestant Federation.
Protestant Women's National Civic Federation.
Reserve Officers' Training Corps Association of the United States.
Rhode Island Association of Patriots.
Rhode Island Daughters of the American Colonists.
Rhode Island Society, Order of the Founders and Patriots of America.
Rochester District, American Coalition.
Schenectady Committee of 100.
Society for Constitutional Security.
Society of Colonial Wars in the District of Columbia.
Society of Colonial Wars in the State of New York.
Society of New York State Women.
Society of the Daughters of the United States Army.
Society of the Sons of the Revolution in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.
Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War.
Southern Vigilant Intelligence Association, Inc.
State Council (D. C.) Sons and Daughters of Liberty.
Tax Evils Committee of Council Bluffs, Iowa.
The Advisory Committee on Cooperation in Patriotic Work.
The American Coalition of Washington.
The American Indian Federation.
The Christian American Crusade.
The Federation of Huguenot Societies in America.
The Paul Reveres.
The Wheel of Progress.
Union to Preserve American Ideals and Institutions.

United Daughters of the Confederacy, New York Chapter.
United States Aviation Cadets, Inc.
United States Naval Reserve Officers Association.
Veterans of Foreign Wars of United States, Department of Delaware.
Veterans of Foreign Wars of United States, Morley S. Oates Auxiliary, No. 701.
Westchester Security League.
Wisconsin Chapter, Daughters of Founder and Patriots.
Woman Patriot Corporation.
Woman's Pioneer Aircraft Association of Chicago, Inc.
Women's National Defense Committee of Philadelphia.
Women of Army and Navy Legion of Valor, United States of America.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I shall conclude, Mr. President, by reading the letter directed to Mr. Trevor:

MY DEAR MR. TREVOR: I beg there will be a negative vote in regard to bringing any more foreign people at this time to America. This country is now in dire distress. Our Americans on pension relief which the Government is not able to pay. Many of our founders' descendants have lost their business and their homes. I speak from my own experience. My husband's business gone. Our home to be sold by H. O. L. C. We on a pension just barely keeping alive. My husband's father once representative of Worcester. My people first to swear in United States deputies. I, a worker all my 82 years of life for America, worker for all wars and politics in every sort of public work in my time. Now humiliated to accept charity or starve from no fault of our own.

Here is a letter from an old lady 82 years old, in Long Island, N. Y. We talk about letting more people come into this country. I wonder if we have all gone crazy. She says:

I think it will be a terrible thing to bring more poverty to this country when we have so many suffering now. Old folks not wanted, young ones jobless; suicides every day from despair. Anyone who votes for more of this must be insane.

The old lady is right.

I shall use my influence against those who vote for more poverty.

I presume she means by that, bringing more of the unfortunate and poverty stricken into this country.

The letter is signed "Mary Randolph Peckham," and is dated March 7, 1938.

Mr. President, I desire to bring to the attention of the Senate the fact that I asked unanimous consent to have published in the RECORD a facsimile of a photograph printed in a newspaper, and there was no objection; and therefore I am entitled to have the photograph published in the RECORD. It is a cut, a reproduction of a photograph in a newspaper. I asked unanimous consent, and there was no objection; and I say that I am entitled to have the photograph published in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair calls the attention of the Senator from North Carolina to rule 11 of the rules governing the publication of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I should like to have the Chair read the rule.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The rule reads, in part:

Illustrations shall not be inserted in the RECORD without the approval of the Joint Committee on Printing.

Mr. REYNOLDS. But, Mr. President, I make the point of order that when I requested of this body, a legislative body, unanimous consent to have the illustration published in the RECORD, regardless of any rule, it does not apply in this instance, because of my having secured unanimous consent. I am asking that the consensus of this body be adhered to. I am asking that the mandate of this body be carried out.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair holds that there is a law governing the matter and that a unanimous-consent agreement cannot change it.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I should like to see the law, Mr. President. I make the point that this is a lawmaking body—a legislative institution—that this afternoon this body gave unanimous consent, and by so doing gave unanimous instructions to the Public Printer to print a facsimile of that cut in the columns of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD; and that there is nothing in the world for the Public Printer to do but to print it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is very sympathetic with the Senator from North Carolina, but it takes two Houses of Congress to enact a law.

Mr. REYNOLDS. The action to which I refer is not in the form of a law, Mr. President. It is a mandate of this body.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Indiana will state his point of order.

Mr. MINTON. I maintain that what was requested by the Senator from North Carolina was against the rules of the Senate.

Mr. REYNOLDS. But we overrode the rules of the Senate.

Mr. MINTON. The Chair has ruled on the matter; and that is the law of the Senate in this case, at least.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point of order of the Senator from North Carolina is overruled.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, if the Chair will hear me for a minute, I said a moment ago——

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state the parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. MINTON. Has not the Chair ruled upon the point of order made by the Senator from North Carolina?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair has, as the Chair understands it.

Mr. MINTON. I insist upon the Chair's ruling.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The rule which the Chair has read in part was adopted in pursuance of a law passed by both Houses. The Senate cannot change that law. The Chair is sympathetic with the Senator from North Carolina, and in the past has found himself in the same position; but the Senate cannot change the law.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I am not asking that the law be changed. It will not be denied that there have been times when there were published in the columns of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD facsimiles of photographs made by way of cuts. The only way in which they have ever been inserted in the RECORD was by unanimous consent.

I had before me a moment ago a picture of the Vice President of the United States with Mr. J. Edgar Hoover, at which time the Vice President of the United States was being fingerprinted. I wanted his picture in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD to show that he had no objection to being fingerprinted. I wanted the benefit of his influence. I asked unanimous consent that the photograph be published in the RECORD, and no Senator objected. When there was not an objection, it became mandatory on the part of the Public Printer to carry out the instructions of the Senate, when by agreeing unanimously they instructed him to print the photograph.

I say, Mr. President, I am entitled to have the picture of the Vice President published in the RECORD, because the Senate has ordered the Public Printer to publish it, regardless of any rule.

In arguing the point of order, Mr. President, I ask, how was it possible heretofore to publish photographs in the RECORD? They were not published as the result of changing laws. It was done only by getting unanimous consent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will suspend a moment to enable the Chair to call attention to the fact that illustrations can be printed in the RECORD only by the approval of the Joint Committee on Printing. That is the provision of the rule of that committee, which was adopted under the authority of the following law:

TITLE 44. SECTION 181. CONGRESSIONAL RECORD; arrangement, style, contents, and indexes: The Joint Committee on Printing shall have control of the arrangement and style of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, and while providing that it shall be substantially a verbatim report of proceedings shall take all needed action for the reduction of unnecessary bulk, and shall provide for the publication of an index of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD semimonthly during the sessions of Congress and at the close thereof.

That is the law. The Senator argues very persuasively, but he cannot change the law by a request for unanimous consent on the floor of the Senate.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President——

Mr. MINTON. I make the point of order that the Senator from North Carolina is out of order, as the Chair has already ruled upon the matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks the point of order is well taken.

HARRY E. KALODNER — MOTION FOR RECONSIDERATION OF CONFIRMATION

Mr. KING. Mr. President, as in executive session, I enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate confirmed the nomination of Harry E. Kalodner to be district judge for the eastern district of Pennsylvania.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, as in executive session, the motion will be entered.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, I did not catch what the transaction of business was.

Mr. KING. Yesterday I was advised that the Committee on the Judiciary had reported the nomination of Mr. Kalodner to be district judge for the eastern district of Pennsylvania. I conferred with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HUGHES], who is the chairman of the subcommittee, and told him I had received a large number of letters in opposition to the nomination and asked him if the clerk of the committee had such letters, and the Senator stated that he had. I stated to the Senator from Delaware that I desired to read those letters before the nomination was considered.

Mr. MINTON. There will be no executive session today.

Mr. KING. I have merely entered a motion, as in executive session, to reconsider the vote by which the nomination was confirmed.

Mr. MINTON. By which it was confirmed yesterday?

Mr. KING. Yesterday I told the majority leader that I desired to enter the motion.

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY

Mr. MINTON. Under the order heretofore made, I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 5 minutes p. m.), under the order previously entered, the Senate adjourned until Monday, April 3, 1939, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

FRIDAY, MARCH 31, 1939

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Lamb of God, in the hush of these moments, we praise Thee for the message of human redemption. In it there is so much of hope and confidence that the future is to grow brighter and better. We thank Thee for the blessedness of those truths which Thou hast made universal. They teach us to reckon lightly the things of time, the delights of the flesh, and the treasures of earth. Give peace to hearts that are disturbed and release to those who are tempted. O Lord of the vineyard, whose every breath is healing and recovery, bathe every sense of our being with purity and tenderness; O make us the temples of Thy spirit and the vessels of Thy grace. Cause the blighted and the wasted places of our spiritual garden to blossom as the rose and bear fruits immortal. Through Christ our Redeemer. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. PACE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and include a letter from the Department of Agriculture.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

By unanimous consent, permission to revise and extend their own remarks was granted to Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri, Mr. MACIEJEWSKI, and Mr. MERRITT.

Mr. HENDRICKS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks, and include a brief speech by Hon. VINCENT F. HARRINGTON, Member of Congress.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

COST OF PRINTING BILLS

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I want to call attention to the fact that there have been 13 bills, each containing 183 pages, placed in the hopper to take the profits out of war. Those 13 bills are identical. I will give the numbers of the bills so that you will know what they are: H. R. 5176, H. R. 5177, H. R. 5183, H. R. 5184, H. R. 5230, H. R. 5233, H. R. 5234, H. R. 5274, H. R. 5290, H. R. 5316, H. R. 5317, H. R. 5360, and S. 1885.

I will not mention the names of the authors, but it seems to me that when 13 bills of 183 pages are placed in the hopper it is not the right thing for us to do. Certainly 13 people could not think of writing the same identical bill.

I also call attention to House Joint Resolution 229, designating August 19 of each year as National Aviation Day. There are 12 resolutions exactly alike for that particular purpose. They are as follows: House Joint Resolution 229, House Joint Resolution 230, House Joint Resolution 231, House Joint Resolution 232, House Joint Resolution 233, House Joint Resolution 234, House Joint Resolution 235, House Joint Resolution 236, House Joint Resolution 237, House Joint Resolution 238, House Joint Resolution 239, and House Joint Resolution 240.

Now, it seems to me if we want to save and economize in our Government printing, we should not put bills in the hopper just because we think it is a good idea in an effort to call the attention of the public to those bills. We should do what we can to cut down these expenses. The people of the country do not know that they are one and the same bill, and if a person interested in the subject of the proposed bill does not know that the bills are identical, he may write for the bills and get a copy of each, or 13 bills of 183 pages, and find out that they all read alike. A waste of paper, a waste of printing, and a waste of the taxpayers' money. Let us refrain from this practice; it is just good common sense and nothing else.

[Here the gavel fell.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SECCOMBE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and include an address by Hon. Felix Hinkle.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

COST OF PRINTING BILLS

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute in order to ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH] a question.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, I think this matter which the gentleman from Pennsylvania has called attention to is entirely correct, and the gentleman is entirely justified in his criticism, but we have a foolish rule in the House which does not permit more than one Member to introduce a bill. The Senate has a rule by which any number of men can go together and introduce the same bill. If we would change that rule in the House, a number of men could go together who wanted to introduce the same bill, and that would solve the question properly.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KELLER. I yield, certainly.

Mr. RICH. Of the 13 bills there is only one Senate bill, but there are 12 House bills.

Mr. KELLER. In the Senate they often join together in introducing bills as I have already pointed out, and as they have in this case. We cannot do that in the House. The gentleman and I could not introduce a bill here together in our two names, but that can be done in the Senate.

Mr. RICH. If that is the reason why 12 identical bills are introduced in the House, at the enormous expense of printing 183 pages each, for instance, I say it is not right.

Mr. KELLER. Why not change that rule?

Mr. RICH. I think it would be a wise thing to do.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KELLER. I yield.

Mr. MICHENER. What does it cost to print one of these bills?

Mr. RICH. I do not have the figure from the Public Printer.

Mr. MICHENER. Will the gentleman get that and place it in the RECORD, to show what these 13 identical bills would cost?

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KELLER. I yield.

Mr. RANKIN. All they will cost is the paper on which they are printed. You already have the type and the help.

Mr. MICHENER. It costs several hundred dollars for each bill, I understand.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. RICH. I herewith give the printing cost of the bills to take the profit out of war, as follows:

Mar. 21, 1939:
S. 1885	$811.78
H. R. 5176	165.78
H. R. 5177	165.78
H. R. 5183	165.78
H. R. 5184	165.78
	1,474.90
Mar. 22, 1939:
H. R. 5230	276.18
H. R. 5233	165.78
H. R. 5234	165.78
	607.74
Mar. 23, 1939:
H. R. 5274	276.18
H. R. 5290	165.78
	441.96
Mar. 24, 1939:
H. R. 5316	276.18
H. R. 5317	165.78
	441.96
Mar. 25, 1939:
H. R. 5360	276.18
	3,242.74

When these bills first came to the Government Printing Office it was found that they were identical, so they were printed as one continuous run on the press, changing only the first and last pages on four bills.

The type was retained, and on each subsequent appearance of the bill the same procedure was followed, whereby a large saving was effected.

If the copy editors at the Government Printing Office had not been alert each bill would have cost $811.78, or $10,553.14.

The cost of the resolutions was as follows:

Mar. 25, 1939:
H. J. Res. 229	$9.04
H. J. Res. 230	9.04
H. J. Res. 231	9.04
H. J. Res. 232	9.04
H. J. Res. 233	9.04
H. J. Res. 234	9.04
H. J. Res. 235	9.04
H. J. Res. 236	9.04
H. J. Res. 237	9.04
H. J. Res. 238	9.04
Total	90.40
Mar. 27, 1939:
H. J. Res. 239	9.04
H. J. Res. 240	9.04
Total	18.08
Grand total	108.48

On small bills and resolutions each is set and printed, as the pick-up is negligible.

TAX PROFITS OF LAST WAR

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANKIN. Let me say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH] that I have been urging this Congress for many years to tax the profits of the last war. If we had properly taxed the profits of the last war from the beginning, you would not be talking about a war today.

The people who are clamoring to get into another war now are the ones who got rich in the last war. Every time we report a bill to take care of the disabled veterans a clamor goes up against it, just as you will hear a clamor go up against the one I reported today from the Veterans' Committee to take care of the disabled veterans, their wives, orphans, and dependent parents, victims of the last war. These favored interests would like to have another war—these people who got rich out of the last war. I am not interested in taking the profits out of the next war so much as I am in taking the profits out of the last war. That will do more to prevent war than anything else we can do. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and include an editorial from the Shelbyville Republican of March 30, 1939, on the W. P. A.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

EXPLANATION

Mr. PIERCE of Oregon. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. PIERCE of Oregon. Mr. Speaker, on last Tuesday, March 28, when the House had under consideration the agricultural appropriation bill I attended the session, answering roll call 43 "Present." During the afternoon I made a speech in favor of the appropriation of $250,000,000 for partial parity payments on basic agricultural commodities. About 6:30 I left the floor because I was indisposed with a cold, having recently recovered from an attack of the grippe. Before I left I consulted Members sitting near me and found it to be the general opinion that no final vote would be taken that day and no roll called. I very much regret having missed roll call 44. Had I been present, I would have voted "yea" in favor of the $250,000,000. I consider that amount an essential appropriation even under an economy program and I hope we will have an oportunity to make this appropriation.

[Here the gavel fell.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. PACE. I ask unanimous consent that in connection with the remarks I shall make later in the day on the pending bill I may be permitted to include certain tables relating to the administration of relief.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. PACE]?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOFMAN asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATION FOR WORK RELIEF

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of House Joint Resolution 246.

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The SPEAKER. Obviously there is not a quorum present.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 46]

Alexander	Celler	Green	Sacks
Andresen, August	Connery	Hennings	Sasscer
Andrews	Creal	McMillan, John L.	Schwert
Beam	Crowther	McReynolds	Seger
Blackney	Curley	Mansfield	Smith, Ill.
Bolton	Evans	Osmers	Sweeney
Brewster	Ford, Leland M.	O'Toole	Thomas, N. J.
Buckley, N. Y.	Gathings	Owen	Vinson, Ga.
Byron	Goldsborough	Powers

The SPEAKER. Three hundred and ninety-four Members have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

On motion of Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Monday next, after the disposition of matters on the Speaker's table and at the conclusion of other special orders heretofore entered, I may be permitted to address the House for 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. IGLESIAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD, and to include an address delivered by the Governor of Puerto Rico.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico?

There was no objection.

Mr. RABAUT asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Thursday, April 6, after the disposition of business on the Speaker's table, and at the conclusion of special orders heretofore entered, I may be permitted to address the House for 30 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KEEFE]?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. GEYER of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a letter from the President of the United States on the Spanish situation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House at this time for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. RANDOLPH]?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, Congress by its action has made it mandatory for the Works Progress Administration officials to dismiss those persons from the rolls who are not citizens of the United States. I trust the manufacturers will now put private industry behind a program to have the employers of America give labor to those workers who are American citizens and to separate from the rolls of business of this country those who are aliens. [Applause.]

I call attention of the Members of the House to such fine action a few days ago by William Anderson, president of John A. Roebling's Sons, in which he dismissed 100 aliens and plans to place American citizens in their jobs. [Applause.]

In the following letter I have called on the National Association of Manufacturers to lead a movement in America for employment of citizens:

MARCH 28, 1939.

Mr. HOWARD COONLEY,
President, National Association of Manufacturers,
14 West Forty-second Street, New York, N. Y.

MY DEAR MR. COONLEY: For several years I have been interested in the problems arising from the alien influence in the United States. Looking toward a partial approach to this problem, I have introduced a bill in the House of Representatives which contains the following language:

"A bill to provide for deportation of certain aliens who do not make declaration of intention to become citizens

"Be it enacted, etc., That any alien who does not make his declaration to become a citizen of the United States within 1 year after he becomes eligible to make such declaration, or within 1 year after the date of the enactment of this act, whichever is the later, shall be taken into custody and deported by the Secretary of Labor in accordance with provisions of law relating to other deportable aliens."

The foregoing is by way of introduction for a suggestion which I now make to you as president of the National Association of Manufacturers. I believe it would be of invaluable assistance if, through your organization, you could impress upon the manufacturers in America the vital necessity of employing only American citizens and separating from their jobs those individuals who are not citizens of this country.

Alien workers who now live in the United States and accept the privileges, the profits, and the protection of our democracy, but accept no responsibility of citizenship, should not hold jobs in American industry. They indicate no interest in the progress of America, and by the thousands they have taken jobs in business which rightfully belong to American workers. In speaking of "aliens," I designate those persons who have entered our country legally or illegally but who remain here and make no attempt to become citizens of the Nation to which they have come and who are not willing to uphold the foundations of our system. Secretary of Labor Perkins has estimated the number of these aliens to be about three and one-half millions. Other estimates place the number at more than 5,000,000.

Naturalized citizens are just as important and valuable to the country as native-born men and women. I congratulate these persons who appreciate the land to which they have come to live, and figures show that applications for naturalization are increasing. These men and women become splendid and law-abiding citizens and contribute to the betterment of the United States. These people are awakening to the fact that they must protect their good names and not allow aliens to besmirch their fine citizenship record.

I have been impressed with the affirmative action reported to have been taken by William A. Anderson, president of John A. Roebling's Sons Co., in dismissing 100 aliens working in a plant which I understand employs 3,500 workers in Trenton and Roebling, N. J. Mr. Anderson is quoted as having said:

"It has long been the policy of the Roebling Co. to employ American workers. Our percentage of citizen employees is very high, at least 80 percent being native-born or naturalized. In our employ check-up each year we have urged all aliens to apply for citizenship papers.

"Our present action follows a necessity for temporary reduction of the force, and it was decided that it was only fair to dismiss aliens of less than 10 years' service. All positions will be filled by Americans, we hope soon."

I have today sent the following wire:

"MARCH 28, 1939.

"Mr. WILLIAM A. ANDERSON,
"President, John A. Roebling's Sons Co.,
"Trenton, N. J.:

"I want to deeply and sincerely congratulate you upon the action you have taken as reported in the press of dismissing 100 aliens and employing in their place American citizens. This is indeed highly commendable, and I earnestly trust will serve as a forerunner for similar action to be taken by manufacturers throughout the United States. You have met the problem in a courageous way and have set a fine example for other employers to follow.

"JENNINGS RANDOLPH,
"Member of Congress."

I feel that the action taken by this firm is highly commendable and should be followed by similar action throughout the country. I am writing you at this time because I believe your association could wield a powerful influence in bringing this about. I understand that you have a membership of 7,300 manufacturers who employ several hundred thousand persons. In this group there are probably thousands of aliens who are denying American citizens the right to work. In addition to this, I am advised that your association sponsors the National Industrial Council, which includes 34 State associations with a membership of approximately 40,000 manufacturers. Needless to say, there must be many thousands of aliens employed in this group.

In the event you are interested in advancing the proposal I have made, I shall be pleased to discuss it with officials in your Washington office or with yourself, either here or in New York.

Faithfully yours,

JENNINGS RANDOLPH.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a letter written to Mr. Coonley.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. RANDOLPH]?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend the remarks I made a while ago.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN]?

There was no objection.

Mr. FULMER asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. D'ALESANDRO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein addresses by Governor O'Conor, of Maryland, and my colleague from Texas [Mr. DIES].

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. D'ALESANDRO]?

There was no objection.

ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATION FOR WORK RELIEF

The SPEAKER. There is pending the motion of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM] that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of House Joint Resolution 246.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of House Joint Resolution 246, with Mr. WARREN in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BRADLEY].

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, it is a very easy matter to pick out different points in a great program and attempt to discredit the entire program. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM], for whom I have a sincere and profound respect, is one of the most capable Members of this House. He knows how to assemble facts and data to give the greatest support to his contentions. However, I do not think his statement furnishes a complete summarization of the whole W. P. A. situation. All this reference to theater projects is out of all proportion to the part such projects play in the great work of the W. P. A. I would say the number of people who are employed on these particular projects is not more than one-half of 1 percent of the total number of persons employed under the Works Progress Administration.

I believe the record of the W. P. A. under the previous administrator, Mr. Hopkins, and under Colonel Harrington, presents a picture with regard to efficiency and honesty in administration that is not surpassed in the history of this country. There has been no Fall, no Denby, no Daugherty, no Forbes, or others of similar type who characterized previous administrations in this country. There has been no orgy of corruption. If there have been irregularities, they have been on the part of minor subordinates, and those responsible have been detected and prosecuted by the officials of the W. P. A. itself.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] makes a ridiculous statement regarding the fact that someone who has a job on the W. P. A. suggested that convicts should be formed into a union. The gentleman knows that statement was made in a facetious article written back in 1929 by an unimportant individual, back in the days when those who ran this Government with the benevolent blessing of the Republican Party had perpetrated their crimes of exploitation and swindling on the American people that caused the catastrophe which faces this country today. I would say to the gentleman that if there ever is a union of convicts in this country there will be so many men who formerly held high office in this Government under the Republican Party members of it, that it will look like a Cabinet meeting of some former Republican administration.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. If the gentleman will secure more time for me, I shall be pleased to yield; otherwise, I am sorry.

Mr. Chairman, you have heard a lot about people who do not want to work and people who supposedly refuse work. In my city, Philadelphia, we have practically no W. P. A. program. The only thing we have there are Federal projects and those which were sponsored by our State administration before the recent political change in Pennsylvania. Right now we have a situation where we have had slashing and curtailment of the W. P. A. rolls. This is the situation with which we are faced today. I have here an article from a Republican newspaper, dated March 15, and this is what it states:

SEVEN HUNDRED IN RUSH FOR FIVE JOBS—POLICE CALLED OUT—ONE MAN INJURED IN CROWD—BOYS ARE HIRED

A man was hurt and police were called to keep order this morning when several hundred men and boys sought five jobs at the Art Novelty Co., Inc., on the second floor of 140 North Tenth Street.

Miss Jane D. Godfrey, owner of the company, which manufactures lamps and lamp shades, solved the problem by hiring the first five in line, who had waited since 1 o'clock this morning.

The crowd started gathering some time after midnight. By 7 o'clock Miss Godfrey estimated about 700 applicants were outside the building.

James E. Semons, 40, of Springfield, Delaware County, the bookkeeper, tried to push his way through and was prevented by some of those in the crowd who thought he was another applicant.

Near collapse, he was taken to Hahnemann Hospital and treated for chest injuries. Four policemen were sent to the scene.

This is the answer to those who say people do not want jobs. If you, and I refer particularly to you Republicans from the big cities, want to have in your cities the conditions we have in Philadelphia—because we have already had curtailment and slashing of the W. P. A. rolls, due to the fact that our Republican city council refuses to accept Federal funds, claiming that if people are put to work they may perhaps be grateful to the Democratic administration—you will vote down the $150,000,000 proposition, but if you wish to give the people of this country what they are entitled to, you will send out word that this Congress will not abandon the unemployed people of the United States, and you will vote to increase the amount to the full $150,000,000. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. VAN ZANDT].

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Chairman, when the President presented this proposition for $150,000,000 in additional relief funds to Congress a little more than 2 weeks ago I, like the rest of the Members of this House, was confronted with a theory which seemed almost impossible of proof. That theory, I am happy to say, now has resolved from a doubt into a condition as concrete as any could be concerning always doubtful relief conditions.

At least I know whereof I speak when I say the vast majority of my constituents are opposed to granting the full $150,000,000 requested by Mr. Roosevelt at this time. This is no guesswork on my part. I have made as thorough and accurate a survey of the conditions and needs of my constituents for relief as it is humanly possible to do under the circumstances.

In spite of the conflicting and confusing claims made by the administration, the counterclaims made by the Appropriations Committee, and the charges made on this floor, concerning the entire relief situation, I feel unusually qualified to vote on this question without injustice to the unfortunate citizens of my district or any other district or to the taxpayers of the country.

I took some pains and a somewhat unusual method to prepare myself for the consideration of this so-called emergency measure. In a sincere effort to secure a cross section of opinion concerning actual needs for an additional appropriation for W. P. A. activities between now and June 30, I sent several hundred letters to citizens of my district. In that letter I described the confused situation which existed more than 2 weeks ago concerning this proposition and appealed to each of my constituents to whom I mailed it to make a survey of relief conditions and needs in their communities or neighborhoods and asked them to give me the benefit of their findings.

Those letters went to men and women, Republicans and Democrats alike; to businessmen, both large and small; to clergymen, professional men, school teachers, and college instructors; miners; railroaders; and W. P. A. workers themselves. It constituted a truly representative cross-section of the people in my own district. And I have obtained most gratifying results. Letters in reply continue to come in, and at the last count this morning substantially more than two-thirds of the answers state that nothing like $150,000,000 is required to avert hardship among those on relief and work relief.

After a thorough study of the evidence available, taking into consideration the result of the survey, the report of the Democratic majority of the committee, which stated the $100,000,000 favorably reported was on the side of liberality, and the informal statement by minority Members, I have concluded that $100,000,000 will be adequate to meet the present needs of the situation. Much additional information, some of it being of a startling nature, has been developed during this debate. I was especially impressed, as I am sure all other Members must have been, by the candid presentation of facts by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM], who was deposed as chairman of the subcommittee in charge of the measure because of his realistic and uncompromisingly honest approach to the relief problem.

In view of the thorough debate on the principal features of this measure and the factors which convince most of the ablest Members of this body that the actual need nowhere near approaches the amount requested by the President, it is unnecessary for me to discuss all of the details. It must be remembered that Congress already has appropriated $2,063,000,000 for W. P. A. during the fiscal year 1938–39, and by adding $100,000,000 more to that sum, Congress will have provided the staggering total of $2,163,000,000 for the year ending June 30.

It likewise should be remembered that when the President made the arbitrary demand for the $150,000,000 which was lopped from the original emergency relief fund for the remainder of the year, the W. P. A. had not acted upon two provisions which Congress attached to the $725,000,000 measure after making the cut. One provided for the dropping from relief rolls of all persons not entitled to relief. To date about 89,000 persons have been separated from the rolls in compliance with that provision. The other provided for the dropping of all aliens, and to date about 30,000 aliens have been severed from relief.

In other words, about 120,000 persons less are eligible for relief now than when the President sent his special message to Congress asking for complete restoration of the $150,000,000 slashed from the bill, without any regard for the reduction in relief enrollees accounted for by the previous action of Congress. Nor does the amount demanded by the President take into consideration the slight upturn in business and the increased seasonal employment with the coming of spring was expected to more than absorb the number already dropped from the relief rolls as a consequence of the previous action of Congress.

Without going into any tedious details, it is interesting to point out the marked discrepancy between the unemployment index of the American Federation of Labor and the index of employment of the Department of Labor. The A. F. of L. index of unemployment shows 11,590,000 for January and 11,470,000 for February, or a reduction of 120,000 in the unemployed before the W. P. A. had scarcely begun to weed out the 120,000 persons ordered dropped from relief rolls. I may say that the American Federation of Labor's index of unemployment always has been unusually accurate and reliable.

On the other hand, it is not possible to say as much for the index of employment of the Department of Labor. That shows 32,582,000 employed in January and 32,627,000 in February, or an increase of only 55,000 in employment. Yet, in the face of less unemployment and rising employment, despite the difference in the two sets of figures, the W. P. A., according to the statement of Administrator Harrington, in a letter to Senator VANDENBERG, of Michigan, dated March 24, the number of W. P. A. employees was estimated as follows: February, 3,000,000; March, 3,000,000; April, 2,900,000; May, 2,800,000; and June, 2,700,000.

Now compare that with the assertion of the W. P. A. Administrator that the number of employees reached a total of 3,043,511 as of February 25. Since that date, Colonel Harrington said the number had gradually decreased and under the orders that will go into effect April 3 the employees will be cut to 2,600,000.

Certainly something is "screwy" with that state of affairs. But "cockeyed" as these figures are, I believe it is obvious that $100,000,000 will be ample for W. P. A. needs for the remainder of the fiscal year, until June 30.

After taking into consideration the savings resulting from the dropping of aliens and ineligibles from the rolls and nearly $46,000,000 charged to the initial appropriation, or a total of $69,000,000, it is found that if $100,000,000 more were appropriated, as recommended by the committee, the allowance would be $19,000,000 in excess of the $875,000,000 originally requested by the President. Add that $19,047,425, to be exact, to the unobligated balance of $26,659,000 on January 31, the committee would allow a safety margin of $45,706,455.

In fact, the committee asserts Colonel Harrington should be able to effect economies which would make the $100,000,000 it recommended wholly adequate. The committee further cites Colonel Harrington's testimony that about 55,000 persons employed on W. P. A. projects are eligible for assistance under the aid to dependent children and old-age assistance programs of the Social Security Board. That is cited as just one instance of an unwarrantable monthly levy of $3,355,000 for work relief, or more than $40,000,000 annually.

This committee, controlled by the Democrats, mind you, then proceeds to criticize severely the unjustifiably high administrative expenses of W. P. A. For instance, it cited average monthly administrative expenses of well over $5,000,000, of which more than $4,000,000 is for personal services. It points out 1,900 administrative employees in Washington and 32,670 in the field-roll force. It takes a crack at the travel and subsistence bill of $500,000 monthly and $150,000 monthly for communications.

The committee says these expenses "are too high and should be brought down." I say they must be brought down. It also takes a dig at the character of projects undertaken, which have much to do with the program and result in very high labor and material costs. The expenditure of $300,000 of relief funds to erect an exhibit building at the New York World's Fair came in for especially bitter criticism. It was asserted that such projects failed to make employment available to a greater number of persons in actual need. This spread of work was urged frankly "to remove some of the public criticism of this activity."

Altogether, this Democratic committee in its report roundly condemned the glaring inequities and lax methods of the W. P. A., and concluded its critical report with a solid "sock" against the continued increase, instead of decrease in W. P. A. appropriations. It was pointed out that with the proposed addition of $100,000,000 a total of $2,163,868,406 would be provided for the current fiscal year. Continuing, it showed the growth, with $1,270,235,000 for 1936, $1,833,456,000 for 1937, and $1,427,701,000 for 1938.

On that point, let me quote from the report, as follows:

> This expense should not be building up, in the committee's opinion. It feels that its proposal is on the side of liberality; that a lesser amount would suffice. However, recognizing that time is the essence just now because of the pressing need, however brought about, to project administrative procedure for the remainder of the fiscal year, the committee, perforce, has pursued a more liberal policy than a searching inquiry probably would justify. Between now and the time the measure providing for relief for the fiscal year 1940 is presented to the House, it is the hope of the committee that it will have completed the investigation and study contemplated by House Resolution 130, passed by the House on March 27, 1939.

The latter reference is to the resolution by Representative Cox, a Georgia Democrat, who is as anxious as the rest of us to see politics stripped from W. P. A.

In view of that report, I could not in good conscience vote for more than $100,000,000 additional, which will be ample to avert any real hardships in my district or elsewhere.

Those are the broad aspects of the picture. In the letters I received from my own constituents are many sidelights and the intimate details of gross mismanagement, political skulduggery, and intimidation in my own district. They have given me certain leads which I intend to run out to the end.

For instance, one of my constituents—himself a relief worker—declared the smaller appropriation would be more than ample if the chislers were dropped. He declared some of the high-salaried supervisors have money in the bank, and in some cases three in a family are employed while among common labor only one out of each family can be employed on W. P. A., and for $57.20 per month, at that.

This man also pointed out that new projects were needed, as many of the projects now being worked are overmanned, which naturally leads to waste.

Perhaps one of the most glaring examples of favoritism and inequality was cited by this man. He named a certain project, cited the salaries of the superintendent at $300 a month down to timekeepers at $75 per month. I figured it out, and found that 14 men in the white-collar class were drawing 12½ percent of the pay that went to the 185 men working on the project, in my own home county.

Others who wrote me along this same line declared that if any reductions were made in the forces it would means cuts in the pick-and-shovel forces and not in the white-collar jobs.

Altogether, I believe my constituents were unselfish and disinterested in their surveys and reports to me, and I am deeply grateful to them all for their assistance in aiding me to obtain a true picture of the situation. An outstanding example of the unselfish attitude of these people was that of one of the leading retail merchants in my home city of Altoona. Although any cut in W. P. A. would mean a heavy loss to him, he declared economy in government must start somewhere, and he opposed any increase whatsoever in the present appropriation.

As I have stated, I am pledged to support all measures for real economy in government, and I propose to redeem that pledge in this instance. If I believed it was a question of bread and butter for the unfortunate people in my district in Pennsylvania, or anywhere in this country, I would not hesitate to protect them. Moreover, the question of relief is not a partisan matter. In any choice between my party and my people, I have no hesitancy in choosing my people, regardless of their party affiliations. [Applause.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. PACE].

Mr. PACE. Mr. Chairman, one of the most disturbing features of the relief question is the apparent lack of interest in trying to solve the problem of unemployment.

There are today just about as many unemployed in the country as there were several years ago when Congress first tried the plan of solving unemployment through relief appropriations. The net result has been a gradual increase in the appropriations for relief. In 1936, $1,270,235,065 was spent for relief, in 1937, it was $1,833,456,971, and in 1938 it was $1,427,701,994.

For this fiscal year we have already appropriated $1,425,000,000 last June, $725,000,000 in January, and now we have a request for $150,000,000 more, or a total of $2,300,000,000 for this year.

Can it be that we are faced with a problem which is too big for solution? Or are you merely taking the easy way of spending the taxpayers' money rather than tackle the problem and make the sacrifices necessary for its solution. It is now admitted by everyone that spending money for relief is not the solution. Private business is the place for private employment and this Congress should give immediate consideration to the recent recommendation of the president of the American Federation of Labor and provide private business with the assurances necessary to induce them to start the wheels to turning and to make use of the idle billions now on deposit in our banks.

No Member of Congress has any idea of allowing American citizens to starve. We are all ready to provide aid for any who have made an honest effort to secure work and are in actual need. But I, for one, do object to some of the wasteful, extravagant, and foolish practices of the W. P. A. in spending the taxpayers' money.

For instance, Congress appropriated $3,000,000 for a building at the world's fair in New York, and the President requested all governmental agencies to join together and prepare an exhibit for that building. And all agencies did except the W. P. A. But instead of using the relief money to aid those in need, W. P. A. is spending $300,000 for a separate building at the fair, and today it has thousands of men at work at the fair and paying them relief money at the rate of from $150 to $260 per month. No one ever intended such use for relief money, and the only way I know to stop such practices is to stop giving them such extravagant sums of money.

I object to the discrimination against the South by W. P. A. officials. I am advised that in New York today they are paying common, unskilled labor as high as $1 per hour, while in Georgia the average is less than $1 per day. The records show that in Philadelphia they have paid as high as $24 per day for relief labor. If you will turn to page 8 of the hearing, you will notice that in 1937 the average monthly pay for administrative officials was $122.87 per month in Georgia, which they have now reduced to an average of $107.43 per month. But during the same period they have raised the average in New York from $125.55 to $136.92, in Pennsylvania from $117.76 to $127.43, in Illinois from $128.80 to $132.86, in Indiana from $116.27 to $121.56, and in California from $127.42 to $138.40 per month. Oh, what a premium for being a doubtful State.

I wish it was possible for the President to know what is going on, to see the wasteful practices and the thousands and thousands who have been put on the relief rolls for purely political reasons. The gentleman from Wyoming has stated here on the floor that for 2 long years he went repeatedly to the W. P. A. officials and told them that great numbers of people were being put on the relief rolls in his State solely on account of their political influence and without any regard to their being in need; that he never could get anything done about it and an investigation was never secured until a United States judge ordered one.

It is unfortunate that the President cannot look into such cases personally. But his time is so limited and his responsibilities are so great that he appears to rely entirely on what he calls "his aides," who are the W. P. A. officials who make their living out of relief and apparently want it to go on forever.

In January it was represented to us that W. P. A. would be out of money on February 1. So we appropriated $725,000,000 to run them from February 1 to June 30. At the same time we directed them to dismiss from their rolls all aliens and all persons who were not in actual need. We find that 30,000 aliens were dismissed, which will save $7,015,000 during April, May, and June. Also that 88,975 were found on the rolls who were not in need. Is it not strange that it required an order from Congress to get these off? This resulted in a saving for April, May, and June of $16,282,425. Then we find that instead of being broke on February 1, they had on hand $72,409,030. Of this $45,750,000 was used to meet the pay rolls for the first week in February and an unobligated balance of $26,659,030.34 remained on hand.

In January the President said $875,000,000 was all that was necessary to carry W. P. A. from February 1 to June 30. Of this, as just stated, we appropriated $725,000,000. Now, if you will add to this $725,000,000 the $72,409,030 balance on hand on February 1, and the $7,015,000 saved by knocking off the aliens on the rolls, and the $16,282,425 saved by eliminating the 88,975 who were not in need and not entitled to relief, you will find that they total $820,706,455 or only $54,293,545 short of the $875,000,000 which the President said was needed to carry W. P. A. to July 1, 1939, the beginning of the new fiscal year.

Within the next 3 or 4 weeks we will have another bill before us to appropriate a billion, or two billion, or some large sum for W. P. A. for the next fiscal year, beginning July 1, and I feel sure that if this balance on hand last February and these savings were brought to the attention of the President in the proper way that he would readily agree that $54,293,545 is every dollar which we should appropriate now as supplemental funds for the next 3 months.

Certainly, with a deficit this year of nearly $4,000,000,000, and with a national debt of nearly $45,000,000,000, and with world conditions such that we do not know what tomorrow will bring, we should not appropriate to any department any more than its actual needs.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MAAS].

Mr. MAAS. Mr. Chairman, I hold in my hand a resolution unanimously adopted by the city council of my home, St. Paul, Minn., urging me to vote for an appropriation of $150,000,000 to carry on the W. P. A. for the balance of the fiscal year in view of the drastic need for relief employment.

They call my attention to the fact that if the W. P. A. rolls are reduced it merely transfers those removed to the direct relief rolls and that the city, in common with all other cities, cannot absorb any more of the relief burden.

I was home last week and went into this whole situation with the city officials, and I know the conditions. Therefore, I am going to vote for an appropriation of $150,000,000.

I regret that the necessity still exists for such huge appropriations, but we are faced with the failure of the New Deal's recovery program.

Recovery has not been brought about and will not be as long as business is faced with the great uncertainties that confront it now.

There is only one solution to this problem, and that is reabsorbing the unemployed in private industry. This can be done and will be done if business and industry are permitted and encouraged to expand.

However, business cannot expand as long as it is constantly interfered with and met by Government competition, and then, on top of all that, burdened with enormous taxation and constant threats of new taxes as well as new regulations and restrictions.

Taxes are approximately twice what they were in 1929, yet business only about 60 percent of what it was that year. There will have to be relief for business or we will never get out from under these gigantic W. P. A. relief appropriations.

The President recently appealed for cooperation from business and assured industry that there would be no additional burdens and that taxes would be reduced.

Just as business was about to settle down to stabilizing itself in preparation for expansion, the whole business world is again thrown into confusion and chaos by the threat of a new program of regulations, increased taxes, and nobody knows what else.

The country is kept in a constant condition of jitters also because of our uncertain foreign policy. There is too much butting into European affairs by administration officials.

If President Roosevelt and his administration will restore confidence at home by assuring business that it will be assisted and encouraged instead of hamstrung, and restore confidence in the buying public that we will not be dragged into a foreign war, this country will recover, and do it quickly. I believe it is not only unfortunate, but tragic, that we are faced with a situation where we have to bring in supplemental W. P. A. appropriations. After all, this was all designed for relief, and it was supposed to be temporary, for use in an emergency. The New Deal administration was supposed to bring about recovery. It is a sad commentary on the success of the recovery efforts of the administration that we have to keep bringing in more and more relief appropriation measures all the time. It seems to me that if we would get down to some real fundamentals in this Government we would not be faced with these problems perpetually, because relief is becoming a permanent problem.

Today our philosophy seems to be, How much can the Government do and how little does the citizen have to do? This Government was founded upon and grew great upon the fundamental principle, from which we have now gone far afield, that the Government should do absolutely nothing which could be done by the citizen or by the community.

If we would get back to those fundamentals we might solve our Budget problem and we might solve our relief and unemployment. As I say, it is with regret that I find it necessary to vote for this appropriation, but I hope the time is not far distant when we can bring about recovery and solve unemployment in industry and not have to be perpetually burdened with these relief appropriations. We will do that when we return to the American way of doing things. [Applause.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. COX].

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, the author of the statement referred to in the remarks of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BRADLEY] is Mr. Alsberg, who is in charge of the Writers' Project. Mr. Alsberg calls himself a philosophic anarchist, and in a serious statement to the Nation he did advocate the unionization of convicts and jailbirds.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. I yield.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. That statement was issued in 1929.

Mr. COX. It does not matter; he still calls himself a philosophic anarchist and he has never denied authorship of the statement.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. And that has nothing to do with the fact that people are out of work.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield one-half minute to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. MILLS].

Mr. MILLS of Louisiana. Mr. Chairman, I take the floor at this time in defense of my position on the first relief bill we had on the floor of the House in this session.

It was reported by the press at that time that I was in favor of cutting the original request $150,000,000; however, said press report was incorrect. I advocated at that time $875,000,000, and I take the position at this time that $150,000,000 should be appropriated.

I am happy God has blessed this country with an abundance of plenty; therefore I believe it is the duty of this Government to provide the necessary means whereby the unfortunate members of society may be able to sustain a livelihood.

In my congressional district, as well as my State, I find members of families without the necessary means to provide the necessities of life; so, in conclusion, Mr. Chairman, I trust the Committee will not lose sight of those that are in need. [Applause.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Michigian [Mr. HOFFMAN].

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM] yesterday called attention to the fact that this administration, for relief purposes, had appropriated $21,000,000,000; that $7,000,000,000 of that sum went to the W. P. A. Everyone realizes that the appropriation of these funds, the remedies which have been applied, have not ended the depression.

Everyone concedes that the Government cannot continue to let expenditures exceed receipts. The only question is when and where the cut shall be made. A disagreeable job postponed only becomes more disagreeable, more distasteful. We might as well act now as wait until later.

The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] each pointed out how the W. P. A. can carry on without this last appropriation. Each pointed to specific items of waste and extravagance.

People back home realize what is happening because in many instances they have personal knowledge of the misuse of the funds which we vote.

The Somerset (Pa.) Daily American of yesterday contains an editorial which shows that throughout the country at the next election Congressmen will hear in no uncertain terms from the taxpayers, those who provide the funds, if we continue to waste those funds. That editorial reads as follows:

ONE THOUSAND NAMES

The farmers of Stonycreek Township have forwarded to Samuel W. Marshall, chief engineer of the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission, vehement protests against allowing the hod carriers' union to mace the labor to be employed on that project. Those protests contained more than 1,000 names.

They constitute a spontaneous outburst of righteous indignation and patriotic sentiment.

In order to relieve unemployment, the Federal and State Governments have cooperated to make jobs, and incidentally a new highway across the State. The original set-up provided that the unemployment service of the State should provide the labor for the project from among the jobless. The work had scarcely started when two men walked off the Connell & Laub job in Somerset County and the hod carriers' union declared that there was a strike. That stopped the State employment service from providing the labor required.

A conference in Harrisburg resulted in a de facto "closed shop," although, it is said, there has been no agreement signed.

The farmers of Stonycreek object to having the hod carriers' union collect $15 from every common laborer, $25 from every truck driver and $75 from every steam-shovel operator on the job, in addition to monthly dues. They demand that the workers of Somerset County shall have the employment designed for them by the Government.

As the news of the activities of the Stonycreek farmers has spread abroad, the farmers of other townships have become interested. Had there been an organized effort made, 20,000 names of Somerset County citizens, instead of 1,000, of farmers, wage earners, businessmen, and professional men, together with their women, would have been attached to the protest.

Our people are incensed at the "muscling in" of a labor union where the employer is a Government agency and the employment was designed for distressed citizens.

Somerset County farmers are a determined lot. Their well-cultivated fields, their well-kept buildings, and the high quality of their produce attest the dogged perserverance with which they hold under subjection the lands which their forefathers conquered.

They have the spirit of those farmers of Lexington, Mass., who in 1775 fired shots that were heard around the world. They have the spirit, also, of those farmers who intervened in a labor dispute at Hershey several years ago and settled it.

The turnpike commission and its chief engineer will do well to take these facts into consideration while mulling over the protests that have been sent them.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. DONDERO].

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman, had the men who gathered in the city of Philadelphia during the summer of 1787 even dreamed that the Government which they were about to create after 81 days of brilliant debate, would some day become engaged in the theatrical and show business, as a function of that Government, I am satisfied they would have adjourned sine die, gone home, attended to their own private affairs, and refused to sign the Constitution of the United States. [Applause.] But that is actually what happened, and yesterday the House and the country were informed that we have 1,215 show and theatrical troupes under W. P. A. roaming this country at an average cost of $40,000 each, which totals $48,600,000, paid for out of the taxpayers' money that we appropriated here to relieve distress and unemployment in the United States.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DONDERO. Yes; I yield.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. What does the gentleman think the unemployed white-collared people ought to do?

Mr. DONDERO. I am satisfied the Congress of the United States never intended that the money it appropriated would be used to produce shows and exhibitions, and, what is worse, putting on shows in order to glorify the distress and the want in the United States under the best government on the face of the earth. That is the regrettable part of it.

Mr. HOUSTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DONDERO. I have only 5 minutes, but if I have time at the end of my statement I shall yield.

Mr. HOUSTON. The actors have to eat, do they not?

Mr. DONDERO. It will make very little difference what amount you vote for under the resolution before the House today. You can vote for $150,000,000, you can vote for $100,000,000, or you can vote a smaller amount of money and still be within the amount as indicated on page 3 of the report by the committee, to continue the W. P. A. until July 1 of this year.

If you will look at page 3 of the report, you will notice that there will be a surplus or residue of $45,000,000 on hand July 1, the end of this fiscal year, if we appropriate $100,000,000. I voted for the $725,000,000 in January to uphold the judgment of the committee. The committee this time has seen fit to cut the demand of the President by $50,000,000. I believe we would be safe to vote for $55,000,000 to continue the W. P. A. to July 1 for the reason I have mentioned. Mark you well that before this session ends W. P. A. will be knocking at the doors of Congress again for unnumbered millions to continue that function of Government during the next fiscal year, and we will be asked to appropriate those millions that the Government does not have and must borrow. One thing that is now uppermost in the minds of the people of this country is, How long, America, can you continue to spend and spend and borrow and borrow before we reach the brink of national bankruptcy and ruin? Secretary Morgenthau, before a subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations, on the Treasury Department bill, stated recently that he would not care to make any forecast of what might happen if the national debt went beyond $50,000,000,000, and yet this week in this Chamber we passed a bill carrying with it nearly $1,000,000,000. Ten more bills like that and we will have reached that point where Secretary Morgenthau says he would not care to make any forecast that reached beyond the figure of $50,000,000,000.

I am not against providing for the needy and those in want and there is not a Member on this floor, regardless of his politics, who does not take that position, but I am opposed to continuing a governmental function that is driving the Nation toward ruin and destroying the spirit and the initiative of the American people. Too many are now willing to lean on the Government for support and unwilling to stand on their own feet and engage in private employment even when offered. As some evidence bearing on this point, let me quote from a letter to me from the Bricklayers and Masons' Union of Detroit, Mich., dated February 1, 1939:

It is our contention that the W. P. A. has become a distinct menace to the construction industry, not only to the mechanics but to the contractors who have for many years past employed our people, due to the many abuses which have crept into the W. P. A.

And I quote from a letter from the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Detroit, Mich., of January 19, 1939:

It is our understanding that W. P. A. was created for the purpose of producing productive work for unskilled labor only. If that is true, we vigorously protest any W. P. A. money for projects that invade the field of the skilled trades.

We trust that you will give our complaint serious consideration and use every effort to curb this vicious practice, and that you will use your good efforts to see that no more W. P. A. money is used for any building operations. As it now is W. P. A. money is of no value or assistance to the skilled, semiskilled, and unskilled labor of the building trades.

The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM] pointed out to this House yesterday that one of these theatrical troupes under the W. P. A., and enjoying money that was intended to provide relief to the needy, was offered employment in private theatrical work at far greater wages than they were receiving and enjoying under the W. P. A. and refused to accept it.

Recently a brick mason, driving a taxicab here in the Capital City, notified his employer that he had obtained work for practically the balance of the year of 1939, but when he took the job he discovered they were unable to obtain hod carriers at $20 a week because they were on W. P. A. getting only $12 a week. For this reason the work had to be abandoned and he returned to the job of taxi driving and the hod carriers are still on W. P. A. instead of being in private employment at higher wages. That is the tragic and shameful attitude on the part of many who have fastened themselves like leeches on this governmental agency. Their morale has been destroyed, their courage has disappeared, and they have removed themselves from the list of self-sustaining people.

It is inconceivable that an agency of the Government, set up to relieve unemployment and distress, should desire to glorify itself to the country and to the world by exhibiting the result of human want. Yet such is the case. At the world's fair in the city of New York W. P. A. will spend relief money to do just that. Nearly a half million dollars either has been spent or will be to erect a permanent building out of the funds we appropriated in this Congress to provide food, shelter, and clothing for the distressed people of this Nation. When the fair is over that building is to be given to the city of New York.

It is interesting to note what the Pontiac Daily Press, of Pontiac, Mich., a newspaper in my district, thinks about this method of spending the taxpayers' money. It is evidence of what the people back home are thinking. I quote:

WHAT AN EXHIBIT

Few of us will judge the W. P. A. more than a temporary agency to meet an emergency. We see no reason for it to advertise itself. Yet W. P. A. officials think differently. They are spending $250,000 of public money on a building for the New York fair. Is this propaganda to make us think dependence on the Government is a grand institution?

If Congress made an appropriation to advertise the W. P. A., we might think differently of this venture, although we would still consider it silly. But Congress took no such action. The W. P. A. officials are doing it on their own initiative, probably with the idea in view that this is to be a permanent agency for all time. And the $250,000 may not represent all the expenditure. Several officials think it will reach a cost of twice that amount.

When an agency that was created to give away money to support the poor and jobless start to spend $250,000 or $500,000 to advertise its own activities it is spreading it on a bit thick. If the American public wants to finance an exhibit at the fair, it has other things to show. The public would rather its tax money for relief purposes be confined solely to that purpose.

We were assured in this House within the last 60 days that the $725,000,000 would be ample to carry the W. P. A. through the rest of the fiscal year, or until July 1, 1939. Now we are asked to provide at least another $100,000,000. If the money was not wasted, there would be no need for appropriating further huge sums for this purpose, and for these reasons I cannot support it. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO].

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, we heard a great deal yesterday about the swing Mikado and the lord high executioner of W. P. A., the gentleman from Virginia——

Mr. VINCENT of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARCANTONIO. No; I have only 5 minutes. The lord high executioner of W. P. A., the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM], gave us both rhetorical and oratorical trucking and swinging, in order, in effect to divert the attention of the Congress from the real issue involved. Speaking about "swing" Mikado, speaking about the world's fair exhibit, speaking about the airport in New York, Mr. Chairman, I submit is not a discussion of the fundamental issue involved in this appropriation bill. The fundamental issue resolves itself down to the following propositions: First, the number of unemployed in our country; second, how many people have been certified as being eligible for W. P. A. and on the waiting lists throughout the Nation; third, how many must be carried on W. P. A.; fourth, how much of a burden can local and State governments carry; and fifth, what is our responsibility to the unemployed of our country? Let us also be mindful in our deliberations that the number of unemployed has increased rather than decreased, and all of the evidence in the hearings conclusively establishes that we have at least over 1,000,000 more unemployed than on December 15, 1938. However, the diverting swing which was given us yesterday was so ably and so beautifully performed that the membership was so diverted from these real issues that it had the following effect on our colleagues: For instance, we had a gentleman, my colleague from New York [Mr. TABER], speaking about a letter written 10 years ago by one of the administrative employees of W. P. A. We had offered as a solution of unemployment a Chinese solution by another Member.

We had, for instance, a dissertation on post cards, and also a dissertation on a demand for overalls and on the supply of diapers. Unfortunately, the swing tempo rendered to us by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM], the lord high executioner of W. P. A., was so effective that even those of us who are in favor of the $150,000,000 must of necessity deal with that swing and pull down the jitterbug house of cards that was set up against the W. P. A. by the peer of Tommy Dorsey and Benny Goodman. One of the chief resentments against W. P. A. felt by the gentleman from Virginia yesterday was the fact that here we had an "outrageous diversion" of funds by the W. P. A. in leaving behind to the park department of the city of New York for recreational purposes for the benefit of women and children the W. P. A. building at the New York world's fair after the fair is over. That was an "outrageous diversion" of funds, and the gentleman from Virginia cried to high heaven against it. On the other hand, while the gentleman from Virginia criticizes this contribution to New York City, he fails to mention that the W. P. A. has been doing this very same thing in every part of the country, leaving behind its completed permanent projects which are of value to the various communities. Why has not the gentleman from Virginia mentioned this? Certainly it is sound practice for W. P. A. to put men to work on construction of projects of value to our localities throughout the Nation. This is exactly what W. P. A. will have done with its world's fair building. To do away with these so-called "diversions of funds" will mean abolition of useful projects and putting W. P. A. workers back to raking leaves. Does the gentleman from Virginia want that? He also criticized the W. P. A. for refusing to divert the theatrical hit, "swing" Mikado, and turn it over to private individuals on Broadway who want to exploit a Government hit for private profit. On the one hand W. P. A. is criticized for leaving something to a community, and on the other hand it is criticized for refusing to turn over something of value that belongs to the Government to private individuals for private profit. The swing was swell, but the logic not so hot.

He also asked why this world's fair exhibit? He said that it was a world's fair exhibit which will advertise our shame. I say that the W. P. A. world's fair exhibit does not advertise any shame. To the contrary, I say that the W. P. A. world's fair exhibit is necessary to demonstrate to the entire world that the American democracy can survive and can take care of its unemployed during periods of distress and economic crisis. It will demonstrate that our unemployed are not forced into abysmal wage slavery as is done in dictator countries. It will demonstrate that they are still free men and free women, breathing the free air of a free country.

Furthermore, the lord high executioner of W. P. A. failed to mention that this world's fair building for W. P. A. will cost $250,000 to construct, of which 60 percent will be used for W. P. A. labor. He failed to mention it will be a wooden building. He failed to mention that this cost does not add a penny more to the W. P. A. funds allocated to the city of New York.

Another piece of rhetorical jitterbugging which the lord high executioner of W. P. A. gave us yesterday was his complaint that W. P. A. workers are working full time for the completion of the world's fair airport in New York City and that they are being paid $260 per month. As the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON] established conclusively, the lord high executioner of W. P. A. should know, and in any event he should have found out before making this assertion, that New York City out of its own funds is paying all wages over and above the security wages. Why should the gentleman from Virgina protest when W. P. A. is doing this type of a job? The completion of an airport will mean better business for many Eastern States. He is an advocate of economy and has expressed himself to be very anxious for business recovery. Why, then, does he complain when this type of work will aid recovery? It might also be of interest to the gentleman from Virginia that the city of New York has contributed $15,000,000 for the establishment of this airport. Just why did the lord high executioner of W. P. A. omit so many pertinent facts in his sweeping denunciation of this meritorious project.

Coming back to the "swing" Mikado, the lord high executioner of W. P. A. in his rhetorical jitterbugging, failed to mention that the "swing" Mikado has been making money, running at a profit, not at a loss. Unemployed actors are entitled to employment on W. P. A. and it is such productions as the W. P. A. "swing" Mikado which give employment to them. It does not compete with private theatrical enterprises, for it is well known in theatrical circles that a hit show always brings business for other theaters in the vicinity of the hit. Since it aids private theatrical enterprises, the gentleman from Virginia should also have stated that the W. P. A. theater projects make the drama available to thousands of Americans because of the low prices of admission.

Again, I say that the gentleman from Virginia's well-delivered speech yesterday constituted a complete evasion of the fundamental propositions involved:

First. That $150,000,000 is a minimum needed on an arithmetical basis of $61 per man-month for 3,000,000 people on W. P. A.

Second. That even though there have been separated from W. P. A. 88,975 persons, that these had to be replaced because of the existence of 850,000 persons certified as eligible for W. P. A., waiting to be placed on W. P. A.

Third. That as long as there is a waiting list of such great proportions, replacements must be made.

Fourth. That there has been an increase for the month of December 15 to January 15, of 886,000 in the number of unemployed nonagricultural workers. While the figures are not available, there has been a further increase of the number of unemployed during the months of January and February.

These undisputable elements leave two choices, either we provide from the United States Treasury for the unemployed employables or we shift them back to be provided for by the localities and the States. The gentleman from Virginia and others very well know that the States and localities cannot assume any additional burdens.

Therefore, it is our solemn duty to continue to provide and give useful work for the employable unemployed. This, Mr. Chairman, is a most democratic attitude, it is a most humanitarian attitude, it is a most sound policy to pursue in order to prevent another business recession and economic chaos. To cut down the President's request of $150,000,000 to $100,000,000 to the tempo of oratorical swing and by means of a rhetorical Susie Q. is twentieth century Bourbonism. [Applause.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 7 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. JOHNS].

Mr. JOHNS. Mr. Chairman and Members of the Committee, I am deeply interested in the matter before the House at this time because it is not only one of our most serious problems facing the country today but it is going to continue to be for some time to come. All of us here in the House owe a debt of gratitude to the distinguished gentleman from Virginia who opened the discussion on this bill yesterday morning. It was not so much the facts that he gave to us, because many of them were known to us, but it was the courage and statesmanship of the man that caused us to applaud him because of his courage.

I personally have heard more about the "more abundant" life during these discussions than I have heard during the whole time of this depression. I admire the courage of the people of this country, and especially those who have jobs, with insufficient wages in many instances, who are willing to pay as they did last year, about 17½ cents of every dollar they received toward helping keep those unemployed and on relief. If they paid in full as we went along they would have paid about 24 percent of their earnings last year in taxes.

The tragedy of this whole situation is that we are spending all of this money, and with all these people on relief and W. P. A., we are getting no place in this country except further in debt. I am satisfied in my own mind that we are not only going to be required to make this appropriation, but we will continue to make many more for the same purpose. The present set-up is getting us nowhere. There are over 10,000,000 farmers in this country and most of these farmers could employ on an average of at least one man during the year, but from personal knowledge I know that men on W. P. A. and relief will not work for a farmer. The trouble is that the farmer cannot pay the wages paid by the W. P. A., and the W. P. A. worker will not work for a farmer because he is afraid, or gives as his excuse, that he will lose his job on W. P. A. Those on relief will not work a day because they are afraid somebody will notify the relief officers that they have a job and they will be cut off of relief and cannot get back on again. As a result the farmer is constantly looking for new machinery to take the place of a man on the farm, and in many instances he is finding it. Nobody has any more sympathy for these people on W. P. A. and relief in their hopeless condition than I have because I have seen adversity myself and I know what it means, but I always tried to do something to help myself, and I hope that these people who are in this condition today will try to do something to help themselves.

The present set-up of the W. P. A., as every one knows, is poorly managed. As stated on the floor of the House here, of the $21,000,000,000 that has been spent during the past 6 years for relief purposes, $7,000,000,000 has gone for W. P. A. and relief, and this has been placed in charge of one individual to take the full responsibility for handling such a business. There seems to me that there ought to be a nonpartisan commission to handle W. P. A. and relief. This commission should consist of about five businessmen, one who might be located in the West, one in the Central West, one in the East, one in the South, and one in Washington. The President ought to be able to find at least two Republicans that could be trusted in the United States to serve on this commission who would be nonpartisan in their views, and this ought to be true with the Democrats on such a commission. This would do away with the partisanship and inefficiency that we now have in our present set-up. You can save enough on the traveling expenses in one month to pay the salaries of these men, even though you paid them $10,000 a year; you could very easily take off something from the telephone bill of $150,000 a month.

The W. P. A. and relief should be purely a business proposition, and should be operated like any business is operated, and not a political organization. Until this is brought about you are going to have the waste and inefficiency that has been outlined here by speakers who have taken the floor on this important subject.

There must be some adjustment of the wage scale. When men get on relief they are not looking to make a profit, but they are looking for a living, and there is no reason why a man in Pennsylvania should receive $3.03 an hour and the man in Tennessee 18 cents per hour. A well-directed business is not operated that way, and relief and W. P. A. should not be operated in such a manner.

I hope that this Congress will consider very seriously changing the present political organization to one of business and efficiency. [Applause.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. KELLER].

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and include certain factual statements from Government sources.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, I have a limited time in which to talk about the most important and far-reaching subject before the American people at the present time. a subject upon which it has been my very great pleasure to spend a number of years in study, observation, and experience and myself directing large numbers of men; and to write a book on this great subject of unemployment. Many of my colleagues have had the opportunity of seeing and studying this book. I do not complain at this very sharp limitation of time assigned to me, I assure you, because in the near future I hope to lay before this body an address in which I shall show how we can solve the unemployment problem and keep the unemployment problem solved permanently. In this, I shall cite Government figures to prove my statement and I shall challenge any man on the Republican side of the House, especially, to deny the facts, to refute the arguments, or meet me in public debate.

I regret exceedingly, as all of the friends of the unemployed must regret, that all our objectors have done just one thing; they have pointed out the little, unimportant mistakes or abuses and have referred to none of the glorious accomplishments of the W. P. A. They have absolutely failed to suggest anything better than the W. P. A. because they do not know anything better.

I want to point out especially the fact that we have had called to our attention that there are some thousands of people on W. P. A. who might, under the law, be on direct relief. I shall show you why they selected the W. P. A. instead of direct relief. The Social Security Board supplied the facts I here cite. I am here showing what one State provides for 1 week's food for each person.

I have in these Cellophane bags the total allowance for one person on direct relief for 1 full week. I hold up here the 1⅘ pounds of flour, nine and a half ounces of corn meal, one-half pound of prunes—26 little prunes, count them yourselves. It is easy enough. Here is one-quarter pound of butter and 5 ounces of white beans. You can count the beans without difficulty. Look at this array of direct relief. Note the entire absence of meat, vegetables, or milk, and this is all one person gets for a whole week. Then you will understand why no one goes willingly onto direct relief. It ought to be called indirect starvation. It is nothing less. I am going to show something of what this means in weakening the body, creating sickness, rendering men unfit for labor, and shortening the lives of all who are forced to live on this starvation ration.

I want you to take a good look at this whole week's allowance for one man. You ought not to forget it. Each one of you must understand that what I am holding in my hands is all that one man gets on direct relief in 1 whole week. It all cost me 37 cents in a grocery store on a main street in the city of Washington.

It is easy to rationalize on poverty when it does not press heavily on you or is so far removed that you can easily forget about it. But if it knocks at your own door, or you are carried by a missionary spirit into the slums of our great industrial cities, or out into the rural slums on the edges of some of the richest agricultural areas in the United States, then poverty becomes a hard reality calling for action.

Certainly without wishing it upon my friends, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER], I wonder what they would do and how their opinions would hold or change in case they were compelled to live for 1 month upon the same sort and amount of food on which these people are compelled to eke out an existence constantly. More especially I would like to know what they would think about relief after 1 month of such experience and how they would vote next time they were called on to appropriate money for the W. P. A. That is not an unfair illustration because the thing you are doing here today in cutting down what the President has asked for is driving 150,000 men and their families at least back onto direct relief, for which this terrible starvation food is provided.

And here I quote the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM'S] answer to my question:

Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute to answer the interrogatory of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. KELLER], who made inquiry if I were in the position of a person who had to live on such a diet what I would do. I would write to my Congressman in Washington, Mr. Chairman, and ask him to use his best efforts to do everything in his power that he could to see that the W. P. A. used the money that Congress appropriated for work and for food instead of throwing it away on foolishness.

As will be observed, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM] did not answer my question at all. He used the lawyers' well-worn trick of setting up a straw man of his own so he could knock it down, and so dodged the question I put to him. As will be observed, I did not ask the gentleman from Virginia "What would you do if you were a person who had to live upon such a diet?" I asked the gentleman from Virginia how he would view the question of relief, and how he would vote the next time an appropriation came up for W. P. A. after he had existed for a month on such starvation rations as I set out there on the table so all could see. If I were willing to be facetious, I might have retorted to his question-dodging answer, if I had been given time to reply, that the probable reason he had not had a lot of letters from the thousands of Virginians existing on this starvation diet is that they are too weak to write.

Let us look into the implication in the gentleman from Virginia's dodging answer. He implies that the money the Congress appropriates for work and food are "wasted on foolishness." He has constantly implied defalcations in the W. P. A. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM] has not given and cannot secure any facts to substantiate any proportionately large waste or any important thefts in W. P. A. Wherever any waste has taken place it has been the entire fault of the Congress as a whole, and of the economy bloc in particular. The gentleman refers to mismanagement, but he does not show any to exist. Considering the size of the project, the millions of workers and the necessary thousands of administrative officers, an examination of the W. P. A. will show a cleaner record than any corporation in the country, if taken from the beginning of its existence to its final success.

The W. P. A. program is the greatest physical-development program in history. It is a gigantic engineering enterprise. It has constructed hundreds of thousands of miles of farm-to-market roads; built and repaired thousands of miles of streets in the cities of our country; repaired, remodeled, and built thousands of schoolhouses all over the country; constructed hundreds of waterworks, sewer systems, and sewage-disposal plants for the smaller cities; drained many swamps and destroyed the malaria in many localities; constructed thousands of dams for conservation of water; built great levees and dams for flood control.

The doing of this tremendous work program requires a more diversified engineering training and experience than any lay-out for physical accomplishment in the history of the world. It has required vision and training.

It has had a man of vision and experience at its head. It has had the best engineers available. The Army has given some and the great enterprises of private organization gave us others. The man who has not had wide experience in the doing and directing of work is not capable of judging the result of the W. P. A.

But from the beginning this engineering leadership has had to contend with a Congress 82 percent of the Members of which are lawyers. When an engineer needs legal advice he seeks a lawyer. It would appear to me that lawyers, when dealing with problems involving engineering knowledge, would seek and accept the advice of high-class engineers.

The engineering leadership of the W. P. A., compelled to look for the appropriation of money to carry on their projects to such a Congress, four-fifths of whom are entirely without experience, training, or understanding of projects requiring physical labor and movement of goods; without knowledge of planning large-scale work, about equipping men for efficient work, nor what physical work men can do in a given time under given conditions, was not able by its own expert testimony to convince two leaders of the subcommittee representing the Membership of the House, both of whom were lawyers inexperienced in the doing of such work, and evidently unwilling to seek or accept the statement of men, interested or disinterested, whose experience would qualify them to advise upon the subject, that W. P. A. was or was not a fair and right means of overcoming unemployment.

These lawyers caused men to be put to work without necessary material and equipment to work with. In ordinary industry involving the same type of work, as is done by W. P. A., the provision of material and equipment for each man per month is $17. But these lawyer-appropriators provided a maximum of $7 per man-month. They, thereby, made efficiency impossible. Then when they were told that the W. P. A. was not doing efficient work they raised a shout against the men who were struggling to accomplish results with totally insufficient materials and equipment. They referred to the men who were doing their best to get work done, although they did not have proper equipment, as a gang. These lawyers implied, and some said that the W. P. A. workers were lazy, no-accounts who had never worked and who did not want to work now.

They have not brought a single engineer into the hearings for disinterested consultation and advice for their own account, but have presumed to reject the testimony of the splendid Government engineers who appeared before them. They sit and listen and ask questions and then, without training or experience or understanding, make recommendations, contrary to the testimony of the Government's thoroughly high-class engineers in charge of the greatest engineering program of all history.

The whole line of argument against the President's request for $150,000,000 to make up the cut from his original request, is one of criticism of small things and a complete dodging of the vital issue involved. Every plea was the paid attorney's plea. The objecting to nonessentials; the magnification of the little things; making mountains out of molehills. It was a lawyer's plea to lawyers only. The pleas of the paid attorney addressing this great body made up of 82 percent lawyers, with no consideration of the engineering facts or human needs involved.

The criticism of political influence of W. P. A. has been made. If the W. P. A. and their families had voted with the Democrats at the last election, there would have been no new faces on the Republican side in this House. The fact is, these W. P. A. workers are independent Americans, to be swayed by the same arguments that all Americans are motivated by. Our Republican friends appealed to them with all the specious arguments, promises of better pay, more employment, higher old-age pensions up to $200 a month. In short, they assured the voters that the Republican Party would outdeal the New Deal by providing more money along all lines. So many voters voted for greater prosperity and see what they are getting. Look at the Republican vote on W. P. A. Vote to cast out $150,000,000 which was badly needed.

We who are for the W. P. A. are accused of being so for votes. Yes, of course. You who are against the poor, you are not for votes, are you? Oh, no. Of course not. Maybe.

The fact is we are both angling for votes because as a matter of fact in a republic every policy is of necessity decided by political action. We are for the poor. That is our avowed policy. You are for the rich, but such is not your open nor avowed policy. That is the difference. The whole interjection of the question of politics was a red herring drawn across the trail to muddle and deceive people into condemning the W. P. A. without a hearing. This subcommittee has, in effect, converted itself into a bureau of misinformation with the motivating slogan of "whatever is, ain't right."

The decision of the Appropriations Committee to cut the $875,000,000 which the President asked for in January to $725,000,000 was a purely political decision both in the House and in the Senate. The present cut of $150,000,000 to $100,000,000 again asked for, was equally a political move. Neither cut can be explained on any other grounds.

The two leaders of this political combination in the House, the gentleman from Virginia and the gentleman from New York, are doubtless able and successful lawyers in their own bailiwicks. But no one accuses them of any training, experience, or understanding of engineering. Their records show no accomplishment on the part of either one of planning public works, equipping men for rendering efficient service; no knowledge of the materials necessary to the successful execution of well-planned work. Yet, without full knowledge of all these things, no man can form a justifiable opinion on his own account. Now what happened was this:

Colonel Harrington is a great engineer and has associated with him several other high-class men. No one ever doubted their ability, training, or experience; and never has the honor or loyalty of any one of them been questioned. These men came first before the President and presented the facts which justified him in recommending the $875,000,000 asked for in his message. Then they came before the subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee with our two political lawyers in control and presented the entire matter to the minutest detail, answered all the questions, and submitted full proof of the requirements. Then these two lawyers without training, without knowledge, without experience, cast aside the training, experience, understanding, reputation, and responsible control of 5 years, and said in effect, "We know more about all this than these engineers do. No matter what they say, we know that $725,000,000 will be a great abundance to carry on until July 1. What's the use of engineers, anyhow, when the House has us two to guide it?"

And the matter was put through in such a way that a record vote was denied the Members of the House. Of course, this was done as a part of the political plan to keep the opponents of the W. P. A. off the spot, because everyone knew if we had had a record vote the $875,000,000 would have carried.

Then the President asked that the $150,000,000 cut off be restored and the same wise men of the same subcommittee again controlled it in the same way. They admitted that they were wrong the first time by agreeing to $100,000,000 and again a record vote was denied for the same reason as before—that is, that a record vote would have carried for the whole $150,000,000.

It may just as well be pointed out that whatever amount the President had recommended, these two leaders of the so-called economy bloc would have cut it down. If he had asked $725,000,000 originally, they would have reported $600,000,000. If he had asked for $500,000,000, the cutters would have allowed $400,000,000, and so on down the line. They have taken the ground that necessity to prevent suffering is not the proper motive in making appropriations. They place their opinions above all the evidence of the only men who from training, understanding, experience, and 5 years of the direct control of the W. P. A., can know or do know the actual requirements of the millions whom the Government has given some small measure of opportunity against starvation.

Whatever may be the resulting conclusion in relation to their judgment or their intelligence, I must confess that I believe these men and those on the committee that accepted their opinions are entirely honest in those opinions.

What this so-called economy bloc is really driving at is to turn the whole relief problem back to the States and save money. You may be able to put the people of some parts of this country on the sort of direct relief I showed the House. But you certainly ought to know that the greater part of the people are not going to try to live on 5 cents a day. As soon as the people find out that that is what it will mean to put relief into the control of the States, the advocates of such a policy will be left at home to share that munificence among themselves.

There are many well-intentioned and high-minded leaders in our midst who would reduce our present national work program to the level of pauper relief. What else does the returning of relief to local communities really mean? It will be cheaper, yes, in dollars, but it will be very costly in human lives. Most of the 3,100 counties in the United States will be compelled to discard the work program immediately and substitute direct relief. What guaranty do we have that their relief standards will be higher than those at present prevailing?

The gentleman from Virginia, whom the newspapers have aptly styled the "lord high executioner of the W. P. A.," has come here pleading for economy in relief on the theory that the humanitarian emergency is past and that it is now necessary to stiffen the backbone of the unemployed by a diet of slow starvation. He wants the W. P. A. to be turned back to the States to be run more economically.

I believe that the philosophy behind his economy was well summed up by the remarks of his colleague in the upper House, the senior Senator from Virginia, who said:

> I individually think that more economic blunders, if not in some instances economic crimes, have been perpetrated by Congress in the name of the starving, who never starve, and freezing people, not one of whom has ever frozen, than the imagination can conjure up.

The State of Virginia has certainly not erred in this direction. It has not been too extravagant in its provision of relief to people who are under the impression that they are starving or freezing. The condition of affairs in Virginia, and particularly its economies in relief, appear to represent the ideal of economy which these honorable gentlemen from Virginia wish to force upon the whole United States. So it behooves us to look into the state of affairs in Virginia and examine the nature and results of its economies in relief.

According to the data collected by the Social Security Board, Virginia was blessed with an unusually low direct-relief load. In December 1938, there were only 9,444 cases receiving direct relief in the Old Dominion. This is less than six-tenths of 1 percent of the Nation's total. Virginia's population, as estimated by the United States Bureau of the Census on July 1, 1937, represents slightly more than 2 percent of the Nation's total. Virginia's unemployment, as calculated by the Biggers Census of November 1937, is about 1.44 percent of the Nation's total. In other words, Virginia's direct-relief rolls are less than one-third of what they should be if population is used as a guide. It is 40 percent of what it should be if unemployment is used as a criterion of destitution. There are two possible explanations of this discrepancy. One explanation is that less than half of the people actually in dire need in Virginia get any relief. The other explanation is that Virginia is a miraculous area where all the familiar laws of nature are suspended—a place where large numbers of poor people get along without jobs, without resources, without help of any kind, and can go indefinitely with practically no food, yet never, never starve, never grow cold, and never become naked.

Now, of course, it may be that Virginia's population is just such a remarkably sturdy breed as that. But our confidence in this possibility is shaken by the fact that there are some 3,600 families in Virginia who depend exclusively on food from the Federal Surplus Commodities as the only form of aid they can get. These families would be glad to get direct-relief grants, but they cannot get them.

Since the direct-relief rolls are so small, it might be supposed that the State of Virginia and the local communities treat their relief clients with exceptional generosity. But the Social Security Board reports that Virginia's average direct-relief grant per case was $9.26 for the month of December 1938. For the United States as a whole it was $26.15—and God only knows how inadequate even that figure is. In 10 counties in Virginia the average amount of general relief per case in December was less than $5, or approximately $1 per person per month, or less than 50 cents per person per week. It may be assumed that these allowances are made primarily for food, but even on this assumption the food allowance per person amounts to from 3 to 5 cents per person per day.

I know, of course, that Virginia is part of the South, and the argument has often been made on the floor of Congress that God made the South so bountiful by nature that very little money is needed for food, clothing, and shelter. Virginia, however, is not exactly a tropical country, and a recent study of intercity difference in the cost of living conducted by the Bureau of Labor Statistics and the Works Progress Administration in 59 sample cities reveals that in Norfolk, Va., the annual maintenance budget for a family of four is $1,251.38; the average for the 59 cities over the whole country is $1,260.62. In other words, the cost of living in Norfolk is very close to the average urban cost of living in the whole United States. It may be presumed that the cost of living in the rural areas of Virginia also does not diverge notably from the average rural cost of living for the United States as a whole.

What is the picture in other forms of relief? Notwithstanding that the Federal Government is ready to match grants for old-age assistance, Virginia was the last State in the Union to set up an old-age assistance program. The program in Virginia began in September 1938, and as of December, the number of recipients per 1,000 population 65 years of age or over, was only 48, as compared with a national average of 224. Only two other States showed ratios of less than 100. In neighboring States, the corresponding proportions were: Maryland, 160; North Carolina, 229; Kentucky, 241; District of Columbia, 78; West Virginia, 229; and Tennessee, 171.

Perhaps the small number of beneficiaries of old-age assistance in Virginia may be attributed to the newness of the program. But what about the size of the grants? Virginia paid $9.54 per recipient in December 1938—half, of course, being met by the Federal Government; the national average was $19.55.

Virginia was also the last State to enact a program for aid to dependent children, which also did not go into operation until September 1938. The number of recipients per 1,000 estimated population under 16 was 3, compared with a national average of 22, and a maximum of 46 in Maryland and Arizona. Corresponding proportions for neighboring States were: North Carolina, 17; the District of Columbia, 25; West Virginia, 27; and Tennessee, 29.

Mr. Chairman, I fail to see why the record of Virginia on economy in relief is anything to boast about, or anything for the Federal Government or the Nation as a whole to emulate. The people who take pride in how little they can spend for relief and get away with it, might just as well boast of putting a pants button in the contribution plate on Sunday and getting away with that. And as for those who are tired of spending in the name of starving who do not starve, and the freezing who do not freeze, I would ask them for the moment to forego any humanitarian feelings and put the case for the maintenance of human beings on the same basis as they would put the maintenance of machines. What engineer waits for machine bearings to burn out before giving a thought to lubrication and repair? And yet in the case of human beings, we insist on waiting until they die in front of our doorstep before we recognize the need for maintenance relief.

Human starvation is a slow process, just as machine breakdown is a slow process. And the final stages are not enacted upon the steps of the Capitol in Washington or on the verandas of the Virginia bankers or judges who battle for economy. The deaths from malnutrition and from slow starvation take place in the public wards of the hospitals or in the hovels of the poor. But just because the final results of relief economy are not nakedly visible on Capitol Hill, do not let anybody say that there is no relation between inadequate relief standards and sickness and death among the destitute.

The Surgeon General's office recently conducted a national health survey. It was not designed to inquire into the effect of low relief on health and mortality, but in its differential findings concerning sickness and death among the poor and the relief families, as compared with the well-to-do, it puts its finger at the same time on the relation of cause and effect between inadequate relief and sickness and starvation among those dependent on public aid.

The survey revealed:

> That the gross sickness and mortality rates for the poor in our large cities are as high today as they were for the Nation as a whole half a century ago.

That is, that no improvement has taken place in 50 years in the living conditions of the poor. And that is a national disgrace.

That among families on relief canvassed in the national health suvey, acute illness is 47 percent more prevalent and chronic illness 87 percent more prevalent than among families with incomes of $3,000 or over.

That nonrelief families with incomes of less than $1,000 experience twice the rate of disability through sickness than families in the higher-income group experience.

Let us note that during these times of semistarvation the increase in tuberculosis is inevitable and in proportion to the length and intensity of the period of starvation indulged in. For many years we have been reducing the number of tuberculosis patients per thousand of the population, but since the depression resulting from the panic of 1929, this is again on the upturn. In the years to come we will pay dearly for the starvation that we force upon any part of our population now.

The National Health Survey in its findings is comparable to a survey of railroad accidents among well-equipped and well-maintained railroads on the one hand, and poorly equipped and poorly maintained railroads on the other. If such a survey revealed twice the accident rate on the latter as on the former, would it not also show that a reduction of relief maintenance on the poorer roads is tantamount to an increase in the accident rate?

The fact is that neither relief nor W. P. A. give enough money for the maintenance of a decent and healthy standard of living. W. P. A. wages, it has been estimated, represent only about two-thirds of an emergency standard of living; average direct-relief grants are about half of the W. P. A. wages, and Virginia relief grants are less than half of the national average of direct-relief grants.

Is Virginia economy at the expense of the poor a proper subject of boasting in the Halls of Congress? Is it not rather an astonishing confession? Is it not rather a warning—a danger signal showing us what lies ahead on the fatal road of false economizing? Let us hope that the Old Dominion will not tread that path to this bitter end—that it will rather join the ranks of those States that are seeking to raise the standard of living—not lower it—for all their citizens. Let us hope that Virginia will return in time for the spirit of leadership once given by Thomas Jefferson, to whom democracy meant equality, and who rejected the notion that the mass of mankind was "born with saddles on their backs" and that a favored few were born "booted and spurred, ready to ride them legitimately by the grace of God."

At the present time and for some years past, Roanoke, the home of the gentleman from Virginia, has been classified as one of the most prosperous cities in the United States. It seems, therefore, that the gentleman from Virginia has not been forced to see any suffering from unemployment in his city, and this may to some extent account for his attitude toward the starving in the parts of the Nation less prosperous. It may be lack of experience that is responsible for his limited influence in this entire matter.

But the era of poverty, when Americans eat sowbelly and blackstrap is gone with the wind. The people all know there is a superabundance of food for all in this country. If the Congress is not wise enough to provide the opportunity for a job for every man and woman who wants to work, surely it should be decent enough to provide against starvation.

Do you deny that the W. P. A. has been a great blessing in providing enormously valuable public improvements, jobs for millions of idle men, food and some clothing for many more millions of women and children?

Well, what do you propose in its place? What will men do? What will the millions of women and children eat and wear? What right has the Congress to take away present jobs until they have provided other jobs? What has the economy block or any member of it ever proposed since the panic of 1929 until the present day to take us out of that economic tail spin? What right has any critic to condemn a policy unless he can propose a better one? Step forward, gentlemen of the economy bloc and tell us what to do, and do not stutter in the telling. Please be specific. Tell us what we shall do for this 3,000,000 who have been on W. P. A. and are being thrown out of it by your parsimony. Tell us what you are going to do with the other 2,000,000 employables, now very much in need of work. What about them?

You have spoken of waste in relation to the W. P. A. When your subcommittee starts investigation of the W. P. A. under the resolution authorizing that proceeding, you will not find waste of any importance which your own parsimony has not brought about.

But let us see what waste has actually taken place. The panic of 1929 and the inevitable depression following it threw vast numbers out of employment through no fault of their own. It offered a great opportunity to the Congress to pick up these unwillingly idle millions and save their tremendous earning power in the form of permanent public improvements. The work was there—enough to absorb labor of every idle man for 50 years to come. The economy bloc was vocal against all expenditures. It handicapped every attempt at providing any expenditures commensurate to the needs of the occasion. It gave grudging acquiescence to appropriations based solely on emergency. It had not sufficient vision to grasp the fact that these emergencies were actually permanent. That only by planning over a period of years could we hope to correct the misfortunes of this depression.

True to its lack of economic understanding it now seeks to scrimp and pinch our way out by throwing more men out of employment, adding vastly to the enormous waste already suffered. For the information of the Members who are studying this subject to evolve a solution, I quote from the Bureau of Labor Statistics the following facts:

The loss to the Nation in the wages of industry alone beginning in 1930 and up until July 1, 1938, is over $120,000,000,000. The loss for the same period in the prices of agricultural products is $38,000,000,000.

This represents a total loss of $158,000,000,000 in these two items alone—nearly a third as much as our total national wealth wasted—gone into the limbo of lost and forgotten things, irretrievably lost. This is an appalling waste in dollars, but a vastly greater loss in human skill, training, confidence in our country, belief in the justice and common sense of the Congress. Any system of economics that does not take humanity as its very basis is a false economy.

The scrimpers and pinchers have from the beginning, insisted, as all too many did and still do, that this depression is a temporary matter, an emergency that would, if let alone financially, pass quickly and permanently as depressions have done in the past.

They have deluded themselves into this belief from an entire lack of understanding of the immediate causes of the panic and the inevitable resulting depression. They refuse to see that the conditions which have permitted other depressions to pass no longer exist. They do not comprehend how other depressions have passed. They do not know the basis of recovery in the past no longer exists. They, therefore, do not see that what seemed an emergency is in fact a condition that is, to all intents and purposes, permanent. They do not grasp the certainty that it will require many years to grow out of this condition. It cannot be solved by localities, States, or regions. It is a national question. It is fundamental and will pass only when we provide the opportunity for a job for every man and woman who wants to work. The difficulty will be increased every time a man is denied a job, every time a man is thrown out of a job. There is only one remedy for this great fundamental depression—the assurance of universal employment.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute to answer the interrogatory of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. KELLER], who made inquiry if I were in the position of a person who had to live on such a diet what I would do. I would write to my Congressman in Washington, Mr. Chairman, and ask him to use his best efforts to do everything in his power that he could to see that the W. P. A. used the money that Congress appropriated for work and for food instead of throwing it away on foolishness. [Applause.]

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Virginia has expired.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. ROBSION].

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, ladies, and gentlemen, we have before us the third W. P. A. appropriation bill for this fiscal year.

No Member of this House goes before me in active and sincere sympathy for needy people. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, Congress appropriated for the W. P. A. $1,427,701,994.

TOTAL OF $2,063,868,406 FOR 1939

Congress has already appropriated for W. P. A. for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1938, and ending June 30, 1939, $2,063,868,406. In other words, Congress has already appropriated for this fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, $640,000,000 more than we appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938. The testimony of Colonel Harrington, W. P. A. Administrator, before the Appropriations Committee shows clearly that he needs no more than $55,000,000 to carry on W. P. A. as now set up to the end of this fiscal year, June 30, 1939, but the President insists that we appropriate $150,000,000. This bill carries $100,000,000. If this bill is passed, we will then have appropriated for W. P. A. for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, $2,163,868,406. That is $740,000,000 more than we appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, and, I might add, nearly a billion dollars more than we appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936.

CUT OUT ALIENS, CHISELERS, USELESS OFFICEHOLDERS

Many of the Members of Congress, Democrats and Republicans, have been urging the elimination from the W. P. A. rolls of aliens, chiselers, and unnecessary officeholders. There are tens of thousands of these. If these were cut off the rolls, it would not be necessary to cut any needy citizen from the relief rolls. We could increase the relief rolls with the needy by tens of thousands.

We hear threats that those in charge of the W. P. A. are cutting or threatening to cut many needy people from the rolls. There is no evidence that any material cut has been made or will be made of the useless officeholders. The cut should be at the top and not at the bottom.

TAKE POLITICIANS OFF RELIEF

Those at the head now say that relief has been taken out of politics. That cannot be. The relief set-up in Kentucky and in practically every other section of the country was built up by the politicians into a political machine. Hopkins has been succeeded by Colonel Harrington at the head here in Washington, but out in the various States the same political machine is still in control of W. P. A. The politicians have not been taken out of or off of W. P. A. W. P. A. cannot be taken out of politics until we take the politicians out of and off of W. P. A.

We have seen much of politics in W. P. A. in Kentucky and we hear the same story from many other States. It is a shameful and sordid record. It is the first time in American history that one party or faction has financed its campaigns out of the pockets of the taxpayers and used relief money to coerce, browbeat, and intimidate the needy people.

In Kentucky last year the relief rolls reached their peak at the August primary in the Democratic senatorial race. Between September 1937, an off year in national politics, and the November election 1938, the relief rolls in the Nation increased from 1,600,000 to 3,200,000. There was a national election on, and that explains why there is demand now for additional relief funds. It was squandered, wasted, and grafted in elections. That is why, although we have appropriated $640,000,000 more than we did last year, there is a demand for more money.

Indictments have been returned and persons have been convicted in various parts of the country for grafting and the unlawful use of relief funds. A distinguished Democratic Senator stated on the Senate floor today that the new dealers in urging large sums for W. P. A. were not actuated by humanitarian principles—their purpose was to get votes. In other words, they had used and desired more money to use to play politics with human misery.

The W. P. A. is engaged in all sorts of crackpot schemes. It has developed theater projects in 21 States and put on more than 1,400 shows. Many of these are touring the country. One of them, the "swing dance" Mikado, swings all the way from Chicago to New York City. Other troupes are touring various parts of the country and consuming the relief funds. Many of the persons connected with these shows receive salaries in excess of $250 per month. The W. P. A. has other projects on foot on which many of the persons receive $250 or more per month, and they are supposed to be on relief, yet many needy people are denied relief work, jobs like building roads, at twenty-odd dollars per month.

The W. P. A. is engaged in competition with private enterprises along many lines. They undertake to produce almost everything. In some sections they receive less than 25 cents an hour, while in other sections as much as $3 per hour. The chief characteristic about W. P. A. has been and still is politics, favoritism, and partiality. For every person given a place on relief, there are at least four other persons just as deserving and just as needy who are denied relief. As a general rule, in my section—and this, I understand, is true in most sections of the country—those who are on W. P. A. have been selected from the New Deal faction of the Democrats or from others who are willing to change their registration and cast their votes for the New Deal candidates.

UNEMPLOYMENT, RELIEF ROLLS, AND DEPRESSION INCREASE

There has been much boasting about these wonderful New Deal policies. What have been the results?

This administration has increased taxes collected from the people more than 230 percent annually. It has increased the national debt $20,000,000,000. Congress has appropriated under this administration approximately $67,000,000,000 in a little over 6 years. This is a greater sum than all the Congresses appropriated from March 4, 1789, up to and including the signing of the armistice on November 11, 1918, nearly 130 years. Our national debt on tomorrow, April 1, will go beyond $40,000,000,000, and by June 30, 1940, it will exceed $45,000,000,000. This is the debt limit fixed by Congress. I wonder how many Members of the House and Senate are willing to vote for a bill to raise the debt limit above $45,000,000,000?

The American Federation of Labor for February 1939 shows there were 11,420,000 unemployed industrial workers in America. This is at least 3,000,000 more than there were in 1937. There are 173,000 less railroad workers and 100,000 less miners at work today than there were in March 1937. Business is at a standstill. The prices of farm commodities and the farmers' income continue to go down. Wheat delivered in Chicago in March 1937 was $1.52 per bushel; today it is 67⅞ cents. Corn delivered in Chicago in March 1937 was $1.25 per bushel; today it is 47½ cents per bushel.

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. I yield for a brief question.

Mr. WOOD. The gentleman is very much appalled at 47-cent corn and 60-cent wheat. I wonder if the gentleman was appalled back in 1932 when we had 10-cent corn, 3-cent eggs, and 3-cent hogs.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. In the first place, I never heard of any such prices before. If they existed at all, it was on rare occasions in some out-of-the-way community. The prices I have quoted are the prices of corn and wheat delivered in Chicago. If the gentleman will look up the record and measure the prices received for corn and wheat delivered in Chicago in 1932, he will find that they were then as high as they are now, but the prices now being received are in the 59-cent dollars, while in 1932 they were in the 100-cent dollars. If the prices now were measured in 100-cent dollars, as they were in 1932, wheat would be around 35 cents a bushel and corn 27 cents a bushel delivered at Chicago. The Democrats went into power in 1932 with the promise that they would bring prosperity to industry, give work to the unemployed, and restore farm prices. It should be no comfort to the new dealers, after 6 years and after they have spent these enormous sums of money, for the prices to be no better than they were in 1932. [Applause.]

OUR NATION THREATENED

We have now had 9 consecutive years of deficits—9 years in which this Nation has spent more than it took in. The deficit for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, will be more than $3,000,000,000, and we now know that the deficit for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, will be more than $4,000,000,000. We know that the national debt at that time will be at least $45,000,000,000, and we know there will be a deficit for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941.

Mr. Roosevelt stated in his message to Congress on March 10, 1933, that we were on our way to bankruptcy. Industry and agriculture could not prosper and unemployment would continue because we had had 3 years of deficits amounting to $4,000,000,000 and an increase in our national debt of $4,000,000,000. We are now about to enter our tenth consecutive year of deficits. The President will have added $24,000,000,000 of deficits and increased the national debt to $45,000,000,000, and there will be a large deficit for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941. There will be no reduction of taxes, deficits, or debts during the present administration. Industry will continue to lag, agriculture to decline, unemployment and relief rolls to increase. Will someone tell us on what road we are now traveling?

It is admitted that we are the richest nation of the world. We surpass all others in the wealth of our natural resources, industries, and agriculture. We have an intelligent, industrious people; yet we have more unemployed and more people needing relief than at any other period in the history of our own Nation or any other nation. These conditions have been brought about through the unwise, unworkable, and un-American New Deal policies. The American people cannot hope for recovery until there is a change in administration and policies in Washington.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WOOD].

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman already has that privilege. That privilege has already been given to all Members.

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Chairman, I do not know that anyone's mind could be changed by anything that might be said either now or later. I doubt if it has been changed by anything that has been said since discussion started on this bill. Discussion did not affect the vote of this House upon the parity-price provision of the agricultural appropriation bill, the $250,000,000 for parity payments, which I was in favor of. I am, of course, in favor of the $150,000,000 appropriation, because I believe it will create jobs, employment, and work relief for the unemployed of this Nation.

A great deal has been said about gross corruption and mismanagement on the part of W. P. A. and many other New Deal agencies by the Members of the minority. They are very much appalled at the low price of corn, wheat, hogs, and cotton at this time—47-cent corn, 60-cent wheat, 7½- and 8-cent hogs, and 15- or 18-cent eggs, but they have forgotten the fall of 1932, when corn in my section was selling for 10 cents a bushel and just a little further north in Iowa they were leaving the corn in the fields rather than gathering it at the low price. Eggs were selling at 3 and 4 cents a dozen and hogs on the Springfield market at $2.60 and $3 per hundred.

We are faced with the prospect of 400,000 W. P. A. workers being stricken from the rolls if we pare this appropriation to $100,000,000. It is a matter of 400,000 being stricken from the rolls by July 1. Mr. Chairman, in 1928, which was the peak year of production, there were 2,400,000 unemployed, according to the best estimates we can get from governmental agencies. In 1937 we reached the peak production of 1928, and in some of the heavy industries went to 130, taking 1928 as 100. What is the answer? We had a peak of production, yes; but we did not have a peak of consuming power.

It is the application of science and invention to the modern labor-displacing machine production that has been put into use since 1928.

Our unemployment load in 1937 reached a peak as compared with 1928. Our load then was about 8,000,000.

In my own district during the last year a strip mine operated two coal-loading machines and two shovels. Recently they put in the largest shovel in the world, which displaced 50 men. One hundred men are now operating that shovel, whereas 150 men were necessary formerly. The Government must take charge.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. ANGELL].

RED INK BRINGS BANKRUPTCY, NOT PROSPERITY

Mr. ANGELL. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gravity of the unemployment situation in our Nation. It is my sincere conviction that until we are able, through the restoration of confidence and other means, to restore to private industry our unemployed, the burden of making suitable provision for them rests upon the Congress. It is my purpose, therefore, to support the pending bill for additional relief appropriations for W. P. A. for the fiscal year. However, I believe that it is imperative that the Congress enact legislation that will not only provide relief but will eradicate the causes which make relief and the W. P. A. necessary. Among measures which will bring such a condition about is H. R. 2, now pending before the Ways and Means Committee of the House.

Mr. Chairman, America's greatest need today is increased purchasing power. After 6 years over 10,000,000 of our able-bodied citizens are still unemployed. Over three millions are on the relief pay rolls and millions more are marking time looking for paying jobs. The unemployed have no purchasing power. Our warehouses are overfilled with foodstuffs and merchandise, and yet many of our people are hungry, poorly clad, and without shelter. We are dumping millions of bushels of wheat, and all over our land our people are clamoring for bread. We are asked to spend a hundred million dollars to subsidize the dumping abroad of 11,000,000 bales of cotton, while the jobless shiver in rags. Our people in want and distress cry out for relief in every city, hamlet, and countryside, and we answer by plowing under foodstuffs, killing brood stock, and curtailing production. To fill our stomachs and cover our naked backs and to put shoes on our children's feet we are asked to preach and practice the doctrine of scarcity. For over 6 years Uncle Sam has been endeavoring by borrowing and spending twice as much as he receives to bolster up this purchasing power and put into the empty pockets of our people borrowed money with which to eke out an existence. The plan has not worked. It has broken down. It is tumbling upon our heads. Our people are discouraged. We are piling up an immense debt for future generations to pay. We are rushing like mad toward a rendezvous with bankruptcy. Red ink brings bankruptcy, not prosperity. Have you noticed Uncle Sam has acted queerly of late? Sometimes I think he is losing his mind.

This should not be. We, as Americans, have only 6 percent of the world's area and 7 percent of its population. Nevertheless, we produce 70 percent of the world's oil, 60 percent of its wheat and cotton, 50 percent of its copper and iron, 40 percent of its lead and coal, and we consume from one-quarter to three-quarters of the world's production of most of its basic products. We have 60 percent of the telephones and telegraph facilities, one-third of the railroads, and 80 percent of the motor cars. We have two-thirds of the world's gold supply and banking resources. We have stowed away in the hills of Kentucky fifteen billions of gold. The American market is the greatest market in the world. We alone have a purchasing power greater than that of one-half billion Europeans or 1,000,000,000 Asiatics.

We have skilled and intelligent workmen, unsurpassed by any nation. We have the machinery for production. Our modern mills, factories, and implements of production are geared almost to perfection for the mass producing of the necessities of life. And yet this great machine stands practically idle by the side of our unemployed workmen, who are anxious and able to work. We are richly blessed with natural resources, and we have immense quantities of raw material ready to be put through the machine and turned out as finished products. These great industries and this rich market of the American people are stagnant by reason of the lack of purchasing power, of funds in the hands of our people. All the schemes concocted in the last 6 years in an endeavor to solve these social, economic, and political problems and to start the wheels of industry turning have failed miserably. We have been unable to put back into private employment the great armies of the unemployed and thus create purchasing power and provide our people with the necessities of life.

It is the purpose and philosophy of the Townsend national-recovery plan to overcome this catastrophe which is gripping the throat of America and threatening the very life of our democracy. It will put the machinery of industry whirling again, put the unemployed back on the pay rolls of private enterprise, and bring prosperity again to the greatest Nation on earth, America. It will create buying power. It will start money circulating in the blood streams of industry. It will stimulate and increase business activity. It will create jobs for the unemployed. It will bring back happiness and confidence to America and put an end to the depression.

This plan has two major purposes: First, to promote national recovery; second, to provide for our senior citizens.

It provides:

For the retirement of all citizens who are 60 years of age or over from gainful employment, who desire to avail themselves of the privileges of the plan;

For the levying of a Federal tax of 2 percent on all monetary transactions, collectible monthly, and distributed pro rata among all citizens who qualify under the act, conditioned that it be expended for American-made goods within 30 days.

The American public is determined that our old people, who have labored through the years in making America and in preserving our democracy, are entitled to share in their old age in what America produces by reason of their contribution during their productive years.

There are some 8,000,000 Americans over the age of 60 years who could qualify under this plan, and half of them are employed in gainful pursuits. This would reduce the unemployment rolls by some 4,000,000. The forced spending of these funds would immediately provide buying power and would at once put to work great numbers of other workers in providing the necessary goods, which, under the provisions of the act, must be manufactured or fabricated in the United States. It would mean that the laborers in the woods, in the fields, in the mines, in the shops, in the stores, as well as professional workers, would find a market for their goods or services. It is reasonable to believe that these incentives given to business and the increased volume of trade would largely absorb the transaction tax.

It is instructive to compare the Townsend plan with our social-security law. It was intended to provide a coordinated plan of old-age security. We all believe in its objectives. It needs, however, major amendments. Should the full amount of these taxes be exacted, the reserve account will have by 1980 a "paper balance" of $47,000,000,000, a nation's ransom, wholly unnecessary, draining white industry and labor alike.

Roger W. Babson, the outstanding financial expert, in discussing the social-security program recently, said:

> These social-security taxes alone are now giving the Government about $1,000,000,000 a year of new spending money. This is the annual contribution of millions of individuals to the trust fund which is supposed to provide them with a monthly income in their old age. The funds, however, are being used for current public expenses. Is one cent being set aside for the future?
>
> If the social-security system is not changed, I doubt very much if the young people of 20 to 30 years of age will ever receive any benefit from it. When their time arrives to get their $40, $50, or $60 monthly Government check, it may not even buy a pair of shoes or a roast of beef. The Townsend plan, on some reasonable basis, is far safer.

The economist John T. Flynn, before the Ways and Means Committee of the House, said:

> Over the next 40 years what they are actually going to do under the guise of creating a reserve is to collect $47,000,000,000 more than they pay out, and this $47,000,000,000 is never going to be paid back in any form to the social-security system.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> I want the Government to stop collecting money it is not going to use for social security. * * * Next year it is going to take $714,000,000; it is going to pay out $22,000,000 in benefits and spend $52,000,000 to run the system, making $74,000,000 in all, and it is going to borrow the balance and use it to pay the expenses of running the Government, maybe buy a battleship or two, and a few other things. That mony is never going to be used for social security.

The reserve account, so-called, is only a bookkeeping entry, as the money is spent to bolster up an unbalanced Budget. Under the fiction indulged in, the I O U's of the Government are all that is left of the tax dollars exacted from industry and the workers. Eventually the same taxpayers who put up this fund, together with the other taxpayers of the Nation, must again be taxed to make the payments to old-age beneficiaries these funds were supposed to cover.

The taxpayer's burden has been increased almost threefold in the last 7 years, yet our deficit has averaged over three billions a year. The public debt has increased over twenty-three billions. It is obvious the Government is not keeping good faith with the wage earners and their employers from whom is taken this huge fund for old-age payments. The financial integrity of the Government cannot be maintained by adhering to such a program. To continue it means complete financial collapse.

The American people are pension-minded. The Gallup poll, released February 26, 1939, shows that 94 percent of our people favor a reasonable pension. Such a pension plan, on a pay-as-you-go basis, is desirable. As Mr. Babson said, referring to the social-security law:

> The Townsend plan on some reasonable basis is far safer.

The following States have sent memorials to Congress with reference to the plan: Arizona, California, Colorado, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Washington, and Wyoming. No pending legislation in the Congress affecting the general welfare of America has so captivated the rank and file of our American citizens. The movement is not political, sectarian, or class-promoted, and is Nation-wide. The wishes of the American people cannot be ignored.

This plan is not merely a pension program, but provides for national recovery and is a philosophy of life founded upon sound American principles. The legions of supporters of the movement in every State of the Union are loyal, patriotic, earnest American citizens pledged—

(1) To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States.

(2) To stand against the surrender of any of our traditional American liberties.

(3) To oppose fascism, communism, or any other form of dictatorship which may menace the traditional form of American government.

(4) To strive for a higher standard of living for the underprivileged classes.

(5) To stand as a safeguard of the American tradition against racial, political, or religious intolerance.

(6) To foster and promote better citizenship by educating the voters to safeguard their own interests.

The old-age security law has failed to solve this social problem of affording relief to our old people; on the other hand, it has exacted unnecessary, burdensome taxes from workers and employers alike, impeding business and halting recovery. It is limited in its applications to selected groups. It rests upon the fiction that these taxes are to be used for relief payments, whereas the money is immediately spent for Government activities. It stifles industry and robs the wage earner, giving little relief. The Townsend plan, on the other hand, is a pay-as-you-go program. It is universal throughout the United States in its application, covering all citizens 60 years of age or over, otherwise qualified. It is a sound American plan. It will create purchasing power. It will start mills and factories. It will provide pay rolls. It will afford an immense market for American products and will lead America back onto the high road to prosperity.

As Mr. Babson says:

Fundamentally, the only real security is high spiritual and intellectual character. Industry, honesty, thrift, ability, courage, and kindness are those vital factors which make any security program click. Eliminate these qualities and insurance of any kind is useless. The government is simply the organization of people. The moral fiber of the government reflects the moral fiber of the people. If the people do not have strong character, their government insurance and security is useless.

Mr. Chairman, I urge upon the serious consideration of the Members of this House, as a measure which will ultimately make unnecessary W. P. A. and other similar relief, H. R. 2, and I trust that you will join with the author of this legislation in making it possible that it may be brought upon the floor for debate and consideration.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. SHAFER].

Mr. SHAFER of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I will take but a moment of the Committee's time. I will vote for an appropriation of $55,000,000 for W. P. A., and not one cent more.

Colonel Harrington's own statement before the Appropriations Committee was to the effect that $55,000,000 would permit him to carry on the program of the W. P. A. to the end of June without any reductions in the pay roll. In view of Colonel Harrington's own statements, I cannot see how I could justify a vote for a larger appropriation.

It is my understanding that there will be a motion to recommit this bill with instructions that it be reported back to the House forthwith in the amount of $55,000,000. I will cast an affirmative vote on this motion. If the motion carries, I will vote for the bill. If the motion fails and the bill provides for more than $55,000,000, I will cast a negative vote on final passage.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH].

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, the ink is hardly drp upon the resolution passed by this body last Monday for an investigation of the Works Progress Administration.

Today we are asked to appropriate another $100,000,000 before the investigation has even gotten under way. In view of the serious charges that have been made from time to time against the administration of W. P. A. in the past, I believe that any appropriation now will be interpreted by the people as an indication the proposed investigation will be nothing but a beautiful gesture and a prelude to a whitewashing of things that have passed.

There is still sufficient money available from previous appropriations to carry on the work of W. P. A. for another month or two. The Appropriations Committee has an obligation to the Congress and the people which should be discharged before we appropriate another dollar.

We should have this investigation first and appropriate every cent that is needed to take care of the people afterward. This investigation need not require a great length of time nor the expenditure of a huge sum of money. There is available for the Appropriations Committee information which has been submitted to the Special Committee to Investigate Campaign Expenditures of the Senate concerning the activities and operations of W. P. A. in the States of Kentucky, Tennessee, and Pennsylvania. There is also available to this committee, if it so desires the results of an investigation made into election irregularities in various counties in the State of Indiana, which will throw considerable light on the operations of W. P. A. in that State. In New Mexico the irregularities and graft in connection with W. P. A. have already resulted in many indictments.

In Missouri only last week a W. P. A. foreman was shot down while in the process of robbing a merchant.

We ought to investigate among others the Dr. Jekyll's and the Mr. Hyde's in W. P. A. We ought separate the wheat from the chaff, so if we possibly can, restrict the future distribution of public relief to law-abiding citizens.

Mr. Chairman, I am against an appropriation of any amount at this time. We are trying to put the cart before the horse if we do so. We will try to lock the stable after the horse is stolen. Let us be sensible, look before we leap, and investigate before we appropriate.

Here is a chance to put practical economy into practice, and it will not be at the cost of human misery. We all have taken an oath of office to support the Constitution of the United States of America. You have enough information showing you that much of the money spent in the guise of relief has been wasted and squandered. Our system of administering relief is wrong and you all know it.

Under such conditions, and every Member of Congress knowing it, then to misappropriate funds is a direct violation of your duty and contrary to sound business principles and a violation of your oath and obligation to your country.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GROSS].

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, members of the Committee, as a farmer I voted against parity appropriation to farmers, and I am going to vote against this appropriation for the following reasons: Because people everywhere have been forced onto relief; because of the methods of administration and the rottenness and waste that exist; it is well known that people are getting $1 per hour, and no one knows that they are employed except the bankers who cash their checks.

If the Public Treasury could stand the present procedure, public sentiment could no longer tolerate it. Even those getting relief are disgusted with it.

Here is a common-sense relief program: Give the American farmer the American market and let him alone; see that the social-security moneys are used as was intended; amend the Wagner Act so industry can operate; amend the wage and hour law so that countless thousands now forced into idleness and onto relief may return to their work that is waiting for them; see that the consumer gets his food and clothing at the same low price that the producer has to take. Then prices will go up.

And let me say to this side of the House: Do you remember that last September in 10 days the hog market dropped $2 per hundredweight, and in the same time the President's popularity dropped from 56 to 47?

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ALEXANDER].

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Chairman, it has been interesting to me to listen to the debate on the pending bill. There has been a great deal of constructive information developed on both sides of the aisle.

You will remember the statement made here yesterday by the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] when he said:

Money is being wasted so fast that it is a menace to our national existence.

You will also remember the statement by the gentleman from Missouri, which followed closely that of the gentleman from New York, who said:

If you do not vote this money for the W. P. A., you will have riots, you will have bloodshed, you will have revolution.

Mr. Chairman, I have no doubt that both of these gentlemen were honest and sincere in their convictions and I have no doubt also that there is a great deal of truth in what both of them said, although you can see they indicate the two extremes of this problem. It is my intention, I may say in passing, to support, if an amendment is brought in, an appropriation for $150,000,000 for the W. P. A. [applause], or any other sum which the House decides is the proper amount.

Mr. Chairman, I want to call attention to something which I said on this very subject on January 13. If these gentlemen, whose remarks I have quoted, are correct, if they are right, then is it not plain to all of us that we are wasting time—I should say, not only our money but our time—in discussing this problem without working out something of a constructive, sound nature as a substitute which will solve the ever-recurring problem of voting money for the W. P. A.?

There is an answer to this problem of relief and unemployment in the United States of America. If we, with the matchless brains and intelligence which there is in this House, would set up a committee as I suggested in January, I have no doubt but that we could work out a sound and constructive program which would solve this problem instead of bankrupting the Nation and instead of continuing to waste the money as has been charged and instead of bringing about bloodshed, riot, and revolution. We would then get back on a good, sound, firm foundation for our American Government.

I presume there is some justification for the charges that have been made on both sides. I want to discuss some of the statements that have been made with reference to two or three of these charges. It was stated here yesterday that the W. P. A. spends some $4,547,597 in the course of one month for personal services. I do not know how many of you have broken down this figure, but I took the time to do it. I divided that by the 34,572 people who are employed in the executive and administrative departments of the W. P. A. throughout the country, including those in Washington, and I find that it amounts to the amazingly low sum of $131.54 per month for each of those employees on an average. I want to add that the 34,572 also includes some high-paid officials, of whom we must necessarily have some in so large a business venture, involving nearly $2,000,000,000 a year as it does.

According to the testimony before the committee, there are 26 assistant administrators receiving over $600 per month salary.

Greatly to his credit as a patriot and a citizen, W. P. A. Administrator Harrington is accepting a yearly salary of only $7,179, although he is entitled to receive $12,000, the same as his predecessor, Mr. Hopkins, received.

I have faith and confidence in Colonel Harrington. I know he is not only honest, but he is a good businessman, with fine judgment. And as a result of that faith and confidence, I believe, if he asks for $150,000,000, that it is needed, and will be used just as sparingly and efficiently as circumstances and good business practice and judgment warrant.

THE LOCAL ANGLE

Now, just a thought as to the necessity for the present appropriation viewed from the local angle. Last week I had a call at my office on the part of Mr. Ole A. Pearson, efficient superintendent of public relief for Minneapolis.

Mr. Pearson brought me a detailed report of their relief problem. He showed that their load is not only increasing, but that they are not far from the day when no more bonds can be floated to meet relief costs, because of their statutory debt limitation. If the Federal Government forces more unemployed on local communities, all the sooner will local funds be completely depleted.

I am also this morning in receipt of a letter and resolution from the great city of St. Paul, pleading for the $150,000,000 W. P. A. appropriation which is now being considered. Doubtless their plight is as great or greater than Minneapolis. And what is true of these two cities, is probably similarly true of most other large cities in America today.

The St. Paul city resolution is as follows:

Whereas appropriations heretofore made by the Congress of the United States for the Works Progress Administration are insufficient to carry on such activities for the balance of this fiscal year, ending July 1; and

Whereas the Works Progress Administration has advised that it will be necessary to reduce persons on W. P. A. in the county of Ramsey, and that such reduction in W. P. A. forces will force approximately 2,500 more families on relief; and

Whereas the city of St. Paul and the county of Ramsey are unable to care for such additional families on relief and are finding it increasingly more difficult to finance their present direct relief load, without the addition of the said 2,500 more families; and

Whereas there is now pending before the Congress of the United States an appropriation bill which will appropriate $150,000,000 to care for the deficiency in the W. P. A. funds for this fiscal year: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Council of the City of St. Paul, That it urges the Congress of the United States to adopt such deficiency appropriation bill; be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be forwarded to the members of the Minnesota delegation in the House of Representatives and the Senate of the United States.

Because of these facts and circumstances I feel that I must support the request of the W. P. A. Administrator, Colonel Harrington, in order to take care of the present needs of so many thousands of our people.

THREE MILLION NOW ON W. P. A.

On April 1 there will be approximately 3,000,000 workers employed on the W. P. A. program, and none of these will be subject to discharge on the grounds that they are not in need. This number of workers is far in excess of the employment level that can be maintained during April, May, and June with the funds that are available at the present time, even though it is assumed that reserves which are normally maintained would be expended by June 30.

By carrying out the employment reduction which must be made, an emergency situation would be created which would have a direct effect not only on the workers involved but on the direct relief programs of the States and localities, and on business conditions generally, as a result of the sudden withdrawal of a large volume of consumer purchasing power. The actual number of workers who must be discharged increases directly with the length of time over which the process of employment reduction is to be spread. It is imperative, therefore, that the reduction begin immediately on the 1st of April and that the total employment be reduced to 2,000,000 as rapidly as possible.

It is obvious that any improvement in business and employment conditions which may occur in the next 3 months cannot possibly absorb the number of workers who must be removed from the W. P. A. rolls. It must be remembered that for every W. P. A. worker there are about three other unemployed workers competing for jobs which open up in private industry.

As a matter of fact, as I anticipated at the time of the January congressional hearings, there has been a temporary interruption in the trend of business and employment conditions which had progressed upward at a rapid rate throughout the fall of 1938, and during January nonagricultural employment declined by 900,000. Other indicators of industrial production and business conditions reflect a period of adjustment during the general upward movement. It can be reasonably predicted that the general improvement will be resumed during the spring, but it is clear that a very rapid expansion of business activity would be necessary during April, May, and June to bring about the net increase of 1,500,000 in private employment, on which the President's original recommendation was predicated. I think it is clear that the estimate was the most optimistic one which can be justified in the light of existing conditions, and it is equally clear that the dismissal of 1,000,000 W. P. A. workers in April and May would result in widespread suffering.

The average W. P. A. worker has three other persons dependent on him for support, and the arbitrary discharge of 1,000,000 W. P. A. workers would affect the day-to-day existence of a total of 4,000,000 people. If all these people were brought together they would comprise a population as large as that of the city of Chicago, and the extent of the emergency which would be created by separating this number of people from employment and reducing them to complete destitution can be readily imagined.

State and local relief agencies at the present time are providing direct relief for over 1,750,000 households, and hundreds of thousands of these households have workers who are eligible for W. P. A. employment. The latest reports show that there are approximately 865,000 workers certified to the W. P. A. as being in need of relief and eligible for W. P. A. employment who have not been assigned to W. P. A. jobs for the reason that adequate funds are not available.

The current review of the need of W. P. A. workers indicates that most of the 1,000,000 persons who would have to be dismissed by the W. P. A. would be forced to turn to State and local agencies for direct relief. In most States and cities relief funds are inadequate to meet the load which is being carried at the present time, and hundreds of thousands of the discharged W. P. A. workers and their families would be left without assistance of any kind. While others would be taken onto local direct relief rolls, this would mean that relief funds would have to be spread even thinner than they are at the present time and that local relief standards, which are already wholly inadequate in many areas, would be even further reduced.

"WHITE COLLAR" WORKERS

We hear a lot of talk about the W. P. A. money spent for educational and recreational services. I want to say a word about that, because I think much of the criticism is unjustified and uncalled for. Currently about 12.5 percent of the total amount expended on projects operated by the W. P. A. is used for educational, professional, recreational, and other "white collar" projects, which provide employment for workers who had formerly been engaged in private employment of this type.

Expenditures on Federal art, music, theater, and writers' projects represent 1.8 percent of total W. P. A. project expenditures; educational and recreational projects each comprise about 1.8 percent of the total, and the remainder represents expenditures on clerical, research, and other types of "white collar" work.

If "white collar" work were eliminated from the program entirely, the net result would be that the W. P. A. could provide only unskilled or other manual labor for needy workers whose training and job experience would be completely wasted, and would deteriorate rapidly on jobs of that kind. Many "white collar" workers would not be physically able to perform the manual labor required on W. P. A. construction jobs.

A major contribution of the "white collar" program, in addition to the tangible results which it produces, is the preservation of the skills and talents of the persons who are engaged on the projects. The assignment of a competent professional worker to an unskilled manual laborer's job not only results in a complete loss of individual morale, but also tends to reduce this group of workers to a state where they are, in effect, no longer reemployable at their former occupations, and tends to make them permanently dependent on the Government for support.

The importance of professional, "white collar," and service workers in the national economy is larger than is generally realized and their need for employment cannot be ignored. The census of 1930 showed more than one-third of all nonagricultural workers were employed in professional, service, managerial, or "white collar" jobs; 11 percent of all W. P. A. workers are employed on "white collar" projects, and it is apparent that the W. P. A. "white collar" program is not disproportionate to the needs of this group of workers.

Taken all in all, and until we can develop a satisfactory substitute in the way of reemployment, I feel that we are left no alternative but to vote for this appropriation. [Applause.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. HEALEY].

Mr. HEALEY. Mr. Chairman, the very able and eloquent gentleman from Virginia prefaced his remarks yesterday by saying that he conceived it to be the duty of the Federal Government in the discharge of its obligations toward society to assume its share of the relief burden. We have by common usage during this emergency construed that duty to entail the providing of work at least at a security wage to those employables throughout the Nation who have been unable to find employment in private industry. The States and their subdivisions have assumed the duty of providing subsistence for the unemployables and their dependents, as well as the burden of furnishing the tools and materials necessary for the employment of those employables whose wages the Government pays through the instrumentality of the W. P. A.

If we are going to assume this obligation—and I believe it is the will of Congress that we shall assume it—I think it is tolerably clear that we should provide ourselves with all the facts concerning the problem of unemployment in this Nation. I maintain that we did not legislate on the basis of adequate information in January when we passed the bill appropriating $725,000,000, and that we have no scientific factual basis for the bill before us today. On the contrary, I believe, if anyone will read these hearings, particularly the statement of Colonel Harrington, which has remained unshaken by the very expert questioning of my friend the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM], chairman of the subcommittee, he cannot but reach the conclusion that there is no scientific foundation for this sum. It is mere guesswork—an arbitrary slash with no factual support or justification.

In support of this contention I wish to read just the opening statement made by Colonel Harrington before the committee. He states:

> I have never known the basis on which that figure was arrived at—

Colonel Harrington was referring to the cut of $150,000,000 in the appropriation in January—> or whether it had any relation to any proposed program or not. Obviously, it intended that there should be a reduction below what the President proposed, but I am not familiar with the reason why it was $150,000,000 instead of, say, $100,000,000 or $200,000,000 or some other amount.

In other words, there was no objective standard or guide upon which the Congress could have or should have taken the action it did in January in approving the reduction to $725,000,000.

In order that the Congress may be enlightened and in order that this body itself and the Committee on Appropriations may have the real facts, I have recently introduced House Resolution 129.

This resolution provides that the Committee on Appropriations, or a duly authorized subcommittee thereof, be authorized and directed to conduct an investigation of the extent of unemployment in all cities in the United States of 5,000 population or over.

For such purposes the committee would be authorized to obtain from the mayors or other officials of cities and towns of 5,000 or over population, by means of questionnaires or other suitable methods, information regarding the extent of unemployment in their several communities, the extent of their relief problems, and other information directly bearing on the problems involved in determining the size of appropriations necessary for W. P. A. purposes. Such information, when obtained, is to be furnished to the Committee on Appropriations and the House of Representatives to serve as a guide in our deliberations on the whole subject.

I believe that the mayors and officials of cities and towns are in a position to furnish swift and accurate information regarding the extent of unemployment and the relief needs of their respective municipalities. Through the medium of a questionnaire I feel that the committee could gather together within a very short time data that would present a fairly complete and accurate picture of the extent of unemployment throughout the Nation today. There would be very little expense involved by such a study and the results would serve to remove the whole question from the realm of speculation and furnish to the committee and the House the factual basis so necessary to guide them in their deliberations on this vital subject.

I have been informed by the chairman of the subcommittee [Mr. WOODRUM] that he believes the language of the resolution of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. COX] which was adopted a few days ago by the House is broad enough to include an inquiry of this sort. If so, I would have no objection to action being taken to obtain this information under the terms of that resolution.

But, in any event, I feel that this type of information is an essential prerequisite to consideration of the entire question of relief appropriations, and I hope that by the time the regular appropriation for W. P. A. comes before us the House will have a solid and substantial factual report to safely guide it in its deliberations. [Applause.]

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from California [Mr. HINSHAW].

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Chairman, while I intend to vote for this deficiency bill as reported out by the committee, appropriating $100,000,000 for W. P. A., may I remind the Members that if the W. P. A. were to undertake to employ all of the 12,000,000 unemployed at the average wage of $61 per month, the Congress would have to appropriate the staggering sum of $8,784,000,000 each year. That cannot be done, and every Member knows it.

Something has to be done to correct this unemployment situation—and done soon. It is a cancer eating out the very substance of this Nation. I have been here 3 months now, and practically nothing has been done to attack this basic problem.

All we have done is pass a few little bills and appropriate billions. We cry our eyes out for the poor unemployed and appropriate an average of $61 per month for about a quarter of them, but nothing is done to promote new jobs and new opportunities for them so that they may rejoin the normal society of self-supporting citizens.

As a matter of fact, this W. P. A. is becoming an ever-increasing monster in our midst. It is on the increase, because men cannot get jobs anywhere else. It has even gone so far that Government contracts are let to private contractors with a clause providing that as many laborers as possible shall be hired by the contractor from the relief rolls. What does that mean? It simply means that you almost have to be on relief to get a job on these projects. In my district men have applied for work on these projects and have been told that they could not get them because they were not on relief. On the one hand the relief rolls are reduced, and on the other hand people are forced to go on the rolls.

I recently, on March 20, inserted a letter and resolution from the Los Angeles Building Trades Council into the Appendix of the RECORD—and here is the first paragraph of that resolution:

> Whereas, after a thorough study of the conditions in the methods pursued by W. P. A. in the field of the building and construction industry, wherein W. P. A. is setting up construction projects in direct competition to those engaged in the industry, and on which projects, due to the regulation provided, it is practically impossible for the regular building-trades mechanics, who have spent their life in the industry, to be certified.

It is a serious condition when a workman has to be listed on the relief rolls in order to be considered for employment on a Government contract. I am sure Congress has not intended that, in reducing relief rolls on the one hand, new clients should be added on the other.

In this connection I want to bring up another similar subject. We find that because you have to be on relief to get these jobs, it eliminates the employment of single men on these jobs. Single men cannot get on these jobs in my State; and I have a letter from a young man in my district, which clearly sets forth this position, that I intend to ask to be printed in full in the RECORD.

The letter follows:

ROSCOE, CALIF., March 20, 1939.

Hon. CARL HINSHAW,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

HONORABLE SIR: I will try in as few words as possible to explain to you a very unfavorable situation which now exists in this locality and doubtless in many others which you may or may not be aware of.

This situation tends to affect a great army of single men, such as myself, between the ages of 21 and 35, in obtaining employment, especially the kind relative to that which they are best suited for. The reason for this is that practically all of the public projects now in effect, the labor on such, both skilled and unskilled, must be taken from relief rolls or W. P. A. rolls; and what, may I ask you, are we single men who are not able to go on relief to do for a living?

In my own case, for instance, I have recently been laid off at the completion of a road project and have been striving desperately since to get work on others, but to no avail.

Speaking for myself, and I think a great majority of others, the routine is something like the following:

When I applied for relief, the first question asked was, "Are you married?" I answered "No," and was told that the only thing available for me was in a mountain camp, cutting brush and such, for the mere pittance of $5 a month and board. This savors of nazi-ism, this talk of concentration camps. Shall we go Hitler? Then there is another retort so often heard, "Get married, and you are all set." This is a Fascist idea, when they inaugurated the bachelor's tax in Italy. Shall we go Mussolini? And, besides, show me a man who has no more pride in him than to take his bride to a relief office in order to provide sustenance. We want a job first, so we can work for a wife and build our homes and raise real American children who will never know the meaning of the word "dole." But, instead of getting away from all of this, we are being shoved into it deeper every day.

Recently the W. P. A. was just allotted a large appropriation; today the President is asking for one hundred and fifty million more for these poor unfortunates, and we cannot qualify. The F. H. A. will not finance us a home because we cannot qualify. I am a taxpayer, and built my own modest home myself, and must pay $27 a month to the various merchants who furnished the materials, but what have I done to be thus disowned by my country, and especially the administration which we voted for and so earnestly believed would solve our problems; and now we stand idly by and see others take the jobs that we by every right should have a share of, and at the same time uncounted thousands of migrants from other States are crowding in here, and the (our) Government is quick to feed, clothe, and shelter them and give them money and work. To those who have not the wherewithal to buy the barest necessities goes our tax money, and we reflect with grim humor when we read of our Honorable MARTIN DIES attempting to stamp out "isms," supposedly coming from other countries, when it is here in our own America where communism, fascism, and nazi-ism is being bred. Let him look no further than our own shores.

Lastly, I say, "Throw open these jobs to all" that we may have some of them, for there is revolt brewing against this. to our way of thinking, useless and unhelpful measures. Can you help us?

I trust, honorable sir, that I have not taken up too much of your valuable time with this missive, but we are asking for your help and feel that you agree, if only in part, with the contents of this letter, and that it is a problem that needs everyone's cooperation in remedying at the earliest possible time, else it will and can become most disastrous.

Thanking you in advance for any aid you may be of and for your kind consideration, I am

Your loyal constituent,

THOMAS J. PENDLETON.

Now, in conclusion, there has been a great deal of talk here about reactionaries and reference to the preceding Republican administration. I want to say that I cannot see where the present administration has done anything to improve employment other than spend money it does not have, but has to borrow from the people themselves. In fact, it would almost seem that this administration has done everything it could to smother the courage and character and initiative of the people. There are taxes and taxes and anticipated taxes, and there are reports and reports and inspectors and rules made by bureaucrats that nobody knows about until they have violated them.

When are we going to consider the problems of the great middle class and unemployed workers of this Nation? They are the ones who are slowly but surely being drained of their substance and forced lower and lower toward relief. I have not seen any effort on the part of this administration to consider ways and means of stimulating business and reemployment in order that this great burden may be lifted. What about the young man coming out of school? Is his only hope to be relief? Let us get down to brass tacks and really do something constructive.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. LORD].

Mr. LORD. Mr. Chairman, we all want to take care of those in need and take care of them well, but when I heard the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] and the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM] speak yesterday and bring out the facts regarding some of the waste that has been going on of the funds appropriated for W. P. A. I was willing to rest the case then and rise and vote on the bill. What we have had to say in the meantime has been about matters we have had on our own minds, but I believe we would have done just as well and have saved 1 day of time if we had stopped at that point.

When we find that $500,000 is spent in 1 month for traveling expenses and $150,000 for telephone and telegraph expense, by the W. P. A. officials, we can see how far this sum might have gone to take care of the poor persons of the country. We are appalled to learn that the W. P. A. has exhibits at the international expositions at Paris,

France, and London, England, advertising the distress in America. We learn that W. P. A. is expending $300,000 at the New York World's Fair to construct a building in which to advertise to the world this same fact. All of this waste when so many people need assistance and for whose aid this money should have been expended. Now how are we ever going to get out of this mess? That is what we have to think about. What is going to be the future of relief? I believe we should turn relief back to the States to administer. The Government has proven it is not competent to take care of the situation without wasting tremendous sums of money. If we should appropriate just one-half of the amount of money we are appropriating today and turn it over to the States to administer through their local agencies which are already set up, there would be no expense of administration and we could take care of the people better and have more money to feed the people who are in need than we have today. Much more worth while work could be done and then if the administration would let business go ahead we could work out of these troubled times and get back to the 1926 days when the Republicans were in control. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MASSINGALE].

Mr. MASSINGALE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of, and will support, the amendment that will be proposed here to make the amount of this appropriation $150,000,000.

There has been a great deal of discussion here that, in my opinion, ought not to have been made. I do not like to hear a Member be too critical of the other party. I happen to belong to the other party in this controversy, but I wish to say to the distinguished gentleman from Michigan, who said that he did not know what the gentlemen would have done in 1787 when they were trying to draft a Constitution if they had known that 150 years later the Congress of the United States would consist of such wild spenders, that had those same gentlemen known that the great party to which he belongs would in 4 years—from 1928 to 1932—have engaged in a spree of stealing and plundering this Nation to the extent of $250,000,000,000, probably they never would have launched the ship of state in 1787.

It is said by economists that the Government of the United States lost in assets better than $250,000,000,000 by reason of what took place during the Republican administration. I do not know whether or not that is true or whether it is a little bit of Democratic propaganda. I am inclined to believe sometimes that it is true. If it is true, the Republicans have no right to complain because the public debt the Democrats have run up is as large as it is. They ought not to complain until we get back some of the $250,000,000,000 we lost by reason of the Republican regime.

I have listened attentively to the debate, especially to the remarks of the gentleman from Virginia. I admire the gentleman and every man admires the gentleman's ability and his courage, but I want to tell you that while I admire his courage he knows, and I want you to know, if you do not know it, I am not in sympathy with his philosophy of government. The gentleman states that he favors legislation that will take care of those who are in need and in distress. I am satisfied that the gentleman does favor it. I will just say this to you.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 1 more minute.

Mr. MASSINGALE. Mr. Chairman, I am sorry I cannot have more time because I want to talk nice about the gentleman from Virginia. [Laughter.] I admire him. Every man in this House admires the masterful manner in which he has presented the other side of this controversy, but I cannot agree with him. I think if he had voted along with me on other appropriation bills a few days ago, he would have had better standing with me, anyhow. [Laughter and applause.] Before we cut loose and condemn everything the W. P. A. has done should it not be better and fairer to look at some things done by the W. P. A.?

Mr. Chairman, so much misinformation has been spread about the value of the Works Progress Administration to the country, I take the liberty of submitting herewith somewhat of a summary, without having the time to make actual statements about the general character of the work done by the W. P. A. in Oklahoma. It must be borne in mind that Oklahoma has been one of the drought-ridden agricultural States, and that had it not been for the aid to the people of that State through the Federal works program during the last 5 years, there would have been complete economic disaster in that section of the country. Approximately half the State's relief roll is made up of the one-time fairly well-off tenant farmers and landowners who have been impoverished by drought, crop failures, and low prices for farm commodities. Most of these classes have been forced to accept relief checks as their only means of obtaining a reasonable livelihood.

In addition to the farmers and landowners that have been forced to seek work on W. P. A. projects, a large number of oil-field workers, miners, and craftsmen of all types, and industrial workers have been without any permanent employment during these years of distress, and they also had to look to the W. P. A. for work enough to sustain them and their families in part. Many lasting and worth while improvments have been made in Oklahoma by the W. P. A., and the earnings in working on these improvements have enabled business in that State to keep going to a larger extent than any other program of private business has been able to do.

In fact, Oklahoma is a panorama of Federal work relief buildings and improvement. Every city and community in Oklahoma has received the benefit of W. P. A. activities, and new elementary- and high-school buildings, courthouses, community recreation halls, parks, swimming pools, new streets and sidewalks, new roads throughout the State, busses to take children to and from school, improved roads over which to carry the mail, are visible everywhere in the 77 counties of Oklahoma. It is estimated that 75 percent of all construction work carried on in the State of Oklahoma has been through the W. P. A.

Perhaps the largest program in the State has been the farm-to-market roads which have been sponsored by the county commissioners of the counties of Oklahoma, and it is said that in each county from 150 to 1,000 miles of county and State roads and highways have been built in Oklahoma since 1933 as projects of the W. P. A. Indeed, in many counties of Oklahoma, the essential and ordinary work of the boards of county commissioners in their respective counties would have been completely abandoned had not the Federal Government provided assistance for carrying on such works through a Works Progress Administration. In the country districts of the State, the rural population has been benefited more than any other sections of the State.

In addition to the work as outlined, there has been much done in the way of sanitation and malaria control, sewing-room projects, and repair work on county and town buildings.

Another thing that should not be lost sight of is that fully 75 percent of all county officials in the State of Oklahoma, according to reports, are enthusiastic in their appraisal of the character and high standard of the work done under the direction of the W. P. A. authorities. Common laborers have been taught to become skilled workmen, and over all the State wherever there is native stone or rock, these men have been taught to shape the rocks for construction purposes, and many thousands of tons of building material have been taken from the quarries, shaped into materials fitted for construction purposes, and attractive as well as permanent public school and other structures, including bridges and culverts have been built. There have been constructed in the State up to July 1, 1938, 1,185 new buildings; 820 buildings have been repaired and improved; and on 76 buildings there have been additions of a permanent character made.

Three hundred and eleven public-school buildings have been constructed, 492 have been repaired, and additions have been made on 52.

Five new libraries have been built and several improved.

One hundred and ninety-two recreational buildings have been constructed, including 15 auditoriums, 26 stadiums, 55 gymnasiums, and 96 pavilions, bathhouses, and the like.

In addition, hospitals, penal institutions and other buildings have been constructed.

Sixteen courthouses have been constructed, 16 additional ones have been repaired, and on 2 courthouses additions have been made.

Such buildings as fire houses, aircraft hangars, warehouses, and armories have been built in the State.

There have been constructed 15,466 miles of highways, roads, and streets, and 438 miles of these have been paved. One hundred and eighty-one miles of paving have been repaired. Better than 14,000 miles of unpaved roads have been constructed. Eight hundred and fifty miles of urban streets have been constructed, and about 150 miles of those streets have been repaired and made travelable. Roads and driveways have been constructed through parks and cemeteries, and road shoulders, bridges, and culverts, sidewalks, and paths have been built in every community of the State. One thousand two hundred and sixty-seven bridges have been constructed. Eight hundred and fifty-nine unsafe bridges have been repaired and improved. The bridges mentioned under new construction aggregate in length 72,489 feet, and the repaired bridges total a length of 39,395 feet.

Culverts, which are as essential to roads as bridges, have been constructed to the number of 21,080, and 2,300 additional culverts have been improved. The total length of culvert construction is 570,293 feet, and 60,932 feet of repairs in culvert work have been completed.

These improvements, including dams on streams, streambed improvements, levees, revetments, and embankments number thousands of linear feet and include many thousands of cubic yards of concrete.

It would take several pages of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD to set out a list of the improvements that have been made in the State of Oklahoma through the Works Progress Administration. In my own district there have been several hundred modern, attractive, and permanent school buildings constructed, and many are now under construction.

In fact, as a result of the activities of the W. P. A., interest in public construction of useful and permanent buildings of all sorts has been stimulated to an extent not known heretofore. It is possible now, by reason of the work done by the Works Progress Administration, that thousands upon thousands of school boys and girls have comfortable school buildings and facilities that heretofore they had not enjoyed. All of the new buildings are thoroughly modern.

So far as Oklahoma is concerned, the citizens of that State are grateful beyond expression to the Congress for making it possible for them in times of distress to receive these improvements.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 13 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN].

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, 90 days from today the Secretary of the Treasury will close the books for the fiscal year 1939. The national debt will stand somewhere in excess of $44,000,000,000. This means the equivalent of $100,000,000 for each of the 435 Members of this House. The deficit for the fiscal year 1939 will be in excess of $4,000,000,000. We will have expended about $10,000,000 more for each of the 435 Members of this House in a single year than we took in.

Now, you cannot contemplate a situation like that without looking into the future and wondering what kind of consistent policy can be developed in the matter of expenditures. I think I have found it for myself and I am not going to depart from it, even for the sake of political expediency.

I had as much, if not more, to lose in the parity-payments vote the other day than most of the Members of this House, because I have six counties in the farm belt. I have as much to lose politically today in my attitude as any Member of this House, because one-half of my district is industrial, but notwithstanding all that, I have tried to hew to a philosophy on which I can stand, and it is briefly this:

I am not opposed to Government spending, but I am opposed to increased Government spending unless there is an absolute need and a conclusive justification for it, and that has not been demonstrated in connection with the bill that is before us today. We are going to have to be like the old wag who, when he was asked to donate to the building of a fence around the cemetery, said, "I will not donate because it is not needed. In the first place, nobody who is in the cemetery can get out, and in the second place, nobody who is on the outside wants to get in." [Laughter.]

This is going to be my philosophy, and this matter will have to be demonstrated from the standpoint of need and justification. Using that as a yardstick, what are we up against today? Do we have to have this money right away? No; that is answered in the letter that Colonel Harrington wrote to Senator VANDENBERG on the 27th day of March, and which is reproduced on pages 3337–3338 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. The money that W. P. A. has at the present time is sufficient to carry out the program as laid down and scheduled by the President until the 7th day of June. So while there is an apparent emergency here, strictly speaking, it is not an emergency and from that standpoint it cannot be justified.

Secondly, how can we justify an expenditure at this time, when only on Monday of this week, this House, by a vote of 351 to 27 voted to investigate the W. P. A.? For what purpose? For the purpose of enabling the Congress better to examine future legislation in behalf of relief. That resolution provides for a thorough investigation and study of the Administration, the laws, the regulations, and the orders that have been isued by W. P. A. You have to have a lot of courage to vote any more money when, by a solemn mandate of this House by vote of 351 to 27, we have stated that W. P. A. should be investigated. This is No. 2.

No. 3 is that I find it pretty hard to advance money for an agency which in some parts of the country is under suspicion. On the day before yesterday in a Washington paper, the Times-Herald, was this short clip on the first page:

> Five more guilty of W. P. A. frauds. Five more in New Mexico, one of whom was the county chairman of Mora County, N. Mex., whose name is Bernard Cruez.

I undertook to ask a few questions in the right places, and I find that among other things Mr. Cruez has been using W. P. A. labor in order to build a house for himself. I am informed that matter was brought to the attention of Mr. Hopkins when he was still the Administrator, and nothing was done about it.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield to the gentleman from New Mexico.

Mr. DEMPSEY. The gentleman from Illinois has most graciously yielded to me because I am the Representative from the State of New Mexico. I am not going, as you probably think, to make any denial about politics in W. P. A. in New Mexico.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I think the gentleman is to be congratulated for that statement on the matter.

Mr. DEMPSEY. I want to say to the gentleman that as a member of the Rules Committee I voted for the Cox resolution to investigate the W. P. A., and I was recorded as voting for it on this floor. For 2½ years I made so many trips to the W. P. A. offices in Washington I could not count them, pointing out that people were certified in New Mexico, not based upon need, not based upon dependents, but based upon how many votes they could control and how they would vote them.

Mr. DIRKSEN. There you have a pretty conclusive statement of the case from the gentleman from New Mexico himself.

Mr. DEMPSEY. We have a situation that we have cleaned up or are cleaning up. I do not know anything about the men who have been indicted in New Mexico, whether they are guilty or innocent, and nobody will know until they are tried, but I do know that it took a Federal judge, a Democratic judge, to bring about the investigation, and when we tried to have the W. P. A. investigate it we got no action.

Mr. DIRKSEN. The corollary of that is this: This is entirely germane to the problem before the Congress today, for here is a diversion of funds voted by Congress for relief, and how can you justify the expenditure for more funds than are absolutely needed in the face of that statement, in the face of the statement of the distinguished gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. DEMPSEY]. That is No. 3.

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. The gentleman will excuse me. With respect to the certification which has been discussed, here is something that is illuminative on that point. On page 85 of the record of hearings you will find a squib taken from the Cleveland Plain Dealer, introduced into the hearings by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM], and on reading this item you will see that they actually sped up the certifications out there so as to get a great bulging list of people ready for assignment, and as the language continues, "so that the President can persuade a hostile Congress of the necessity of another deficiency appropriation."

If that sort of thing is going on in different sections of the country, it accounts then for the extra number of certifications at the present time. Obviously, it can only be construed as an effort to coerce the Congress.

The next item I desire to bring to the attention of the Committee is this: If you look at the report, you will find that there is no justification whatsoever for any expenditure in excess of $55,000,000.

Mr. CASEYof Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. The gentleman will excuse me, please, at present. Look on page 3 of the committee report and there you find the following language: "Obviously there could be deducted without interference with the program visualized by such original recommendation," the following amount, aggregating some $69,000,000, partly for the aliens that will be taken off, partly for the people who are eligible for social-security relief, and partly for the one-quarter month pay roll charged to the initial appropriation for the current fiscal year. Deduct that from the available amount and there in the committee's own language you have a statement that $100,000,000 is not needed, is not necessary. The committee report continues further on page 3 to the effect that administrative expenses of the Works Progress Administration are unjustifiably high, in the opinion of the committee. If economies are made in accordance with the expectation of the committee, still other economies could be made, so that the amount needed is less than the sum of $55,000,000, rather than the $100,000,000.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. We then come back to this whole question of whether $100,000,000 is needed, and there has been no demonstration, no proof, no conclusive evidence, that $100,000,000 is needed at this particular time. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Will the gentleman explain why the committee in its report, and why the people who take the position that the committee has taken, omit mention of the figure 850,000 people who are certified as eligible for W. P. A.? Why was that omitted from the report or from any of the arguments advanced against an increase in this appropriation?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I do not know why it was omitted from the report, but the language of the Cleveland Plain Dealer inserted on page 85 of the record to show how certifications have been speeded up, indicates that any figure they may have put in the record after word had gone out to speed up, would not help this Congress in reaching a solution.

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. Does the gentleman know in the case of the certifications that they originate largely with local authorities, welfare agencies, and in many instances from a Republican source?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I do not know; but I want to get one more matter before the Committee before my time expires. On the 18th of January of this year the Assistant Administrator of the Public Works Administration came before the independent offices subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations, and you will find his testimony starts on page 1240 of the hearings. Here is what Colonel Gray told our subcommittee: He said that the 1938 P. W. A. program going into effect now would have the greatest effect on unemployment of any program yet launched, and will reach 500,000 persons in July of this year in the way of jobs. He testified that you can multiply that by two and a half to take care of the number who will receive indirect employment. We had only 161,000 on P. W. A. rolls in January, and we will have 500,000 in July.

If you will interpolate the expenditures which they set out in the record, you will find that as early as April there will be a gain of 770,000 direct and indirect jobs, and by July the number will increase to 1,250,000. In view of that testimony from the Assistant Administrator of the P. W. A., where is the need, where is the justification for the expenditure of the money that is carried in the pending bill?

Surely it is self-evident that if the Public Works Administration expects to provide employment for as many as 380,000 at the site by April and another 950,000 indirect jobs as a result of the projects which are under way, the number of new available jobs will be sufficient to absorb the dismissals from W. P. A. and will go far toward absorbing the additional certifications for which no immediate provision is contemplated. Where, then, is the need for these funds at this time?

To summarize the situation, Mr. Chairman, Colonel Harrington, the Administrator of W. P. A., indicates in his letter of March 24 that the funds now available will carry him to June 7 on the schedule proposed by the President. The House has voted to make a thorough investigation. The report of the subcommittee in charge of this bill states clearly that $55,000,000 is ample to cover W. P. A. needs, and this does not include the administrative economies which are expected. The P. W. A. program will reach its peak force in the spring and summer months, as testified by the Assistant Administrator of the P. W. A. Where, then, is the need for these funds? Is it but a polite way of disposing of this issue until the regular relief appropriation bill for 1940 comes on for action by the Congress?

One other item in connection with this bill has scarcely been alluded to during the debate on this measure, and that is the capacity of the sponsors to supply the sponsor's share of the projects that are to be embraced by the additional funds. So many cities, counties, school districts, and other subdivisions of government are in such straightened circumstances today that they cannot raise sufficient available revenues to pay the sponsor's share.

It must be evident, if such is the case, that the communities which are most desperately in need of these funds could not obtain them. Conversely, the communities in the best financial condition and able to take care of their relief loads without undue aid from the Federal Government, will stand to take the lion's share of any funds that are voted.

Until a careful survey of the sponsors of projects is before the Congress, how can we undertake to vote more funds than the committee states as necessary, and how can we, in fact, supply additional funds only to be used where the need is least pressing?

In these premises, Mr. Chairman, I could find no justification for approving the amount requested in this bill.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, inasmuch as a number of Members, including my friend from Illinois who has just spoken, have referred to the tabulation on the third page of the report cited by the committee in its attempt to justify its reduction of the W. P. A. appropriation, I would like to call attention to the fallacy of any such conclusion.

The committee cites three items which it claims could be deducted without interference with the program visualized by the original recommendation, as follows:

1. 88,975 persons not in actual need	$16,282,425
2. 30,000 aliens	7,015,000
3. Pay-roll reserve	45,750,000
Total	69,047,425

As to the first item, the Administrator of the Works Progress Administration in the hearings testified time and again that the number who would be dropped because they were not in need was not yet known and would not be known until the first part of April. He further testified that the number was likely to be less than 3 percent. The 88,975 figure used by the committee is an arbitrary estimate on their part with no foundation in fact.

As to the second item, the hearings show that the aliens were dropped because they were aliens and not because they were not in need. Consequently they would need direct relief and impose an additional burden on direct relief of the cities and in all fairness the Works Progress Administration should take an equivalent number of employable persons from the direct relief rolls of the cities.

Despite the elimination of persons not in need and of aliens, unemployment conditions in January and February required the W. P. A. to maintain its total employment at approximately 3,000,000 persons in order to meet the situation. Despite the replacements that were made in the W. P. A. during these months the waiting list of eligible unemployed persons in need increased from 750,000 to 850,000 during this period. At the present time there are approximately 3,000,000 people employed by the W. P. A. after all persons not in need and all aliens have been eliminated. Any reduction in the appropriation will result in the dismissal of needy employable citizens.

The item of $45,750,000 pay-roll reserve does not represent either an expenditure or a saving. It is an item that is always present, and for efficient administration of a program the size of the Works Progress Administration a reserve is always necessary. This reserve is not expended but carries over from period to period and thus does not affect the amount of expenditures on the program in any manner. The amount of expenditures is determined as a direct function of the number of persons to be employed. If it is the will of Congress that these reserves not be maintained, it will inevitably decrease operating efficiency and increase administrative expenses and result in a smaller proportion of the appropriation going to unemployed persons.

In other words, this section of the report is no exception to the rule and, like the rest of the report, is no justification whatever for the arbitrary proposal to cut the Budget estimate below the amount warranted by the evidence before the committee.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. O'NEAL].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kentucky is recognized for 14 minutes.

Mr. O'NEAL. Mr. Chairman, there has been so much emotionalism in this debate that I want to confine myself, in closing for the committee, to a logical discussion of the proposed cut of $50,000,000, and show, as I believe I can from the testimony of Colonel Harrington himself, the fact that with the $50,000,000 cut, not one man on the rolls entitled to it will be laid off, and many of those on the waiting list of 850,000 will be put back to work. I trust I can demonstrate this in the time that is allotted to me.

The Appropriations Committee was created to pass upon Government expenditures, and, in my opinion, it has an implied duty to eliminate waste and to effect economies. Otherwise there would be no necessity for an Appropriations Committee. Congress is a trusteeship handling other people's money. So when a department presents its request for funds with which to operate, that request goes to a subcommittee for close study, and the members of that subcommittee have a solemn duty to perform. It is axiomatic that every department request can be cut some and that the heads of the departments invariably ask for amounts that can be reasonably reduced. Strange to say, W. P. A. has had $6,000,000,000. And Congress, until this year, has never had an explanatory estimate in advance of the appropriations nor reviewed the expenditures after the appropriations were used. So when the W. P. A. request came to our committee we examined it minutely, and, as is always true, we found where reasonable economies could be had. Yet there are those in this House and in this country who are in high rage because of the study made by the committee, and who have announced their opposition to any cut for any reason. They have closed their minds; they have heard no evidence and do not want to hear any. Yet President Roosevelt has said that an effort should be made to trim the appropriations wherever possible. It is never pleasant to say "no"; it is unpopular to pare appropriations; it is often dangerous to deny the passing popular will—but that is the duty of a conscientious member of the Appropriations Committee and of Congress. And confidence will return to our people when they see that Congress will dare to do the right thing, even though it may be unpopular.

In the spirit of duty most of this small band of subcommittee members accepted the disagreeable task of examining the W. P. A. request for funds, knowing from long experience that all department heads make estimates to Congress that are very generous to their departments, and oftentimes anticipatory of substantial reductions. Further, we sat as a friendly judicial body, and there was not a man on the committee who was willing to deprive a single deserving person on the rolls of his rights. Had it been necessary even to increase the appropriation to provide food, shelter, and work for those entitled to it, I would have done so gladly, as would every other member of this committee. There are no Members in this House more sympathetic to the needs of the W. P. A. worker than the members of this small subcommittee. We propose to Congress by our recommendation to give those beneficiaries of W. P. A. the money our great country wants them to have, but we are not willing to allow the funds to be dissipated in activities foreign to providing work and sustenance for the worthy unfortunates of our great country. I propose to show now how that can be done within the amount recommended by this committee.

Here are the salient facts that came out in the testimony that I believe establish the position that not one person will have to go off the rolls.

When the estimate first came to our committee for an additional $875,000,000, it was designed to provide for 3,000,000 people on the active rolls. There was also a waiting list of 850,000. With that money it was the plan of W. P. A. to reduce the number of beneficiaries by July 1, 1939, to 2,700,000. With $725,000,000 appropriated heretofore and $100,000,000 now, the testimony clearly demonstrated to the committee that if the money is wisely and carefully handled, it will provide the full benefits of W. P. A. to all those entitled to it, of the 3,000,000 estimated for, and it will be sufficient, in addition, to take care of all, or a large part of the 850,000 on the waiting list.

If there were no economies, and no possible savings, and if the situation today were as understood in January, a cut of $50,000,000 would have meant that in April, May, and June, the rolls of W. P. A. would be reduced by approximately 230,000 cases.

But the hearings brought out many interesting facts, which make it clear that all now on W. P. A. can be taken care of and still save $50,000,000.

The testimony disclosed that the voluntary withdrawals from W. P. A. rolls would probably run over 100,000 persons per month, or for 5 months a total of voluntary withdrawals of 500,000 to 600,000. The money saved by these voluntary withdrawals will not only provide funds sufficient to take care of the 230,000 who otherwise might be taken from the rolls by the $50,000,000 cut, but this saving will, in addition, allow 250,000 to be taken from the waiting list of those not now receiving employment.

But that is not all. Congress, in Public Resolution No. 1, required the W. P. A. to survey its rolls, and the Administrator testified that there would be removed by this survey from 3 to 5 percent of the total number—only those persons who were financially able to take care of themselves, and of course those able to take care of themselves should do so, and allow that sum to go to the others on the waiting list who have no means of support. Three percent of those on the rolls would mean about 110,000 people. This would change 110,000 people from the waiting list to the active list, and this was not known when the W. P. A. estimate was first sent to Congress.

But that is not all. The aliens were stricken from the lists after the Administrator prepared his estimate in January for a supplemental appropriation. The testimony showed that approximately 40,000 aliens were stricken from the rolls (a saving of over $10,000,000). They are not now on the rolls, but were estimated for—their places can be filled from the waiting list.

Again, actuarial figures indicate that, conservatively, in 5 months the rolls of W. P. A. would be reduced by other causes, such as death, by at least 125,000 people. These places could be taken by those on the waiting list.

And that is not all. It came out in the testimony that large sums of money were transferred to other departments, of which millions were not yet allocated. Certainly close supervision would result in substantial savings.

There are other facts which indicate by close scrutiny that appreciable sums of money could be made available. The time allotted to me is insufficient to cover all phases of the matter. It appears perfectly clear that in the light of the testimony and subsequent events, the estimate made in January, reduced by $50,000,000, will take care of every person on the 1939 rolls entitled to receive the benefits, and practically all those on the certified waiting lists not now receiving the benefits. So why should we not save a little money?

Gentlemen, I have refrained from any criticism of W. P. A. Colonel Harrington, in my opinion, is a man of character and ability. He answered our questions very frankly. But the immensity of the problem is too great for one finite mind to know all about. That is self-evident. There is bound to be waste, and much money that should go to the needy is dissipated, largely due to the tremendous size of the undertaking. In this, as in other matters, we are trying to work in too large units. That is where our subcommittee on the Appropriations Committee can help a little, and $50,000,000 cut from $875,000,000 is only a small part of what might be saved and returned in benefits to the people.

Certainly economies can be effected. Congress should inquire into the activities of a department which has a communications bill of $150,000 a month, as shown in the hearings. Part of that sum would feed a lot of people. Would anyone say that Congress and the administration should not try to call a halt on an expenditure for travel and subsistence of $500,000 a month, or $6,000,000 a year? Yet the testimony shows that W. P. A. is spending that amount.

In my opinion, we should have sufficient control over the funds of a department to prevent it from erecting a building costing over $250,000, to become the property of a city, where the city has not contributed one dime of the cost. I refer, of course, to the building at the New York World Fair, which is being erected entirely with W. P. A. funds without any contribution, and which will become a part of the New York park system after the fair is over.

Also, we and the W. P. A. Administrator should consider carefully the question of separating a work-relief program coupled with a public-improvement plan. There is danger that the enthusiasm for public improvement will take too much of the funds which are meant for those in distress. Under W. P. A., $3.50 out of every $100 is for overhead, $10.50 for material costs, and $86 for wages. On every project an average of $6.50 per man per month of relief money goes for materials, not for wages. If the material cost were nothing, every man on relief could be paid $6.50 more, and if the material costs were reduced below $6.50 per man per month, the individual on relief could receive that much more or more people could be put on relief.

May I add further that it is worthy of study and action by the Administration and Congress to see if each of the States, counties, and municipalities is doing its proportionate part with regard to relief which affects work.

Mr. Chairman, this is one of the most important matters and if you will examine the hearings you will see why that is so. Our laws imply uniformity of burden. The testimony before our committee showed that the load is not being assumed in equal proportions, and, in my opinion, the Federal Treasury is carrying more than its proper share and also the cities. They are borne down by the weight of simple relief out of proportion in many places with the State contributions. Further W. P. A. officials and Congress should require those governmental divisions which are not meeting their proper burden to assume more. There are many States that are not contributing to direct relief, and an interesting table will be found in the hearings on pages 63 and 64. Many governmental subdivisions tried to explain their inability to help more by stating that they have a debt limit which makes it impossible to do so. They will not run into debt, yet they are perfectly willing to see the Federal Treasury develop a still more unbalanced Budget. It is interesting psychologically that States, counties, and municipalities, due to the nearness of their people to the problem, see the tax burden that they must carry and will defeat any Governor, county judge, or mayor who advocates exceeding the budget or operating in the red; yet the Federal Government has operated in the red for 10 successive years. If it is bad for local units to run in the red, it must be bad for the National Government. If people realized that unparalleled Federal expenditures meant increased hidden taxes, they would be as economical and frugal in Federal expenditures as they are in local affairs. So, in my opinion, State and local units in relief matters which are not doing their equal part should not hide behind balanced budgets and force an undue part of the burden upon the National Government. All of these matters should be handled both by W. P. A. administrators and by Congress.

In closing I would like to state that the subcommittee felt that its duty required it to examine this request for funds just as the requests of all other departments are studied. The members of the subcommittee are men of sympathy and appreciation of the needs of the unfortunates of this country. They feel that real application of sound business would not only save the amount mentioned in this bill but would increase the quality of service and extend the benefits to many more who are not now beneficiaries of W. P. A. funds.

Our country must and will take care of its human misery, but let us do it with sympathy and intelligence.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Joint Resolution 246

Resolved, etc., That the amount of $725,000,000 appropriated to the Works Progress Administration in section 1 of Public Resolution No. 1, Seventy-sixth Congress, entitled "Joint resolution making an additional appropriation for work relief and relief for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939," approved February 4, 1939, is hereby increased to $825,000,000, and the difference of $100,000,000 between such two amounts is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. FITZPATRICK: On page 1, line 8, strike out "$825,000,000" and insert "$875,000,000," and in line 9, strike out "$100,000,000" and insert "$150,000,000."

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Chairman, the amount of money provided by my amendment is that requested by the President and Colonel Harrington. They claim it will be necessary to have this amount if we are going to keep on the pay roll the 3,000,000 that are on there now. According to the statements by the daily papers during the months of January and February, there were 200,000 to 300,000 of the unemployed put to work by private industry. By your action today the cutting out the $150,000,000 will throw out of employment 300,000 or 400,000 people. Therefore, I ask you to vote for the $150,000,000 and keep these people on the pay roll, and not stop the progress that is now being made throughout the country.

Mr. Chairman, if $150,000,000 is not appropriated, we are going to reduce the purchasing power in the industrial sections of our great country. A few days ago, when the agricultural bill was up for consideration, I voted for the $250,000,000 parity payments because I believe if the people are prosperous in the agricultural sections they will also be prosperous in the industrial sections. There should not be any argument between the agricultural workers and those in the industrial sections. They should work in harmony with each other, because prosperity in one section means prosperity in the other. For that reason I supported the $250,000,000 provided in the agricultural appropriation bill. [Applause.]

I appeal to those from the agricultural sections today to support the $150,000,000 so that the people in the cities will have purchasing power to buy the produce from the farmers throughout the country. About a month ago we authorized hundreds of millions of dollars for national defense. Millions of that amount will be used to manufacture munitions to destroy human lives. Today we are asking you to vote for $150,000,000 to save human lives that are now in need of food throughout the country.

I remember in 1918, during the World War, that in 1 year we spent close to $19,000,000,000 over the Budget to send our boys to the other side to be slaughtered in the name of democracy. During the past 6 years we have only appropriated $7,000,000,000 for relief. If we can appropriate $19,000,000,000 over the Budget in 1 year to send our boys to the other side to be slaughtered, why can we not appropriate $150,000,000 to save the lives of the women and children of this country? [Applause.]

I appeal to you, especially to you Members from the rural and agricultural districts, where you do not know what it means to be hungry or in want, to vote for the $150,000,000. I have had mothers call upon me in my own home with tears in their eyes, begging for help to take care of their undernourished children. Today there are thousands of undernourished children from Maine to California, and statistics show it; yet we do nothing to revent such a condition existing throughout the country.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 3 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The other day we voted to investigate the W. P. A. It may need investigating, and I approve of such an investigation; but while we are investigating the W. P. A. we should not let women and children starve throughout the country. Some time ago we appropriated money for an investigation of un-American activities in this country, and I voted for this investigation because I am against communism, or any kind of "ism," except Americanism. I am for our form of government, because I believe the citizens of this country should control the state and not the state control the citizens. But if you vote down this amendment and seek to destroy the only chance and opportunity the unemployed of this country have to receive food, you will do more to create communism in this country than all the agitators would do in years to come. We should try to provide employment for the people of our country in order to give them a chance to live as decent American citizens. Then there will be no danger of communism or dictatorship in this country. I appeal to you today not to vote down this amendment for $150,000,000, which will bring food to the undernourished children and happiness to the mothers, who are entitled to have food for their children in a rich country like ours. As I have stated in some of my answers to various constituents in my district, God provided everything we need and left it to man to divide. What is wrong with man? The answer is selfishness and greed, which, in my mind, is responsible for the sad conditions existing throughout the country today. I therefore ask you to vote for the $150,000,000 and show the countries throughout the world that we in this great democracy can take care of our unemployed. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I offer a substitute amendment for the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Cox as a substitute for the amendment offered by Mr. FITZPATRICK: In line 8, strike out "$825,000,000" and insert "$779,293,545", and in line 9 strike out "$100,000,000" and insert "$54,293,545."

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I should regret to see the House make the retreat that is proposed in the pending bill. I believe it should hold the ground it took on March 4 of the present year. The amendment that has been offered is prompted by the report filed by the committee handling this bill, and gives to the Works Progress Administration all the money called for by the President in his first message.

On page 3 of the report of the committee this statement appears:

It—

Referring to the committee—

proposes an additional appropriation of $100,000,000, and by so doing in effect proposes an allowance of $19,047,425 in excess of the $875,000,000 originally requested; and such excess of $19,047,425, added to the unobligated balance of $26,659,030 on January 31, previously referred to, allows a safety margin or reserve of $45,706,455.

The President in his original message requested $875,000,000. On February 4 Congress appropriated $725,000,000. The saving effected by elimination from the rolls of those not in need amounts to $16,282,425. The saving from the permanent elimination of 30,000 aliens from the relief rolls is $7,015,000. There was on hand February 1 and used to meet the pay roll the first week in February $45,750,000. The unobligated balance on hand February 1, 1939, was $26,659,030. This makes a total of $820,706,455, and the $54,293,545 allowed under the amendment I have offered makes a total of $875,000,000.

Mr. Chairman, this House owes something to itself and to the country. It owes something to future generations. I submit, Mr. Chairman, the House ought at this time to stand upon its own feet and do its own thinking and its own legislating. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the substitute amendment.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I wonder if it would be possible to fix a limit on debate on the two pending amendments?

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the two pending amendments be concluded in 40 minutes.

Mr. TABER. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Chairman, I would suggest that the gentleman ask that an hour be allowed. Judging by the number of Members who rose and who wanted 5 minutes apiece, a limit of an hour ought to be fair.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I modify my request and ask unanimous consent that all debate on the two pending amendments be concluded in 1 hour.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. Of course, the Chair is unable to carry in his mind the name of every Member who rose, and has asked the Clerk to take down the names.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I ask that 5 minutes be reserved for me, the balance of the time to be distributed among the Members who rose.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is going to read the names taken down of Members who desire recognition. [Reading:]

Messrs. RANKIN, JOHNSON of Oklahoma, HOOK, O'CONNOR, MARTIN of Colorado, THOMAS F. FORD, VOORHIS of California, COFFEE of Washington, DIRKSEN, TABER, CASEY of Massachusetts, MARCANTONIO, O'NEAL, GIFFORD, and WOODRUM of Virginia.

Fifteen Members have asked recognition, and the request was that the gentleman from Virginia have 5 minutes within which to close, which means 55 minutes for the 14 Members who rose.

The Chair now recognizes the gentleman from Illinois for 4 minutes.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, I am satisfied that if the gentleman from Georgia was familiar with conditions in the Nation he would not have offered a substitute amendments, such as the one just read, which proposes to reduce the appropriation to $55,000,000.

There has been a great deal of misinformation on this entire subject, and I wish that I had the time to clear up a lot of points that have been discussed.

Mr. Chairman, we must concede that there is nothing perfect under the sun. It is true that there have probably been some things done by the W. P. A. deserving of criticism, such as the situation in New Mexico that was referred to. But that is exceptional. Can you show me a large corporation in this country, employing even 25,000 or 30,000 people, where irregularities will not creep in? Here is an organization, created in a hurry to provide work for 3,000,000 men. Not a few thousand, mind you, but three million. And it was not an organization that grew over a period of time, but was practically created overnight. How can you possibly expect perfection in such a case?

I want to emphasize, incidentally, that the work on which these men are employed is not work that we recommended. This work is on projects recommended by the cities, counties, and States, most of them giving permanent improvements to cities of the Nation.

My beloved friend the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN], gives us an amusing story about the cemetery. Let me say to him, and I do not speak humorously, that if this $150,000,000 appropriation is not granted, if we cannot feed and clothe our needy, we may be faced with the grim fact that many of them will have nothing left but the cemetery.

Mr. Chairman, ladies, and gentlemen, this is not a personal matter with me. In my district you will find no projects, and I venture to say that I have fewer men on W. P. A. than any other district in the country. But I know what conditions are in the country, and that is why I appeal to you now in the interest of humanity to vote down the substitute amendment of the gentleman from Georgia and to vote for the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York, for $150,000,000. There is little I can add to his eloquent appeal of a few minutes ago.

Most of the criticism we have heard is without foundation. In a Chicago Republican paper this morning I read statements so far removed from facts that I could only wonder how such distortions could find their way into print. There is a reason for it, though, and the fact that we are on the eve of city elections explains it.

I have listened for a long time now to the sing-song of my Republican friends, to their ever-repeated cry that we must reestablish confidence. Just what do they mean by that? I wonder if they refer to the brand of confidence that prevailed under Mr. Hoover from 1928 to 1932? Do they ever stop to realize that if their party, and business generally, would support the policies of President Roosevelt and of this Congress that we would have the people's confidence?

Remember, if you will, that the Republican Party gave us the crash and the depression. The same industrialists who today cry out against the administration are the ones who contributed to that depression. And the Republican Party, which stands almost solidly against this $150,000,000 for relief, forgets that we would not have to be here pleading for the poor people if it had not been for the Republican Party.

It is not new for large business to oppose anything designed to aid the underprivileged. Small business, closer to the small man, takes a different attitude. I will not take up the time of the House by quoting from more than a couple of the thousands of letters that have come to me urging my support of the appropriation for W. P. A., but I can say to you that these letters are typical of the attitude of small business. The first one I want to call to your attention is from the Small Business Men's League of Illinois. Quoting from it, I read:

> We * * * do not believe that this is the time to cut any appropriations for the W. P. A. * * * The business world is suffering * * * any curtailment at this time would prove drastic and would also tend to increase communism in this country.

A Better Chicago League wrote me a few days ago as follows:

> Authorities as reliable as Joel Hunter of the United Charities, Lea D. Taylor of Chicago Commons, and Charlotte Carr of Hull House favor the President's request for an additional relief appropriation and are deeply alarmed by the possibility that Congress will be blinded to the grave need for relief, to such truths as the fact that its action affects 200,000 people directly in Chicago alone in their bare maintenance. In this situation the appeal for economy is a shocking mockery and, for thousands, a near-death sentence.

Now, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM], and the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox], stress the fact that unemployed professionals were employed on theater projects. As a matter of fact, less than 1 percent of W. P. A. funds was used for employees on projects of art, music, theater, writers, and historical records.

Let me remind the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM] that the people are human beings who need food and shelter just as the rest of us do. None of them are of a class noted for acquiring wealth. Their lives are devoted to amusing the rest of us, to entertaining us and contributing to the sunny side of our existence. They bring us joy and a great deal of happiness, and when the depression fell they were hit harder than any other group in the country. So what do you think we should have done about it? Let them starve? I cannot help feeling a little sad to hear men of intelligence standing up on this floor and decrying the fact that we have tried to feed the poor.

Another point. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. O'NEAL], and my good friend from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN], say to you that there are sufficient W. P. A. funds to keep those who deserve relief on the rolls. Yet I hold here in my hand, and this has been shown to all of you before, a statement released by the W. P. A. reporting that its regional directors have been ordered to dismiss 400,000 workers on April 1. Even while we stand here arguing, hundreds of thousands of individuals throughout the Nation are being notified that beginning tomorrow there will be no more work for them, that they can seek relief where they will, but that the richest country in the world can afford them none. In Virginia only 4,800 will be dismissed, so perhaps the cries of so few will not reach my friend from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM]. But he can tell you, and we all know, that his State has received more than its share of Federal assistance. In Georgia 9,500 will be deprived of employment if this $150,000,000 is not voted. What will the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox] say to those 9,500?

Even the great and rich State of Texas, which has received over $1,457,320,759 in Federal benefits during the past 5 years, will find 13,500 of its citizens thrown out on the streets if this money is not made available to W. P. A.

The number to suffer will be greater in my State, and in New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Ohio, and others. But I do not look upon this as something benefiting only the cities. Do not overlook the fact that over 40 percent of the entire amount of W. P. A. money has been spent in rural sections of the country. However, even if it benefited only those far from the cities, if they were faced with hunger and poverty, I would still be as active in fighting for them.

This money is needed. The need is a real and immediate one. It calls for your most earnest consideration. The Members from some sections are a good deal disgruntled because of the action of the House a few days ago in voting against parity payments. Let them not be inspired by any spirit of revenge, for I say to you that just as sure as I have cooperated with the farm group in the past, just as sure as I have done everything I could for their interests, I will remember today's votes when these Members come to me in the future seeking aid for their constituents. I say this not as a threat. Regardless of what you do, I shall still place the needs of your constituents and mine above politics. But if we cannot depend upon you today, your battles will no longer be my battles. Common humanity to our fellow beings is not a lopsided proposition; it must apply to all classes. I am not so far above the workingman that I distinguish the needs of the farmer from the needs of the city dweller. I know that their needs are vital needs, and I hope that my colleagues, all of you, will realize this and vote with me for the $150,000,000 for W. P. A.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I have often discussed this problem of relief during the past 6 years. I have voted even for the largest appropriations for relief until last year.

Nothing has been done to cure the evils that have been recognized in the distribution of this money. We have had an abundance of funds for the needy. I shall now oppose, and continue to oppose, the allocation to municipalities that can well afford to take care of their own relief problems. Everyone knows that as a vote-getting proposition the wealthy municipalities seek their full share. It is almost incomprehensible that this should be continued. The precarious position of the National Treasury ought to make us pause before we continue to give money to municipalities whose financial condition does not warrant it. My own city needs much of this relief money. Many other municipalities can afford to take care of this problem. My own tax commissioner declares: "Why do we longer hand it over to so-called sheltered communities and slight those municipalities in poor financial condition?"

Is it not time to forget the political significance of this great expenditure of borrowed money?

Under what theory of government is it that the mayor of a city or officials of municipalities can come to Washington with hat in hand asking for alms of a bureaucratic government because they could not be reelected unless they obtained their full share of these hand-outs? Under this method the wealthy, "bedroom" towns surrounding our cities clamor for relief money solely because this is available, although they could not possibly prove their incapacity to take care of their own needy population.

This phase has been presented so many times that we wonder that it can be longer allowed to continue. I am, indeed, glad to vote the limit for the needy. However, it is time to stop these promiscuous largesses where they are not actually needed. We too often cannot hire men to do the ordinary work, especially in the seasonable industries. They like the W. P. A. A mechanic gets one day and a half's work at prevailing wages and can work elsewhere the rest of the week. It has proved a sinecure for many people. Why not remedy those conditions and give the money to such needy persons as your leader, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM], has described to you. We have appropriated a superabundance of funds if they had been properly distributed. Let these funds be controlled by the States and municipalities, with instructions that they be used in the needy localities and for the benefit of those properly entitled. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts has expired.

REMONETIZE GOLD AND SILVER

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, I shall support the Fitzpatrick amendment. It seems to me that we are quibbling over the degrees. If $55,000,000 is not wrong, then $100,000,000 is wrong only in amount, and $150,000,000 would be wrong also only in amount. The principle is the same in all three cases.

So far as I am concerned, I am not willing to join any economic bloc that undertakes to balance the Budget by economy, or restore prosperity through squeezing down on what is being done, until something is done about our monetary system. I know there are men on the Republican side and men on the Democratic side—Republican reactionaries and conservative Democrats—who are opposed to any change at all in our monetary system; but, in my opinion, we will never get out of our present trouble until we have a change in our monetary system.

The world seems to be breaking up today economically. We have the world's supply of gold. In my humble opinion, if we are ever going to have stabilized conditions in this country, we will have to go back on a metallic basis; we will have to remonetize gold and silver and invite the rest of the world to follow.

If we keep on as we are going, the Government's financial structure will collapse in any event. I have told you that time and time again. If it is going to collapse, it might just as well collapse with a debt of $44,150,000,000 as with one of $44,100,000,000. You are not curing anything.

It does not matter which way you vote. You can pass the entire amount or kill the entire amount, but you will not have even scotched the snake much less killed it. You have to go to the base, to the root of our trouble, go back on the gold standard and add silver to it, and then take back into the hands of Congress the power to coin money and regulate the value thereof, and not turn it over to private bankers as it is today. No man today knows what our money supply will be tomorrow. It depends upon the last guess of the Federal Reserve Board. You have a condition here now that seems to prevail all over Europe, with the result that we have international financial chaos.

Here in the richest country in the world we have people begging for money to buy bread, yet we have more wheat, more corn, more cotton, more hogs, more lumber, more raw material of all kinds, more manufactured products, more gold, and more unemployment than any other country in the world. This is the only agricultural country under the shining sun with farmers on relief. The people who produce cannot get enough to pay their taxes and supply themselves with food and clothes, because we are in a money panic and have been for 10 years, and we have attempted to cure it by borrowing from the rich and giving to the poor until now we have the poor on our hands, and not enough money in circulation to maintain living prices for agriculture or living wages for labor.

We must change the system or we will go on to ruin. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi has expired.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Chairman, I have faith in democracy, industrially and politically, and I believe that it alone affords conditions under which an individual is free to develop his power. I have faith in democracy and such distrust in the absence of it that I believe the very foundation of democracy will be threatened unless we vote out enough to properly care for the needy people of this Nation. I, who have been among them, know that we need the $150,000,000. I believe that the people of the Nation are entitled to it under the Bill of Rights.

I noticed yesterday, March 30, that the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD contained a ratification of the first 10 amendments to the Constitution by Georgia. The Speaker laid before the House a communication from the Clerk of the House transmitting a concurrent resolution of the Assembly of the State of Georgia ratifying the first 10 amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

It seems that there is a certain gentleman from Georgia who offered an amendment to practically cut out all W. P. A. spending, which would in my opinion put people in want and take away from them the rights guaranteed to them under the Bill of Rights.

Now, that the State of Georgia has ratified the Bill of Rights which is the first 10 amendments to the Constitution of the United States, I am hoping that he will abide by that ratification and see that the rights of the people are protected in their right to life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness.

I am hoping that the momentous occasion of the ratification as above stated will impress upon those affected the fact that the people of this Nation have a right to a decent standard of living.

There are thousands upon thousands of people who will be dropped from the W. P. A. rolls, not only in the State of Georgia, not only in the State of Michigan, but in practically every State of the Union if the amendment of the gentleman from Georgia should pass. In fact, if the $150,000,000 amendment is defeated there will be widespread suffering throughout this Nation.

I am wondering just what those people will think about their rights under the Constitution of the United States of America. I am wondering what those people will think about their rights guaranteed them in this great democracy. These hungry people who are in need should have the protection of the laws of this Nation not only under the Bill of Rights but laws placed on the statute books for their protection. Laws are made for the protection of the weak because the strong do not need protection.

Yes; we, the people of this Nation, must do everything we can to save this democracy. Let me say to you at this time that the State of Michigan is one of the greatest industrial and farming States in this Union. I spoke on the floor of this House in favor of parity for farmers. I believe that the farmers of this Nation are entitled to parity. I believe the farmers of Georgia, of Alabama, of Michigan, of the East, the West, the North, and the South are entitled to parity, and I believe the laboring people of this Nation are also entitled to parity; and I say to you from the farming sections, you men and women who want to save the farmers of the Nation, join with us for this $150,000,000 to establish the purchasing power to buy the products of the farm; and in turn when that farm appropriation bill comes back into this House on a conference report, let labor join with agriculture and vote for parity for the farmer. We will then be able to buy the products of the farmer. Parity for the farmer will help to bring up the purchasing power of agriculture and additional funds for W. P. A. will allow more purchasing power for labor. Join arm in arm on the road to prosperity by voting for $150,000,000 for W. P. A. and parity payments for the farmer. Unless this is done we are headed toward disaster, because the laboring people of this Nation will not stand idly by and allow their tables to become empty and their children to be hungry any longer. If you believe this democracy is worth saving, vote sufficient funds to feed and clothe our needy. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. JOHNSON] for 3½ minutes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the pending amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. Chairman, the debate on the pending relief bill proposing to cut the emergency fund from $150,000,000, as asked for by the President and Colonel Harrington, Director of the Works Progress Administration, has been one of the most heated debates heard in this Congress during the present session.

The opposition to the President's program has again presented their case in a forceful manner.

We listened with intense interest to the opening statement of our distinguished and able colleague on the Appropriations Committee, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM]. He made a most forceful and effective presentation of his position. But while listening to the gentleman from Virginia, who is conceded to be one of the most adroit and persuasive debaters in either House of Congress, I was reminded of another eloquent appeal that he made in this Congress only a few weeks ago, at which time he repeatedly assured Members that $725,000,000 was every dollar that would be needed to continue relief until July 1. He was fully as certain then about his position as he is now. We were told then that the President and Colonel Harrington did not know what they were talking about, and this House refused to give the President the full amount requested then by cutting the amount asked for—$150,000,000. Now we find the gentleman from Virginia actually asking Congress for another $100,000,000 in spite of his previous solemn declarations. This is conclusive evidence, in fact admission, on his part that he was absolutely wrong then in the sum of at least $100,000,000. If he guessed wrong in January and made a mistake of $100,000,000 then in his calculations, I submit that the gentleman from Virginia might possibly be wrong some $50,000,000 now. [Applause.]

The distinguished gentleman from Georgia [Mr. COX], who is recognized not only as a leader but also as an arch foe of relief, has offered the pending amendment to cut this bill to exactly $54,292,545. Just how many weeks and months of calculating and figuring on his part that caused him to present this amendment we do not know, but apparently he has worked it out on a scientific basis, and has it reduced to the dollar. Just why he has not placed in his amendment the exact cents needed for relief he did not explain, but my own opinion is that the gentleman did not add the cents in his figures for the reason that he realizes full well that his amendment in fact, is a mere gesture, and really does not make sense. [Laughter and applause.]

Permit me to make the suggestion that these two distinguished leaders and self-admitted economists in matters of relief, who are so far apart in their figures, might well get their heads together. Their figures are now at a variance of nearly $50,000,000. Inasmuch as they now, by their acts, admit they were both decidedly wrong in the amount of relief required in January, permit me to suggest that both might possibly be wrong now. [Applause.] It is evident that both cannot now possibly be right.

For my part I chose to follow the President of the United States in January against the eloquent appeals of these and other distinguished gentlemen, and even though I know that the die is cast, and that I am in the hopeless minority on this bill, I am delighted to announce that when the roll is called today that I shall again follow the President of the United States. [Applause.]

The distinguished gentleman from Virginia who has been scouring the United States for bad and questionable projects has finally found 4 out of 100,000 W. P. A. projects to which he very strenuously objects. Frankly, I feel that some of his objections are well founded and that possibly three of the four projects mentioned by him are indefensible and absolutely inexcusable. I do not pretend to condone all of the Federal writers' projects, the theater projects, about which the gentleman from Virginia repeatedly referred, or the construction of a building in New York City, out of relief funds, but I submit that it was most unfair for the gentleman from Virginia to state that these isolated projects are typical of all the W. P. A. projects throughout the entire country.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] also made a blistering general attack against the W. P. A., and, if I recall his statement correctly, went so far as to declare that a majority of the W. P. A. projects are not sponsored by local communities. The fact is that of the 100,000 W. P. A. projects throughout the country, I am authoritatively advised today that each and every one of them have local sponsorships. If there are boondoggling on projects in any of your districts or States, it is not the fault of the W. P. A., but of those citizens who have sponsored, presented, and urged such projects. The fact is, I am officially advised, that 95 percent of all mayors and local public officials have approved the W. P. A. projects in their respective communities, which would indicate that generally they have been satisfactory to local communities.

In my remarks on this floor when the first W. P. A. bill was being considered in this session I pointed out that in Oklahoma we have constructed more school buildings under the W. P. A. than in any other State in the Union. We have built hundreds of miles of farm-to-market roads and have constructed city halls and other public buildings of permanent nature. These are not boondoggling or leaf-raking projects. The fact that the gentleman from Virginia presents only 4 bad or questionable projects out of 100,000 speaks for itself.

The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. LUDLOW] also made a very interesting statement. I was particularly interested in his suggestion, wherein he stated: "Let's look at this situation in terms of recovery." Of course, all Members of Congress, as well as the country, long for business recovery, but just how the turning of thousands of hungry people into the streets is going to bring about recovery is a problem that I am free to admit I am at a loss to know how the gentleman from Indiana has figured out. Frankly I do not follow him. I think of this bill not so much as an appeasement to business, which seems to be a popular slogan now, but in terms of hungry, needy, and worthy citizens who, through no fault of their own, find themselves unemployed. These people—at least a vast majority of them—do not want charity. All they are begging for is an opportunity to earn a livelihood for themselves, wives, and families. I submit, gentlemen, that all people have a moral right to eat, send their children to school, and to live in decency in this so-called land of the free. [Applause.] I am thinking of those thousands of good men and women in Oklahoma who will lose their jobs when this bill is passed with a $50,000,000 cut in funds, which now appears inevitable.

I might add I am confident that a vast majority of the businessmen in the district I represent in Congress desire to see the W. P. A. continued. Moreover, I am unable to see that it is any appeasement to business to turn hundreds of thousands of citizens out of work at this time.

Of course, it will be recalled that business had its way in those dark and dismal days of 1930, 1931, 1932, and the early part of 1933. Every appeasement possible was made to business by the Republican administration during the dark and never-to-be-forgotten days of the Hoover regime, but the fact that there were 15,000,000 of men unemployed and more than 40,000,000 of men, women, and children hungry and without food or livelihood, was apparently of no concern of those who were supposed to be charting the ship of state at that time, but who were actually floundering in the mire of the black sea of despond. [Applause.]

No effort was made by the Federal Government then in behalf of that vast army of unemployed. We were told by those in authority that depressions came in cycles and that nothing could be done about it by the Federal Government.

With all of its mistakes, and the Roosevelt administration has undoubtedly made many of them, this administration has at least done something about it. [Applause.] And there is much more that must be done.

Let me remind Members that Congress ordered all aliens to be taken off the relief rolls and immediately Colonel Harrington had every alien in America stricken from the rolls. Congress said a survey of the relief situation should be made and again Director Harrington ordered such a survey and it was made. He has demonstrated that he not only has unusual ability but that he is going to cut the red tape and eliminate a lot of justified criticism of the W. P. A. He is entitled to be given a chance to make good.

I fully agree that the overhead of the W. P. A. has been unreasonable. The travel and communications items are indefensible. There are too many white-collared supervisors, who are in many instances supervising the supervisors. But again, I must remind Members that the overhead of the W. P. A. in Oklahoma is less today than in any of the several States in that region. I join in urging that every possible economy be inaugurated in the administration of relief. Let us cut the overhead to the bone in this as well as in all departments of government. Early in the Roosevelt administration I said on this floor, "You cannot cut too much for me." But let us not, in the name of economy, wreak our vengeance on the unfortunate unemployed citizens of America who today become innocent victims of our folly. [Applause.]

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Yes; if I have the time.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. THOMAS F. FORD] for 3½ minutes.

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Mr. Chairman, in the first place, I want to say that I voted for the $250,000,000 for parity payments and would have voted for $1,000,000,000 for parity payments, because I believe that the only way you can ever get back the farmer's purchasing power is to give him an adequate price for the products he produces. [Applause.]

In view of the fact that even the most determined and honest opponents of the increased appropriation from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 admit that there are now 850,000 eligibles on the W. P. A. waiting list and that not to exceed two or three hundred thousand of those can by any stretch of the imagination be taken up, I cannot see how these fine gentlemen can oppose this increase.

It is my honest view that all arguments against an increase of the fund from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 fails. As a matter of fact, at least $300,000,000 should be added to take up the waiting list. These opponents remind me, when they say they are in sympathy with W. P. A., of the old lady who answered her daughter's request to go out to swim:

Yes, my darling daughter; hang your clothes on a hickory limb, but don't go near the water.

That is the attitude of the opponents of this particular amendment.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. I yield.

Mr. McCORMACK. There was another old adage, "To kill them with kindness."

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Absolutely.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. MARTIN] for 3½ minutes.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, 3½ minutes ought to be plenty. If a man did not know how he was going to vote on the amount to be carried in this bill before this debate started, it is not likely he would know when it ended.

I knew when the farm bill came into the House last week that I was going to vote for parity payments for agriculture. I knew when this bill came to the House I was going to vote for the $150,000,000 for unemployment relief; and I do not think I have any monopoly on intelligence and knowledge among the Members of this House.

There is nothing new in the criticism that has been voiced here on the floor of the House about W. P. A. It has been going on ever since the program started. It reminds me of the fellow who saw a ball game through a knothole in the fence. From where he was stationed all he could see was a bum outfielder who muffed the ball. So the whole game was rotten. [Laughter and applause.]

So they pick out some one thing or incident, some controversial project or incompetent official, and on the strength of such insignificant things as that they condemn the whole program. A whole lot of the time of this debate has been taken up against the New York W. P. A. theater program, and a member of the Committee on Appropriations told me that a whole lot of the time of the hearings was taken up with it. And mind you, this has been such a profit-making project for the Government that private agencies want to take it over.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I do not have time. I want to say this. I have driven all over the United States in a car, into every State of the Union, since this program started. I know of my own knowledge that W. P. A. has a new and higher standard of civic pride, improvement, and beauty. When I saw these new municipal and other buildings, schools, gymnasiums, and so forth, in these small cities and towns, they did not need a W. P. A. sign on them. They had a distinctive style of architecture and workmanship. As I have said, they have set standards which will carry on indefinitely, long after W. P. A. passes out of the picture.

Mr. Chairman, I saw this storm coming. On the day I left home for Washington, December 2 last, I made the following prediction in the press:

> The first big fight will be over W. P. A. The Republicans have been trying to knock it out for 2 years and now their vote is nearly doubled and the South is against it. I don't think they will get away with the proposition in this Congress to turn relief over to the States, but they will go after the new work-relief appropriation with an ax. Harry Hopkins will be fried alive when the coalitionists get him on the grill. It will be the first big crack of the coalition at Roosevelt. When they hit any New Deal head in Washington, they always mean Roosevelt.

If anything, that prediction was an understatement in the light of developments in this session of Congress. The drive against W. P. A. exceeds what I expected. Frankly, I have been somewhat puzzled by the attitude of the Republican Members of the House, not only against work relief, but farm relief. They know, or ought to know, that many of these new Republican Members are here by grace of the votes of dissatisfied farmers, work reliefers, and pensioners. They were dissatisfied, not because the Democratic Party had done nothing for them, but because it had not done enough, so they took it out on us by voting for candidates for Congress who were pledged to a program of economy, when it was known that the only places in which the Government could economize was on work relief, farm benefits, old-age pensions, and so forth. There was no other place to save the money in any substantial amounts.

It is common report from Democratic Members of Congress from all over the country, both those who were elected and those who were defeated, that they lost heavily in their districts through disaffection among the farmers, the unemployed, and the old-age pensioners. I know this was the case in my district, where I was opposed by a candidate who proposed to wipe out the whole system and turn it back over to the States and counties, where, he said, it belonged; yet they voted for him by thousands. The election of 1938 was the answer to the claims that the New Deal was perpetuating itself in power by subsidizing the voters.

Mr. Chairman, I want now, if I have a minute left to congratulate my Republican brethren on standing up for their economy pledges. I give them credit for having more courage than I thought they had. When we had the first work-relief bill before the House in January and marched up the aisle through the tellers, the $150,000,000 extra got only four Republican votes and two half Republican votes, the two half Republican votes being those of the gentlemen from North Dakota [Mr. LEMKE and Mr. BURDICK.] [Laughter.] When the farm bill came in last week carrying parity payments, something the farmers of the country had been demanding for the last 6 years, and the roll was called, only 20 Republicans voted for parity payments, and 135 voted against them. Now they are going to do the same thing they did before on work relief. I want them to make the record and go back home and stand on it. My guess is that a lot of people who voted for them last fall did not know it was loaded. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Washington [Mr. COFFEE] is recognized for 3½ minutes.

Mr. COFFEE of Washington. Mr. Chairman, if misleading statements were argument and their reiteration proof, the case against the W. P. A. today would be definitely closed.

I propose to vote for the $150,000,000. My only regret is that it is so inadequate. All of the statements casting aspersions on W. P. A. officials, and all the stigmata heaped upon the W. P. A. by distinguished conservative gentlemen of both parties will not undermine my confidence in this program. It is easy to vilify. You can traduce the organization by pointing to isolated examples of corruption, infrequent and inconsequential examples of misuse of public funds; nevertheless the confidence of the general public in the W. P. A. has not been undermined. I do not subscribe to the old Latin legal theory, falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus—if you are wrong or make a mistake in one thing you must be wrong or mistaken about everything—I do not think this doctrine can properly be applied to the W. P. A.

The W. P. A. is carped at and is condemned by our conservative brethren in this House. Upon whom did they wish to visit their venom because of their antipathy to the method of operation? Upon the helpless, defenseless unemployed. They would drive from the relief rolls hundreds of thousands of our fellow citizens and compel them to join the bread lines, asking for bread and finding it not. Why? Because down in New Mexico or in New York City a few pitiful examples of misuse of public funds were alleged to have been found.

We were told in this debate of plays produced by the W. P. A. The W. P. A. theater projects did produce many plays. Nothing was said, however, about the high caliber and artistic attainments of these plays and of the excellent reception accorded these plays by drama-loving audiences. What about Orson Welles, who is the greatest living American actor of character today? Whence did he graduate? He graduated from the theater project of the W. P. A.; and I could name a dozen outstanding actors and actresses on the American stage who graduated from W. P. A. [Applause.]

What about the Arts Project of the W. P. A.? Oh, we have heard about their weaknesses, we have heard about their mistakes, but who here has spent time dilating upon the virtues of the W. P. A.? We as a Nation have thought so much of the product of the art efforts of the W. P. A. that examples have been placed in a thousand post offices. We have thought enough of the paintings produced by the W. P. A. artists to put them in the White House, in the reception room of the President's mansion; but no one has taken this floor and set forth the panegyrics of the W. P. A. No; they have condemned hundreds of thousands of our fellow men and women to destitution because of an alleged misuse of funds on the part of a handful of public officials. I say shame on the Congress of the United States, I say shame upon the highest legislative body in America, the richest land on the face of the earth, where we have more gold buried in a vault in Kentucky than there is in all the rest of the world, to have to admit that today we have 12,000,000 unemployed in the most opulently endowed land on earth. This addition of $150,000,000 will retain only a portion of those who are now on the rolls. [Applause.]

Upon whom should the responsibility rest, Mr. Chairman, for adventitious weaknesses with which the administration of the W. P. A. is charged with being afflicted? The Congress of the United States. We cannot exculpate ourselves from our liability. For more than 5 years this agency has been operating in the same manner, yet no legislation has been passed by virtue of which a delimitation can be imposed upon its operation. We could very well ordain the character of the projects, the percentage of expense, the pro rata allocation of moneys, and specify particular penalties for violations of our legislative injunctions. Let us not, then, pusillanimously attempt, in effect, to exonerate ourselves of the negligence of which we have been culpable by denying to tens of thousands of our fellow Americans the modicum of work and wages which the full appropriation of $150,000,000, urged by our President, would provide.

During this debate I have been amazed by the plethora of crocodile tears shed so copiously by conservative colleagues of both parties as they delineated eloquently their devotion to the interests of the needy. How these gentlemen were almost overcome by emotion, in what I denominate as their factitious altruism. But let us judge them by their acts, not by their words. "By their fruits ye shall know them." My reply to these economy-hugging boys is, What you are speaks so much more loudly and persuasively than what you say that no one is converted nor is anyone misled by the volley of forensic broadsides aimed at the Works Progress Administration.

By what peculiar logic can a vote to reduce the rolls of the unemployed be justified by a detailing of certain reprehensible practices of administration by supervisory officials? Surely such reasoning is specious and fallacious.

In a message to Congress personally delivered, President Roosevelt recently revived the spirits of the indigent in our broad land by insisting that neither he nor the Congress would let the people down. Not by my vote, Mr. Chairman, do I propose now to repudiate that specific reassurance so eloquently given to the country by our national leader.

We hear uttered in this Congress, minute after minute, hour after hour, day after day, lugubrious croakings to the effect that it is imperative that we "restore business confidence," "balance the Budget," "stop spending," "put some business methods in Government," and similar frayed, minatory mouthings, based on repetitious assertions of publicity agents of the predatory interests in the United States. I favor economy and efficiency in Government, but never at the expense of those least able to stand the strain.

We must apply something more than mid-Victorian economics to the solution of our present ills. Pending before this Congress are constructive pieces of liberal legislation, the enactment of which would restore prosperity and effectuate recovery within a brief time, but so numerous and potent are the reactionaries in this body that not even a hearing will apparently be given to these bills in the committees, in whose bosoms they are now restlessly reposing. Under the rules of this body, Mr. Chairman, the ranking minority member and the chairman of the committee in charge of the bill up for discussion can utilize all the time, and outside of a courtesy vouchsafed to disagreeing members of the committee, those who might disagree with the proposals of the committee are usually not granted an opportunity to express their views adequately in general debate on this floor. To me this is a sad situation and affords an insight into the reason why it is virtually impossible to have merited reform legislation passed by this body.

Monopolies continue their unmolested course; the machine age is daily exacting a more deadly toll of unemployed; the mishandling of currency cries to high heaven for reform. The problem of money and credit remains to be solved. The need for the enactment of a generous national old-age pension on the revolving-plan basis is daily growing more cogent. The international situation is so critical that civilization stands at the brink of the precipice. One by one the democracies of Europe are being submerged. The light of learning is hourly growing dimmer. The flower of culture is withering under our eyes. The shadow of the swastika and of the fasces is lengthening across the surface of the world.

Yet here we are, Mr. Chairman, metaphorically speaking, playing on a harp while Rome burns. We temporize with an item of $50,000,000. Yet in this Congress these same colleagues who today inveigh at this item were not reluctant to vote many times this amount as decreed in bills providing for 6,000 planes, for more warships, for an enlarged army, for soil erosion, for grasshopper eradication, for blister-rust extirpation, for curing the diseases of birds in the air, beasts in the forest, bugs in the ground, and fish in the sea. It appears to me that the last group or thing for which we seem willing to appropriate money is man; the preservation of the spirit, the health, and the very soul of American citizens themselves. But I must not grow cynical, Mr. Chairman. Life must go on. We must advance, not with lackluster eyes but with vigorous step and confident demeanor. We must not grow discouraged. We must make democracy work. If the adjustments necessary in accomplishing that objective sometimes impinge upon what certain powerful groups and individuals regard as their vested rights, we must continue unafraid, undiverted from a well-defined course dictated by poignant necessity.

Have you courage, my colleagues, to cut the Gordian knot? Will you, as Chevalier Bayard of old, progress "without fear and without reproach"?

Until we can enact laws providing for the extension of public ownership, restoration to the Congress of its constitutional power to coin money and regulate the value thereof, own and operate our own banking system, safeguard for the people our natural resources, disintegrate monopoly, wipe out gambling in farm products, provide decent housing facilities, eliminate slums, accomplish complete tax reform—these and a score of other necessary progressive reforms—we must continue to maintain the W. P. A., but not niggardly.

Lincoln once said that no nation can continue to exist which is half slave and half free. Let us apply that warning to the President's quondam asseveration that one-third of our people are ill-housed, undernourished, and inadequately clothed. Such a disparity exists between the wealth of the few and the indigence of the many that any sensitive soul must be concerned about the future.

The Arabs had a proverb, Mr. Chairman, to the effect that the dogs bark and the caravan passes. I like to believe that, though liberalism may be temporarily in eclipse in reference to certain issues, though caviling critics may inveigh captiously at the progressive proposals of liberals, though the New Deal may be attacked from within and without, yet the caravan of progress in these United States will pass on to the goal of happiness and contentment for all the people.

Mr. Chairman, I shall vote for the $150,000,000 set up in the pending amendment, and I exhort my colleagues to join with me in this act. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO] is recognized for 3½ minutes.

Mr. MARCANTONIO. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment increasing the amount to $150,000,000, as requested by the President. The committee seeks to justify the reduction to $100,000,000 as follows in its report:

First. It bases the decrease upon an alleged saving of $16,282,425. This alleged saving represents the money that would have been saved had the 88,975 people who were separated from W. P. A. not been replaced.

Second. An item upon which this alleged saving is based is for the expense of carrying aliens who have been removed from W. P. A., $7,015,000. With respect to these two items, the committee very cleverly fails to report in its findings that there are waiting to be placed on W. P. A. 850,000 people certified as eligible for W. P. A. As long as there are 850,000 people certified as eligible for W. P. A., I submit you cannot expect W. P. A. to save either the $16,000,000 or the $7,000,000, because the purpose of W. P. A. is to give work to employable unemployed who have been certified to be eligible for W. P. A. employment. This was the clear intent of Congress when W. P. A. was established. Replacements must and should be made as long as there exists such a large list of certified unemployed.

Third. The last item is for $45,750,000, which the committee charges against appropriated funds.

The committee is most unfair in this contention. The purpose of this fund is very carefully explained on page 46 of the hearings. It reads as follows:

Mr. O'NEAL. Does that mean that on June 30, for the administrative expenses, you would have a balance of $45,000,000?

Colonel HARRINGTON. To cover the transition into the following fiscal year. It is not administrative expense. You have a program that is being operated on 2-week periods or semimonthly periods, and as we approached the end of January and beginning of February we had to discontinue obligations for pay rolls which would become payable at the end of the first week in February, and use those funds which normally would have been obligated to meet other pay rolls on a day-to-day basis. Furthermore, in order to make that transition from the end of January, we had to stop all purchasing in the field for a period of 2 or 3 weeks in order to save funds to cover pay rolls. That simply plays "Ned" in attempting to operate efficiently.

Mr. MCMILLAN. Referring to the $45,725,000 that you estimate would be necessary under that program, does not that include as well the commitments necessary under the program, and also the cost of the salaries that you were paying under the $875,000,000 program?

Colonel HARRINGTON. The cost of operating the program is based on the number of people who are working on it. That is what determines the cost of operating. The balance I referred to would not be obligated or expended out of the Treasury.

It is the cost of carrying the program over from the period when the appropriation has been expended. It does not come out of the Treasury. It cannot be considered as part of the operating cost of W. P. A. It is a cushion which an agency of such magnitude must have, and is not an item that can be considered in estimating an appropriation for the operation and maintenance of the activities of the agency. Hence, I maintain these figures, these alleged savings, which have been given to us by the committee in this report in an attempt to justify the reduction are not established nor vindicated by realities. I summarize: 850,000 people waiting to be placed on W. P. A. who have been certified as eligible make replacements necessary and hence eliminates the alleged savings of $16,282,425 and of $7,015,000. The $45,750,000 item cannot be considered, as it is not an administrative expense. Now, therefore, gentlemen of the Committee on Appropriations, tell us how can you deduct this $50,000,000 from the $150,000,000 requested by the President?

Another proposition is this: The committee has failed to mention that during the month of January there was an increase in unemployment to the tune of 886,000 people. This means a drastic revision of the figure of the number that industry and P. W. A. will absorb. There has been a further increase in February. What do you propose to do with these unemployed? I urge the adoption of the amendment. I wish it provided for more.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN].

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, just to review the situation that is before us, the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZPATRICK] has offered an amendment to increase the amount from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox] has offered an amendment to the amendment to decrease the amount so that it will be net about $55,000,000.

The reason for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia is simply that in the language and figures adduced by the committee handling this bill there is an unobligated balance of $26,000,000, which, added to other excess sums in an amount of $19,000,000, totals $45,000,000 that can in good conscience be deducted from the $100,000,000 in the pending bill.

Mr. Chairman, let us assume that a committee came before this House with a bill providing for $100,000,000 and that the chairman of the committee handling the bill should come down in the Well and say: "Gentlemen of the House, we need only $55,000,000 for this purpose, but we put $100,000,000 in the bill.

"The smell that spring is in the air; the beauty of the cherry blossoms has had its effect upon us. There is the lilting of birds out on the Capitol lawn. So, under the impulses of those spring influences, we have decided that while we need only $55,000,000 we are going to put $100,000,000 in the bill."

How would you vote in a situation of that kind? Obviously you would vote it down. You would say $55,000,000 is all you are going to get. It differs, of course, from other departments of government where every item is specifically earmarked. Give them the extra $45,000,000 and they will spend it under the broad language under which they are authorized to operate. There is nothing under the heavens to prevent them from spending the extra $45,000,000 which in the language of the committee and according to the figures as shown by the committee hearings is not needed. That in itself ought to be a direction to this Committee this afternoon to vote for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox] to reduce the amount to that which is actually needed according to the committee, namely, $55,000,000 and not $100,000,000 or $150,000,000.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. VOORHIS].

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, the question has been raised as to whether $150,000,000 is needed or not. The gentlemen who have used this sophistry on the House have, in effect, insisted that we focus our attention merely on a tiny fraction of the unemployed people in this country and forget about all the rest. The reason that $150,000,000 is needed, the reason, indeed, that more than that amount is needed is because we have approximately 8,000,000 unemployed people in addition to those now on W. P. A. that you have never even touched with this program. Every improvement in economic conditions in this country during recent years has followed the extent to which the Congress paid attention to stimulating the buying power of the people of this country. Admitted it has not been got at in a fundamental manner, admitted we can do it in better ways, nevertheless the fact is the Congress has not yet taken that better way. The paramount job of the Congress today is to see to it that there does take place an improvement in the economic condition of this Nation. That job involves fundamentally the problem of the buying power of the people.

The chart before you is one prepared by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SNYDER], and shows the disastrous course of events in the United States under the deflationary policy of falsely termed "economy" followed by Republican administration down to 1933. It shows that in that year there was a national income of only $45,000,000,000. It shows the climb of national income under the Democratic administration. This other line shows the course of Government expenditures during this same period of time. I have not time to discuss the issues about tax policy and our monetary system, which are most important. I am only talking about Government expenditures. Look at this line and look at that line. You will find that the economic conditions in this country, the business conditions for all the people, have followed very closely the degree to which this Congress saw to it that there was purchasing power put into the hands of those who otherwise would not have any.

So far as the argument between the President and the committee over the amount of this appropriation is concerned, it is all very simple. The President was right in January, and events have proven him so. The majority of the Appropriations Committee was wrong in January, and they are wrong today in suggesting that we cut this bill below $150,000,000. That is the difference between the President and the committee.

Various things have been said in connection with this debate about the job done by the W. P. A. I have not heard any specific allegation made about the administrative cost. A lot of general statements have been made, but no one, for some reason, has criticized specifically the percentage of such cost. I know that Colonel Harrington is making every effort to cut administrative costs to the bone. According to the best information I can get, in my State it amounts to about 3½ percent, which is a mightly low administrative cost, considering the program. This W. P. A. program takes care of people who cannot get employment elsewhere. It always has to give up its best workers first because those are the people who get jobs in private industry first. It has done a good job. Now is the time for us to have vision and realize the necessity of keeping this program going until we really and actually put something in its place. If we do not make the mistake we made in 1937, which was a tragic mistake, and if we carry through, it is altogether possible that the encouraging figures given by some people on the floor of the House with reference to increase in employment will continue. If we can then get down to business with certain other measures more fundamental than this, such as monetary reform, retirement pensions, and the like, then I have real hope.

Mr. Chairman, let us not be penny-wise and pound-foolish again today, which, indeed, we were on certain occasions.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, most of the argument I have heard here with reference to the opposition to this $150,000,000 is based upon the theory of waste. I am not going to attempt to answer in the short time I have to speak the argument made by the distinguished gentleman from Virginia. It would take a long time to do that. The best I can do in the time allowed is to make a few observations pertinent to the matter in issue. I want to say to the Members of the House that in my experience in life that waste is a matter of personal opinion and a matter of a person's own judgment. I had some people tell me not long ago that they thought that $10,000 paid to the Congressmen and the Senators of this country was a waste of money. Of course, they said in complimentary explanation, that I was earning mine, but they thought the rest was a waste, and I said to them that waste is a matter of personal opinion. We have waste in all the departments. We have waste in common enterprise, we have it upon the farms, we have it in industry, and every other place, but I say to you, do not take out of the hide of hungry babies, women, and children the necessities of life because you think somebody has received a larger sum of money than he should have received as his salary, or as some would term waste.

I want to call your attention to this fact. We ought to thank God today that we are making an appropriation in this House to take care of us in peacetime instead of war [applause], and you can thank the leadership of the great Democratic Party, that by innuendo has been condemned, because we are appropriating money for peace. Is there any doubt in the minds of any of us but what the heavy hand of big business is pressing down in an indirect way on the membership of this House to bring about a reduction in the appropriation bill that is before the House? This statement is reenforced by an overwhelming Republican sentiment toward a reduction of the amount even as written in the bill. Was not such a combination of influences wiped from power in the election in the fall of 1932 and again emphatically rejected in the election of 1936? Should this House look to the leadership for guidance here today that was dramatically and forcefully ejected from public life on the occasions mentioned?

We voted over one-half billion dollars for the implements of war. Today we are appropriating for peace. Is not that much better than appropriating for war? I want to say to you that there can be a worse condition than an unbalanced Budget. You can imagine what it is—I do not have to tell you.

In conclusion, I am in favor of, and I shall vote for, the Fitzpatrick amendment providing for an additional $150,000,000. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to this entire bill, but I shall vote for the substitute amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox] for $55,000,000, because that is the lowest amount that is now offered.

The trouble in this country is that confidence has not been restored here, because we are voting for appropriations of money without any justification whatever. It is necessary that we stop that sort of thing if confidence is to be restored and if the people are to have food and legitimate jobs.

This appropriation is not to provide food, it is to prevent the employment of the people in honest industry. Now, what is the actual situation and picture? There has been a build-up in the W. P. A. in February and March. A cut, which would be no more than seasonal, has been ordered for April 3 to 2,600,000. It is absolutely certain that without a dollar appropriated we can run along with 2,600,000 in April, 2,500,000 in May, and 2,400,000 in June. We could get along honestly and efficiently in that operation without another dollar appropriated. All we need to do is to throw off the 150,000 that Colonel Harrington told us at page 50 of the hearings would appear to be without any relief status. The 850,000 certified includes thousands who were certified 6 years ago, and only a small percentage of them would appear for work.

W. P. A. has promoted waste and demoralization amongst the people of this country. The $45,000,000 that is referred to in the committee report is an actual surplus based upon the figures that were submitted by Colonel Harrington, and not a carry-over to take care of future bills, as somebody has suggested here.

Let us restore confidence by stopping foolish expenditures. Let us cast our vote for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox]. The question before the Congress is, Has the Congress the courage to face the facts and stop wasting the people's money and give the people confidence and give the people an honest-to-goodness job and stop demoralizing them? [Applause.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I think it surely may be said that the question of the adequacy or inadequacy of the amount provided in this bill has been thoroughly discussed. My colleague from Oklahoma [Mr. JOHNSON] gleefully exclaims that when I voted to cut $150,000,000 from the W. P. A. in January I must have been wrong, because now I am willing to appropriate $100,000,000. The gentleman is mistaken. When I voted to cut the $150,000,000 I thought I was right and I am now convinced that I was right. I am thoroughly convinced beyond any question in my own mind. Of course, that does not make it right, but I am talking about my own feelings. I am thoroughly convinced in my own mind that if the $725,000,000 had been administered as Congress meant it should be administered it would not now be necessary to appropriate any more money. However, it is equally true that it was not so administered, and Congress is placed in the position of either appropriating an additional amount of money or taking a chance on seeing real suffering among the people who are in need. So, instead of being the lord high executioner of the W. P. A., as my good friend from New York [Mr. MARCANTONIO] dubs me, I shall now take the role of defender of the W. P. A. If I judge the sentiment of the House correctly, there is no earthly danger of the House increasing the amount in the bill to $150,000,000, but I do fear that we may let our prejudices against mismanagement and mistakes which have been made in the operation of the program cause us not to deal adequately with the situation.

The effort to reduce the $100,000,000 to $54,293,000 is based upon the assumption that you can safely withhold the amount set out in the report as a so-called reserve or cushion. You cannot do that. No program of this size can be so coordinated or laid out that you can come out at the end of the fiscal year exactly to the penny. If Congress should determine today to entirely liquidate W. P. A. as of July 1 next, and cease operation entirely, there would have to be a sizable sum of money carried over into July in order to meet the last 2 weeks' pay roll in June and in order in July to pay the bills for materials and expenses incurred in June. So I hope the House will not make the mistake of cutting the fund below the amount determined upon by the committee. I believe sincerely that the sum of $100,000,000 will carry W. P. A., and I believe, after discussions on the floor of this House, that they will be so impressed with the necessity for economizing that they will be able to distribute that fund so that there will be no real suffering among the needy people.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Virginia has expired. All time has expired. The question is on the substitute offered by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Cox].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Cox), there were—ayes 111, noes 161.

So the substitute was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now recurs upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZPATRICK].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. FITZPATRICK), there were—ayes 99, noes 173.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chair appointed Mr. FITZPATRICK and Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia to act as tellers.

The Committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 156, noes 205.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts: Page 1, line 8, strike out "$825,000,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$850,000,000", and in line 9 strike out "$100,000,000" and insert "$125,000,000."

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, this amendment in the sum of $125,000,000 offers us on this side of the aisle a common ground upon which to meet. Make no mistake about it, this is an important vote, an important vote for those who come from the industrial centers of the country and an important vote for those who come from the agricultural districts of the country. More than that, it is an important vote so far as the Democratic Party is concerned. Here we have the party that was put into power because during the crisis the Republican Party failed miserably to meet the exigencies of the situation created prior to 1932. I have heard arguments against the W. P. A. Of course, relief is an unpleasant topic, and it is an unpleasant situation with which we have to deal, needy men and women. We would like to walk away from it and just say, "Let them take care of themselves." Relief and W. P. A. were never intended to restore prosperity to this country. It is not an economic panacea. It is, however, our method of saying that we believe it to be the duty of the Government to give needy men and women whom private industry cannot employ an opportunity to exist and support their dependents until these distressful times have passed.

Throughout the world men and women, through no fault of their own, through no fault of any political party, were thrown out of work. It became a problem for every other nation as well as this country. The totalitarian nations have solved it by putting their unemployed in as shock troops and putting them to work under direct government supervision in the army. England tried to solve it by the dole. From authoritative sources I have read and have been told that the dole system has been demoralizing; that men are growing to middle age now who have never seen their fathers earn a single dollar and who have themselves never earned a dollar, but merely march up once a week and get a pittance from the Government without doing anything for it. The W. P. A., with all its faults, and they have been set forth clearly and fully, is a much better method of relief than has yet been brought forth in any nation on the face of the earth today. Of course, there has been criticism. "Swing" Mikado, building world's fairs, and so forth, but there has not been a single word said in its favor about the hospitals, about the schoolhouses, about the sewer and water systems that all of you know have been erected in your districts by W. P. A. I say, in view of the enormity of this program, Nation-wide in its scope, trying to deal with the misery and suffering of millions and millions of unemployed, it has stood the test of being brought into the light of day. Surely there has been travel pay that has seemed exorbitant. I do not defend that, but even in private industry you have heard salesmen talk about "swindle sheets." Of course, there has been waste and extravagance, but there has been much good done, not toward restoring prosperity but toward helping these distressed people and helping to take care of the needy and unemployed. That is all it was meant for. That is all that can happen with W. P. A.

The Republicans failed. We have put this into effect. The President said, "We need $150,000,000." There are others who said, "We need $100,000,000." Now, where shall we go? We have denied the President $150,000,000. Let me say to you Democrats that I never believed before 1932 that there was any great fundamental difference between Republicans and Democrats, but President Roosevelt breathed meaning into the Democratic Party [applause] and gave it life and made a clear and fundamental difference that enabled a great many liberals and people who believed that the weaker should have some protection in government and who did not care about political ties to join with him. It enabled those north of the Mason and Dixon's line to send Democrats to Congress because of their faith in progressive government and not merely because some of us were born Democrats. I say to you, let us meet on this common ground and not undermine the Democratic Party, which has been instrumental in enacting into law progressive, far-reaching measures that not even the Republicans, if they ever regain power, will dare repeal. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment close in 5 minutes.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I would like to have 5 minutes.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I will make it 10 minutes, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Chairman, I would like to have 5 minutes.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate close in 15 minutes.

Mr. NICHOLS. Reserving the right to object, I have not had any time yet. I would like 5 minutes.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment close in 15 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection? The Chair observes five gentlemen standing, including the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. I ask for 4 minutes myself. The rest of the time will be used against me, no doubt.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. McCORMACK. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Chairman, cannot my friend make that 20 minutes?

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Well, we have debated on one little issue very liberally, and everybody knows how he is going to vote. You could talk for 30 minutes and you would not change anybody's opinion. I think we have been liberal to a fault in this debate.

Mr. McCORMACK. I think that is a rather broad statement.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I make that request.

Mr. McCORMACK. Of course I am not going to object.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair hears no objection.

It is the purpose of the Chair to recognize each of the five Members for 3 minutes. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. KELLER] for 3 minutes.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Chairman, I want to call attention again to the subject that I referred to this morning when I had the illustration of 1 week's direct relief food allotment before me. It is a disgrace that this Congress shall deny relief to any man or woman or child that needs it. We are keeping on direct relief, on a starvation line, no less than a million people unless we give the full amount of $150,000,000 the President asked for. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CASEY] certainly ought to be adopted because it will help some toward the amount we ought to have voted with entire liberality.

It is not the fault of these men and women that they are on relief. It is a condition which has arisen out of industrial embarrassment. The machines have come, and we are going through a historic period here in which it is going to be necessary for us to readjust ourselves economically. It is not a question of a few millions of dollars or a few months. It is a question of carrying over until we get brains enough and sense enough and cooperative spirit enough to solve this problem of unemployment, and solve it once for all, as we can do. It is a shame and a disgrace to our intelligence that we should sit here and refuse to vote freely what the people need unless and until we are willing and able to put forth a plan, a method, by which they can again earn their living. We all ought to know that we have no right to deny a living to anybody until we have given him an opportunity to earn that living. This ought to be our guide. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. DEMPSEY], for 3 minutes.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Chairman, we have heard much here today about abuses of the W. P. A. I have tried to be frank, so far as the conditions that prevail in my State of New Mexico are concerned. I do not feel, however, that because of the abuses of W. P. A., those who are not responsible for those abuses should suffer, and I am speaking of the certified workers. The difficulties that have arisen have come about through the way we in the Congress have legislated for W. P. A. [Applause.] We set up first a system whereby everybody was employed to do something, it did not make much difference what, and we paid them a security wage, immediately branching out into all forms of activities in the way of projects. The labor unions recognized that the wage scale would be broken down and they made a demand for the prevailing rate of wage. Congress, realizing that it was the correct thing, provided the prevailing rate of wage; but the thing that has destroyed W. P. A. is that there has not been a willingness to do a prevailing day's work for the prevailing day's pay. [Applause.] That is the situation, and the fault lies not with the worker but with incompetent supervision. That is where the trouble is.

In my opinion, every project having to do with construction should be taken out of the Works Progress Administration and placed in some agency that is equipped to do efficient construction, an agency such as the P. W. A., if you please, where for every dollar expended for labor you get a dollar's worth of labor. I think the W. P. A. should change its name, should continue to administer the "white collar" projects, the sewing projects, and what not that the W. P. A. is competent and capable of administering through its welfare workers. I feel further, that unless in the next bill we bring up here the works-progress projects, such as sewer construction, airports, and so forth, are taken out of W. P. A. and placed in an agency that has the skilled men to do the work, public opinion will eventually stop the things we are doing.

I will be glad to agree to a reduction in the appropriation for W. P. A. if it means a cut in exorbitant expenditures for travel, telephone, and other nonessentials, but I am not willing to agree to any reduction that will take food out of the mouths of needy and deserving citizens of our Nation.

The certified workers in my State have been a political football. There is no denying this. For 2½ years I have made every effort I could to change the situation. Men and women were certified according to how many votes they had in their families and how they would deliver them, not upon the basis of how many dependents they had. That system has now been changed. Recently several indictments were brought in New Mexico as the result of a grand jury investigation authorized by a Federal judge. About 70 persons were indicted; most of those have been acquitted or the cases against them have been dismissed. The indictments, of course, were not an indication of guilt of the individuals but rather an indication of something wrong in W. P. A. administration; and, frankly, I think more blame attaches to those in charge or control of the administration than to those minor figures in the W. P. A. who have been named. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. THOMAS S. MCMILLAN). The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MCCORMACK] for 3 minutes.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, I was rather interested to note that on the vote on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. COX] 111 voted for it and 161 against it. Of the 111 who voted for it, 21 were Democrats and 90 were Republicans; and of the 161 who voted against it, 20 were Republicans and 141 Democrats. I think this is an interesting observation for the RECORD, because there are some people who read the RECORD.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield.

Mr. CANNON of Missouri. It would also be interesting to note that the majority of the Democrats of the Committee on Appropriations were in favor of the $150,000,000 figure.

Mr. McCORMACK. That is a very interesting and correct observation.

Mr. Chairman, in connection with the $100,000,000, I am reliably informed that 200,000 persons will be dropped the first week in April, 200,000 persons will be dropped the first week in May, and at least 200,000, and probably more, will be dropped the first week in June. I supported the $150,000,000 amendment, and I am urging my colleagues to support the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CASEY]. Certainly, those on the Democratic side who supported the $100,000,000, and likewise those on the Republican side are honest in their beliefs. Those who supported the $150,000,000 amendment were equally honest. Why can we not be fair? Why can we not recognize the honest positions adopted by both groups in the House and compromise our differences by agreeing upon $125,000,000 the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts?

In his observations, my friend, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CASEY], called attention to the weak. In the practical operation, government functions for the weak. The strong do not need the assistance of government. Government of all time, particularly democratic government, in its practical operation, functions in aid of the weak wherever inequities exist, and in this case it is the unemployed; in some other case it is small or large business being unable to obtain loans from banks; in other cases it is a business discriminated against; in bygone days it was unfair differentials or discriminatory rates by railroads or public utilities. We had to pass legislation to protect the weak against the strong.

The weak is not necessarily the one who is unemployed. The weak is not necessarily the man who is facing starvation. The weak is any group of our citizens with reference to whom inequities exist and with reference to whom those inequities developing into abuses must be controlled or regulated. Government, in its practical operation, must of necessity function for the weak. The strong do not need the assistance of government.

There are many people who fail to realize that exigency and necessity invariably is the influence that prompts governmental action. Certainly government should not close its eyes or ears to this fact, and that exigency and necessity has and will invariably exist, prompting governmental action, where injustices exist, or where inequities are imposed by a stronger group upon a weaker group. In the field of business, government has always taken the side of the weak. The weak in that case are not persons who are unemployed, out of work, facing conditions where human distress and suffering will result, but are men engaged in legitimate business who have had imposed upon them inequities, the continuance of which will affect them adversely in the conduct of their business, and probably in the destruction of their business. Where such a condition exists, where abuses exist, the continuance of which will be harmful to the country, and the source from which the abuses or inequities arose are unable or refuse to control them, then it is the duty of some agency to step in and to handle the situation; and that agency—the proper one—is the Government of the people, legislating to meet the problem in accordance with our scheme of government.

In the case of the depositors in banks that fail the weak were these persons who deposited their savings, feeling that their deposit in a bank assured safety. When banks failed they were the weak. The failures of banks were so numerous that something had to be done to protect this class—in this case, the weak class. We passed the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Act, insuring deposits up to $5,000 in all banks included in the system. In the case in years gone by of secret rebates by railroads and other public-utility companies, and of other discriminatory practices, the weak were those upon whom the inequities were imposed. As a result, regulatory boards in Federal and State Governments were created by law. In the case of the regulation of stock exchanges, to make them realize that in their operation they were charged with a public interest, the weak were not persons of no means but the investors who were being robbed by fictitious issues of stocks or bonds, and those who suffered as a result of the manipulation of the market by small and inside groups. Government acted to protect the weak in this situation. I can enumerate many other illustrations to show that the weak are not alone those who are in distress, but are any group of citizens upon whom inequities have been imposed, and who should receive protection against the ruthless strong. I wonder how many persons who want to see appropriations for relief of human beings stopped realize that in the making of appropriations that government is performing its duty; that none of us would like to see conditions exist which require its performance, but it is performing a duty that is consistent with its natural and proper functions.

In this legislative fight the weak are those who are the unfortunate and innocent victims of the present adverse business conditions. The strong, those who are in a position of economic security, at least many of them, fail to see the side of the weak in their opposition to appropriations. Their claim that government should not make such appropriations, as many make, constitutes a gross misunderstanding of the responsibility of government under conditions as have existed during the past 9 years. It is government's duty to protect the weak when circumstances require it. In the making of appropriations today and in the past, government is not only doing what it ought to do but is doing what humanity calls upon it to do. I regret that the $150,000,000 amendment was defeated. I hope that the pending amendment will be adopted. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. NICHOLS].

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, surely this amendment will be adopted. In my judgment, the spectacle that has been going on here for 2 days should go down to the everlasting shame of at least those of the majority party of this House of Representatives. We have been for 2 days quibbling over the enforcement of economy which will save $50,000,000, to be taken away from the needy of this country.

If we are going to be controlled now by a spirit of economy, let us, in the name of common sense, apply this economy where it should be applied, and where we can effect real savings, if you please, if we are anxious that an economy program be launched upon. Any day that there is an appropriation bill for any one of the big departments of Government before this House for consideration, it is possible, without hurting anybody except a few bureaucrats, to cut more than $50,000,000 from it. [Applause.]

I charge this to be within the knowledge of each and every one of you. We pass an appropriation bill here in a few short hours, never as much as a day, which appropriates billions of dollars. Those appropriation bills are not put to the close scrutiny that this bill is being put today; and I charge that there is hardly a man on the floor of the House who can tell within a billion dollars where the appropriations will be spent, if the bill provides for more than a billion dollars, and I refer to appropriation bills for the Department of the Interior, Department of Agriculture, and the other departments of Government.

Why do we now, when no one will deny that this country from one end to the other is rife with need for assistance to the unfortunate people of this Nation, subject this bill to this scrutiny? The needy are in very great number. We know they do not have the opportunity to earn a living unless the Government gives them this opportunity. Why would you be speculating with nakedness and hunger when the welfare of hundreds of thousands of people depend upon this $50,000,000?

The amendment provides for $125,000,000, and I sincerely hope that at least the majority membership of this House will take up the cudgel and do its duty in the present instance. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM].

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I hope this amendment will not be agreed to. This is not a question of economy, though that question, of course, enters into the picture. No one is asking the House to withhold a dollar that is necessary for needy persons as a matter of economy. Just a few moments ago I stood in the Well of the House and asked the Members not to withdraw the $40,000,000 extra money that the W. P. A. has at the present time. Why, the Congress has given the W. P. A. and other such agencies $7,000,000,000 to take care of the needy of the Nation.

Your vote here today will determine whether or not Congress is going to insist upon an administration of this relief program for the people who really need relief. When you talk about taking bread away from starving people, let me ask, why not take some of the people off the airport project in New York on which the W. P. A. people are working full time and being permitted to earn $260 a month? There are more than 2,000 skilled workers on that one W. P. A. project working full time and earning all the way from $150 to $260 a month. Why not do that in the administration of the law instead of turning away hungry people?

That is the fight that is being made today. The committee is asking the Congress to insist upon an administration of this fund in such manner that the money that we provide will go for needy purposes and not for all this tomfoolery that has been spoken of in debate, and we have not even scratched the surface as yet, if the whole story were told, and it will be told eventually.

Mr. Chairman, I have handled every relief bill that has been brought in here. I have defended the W. P. A. I give them credit for what they have done, and they have done some fine things. On the other hand, they have done some other things that are not very creditable to them. I am asking the Congress now by its action to say that we want them to cut their administrative expense; we want them to administer this fund so that every dollar that goes out of the Public Treasury will help needy people, and not be ladled out by this administration in the manner the debate has shown it has been in the past.

I hope the House will support the committee. We feel we have been liberal. Our record shows we have been liberal. I hope, therefore, the House will support the committee in this effort to secure for relief a proper administration.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CASEY].

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chair appointed as tellers Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts and Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia.

The Committee divided; and the tellers reported that there were—ayes 160, noes 207.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WHITE of Ohio: Page 1, line 8, strike out $825,000,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$800,000,000"; in line 9, strike out "$100,000,000" and insert "$75,000,000."

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I shall not detain the Committee very long, I can assure you of that. As the gentleman from Virginia has said, this subject has been thoroughly debated. I do not want to add very much to what has already been said except that this amendment provides $75,000,000 more for current relief needs and yet it represents a cut of $25,000,000 as compared with the pending bill.

A few moments ago an amendment was offered providing for $55,000,000. The distinguished gentleman from Virginia conceded that $55,000,000 covered the needs actually shown for the period involved, but contended it would not afford cushion if the anticipated carry-over of $45,000,000 failed to materialize. This amendment gives that $55,000,000, for which actual need was demonstrated, and in addition to that it provides $20,000,000 more for the cushion of which he spoke. After listening to all this debate it seems to me that $75,000,000 represents a reasonable compromise, and therefore I ask your support in the adoption of this amendment to the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. WHITE of Ohio) there were—ayes 75, noes 259.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BURDICK: Page 1, after line 11, add a new paragraph reading:

"No bonds of the United States shall be issued to finance any part of the appropriation herein provided, but the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States shall issue Treasury notes therefor without regard to any basis of issue except the direct responsibility of the Government itself."

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from North Dakota desire to be heard?

Mr. BURDICK. I do not, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the very stringent rule adopted yesterday for the consideration of this matter, the point of order is sustained.

Under the rule the Committee automatically rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. WARREN, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 246) making a further additional appropriation for work relief and relief for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, pursuant to House Resolution 149, he reported the same back to the House.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule the previous question is ordered.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman opposed to the joint resolution?

Mr. TABER. I am, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. TABER moves to recommit the bill to the Committee on Appropriations with instructions to report the same back forthwith with the following amendments:

Page 1, line 8, strike out "$825,000,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$780,000,000"; page 1, line 9, strike out "$100,000,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$55,000,000."

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion to recommit.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. If the previous question is voted down, will it then be possible to offer an amendment to the motion to recommit?

The SPEAKER. It would.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. Then, Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays on the motion ordering the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania demands the yeas and nays on the motion for the previous question. Those in favor of ordering the yeas and nays will rise and stand until counted. [After counting.] On the demand for the yeas and nays 53 Members rose in favor of taking the vote by the yeas and nays. The Chair has counted the membership present, and counts 360 Members. The number necessary to order the yeas and nays would be 72. Not a sufficient number have risen, and the yeas and nays are refused.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. NICHOLS. Is the vote now to be taken on the motion to recommit or on the previous question?

The SPEAKER. The vote is on ordering the previous question.

Mr. GAVAGAN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. GAVAGAN. Is not the parliamentary situation such that if the previous question is voted down, the motion to recommit would be then subject to further amendment?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is correct. If the previous question should be voted down then a proper amendment to the motion to recommit would be in order.

Mr. GAVAGAN. Mr. Speaker, a further parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. GAVAGAN. In that event the amendment to the motion to recommit would be subject to a roll call if sufficient number rose to order the yeas and nays?

The SPEAKER. Yes; if a sufficient number rose. The question is on ordering the previous question on the motion to recommit.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MCGRANERY) there were—ayes 295, noes 75.

So the previous question was ordered.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays on the motion to recommit.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BLOOM. I am certain there is some confusion here. The way I understand it the motion to recommit is to insert $55,000,000 instead of $100,000,000.

The SPEAKER. For the information of the House the Clerk will again report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk again reported the Taber motion to recommit.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 131, nays 276, not voting 25, as follows:

[Roll No. 47]

YEAS—131

Allen, Ill.	Doxey	Jenkins, Ohio	Robertson
Anderson, Calif.	Drewry	Jenks, N. H.	Robsion, Ky.
Andresen, A. H.	Durham	Jensen	Rockefeller
Arends	Dworshak	Johnson, Ill.	Routzohn
Ball	Elston	Jones, Ohio	Rutherford
Barton	Engel	Kean	Sandager
Bates, Mass.	Englebright	Kilday	Satterfield
Boren	Fish	Kinzer	Shafer, Mich.
Bradley, Mich.	Ford, Miss.	Kitchens	Short
Brown, Ga.	Gamble	Kleberg	Simpson
Brown, Ohio	Gartner	Knutson	Smith, Ohio
Bulwinkle	Gibbs	Lambertson	Smith, Va.
Burch	Gifford	Lanham	Springer
Carlson	Gilchrist	LeCompte	Stearns, N. H.
Chiperfield	Gillie	Lord	Taber
Church	Gore	Luce	Talle
Clark	Graham	McLean	Taylor, Tenn.
Clason	Griswold	Mapes	Tinkham
Clevenger	Gross	Martin, Iowa	Treadway
Cluett	Gwynne	Martin, Mass.	Vorys, Ohio
Coffee, Nebr.	Hall	Mason	Vreeland
Cole, N. Y.	Halleck	Michener	Wadsworth
Colmer	Hancock	O'Brien	West
Cox	Harness	Pace	Wheat
Crawford	Hartley	Pearson	Whelchel
Culkin	Hawks	Peterson, Ga.	White, Ohio
Curtis	Heinke	Pierce, N. Y.	Whittington
Darrow	Hess	Plumley	Wigglesworth
Dirksen	Hoffman	Reece, Tenn.	Williams, Del.
Disney	Holmes	Reed, Ill.	Wolcott
Ditter	Hope	Reed, N. Y.	Wolfenden, Pa.
Dondero	Horton	Rees, Kans.	Woodruff, Mich.
Douglas	Jarrett	Rich

NAYS—276

Alexander	Chapman	Flaherty	Jeffries
Allen, La.	Claypool	Flannagan	Johns
Allen, Pa.	Cochran	Flannery	Johnson, Ind.
Andersen, H. Carl	Coffee, Wash.	Folger	Johnson, Luther A.
Anderson, Mo.	Cole, Md.	Ford, Thomas F.	Johnson, Lyndon
Angell	Collins	Fries	Johnson, Okla.
Arnold	Connery	Fulmer	Johnson, W. Va.
Ashbrook	Cooper	Garrett	Jones, Tex.
Barden	Corbett	Gathings	Kee
Barnes	Costello	Gavagan	Keefe
Barry	Crosser	Gearhart	Keller
Bates, Ky.	Crowe	Gehrmann	Kelly
Beckworth	Crowther	Gerlach	Kennedy, Martin
Bell	Cullen	Geyer, Calif.	Kennedy, Michael
Bender	Cummings	Goldsborough	Kennedy, Md.
Bland	D'Alesandro	Gossett	Keogh
Bloom	Darden	Grant, Ala.	Kerr
Boehne	Delaney	Grant, Ind.	Kirwan
Boland	Dempsey	Gregory	Kocialkowski
Bolles	DeRouen	Griffith	Kramer
Bolton	Dickstein	Guyer, Kans.	Kunkel
Boykin	Dies	Hare	Landis
Bradley, Pa.	Dingell	Harrington	Larrabee
Brooks	Doughton	Hart	Lea
Bryson	Dowell	Harter, N. Y.	Leavy
Buck	Duncan	Harter, Ohio	Lemke
Buckler, Minn.	Dunn	Havenner	Lesinski
Burdick	Eaton, Calif.	Healey	Lewis, Colo.
Burgin	Eaton, N. J.	Hendricks	Lewis, Ohio
Byrne, N. Y.	Eberharter	Hennings	Ludlow
Byrns, Tenn.	Edmiston	Hill	McAndrews
Caldwell	Elliott	Hinshaw	McArdle
Cannon, Fla.	Ellis	Hobbs	McCormack
Cannon, Mo.	Evans	Hook	McDowell
Carter	Faddis	Houston	McGehee
Cartwright	Fay	Huil	McGranery
Case, S. Dak.	Fenton	Hunter	McKeough
Casey, Mass.	Ferguson	Izac	McLaughlin
Celler	Fernandez	Jacobsen	McLeod
Chandler	Fitzpatrick	Jarman	McMillan, John L.

McMillan, Thos. S.	O'Connor	Ryan	Sutphin
Maas	O'Day	Sabath	Sweeney
Maciejewski	O'Leary	Sacks	Tarver
Magnuson	Oliver	Schaefer, Ill.	Taylor, Colo.
Mahon	O'Neal	Schafer, Wis.	Tenerowicz
Maloney	O'Toole	Schiffler	Terry
Marcantonio	Parsons	Schuetz	Thill
Marshall	Patman	Schulte	Thomas, Tex.
Martin, Colo.	Patrick	Scrugham	Thomason
Martin, Ill.	Patton	Seccombe	Thorkelson
Massingale	Peterson, Fla.	Secrest	Tibbott
May	Pfeifer	Shanley	Tolan
Merritt	Pierce, Oreg.	Shannon	Van Zandt
Mills, Ark.	Pittenger	Sheppard	Vincent, Ky.
Mills, La.	Poage	Sirovich	Voorhis, Calif.
Mitchell	Polk	Smith, Conn.	Wallgren
Monroney	Powers	Smith, Maine	Walter
Moser	Rabaut	Smith, Wash.	Warren
Mott	Ramspeck	Smith, W. Va.	Weaver
Mouton	Randolph	Snyder	Welch
Mundt	Rankin	Somers, N. Y.	White, Idaho
Murdock, Ariz.	Rayburn	South	Williams, Mo.
Murdock, Utah	Richards	Sparkman	Winter
Murray	Risk	Spence	Wolverton, N. J.
Myers	Robinson, Utah	Starnes, Ala.	Wood
Nelson	Rodgers, Pa.	Stefan	Woodrum, Va.
Nichols	Rogers, Mass.	Sullivan	Youngdahl
Norrell	Rogers, Okla.	Sumner, Ill.	Zimmerman
Norton	Romjue	Sumners, Tex.	The Speaker

NOT VOTING—25

Andrews	Cooley	Mansfield	Schwert
Austin	Creal	Miller	Seger
Beam	Curley	Monkiewicz	Smith, Ill.
Blackney	Ford, Leland M.	Osmers	Steagall
Brewster	Green	Owen	Thomas, N. J.
Buckley, N. Y.	McReynolds	Sasscer	Vinson, Ga.
Byron

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call my name.

The Clerk called the name of Mr. Speaker BANKHEAD, and he voted "nay."

So the motion to recommit was rejected.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Andrews (for) with Mr. Byron (against).
Mr. Miller (for) with Mr. Beam (against).
Mr. Austin (for) with Mr. Brewster (against).
Mr. Leland M. Ford (for) with Mr. Green (against).
Mr. Monkiewicz (for) with Mr. Cooley (against).

General pairs:

Mr. Vinson of Georgia with Mr. Blackney.
Mr. Mansfield with Mr. Thomas of New Jersey.
Mr. Creal with Mr. Osmers.
Mr. Owen with Mr. Seger.
Mr. Steagall with Mr. Sasscer.
Mr. Smith of Illinois with Mr. Schwert.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the joint resolution.

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, on that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 292, nays 110, not voting 29, as follows:

[Roll No. 48]

YEAS—292

Alexander	Buckler, Minn.	Crowther	Fitzpatrick
Allen, La.	Burdick	Cullen	Flaherty
Allen, Pa.	Burgin	Cummings	Flannagan
Andersen, H. Carl	Byrne, N. Y.	D'Alesandro	Flannery
Anderson, Mo.	Byrns, Tenn.	Darden	Folger
Andresen, A. H.	Caldwell	Delaney	Ford, Thomas F.
Angell	Cannon, Fla.	Dempsey	Fries
Arnold	Cannon, Mo.	DeRouen	Fulmer
Ashbrook	Carter	Dickstein	Garrett
Barden	Cartwright	Dies	Gartner
Barnes	Case, S. Dak.	Dingell	Gathings
Barry	Casey, Mass.	Disney	Gavagan
Bates, Ky.	Celler	Doughton	Gearhart
Beckworth	Chandler	Dowell	Gehrmann
Bell	Chapman	Duncan	Gerlach
Bender	Clason	Dunn	Geyer, Calif.
Bland	Claypool	Eaton, Calif.	Gilchrist
Bloom	Cochran	Eberharter	Goldsborough
Boehne	Coffee, Wash.	Edmiston	Gore
Boland	Cole, Md.	Elliott	Gossett
Bolles	Collins	Ellis	Graham
Bolton	Colmer	Englebright	Grant, Ala.
Boren	Connery	Evans	Grant, Ind.
Boykin	Cooper	Faddis	Gregory
Bradley, Pa.	Corbett	Fay	Griffith
Brooks	Costello	Fenton	Griswold
Bryson	Crosser	Ferguson	Gross
Buck	Crowe	Fernandez	Guyer, Kans.
Hare	Lemke	O'Connor	Sirovich
Harrington	Lesinski	O'Day	Smith, Conn.
Hart	Lewis, Colo.	O'Leary	Smith, Maine
Harter, N. Y.	Lewis, Ohio	Oliver	Smith, Wash.
Harter, Ohio	Ludlow	O'Neal	Smith, W. Va.
Havenner	McAndrews	O'Toole	Snyder
Healey	McArdle	Parsons	Somers, N. Y.
Hendricks	McCormack	Patman	South
Hennings	McDowell	Patrick	Sparkman
Hill	McGehee	Patton	Spence
Hinshaw	McGranery	Pearson	Starnes, Ala.
Hobbs	McKeough	Peterson, Fla.	Stefan
Hook	McLaughlin	Pfeifer	Sullivan
Houston	McLeod	Pierce, Oreg.	Sumners, Tex.
Hull	McMillan, John L.	Pittenger	Sutphin
Hunter	McMillan, Thos. S.	Poage	Sweeney
Izac	Maas	Polk	Tarver
Jacobsen	Maciejewski	Powers	Taylor, Colo.
Jarman	Magnuson	Rabaut	Taylor, Tenn.
Jeffries	Mahon	Ramspeck	Tenerowicz
Jenks, N. H.	Maloney	Randolph	Terry
Johns	Mapes	Rankin	Thill
Johnson, Ind.	Marcantonio	Rayburn	Thomas, Tex.
Johnson, Luther A.	Marshall	Reece, Tenn.	Thomason
Johnson, Lyndon	Martin, Colo.	Rees, Kans.	Thorkelson
Johnson, Okla.	Martin, Ill.	Richards	Tibbott
Johnson, W. Va.	Massingale	Risk	Tolan
Jones, Tex.	May	Robinson, Utah	Treadway
Kee	Merritt	Rodgers, Pa.	Van Zandt
Keefe	Mills, Ark.	Rogers, Mass.	Vincent, Ky.
Keller	Mills, La.	Rogers, Okla.	Voorhis, Calif.
Kelly	Mitchell	Ryan	Wallgren
Kennedy, Martin	Monroney	Sabath	Walter
Kennedy, Md.	Moser	Sacks	Warren
Kennedy, Michael	Mott	Schaefer, Ill.	Weaver
Keogh	Mouton	Schafer, Wis.	Welch
Kerr	Mundt	Schiffler	White, Idaho
Kirwan	Murdock, Ariz.	Schuetz	Whittington
Kocialkowski	Murdock, Utah	Schulte	Williams, Mo.
Kramer	Murray	Scrugham	Winter
Kunkel	Myers	Seccombe	Wolverton, N. J.
Landis	Nelson	Secrest	Wood
Larrabee	Nichols	Shanley	Woodrum, Va.
Lea	Norrell	Sheppard	Youngdahl
Leavy	Norton	Shannon	Zimmerman

NAYS—110

Allen, Ill.	Doxey	Johnson, Ill.	Rockefeller
Anderson, Calif.	Drewry	Jones, Ohio	Routzohn
Arends	Durham	Kean	Rutherford
Ball	Dworshak	Kilday	Sandager
Barton	Eaton, N. J.	Kinzer	Satterfield
Bates, Mass.	Elston	Kitchens	Shafer, Mich.
Bradley, Mich.	Engel	Kleberg	Short
Brown, Ga.	Ford, Miss.	Knutson	Simpson
Brown, Ohio	Gamble	Lambertson	Smith, Ohio
Bulwinkle	Gibbs	Lanham	Smith, Va.
Burch	Gifford	LeCompte	Springer
Carlson	Gillie	Lord	Stearns, N. H.
Chiperfield	Gwynne	Luce	Taber
Church	Hall	McLean	Talle
Clark	Halleck	Martin, Iowa	Tinkham
Clevenger	Hancock	Martin, Mass.	Vorys, Ohio
Cluett	Harness	Mason	Vreeland
Coffee, Nebr.	Hartley	Michener	Wadsworth
Cole, N. Y.	Hawks	O'Brien	West
Cox	Heinke	Pace	Wheat
Crawford	Hess	Peterson, Ga.	Whelchel
Culkin	Hoffman	Pierce, N. Y.	Wigglesworth
Curtis	Holmes	Plumley	Williams, Del.
Darrow	Hope	Reed, Ill.	Wolcott
Dirksen	Horton	Reed, N. Y.	Wolfenden, Pa.
Ditter	Jarrett	Rich	Woodruff, Mich.
Dondero	Jenkins, Ohio	Robertson
Douglas	Jensen	Robsion, Ky.

NOT VOTING—29

Andrews	Creal	Miller	Seger
Austin	Curley	Monkiewicz	Smith, Ill.
Beam	Fish	Osmers	Steagall
Blackney	Ford, Leland M.	Owen	Sumner, Ill.
Brewster	Green	Romjue	Thomas, N. J.
Buckley, N. Y.	McReynolds	Sasscer	Vinson, Ga.
Byron	Mansfield	Schwert	White, Ohio
Cooley

So the bill was passed.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Byron (for) with Mr. Andrews (against).
Mr. Beam (for) with Mr. Miller (against).
Mr. Brewster (for) with Mr. Austin (against).
Mr. Green (for) with Mr. Leland M. Ford (against).
Miss Sumner of Illinois (for) with Mr. White of Ohio (against).

Until further notice:

Mr. Vinson of Georgia with Mr. Blackney.
Mr. Mansfield with Mr. Thomas of New Jersey.
Mr. McReynolds with Mr. Fish.
Mr. Creal with Mr. Osmers.
Mr. Owen with Mr. Seger.
Mr. Steagall with Mr. Sasscer.
Mr. Cooley with Mr. Monkiewicz.

Mr. JENSEN. Mr. Speaker, how am I recorded?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is recorded as voting "yea."

Mr. JENSEN. I intended to vote "nay."

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman desire to change his vote from "yea" to "nay"?

Mr. JENSEN. I meant to vote "nay."

The SPEAKER. Record the gentleman as voting "nay."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

By unanimous consent, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the bill was passed was laid on the table.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for one-half minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Speaker, my colleague the gentleman from New York, Mr. CURLEY, is absent because of illness. Were he present, he would have voted "nay" on the motion to recommit and "yea" on the passage of the bill.

My colleague the gentleman from New York, Mr. BUCKLEY, was called home hurriedly because of the serious illness of his mother. Had he been present, he would have voted "nay" on the motion to recommit and "yea" on the passage of the bill.

My colleague the gentleman from New York, Mr. SCHWERT, is unavoidably absent. Had he been present, he would have voted "nay" on the motion to recommit and "yea" on the passage of the bill.

These three gentlemen would have supported the $150,000,000 figure.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein two short resolutions, one of which refers to the Secretary of Labor and the other to President Roosevelt's administration of the New Deal.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Monday next, after the disposition of business on the Speaker's table, the legislative program for the day, and special orders, if any, that I may be permitted to address the House for 30 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. CONNERY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD on the relief appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. HENDRICKS. Mr. Speaker, my colleague the gentleman from Florida, Mr. GREEN, asked me to state that had he been here he would have voted for the $150,000,000 amendment, and that if that failed he would have voted "yea" on the passage of the resolution.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. COFFEE of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD on two different topics and in the second extension to include a brief letter from a constituent.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my colleague the gentleman from California [Mr. HINSHAW] may extend his own remarks and include therein a letter from a constituent.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN] may include in an extension of remarks he made today in the Committee of the Whole an editorial to which he referred in his remarks.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

CANCER CONTROL MONTH

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 2 minutes, and I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks therein tomorrow.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, last year I was fortunate enough to secure the passage of the bill which provides that the President shall declare the month of April, Cancer Control Month. Today I am asking the Members—and I know they will wish also—to join in inviting the country to unite in spreading information regarding cancer.

It is the belief of specialists at this time that many, many cases can be cured. Some of them go to the extent of believing that half the number who now die each year from cancer might be saved if their cases were taken in time. It is a matter for education. The following is the proclamation issued by the President:

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

A PROCLAMATION

Whereas Public Resolution No. 82, Seventy-fifth Congress, approved March 28, 1938 (52 Stat. 148), authorizes and requests the President to issue annually a proclamation setting apart the month of April of each year as Cancer Control Month, and to invite similar action on the part of the governors of the several States, Territories, and possessions of the United States; and

Whereas such public resolution requests that such proclamations invite the medical profession, the press, and all agencies and individuals interested in a national program for the control of the disease of cancer, by education and other cooperative means, to unite during the month of April in a public dedication to such program and in a concerted effort to impress upon the people of the Nation the necessity for such a program; and

Whereas through the National Cancer Institute of the United States Public Health Service, the Federal Government is leading the way in advancing research, in promoting effective treatment methods, and in advocating the provision of adequate facilities for cancer patients, as are the several States which have adopted programs for the control of cancer, as well as voluntary groups led by the Women's Field Army, which are engaged in a Nation-wide educational campaign; and

Whereas medical authorities have assured the American people of the curability of many cases of cancer, a disease that now ranks second among the causes of death in the United States:

Now, therefore, I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, do hereby set apart the month of April 1939 as Cancer Control Month, and invite similar action on the part of the governors of the several States, Territories, and possessions of the United States; and, in order that the American people may become better informed concerning the prevalence of cancer and the effective steps which can be taken to control it, I invite the medical profession, scientific groups, all organs of opinion, including the press, radio, and the motion-picture industry, and all agencies and individuals interested in a national program for the control of the disease of cancer, to unite during the month of April 1939 in a concerted effort to impress upon the people of the Nation the necessity for this program and the importance of constant vigilance in this fight for humanity.

Done at the city of Washington this 17th day March, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and thirty-nine, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and sixty-third.

[SEAL] FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

By the President:

SUMNER WELLES,

Acting Secretary of State.

Mr. Speaker, on February 28 I introduced a bill (H. R. 4585) to aid further in the prevention and cure of cancer.

In introducing this amendment, the National Cancer Institute Act, approved August 5, 1937, a brief statement should be made first regarding the original act, which unquestionably was the culmination of a long-time and increasing anticancer movement in America. Indeed, this act was the first effort on the part of the Federal Government to crystallize a widespread feeling among all classes of our people that something must be done about the control of this scourge. There was no vote against the bill in either House. The United States Public Health Scrvice is charged with its administration and in the year and a half since the act was passed fundamental cancer research and control activities have been started in many places. The National Cancer Institute, created by this act—the so-called Bulwinkle-Bone Act—is rapidly becoming the clearing house for cancer information as well as the general headquarters for a national organized attack.

Let me briefly review the achievements of the Public Health Service in cancer control during the past year. I quote from a recent report of the National Cancer Institute:

The National Cancer Institute Act created a National Advisory Cancer Council which shares with the Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service the responsibility for the policies and activities of the Institute. The council has held seven meetings. One of the first actions of the council (meeting November 9, 1937) was to extend an invitation to the heads of various foundations, research institutions, and medical schools to meet in Washington and cooperate in the development of a broad Nationwide Federal program of cancer control.

This meeting (December 13, 1937) resulted in several informal decisions:

1. Other conferences to be held from time to time as the necessity arises.

2. The appointment of a committee to formulate the fundamental aspects of the cancer problem as well as the fundamental principles of cancer research and to suggest various lines of work which merit investigation.

This committee has already made a report which appeared in the Public Health Reports of December 2, 1938. It formulates and clarifies the cancer problem in such a manner that it will serve as an excellent guide to both present and future investigators.

3. The appointment of a committee to study clinical cancer service and facilities for training in cancer diagnosis and treatment.

TRAINING IN DIAGNOSIS AND TREATMENT

On January 8, 1938, the chairman of the committee on cancer service, Dr. James Ewing brought together in New York City a group of well-known surgeons, radiologists, pathologists and deans of medical schools from different sections of the country. This group adopted resolutions urging the National Advisory Cancer Council and the National Cancer Institute to undertake at once the promotion of special training in diagnosis and treatment of cancer by means of stipends to selected young physicians in compliance with section 5 (b) of the National Cancer Institute Act.

A list of hospitals and cancer clinics suitable, in the opinion of the committee, for training was also submitted.

As a result of the above recommendations, training activities are now well under way and, at the present time, 22 young physicians carefully selected by personal interview are receiving special training at approved cancer centers. It is fairly well agreed that this special training of physicians in radiology, in tumor pathology, and in surgery meets one of the most urgent and immediate needs of the cancer-control program. Furthermore, this activity has been the means of stimulating cancer clinics throughout the country toward improving their equipment and personnel and toward a general raising of standards.

ESTABLISHMENT OF BALTIMORE CANCER CENTER

The largest clinical-research project initiated by the National Cancer Institute with the advice and cooperation of the council was the setting up of a cancer unit in the United States Marine Hospital at Baltimore. The regular beneficiaries of the Public Health Service east of the Mississippi River, the medical care of whom falls upon the Public Health Service, number approximately 170,000. Of these 40,000 are in the cancer age, and consequently some 4,000 cases of cancer will require treatment in the course of the next 25 to 30 years. An extra wing is being added to the hospital to provide the necessary facilities. Funds for the construction of this clinic were obtained from the Public Works Administration while the hospital division of the Public Health Service will furnish hospitalization and maintenance of patients. The National Cancer Institute will provide the personnel for carrying out clinical cancer research.

THE NEW INSTITUTE AND RESEARCH FELLOWS

In compliance with section 5 (c) of the National Cancer Institute Act, 15 research fellowships have been granted for work on projects undertaken both by the National Cancer Institute and other research centers. These fellows are appointed for 1 year only, subject to renewal if their achievements so warrant. The research staff of the institute will be recruited in the future largely from the fellows that display special aptitudes and talents.

The new cancer institute building is now under construction and will be ready for occupancy not later than September 1939.

FIELD STUDIES—STATISTICAL AND EPIDEMIOLOGICAL

Soon after the establishment of the National Cancer Institute, certain field investigations suggested themselves as comprising some of the essentials of a well-rounded program. These field investigations, although technically a part of the Cancer Institute's program, were authorized to be carried out under the administrative direction of the Division of Public Health Methods of the Public Health Service. While it is too early to report results, it should be mentioned that the studies initiated to date include five more or less distinct projects.

These may be listed as studies of, first, the incidence of cancer; second, mortality from the disease, including regional differences and trends of death rates during the past 30 years; third, the epidemiology of the disease with special reference to lung cancer; fourth, the effectiveness of various methods of cancer therapy utilized during recent years; and, fifth, the cost of adequate concer therapy.

DISTRIBUTION OF RADIUM

In compliance with section 5 (a) of the National Cancer Institute Act, the National Cancer Institute has purchased 9½ grams of radium. Within a few weeks distribution of radium will be made to institutions that have complied with the regulations and safeguards covering the loan, and where the need is greatest. It is expected that requests for radium will far exceed the amount available, as applications received since the completed regulations were sent out November 1, total more than 3,200 milligrams, and many other hospitals have indicated their intention of submitting applications. One gram will have to be retained for the institute's own work.

COOPERATION WITH STATES

In compliance with section 2 (g) of the National Cancer Institute Act, the institute has endeavored to stimulate the interest of State health agencies in the promotion of cancer prevention and control.

Six States—New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, Georgia, and Missouri—have legally enacted cancer-control programs. An analysis has been made of the laws in these States. Several other States are now interested in cancer legislation and have been provided by the National Cancer Institute with the basic principles that should be considered in drawing up a law. A model law is being prepared for presentation to the next meeting of the State and Territorial health officers with the Surgeon General for discussion and approval.

The institute also maintains close cooperation with the American College of Surgeons with reference to policies of training, and with the American Society for the Control of Cancer with reference to cancer-health education.

GRANTS-IN-AID

The National Advisory Cancer Council has considered 82 applications for grants-in-aid, totaling more than $1,000,000. The council has recommended and the Surgeon General has awarded 16 grants-in-aid totaling more than $116,000 to various institutions for the promotion of fundamental research projects in compliance with section 4 (c) of the National Cancer Institute Act.

CANCER IS A PUBLIC-HEALTH PROBLEM

Despite the well-organized attack of the Federal Government upon the fundamentals of the cancer problem, and the progress in research resulting from the National Cancer Institute Act, the immediate cancer victim is not provided for. Skilled medical care is not available to a very large proportion of 500,000 cancer sufferers in the United States today. This country has 142,000 deaths annually from cancer. A recent survey by the National Cancer Institute has shown that there are five existing cases to every death from cancer in Atlanta, Ga., for example, and three cases to every death in Chicago.

In past years the death rate from cancer has been steadily increasing. In 1900, which is the year when first records are available, it caused 64 deaths per 100,000 of the population. In the decade between 1900 and 1910 there was a 57-percent increase in cancer deaths; in 1910 to 1920, a 39-percent increase in cancer deaths; and 1920 to 1930, a 41-percent increase in cancer deaths. This increase is believed to be due in part to better recognition of the disease and better reporting of cases; also in part to the fact that more people are living to the cancer age, and finally, to certain unknown factors in the complexity of life in our modern civilization.

Surgeon General Parran, of the United States Public Health Service, has recently declared that during the past 35 years we have witnessed a marked change in the health problems of the country. He says:

> The general death rate from all causes has declined from 17.6 to 10.7. Death rates from diphtheria, diarrhea and enteritis, scarlet fever, tuberculosis, and typhoid fever have decliined from a combined total of 433.6 to 83.5 per 100,000 people in 1900 and 1934. On the other hand, public-health measures have not been so effective against diseases in the older-age groups. Chronic diseases of various types, particularly cancer and heart disease, are increasing problems. It is inevitable, therefore, that public health should concern itself more with these chronic diseases. In my view, any disease whether communicable or not which has a wide prevalence, which is serious in its nature, and which is costly to treat is a proper concern of the public health. Cancer fulfills all of these definitions.

CANCER RATE HIGH IN INDUSTRIAL AND LESS-PRIVILEGED GROUPS

Cancer deaths are highest in our industrial centers, especially in the New England area. If the States are arranged in the order of their relative positions with respect to cancer mortality, giving the number of deaths per 100,000 of population, we have the following five States heading the list for the year 1936:

	Actual number of deaths	Rate per 100,000
Massachusetts	6,770	153.0
Maine	1,291	151.3
New York	19,190	148.4
New Hampshire	753	148.2
Rhode Island	991	145.5

The five lowest death rates from cancer are found in the following largely rural States:

	Actual number of deaths	Rate per 100,000
Alabama	1,728	60.3
Georgia	1,771	57.9
New Mexico	235	55.7
North Carolina	1,784	51.6
South Carolina	941	50.6
Arkansas	1,011	50.0

Data assembled from a number of sources in this country and Great Britain have shown that the attack rate of cancer is higher among the less privileged economic groups. For example, the cancer mortality rate of gainfully employed males between the ages of 15 and 64, by occupational groups, is such that if we take the death rate among professional men, as a base line of 100, the rate increases directly with other occupations until among unskilled workers the rate is 152. In other words, there is a 50-percent higher attack rate among unskilled workers than among professional workers.

RECOGNIZED NEEDS IN CANCER CONTROL

Cancer treatments frequently are very costly to the individual patient. Studies by the United States Public Health Service have shown that a case of cancer is often an economic catastrophe to an entire family.

Furthermore, it is now generally agreed by physicians and public-health officials that the successful treatment of cancer requires facilities and equipment far beyond the ability of the private practitioner to provide. The general practitioner does not, as a rule, undertake the treatment of cancer, his chief and most important function being to detect cancer in its early stages and to refer the patient at once to competent hands for treatment. The successful treatment of cancer requires the collaboration of skilled specialists—the pathologist, the surgeon, the radiologist, and the physicist. These specialists themselves cannot, because of the expense, provide facilities for treatment through their personal resources but must utilize facilities subsidized by private benevolence or by public funds.

The Memorial Hospital in New York City, as you know, is one of the great cancer institutions in the world. Dr. James Ewing, director of this hospital, in a letter to the late Senator Copeland, discussing the proposed Cancer Institute Act, then before Congress, said:

> The first responsibility of the Government is to furnish first-class diagnosis and treatment to the patients for whom it is responsible, and I think that a broadly organized cancer institute, designed primarily for treatment and located in Washington, would probably be an effective step in this direction.

Dr. Max Cutler, director of the Chicago Tumor Institute, says, "The facilities for the modern treatment of cancer in this country are wholly inadequate. The perfecting of service to the cancer patient demands a personnel of great experience, a costly equipment and a perfect organization. The future development of cancer treatment must develop along the line of concentration and specialization."

Dr. Ludvig Hektoen, executive director of the National Advisory Cancer Council, in a recent address before the Institute of Medicine in Chicago, declared that the lack of early action in cancer calls for continued education of the public and the physician. Dr. Hektoen pointed out the "grievous lack of competent, accessible cancer service," and further stated:

> Enormous difficulties exist as shown by the amount of cancer that slips through into the incurable stage with its crushing burdens of distress. The essentials of cancer service must be brought closer and closer to the patient, actual or prospective. Here are needs that cannot be met without the organized cooperation of public and private agencies. How, for instance, can effective examinations, which are urged in order to detect precancerous processes and cancer in the curable stage, be secured for all classes of people without organized public provisions? Besides, what can be done by the patient himself, by the medical profession, and by private agencies, more public means and methods are required to give to all the benefits of the present possibilities of early treatment of cancer. The care of a large proportion of the patients inevitably falls on the community, and the earlier competent care is provided in each case the better for all concerned, including the community itself as a whole.

CANCER CONTROL IN ENGLAND

In England, with a population of 60,000,000 people as compared to 130,000,000 in the United States, the British Government has announced its intention to establish a cancer service which will make available for everyone modern facilities for the diagnosis and treatment of cancer. The mortality from cancer in England has also been steadily rising for many years and the annual number of deaths from the disease is now 70,000. It is computed that not more than 1 in every 4 patients with cancer at an accessible site, and less than that in whom the disease is deep seated, is given an opportunity for the cure or amelioration offered by the prompt application of modern methods. According to the Minister of Health, "There are vast resources of knowledge in our laboratories which are not yet carried through to the lives of the people." The estimated cost of this cancer service will be £700,000 a year, or approximately $3,500,000.

It is perfectly clear now to the outstanding cancer experts in this country—America—that if our present knowledge and present skillful technique in the diagnosis and treatment of cancer were made available to all classes of our people, the greatest present-day need in cancer control would be met.

In fact a recent study of this problem indicates that if every patient suffering from cancer in the United States could be given the benefit of the most modern methods of treatment the increased curability over present conditions would result in a saving of at least 25,000 lives annually. The proposed amendment to the National Cancer Institute Act will provide the machinery which should eventually bring about this annual saving of lives.

SCOPE OF PROPOSED AMENDMENT

This proposed amendment to the National Cancer Institute Act is for the broad purpose of enabling the Public Health Service—

To assist States, counties, cities, or other political subdivisions of the States to extend and improve measures through public and private institutions and organizations for the diagnosis, treatment, and control of cancer, including the provision of hospital, diagnostic, clinic, and other facilities for the diagnosis and treatment of persons suffering from cancer or suspected of suffering from this disease.

It seeks to give present cancer sufferers the maximum opportunity for life which is offered by modern science.

The amendment conforms in structure and principle to the legislation embodied in title VI of the Social Security Act, authorizing the Public Health Service to cooperate with States, counties, and municipalities in establishing and maintaining adequate public-health services, and it is similar also to the Venereal Disease Control Act of May 24, 1938, authorizing the Public Health Service to cooperate with States, counties, health districts, and other political subdivisions of the States in the prevention, treatment, and control of the venereal diseases. Cooperative activities under both of these measures are progressing harmoniously and effectively with funds provided by Congress to the Public Health Service.

All over the country there is great need for providing modern facilities for cancer diagnosis and treatment and for enabling persons in need to meet the cost of treatment.

I am told that there are eight States—Nevada, Idaho, South Dakota, Arizona, Wyoming, Alabama, New Mexico, and Arkansas—without a single up-to-date cancer clinic. In only six States is there an official State organization for cancer control.

The proposed legislation provides for grants-in-aid of funds to be made to the States on the basis of (1) population, (2) the death rate from cancer, (3) existing facilities for the diagnosis and treatment of cancer, and (4) the financial needs of the respective States. The District of Columbia, Alaska, and Hawaii are included in the amendment.

Prior to the beginning of the fiscal year, State health authorities of each State or other State cancer-control authority, with the approval of the health authorities, will submit to the Surgeon General of the Public Health Service and the National Advisory Cancer Council plans for the use of funds made available in accordance with the legislation. A State plan, to receive approval, must provide for State or local participation in the costs of the plan to at least the amount of Federal funds allotted, must provide for improving and extending facilities for cancer diagnosis and treatment, with preference being given to the treatment of needy persons, and must provide for the cooperation in the plan of appropriate professional groups. After approval of these plans, amounts to be paid to the States are certified to the Secretary of the Treasury.

The amendment provides for the appointment of two additional members of the National Advisory Cancer Council, and specified that, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, the Surgeon General shall, after consultation with State and Territorial health officers and the council, prescribe rules and regulations necessary to carry out the purposes of the legislation.

A further provision of the legislation permits the admission of a limited number of persons suspected of having or known to be suffering from cancer to hospitals of the Public Health Service for purposes of diagnosis, treatment, and clinical study, when facilities for the care of such persons are available.

I earnestly ask your help and cooperation in spreading this educational movement to stop the inroads of this most dread disease. [Applause.]

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Wednesday next, after the disposition of business on the Speaker's table, the legislative program for the day, and other special orders, I may address the House for 20 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HOLMES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a letter which I received from Corrington Gill, Assistant Administrator, showing two tables on the expenditure of P. W. A. money and the number employed during 1938 up to March 1, 1939.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. HOLMES]?

There was no objection.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to include in my remarks made this afternoon on the subject of W. P. A. a resolution from the city of St. Paul, Minn.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ALEXANDER]?

There was no objection.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an article from the Washington Post of March 30.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ALEXANDER]?

There was no objection.

Mr. SIROVICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD by printing a speech I delivered on the floor of the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. SIROVICH]?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to amend the request I made a few moments ago in view of the existing special orders for Wednesday next, and I make the same request for 20 minutes to address the House on Thursday, after the disposition of matters on the Speaker's table and at the conclusion of special orders heretofore made.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California [Mr. BUCK]?

There was no objection.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. MOUTON, for 8 days, on account of Government business.

ADJOURNMENT OVER

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN]?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman tell us the program for next week?

Mr. RAYBURN. On Monday we will take up bills on the Consent Calendar and suspensions, if there are any. On Tuesday the Committee on Foreign Affairs will present a bill, on which the Committee on Rules will bring in a rule, having to do with various lands in Mexico. On Wednesday we will call the Calendar of Committees. On Thursday the Committee on Appropriations will present the appropriation bill for the District of Columbia. The consideration of this bill usually takes but a day. If we get through in 1 day with that bill, we will adjourn from Thursday until Monday.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. The gentleman does not know if there are any suspensions to come up on Monday?

Mr. RAYBURN. No. I have not consulted with the Speaker on that.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will take the liberty of stating that the Private Calendar will be called on Tuesday next after the matter referred to has been disposed of.

Mr. RAYBURN. Yes. I had forgotten about that. After consideration of the bill referred to, we will call up the bills on the Private Calendar.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Does the gentleman know whether any committees that will have the call on Wednesday have any bills of major importance?

Mr. RAYBURN. I do not know what committee has the call. The committees have not been very anxious to bring up bills on Calendar Wednesday. That is the complete program for next week, as far as I know.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN]?

There was no objection.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 25 minutes p. m.), the House, under its previous order, adjourned until Monday, April 3, 1939, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS

Public hearings will continue on Saturday, April 1, 1939, at 10 a. m., on social-security legislation in the Ways and Means Committee room in the New House Office Building.

COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

There will be a meeting of the Business Research Subcommittee of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce at 10 a. m. Monday, April 3, 1939. Business to be considered: Hearing on H. R. 3395—business-research bill.

There will be a meeting of the subcommittee of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee on the trust-indenture bill (H. R. 5220). The hearings are to be held in the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee room beginning April 4, 1939, at 10 a. m. The hearings will be continued on April 5 and 6. Proponents of the bill will be heard on the 4th and opponents on the 5th and 6th.

COMMITTEE ON RIVERS AND HARBORS

The Committee on Rivers and Harbors will meet Tuesday, April 4, 1939, at 10:30 a. m., to continue hearings on the project for the Connecticut River, Conn. and Mass.

COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Foreign Affairs in the committee rooms, Capitol, Tuesday, April 4, 1939, at 10 a. m., for the consideration of H. R. 5031, for the relief of the sufferers from the earthquake in Chile and discussion as to the procedure with reference to amendments to the neutrality law.

COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

There will be a public hearing before Subcommittee No. 4 of the Committee on the Judiciary at 10 a. m. on Wednesday, April 5, 1939, on the bill (H. R. 4236) to provide for the more expeditious settlement of disputes with the United States, and for other purposes. The hearing will be held in the Judiciary Committee room, 346 House Office Building.

There will be a public hearing before Subcommittee No. 3 of the Committee on the Judiciary at 10 a. m. Friday, April 7, 1939, on the bill (H. R. 5138) to make unlawful attempts to overthrow the Government of the United States, to require licensing of civilian military organizations, to make unlawful attempts to interfere with the discipline of the Army and Navy, to require registration and fingerprinting of aliens, to enlarge the jurisdiction of the United States circuit court of appeals in certain cases, and for other purposes. The hearing will be held in the Judiciary Committee room, 346 House Office Buidling.

COMMITTEE ON MERCHANT MARINE AND FISHERIES

The Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries will hold public hearings in room 219, House Office Building, at 10 a. m., on the bills and dates listed below:

Tuesday, April 4, 1939:

H. R. 3209, making it a misdemeanor to stow away on vessels; H. R. 3398, regarding the down payment for construction of new vessels; H. R. 3935, relating to the discharge of seamen.

Wednesday, April 5, 1939:

H. R. 3052, uniform insignia for Naval Reserve radio operators; H. R. 1010, intercoastal subsidy bill (WELCH).

Thursday, April 6, 1939:

H. R. 1011, acquisition of drydock facilities for United States Maritime Commission on San Francisco Bay (WELCH); H. R. 2870, acquisition of drydock facilities for United States Maritime Commission at Los Angeles (THOMAS F. FORD); H. R. 3040 acquisition of drydock facilities for United States Maritime Commission at Los Angeles (GEYER of California).

Tuesday, April 11, 1939:

H. R. 1783, inspection of hulls of sail vessels and barges (BLAND); H. R. 1785, motorboat bill (BLAND); H. R. 1795, motorboat bill (HENDRICKS); H. R. 1809, inspection of motorboats, 15 gross tons up (MAGNUSON); H. R. 2398, regarding pilots on yachts (ANGELL); H. R. 3837, inspection of motorboats, 15 gross tons up (CONNERY).

Thursday, April 13, 1939:

H. R. 4220, load-line bill for seagoing vessels (BLAND).

Thursday, April 13, 1939:

H. R. 2404, surgeon and hospital on vessels (SIROVICH); H. R. 2660, limitation of liability (SIROVICH); House Joint Resolution 153 and House Joint Resolution 194, investigate conditions pertaining to lascar seamen (SIROVICH).

Wednesday, April 19, 1939:

On Wednesday, April 19, 1939, at 10 a. m., the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries will resume hearings on the bill H. R. 5130, to amend certain provisions of the Merchant Marine and Shipping Acts, to further the development of the American merchant marine, and for other purposes.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

595. A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting the draft of proposed legislation to add certain lands to the Papago Indian Reservation in Arizona; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

596. A letter from the Assistant Secretary of the Department of the Interior, transmitting a copy of a resolution passed by the Saint Thomas Harbor Board at a special meeting held on March 8, 1939; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. RANKIN: Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation. H. R. 5452. A bill to provide certain benefits for World War veterans and their dependents, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 357). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. CHANDLER: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 5497. A bill to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto; without amendment (Rept. No. 358). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. BLAND: Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. House Joint Resolution 241. Joint resolution providing for the participation of the United States in the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of the United States Lighthouse Service; without amendment (Rept. No. 359). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. BLAND: Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. H. R. 5375. A bill to promote nautical education, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 360). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

Under clause 2 of rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of the following bills, which were referred as follows:

A bill (H. R. 1708) granting an increase of pension to Mack C. Ratcliff; Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 1736) granting a pension to Albert B. McDaniel; Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 5107) granting an increase of pension to Annie S. Wynne; Committee on Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

A bill (H. R. 5204) granting a pension to William McCans; Committee on Claims discharged, and referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri:

H. R. 5471. A bill to amend the act entitled "An act for making further and more effectual provision for the national defense, and for other purposes," approved June 3, 1916, as amended, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. CALDWELL:

H. R. 5472. A bill to amend the Inland Waterways Corporation Act, approved June 3, 1924, as amended, authorizing the Secretary of War to extend the services and operations of the Inland Waterways Corporation to Carrabelle, Fla.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. CANNON of Florida:

H. R. 5473. A bill to authorize the erection of a memorial to commemorate the services of the American forces of the War with Spain; to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. CROSSER:

H. R. 5474. A bill to amend the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, approved June 25, 1938; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. GEHRMANN:

H. R. 5475. A bill to protect the public health by regulating the importation of dairy products into the United States; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DIMOND:

H. R. 5476. A bill to create the Alaska Fisheries Commission, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. O'CONNOR:

H. R. 5477. A bill for the benefit of the Indians of the Crow Reservation, Mont., and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. POWERS:

H. R. 5478. A bill to provide for the maintenance at public expense of two mounts for officers of the Regular Army who are designated as mounted officers; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. SWEENEY:

H. R. 5479. A bill granting annual and sick leave with pay to substitutes in the Postal Service; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. SMITH of Washington:

H. R. 5480. A bill to provide for the construction of a post-office building at Pe Ell, Wash.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. BROOKS:

H. R. 5481. A bill requiring all aliens to declare allegiance to the United States within 30 days; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. DOUGHTON:

H. R. 5482. A bill to increase the authorization for appropriations for the administration of State unemployment compensation laws; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SHAFER of Michigan:

H. R. 5483. A bill to provide for the registration forthwith of aliens employed by the United States Government, or any agency, bureau, or corporation thereof; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. EVANS:

H. R. 5484. A bill for the registration of aliens employed by the United States of America or any department, administration, bureau, corporation, or agency thereof; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. GAVAGAN:

H. R. 5485. A bill permitting the War Department to transfer old horses and mules to the care of reputable humane organizations; to the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.

By Mr. DARDEN:

H. R. 5486. A bill to extend the time for filing claims for refund of amounts collected under the Agricultural Adjustment Act; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GEHRMANN:

H. R. 5487. A bill to amend the Revenue Act of 1936 by extending the time for filing claims for refund of processing taxes to January 1, 1940; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. RANDOLPH:

H. R. 5488. A bill to provide for the widening of Wisconsin Avenue in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. SABATH:

H. R. 5489. A bill to allow credits against the title IX tax of the Social Security Act for contributions to unemployment funds required by State law, irrespective of time of payment; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. FISH:

H. J. Res. 254. Joint resolution to keep the United States out of foreign wars, and to provide for the neutrality of the United States in the event of foreign wars; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. EDMISTON:

H. J. Res. 255. Joint resolution to provide for the erection of a memorial to the memory of Thomas J. (Stonewall) Jackson; to the Committee on the Library.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. DARDEN:

H. R. 5490. A bill relating to the military record of Irving L. Leafe; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HUNTER:

H. R. 5491. A bill to pay salary of Ruth Dornsife; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. McLEOD:

H. R. 5492. A bill for the relief of John Lawler Harrigan; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. O'CONNOR:

H. R. 5493. A bill for the relief of Burr A. Davison; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. PETERSON of Florida:

H. R. 5494. A bill for the relief of John Marinis, Nicolaos Elias, Ihoanis or Jean Demetre Votsitsanos, and Michael Votsitsanos; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

2219. By Mr. ASHBROOK: Petition of Russell Tish and 38 others, asking for an increased Works Progress Administration appropriation; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2220. By Mr. CURLEY: Letter of Local Union No. 488, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, Bronx, New York City, supporting House bill 4576; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2221. By Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland: Petition of repeal associates, protesting against House bill 3650, returning prohibition to the District of Columbia; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

2222. By Mr. MARTIN J. KENNEDY: Petition of Lodge No. 112, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Sioux City, Iowa, urging support of House bill 4862; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2223. Also, petition of Lodge No. 1234, International Association of Machinists, Titusville, Pa., urging support of House bill 4862; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2224. Also, petition of the Joint Board Lodge, No. 581, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Willard, Ohio, urging passage of House bill 4862; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2225. Also, petition of Millard Division, No. 104, Order of Railway Conductors of America, Middletown, N. Y., urging support of House bill 4862; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2226. Also, petition of Ernest Brocker Lodge, No. 677, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Silsbee, Tex., urging passage of House bill 4862; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2227. Also, petition of Rock Island (Ill.) Local No. 529, International Association of Machinists, urging passage of House bill 4862; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2228. By Mr. KEOGH: Petition of Peter C. Giambalvo, national supreme master, Independent Order Sons of Italy, favoring the passage of House bill 2856; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

2229. Also, petition of the Saranac Lake Free Library, Saranac Lake, N. Y., concerning the Harrison-Thomas-Fletcher Federal-aid legislation; to the Committee on Education.

2230. Also, petition of Attucks School, Kansas City, Mo., concerning House bill 3517; to the Committee on Education.

2231. Also, petition of the Legislative Commission of the National Education Association of the United States, concerning the Harrison-Thomas Federal-aid bill; to the Committee on Education.

2232. Also, petition of the State, County, and Municipal Workers of America, concerning the O'Day bill (H. R. 101); to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2233. Also, petition of the United Automobile Workers of America, Detroit, Mich., favoring the President's recommendation for $150,000,000 additional appropriation for Works Progress Administration; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2234. Also, petition of the Moran Towing & Transportation Co., Inc., New York City, concerning appropriation for river and harbor work; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2235. Also, petition of the Parent-Teacher Association of Newhebron High School, Newhebron, Miss., concerning the Harrison-Thomas-Larrabee Federal-aid legislation; to the Committee on Education.

2236. Also, petition of the United Federal Workers, New York City, favoring the President's recommendation of $150,000,000 for Works Progress Administration; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2237. Also, petition of the superintendent of schools, Dickey County, Ellendale, N. Dak., concerning the Harrison-Thomas Federal-aid bill; to the Committee on Education.

2238. By Mr. LECOMPTE: Petition of subscribers of the Martinsburg Mutual Telephone Co., of Martinsburg, Iowa, favoring the amendment to the wage and hour law to exempt telephone exchanges with 1,000 or less subscribers from its provisions; to the Committee on Labor.

2239. By Mr. McCORMACK: Memorial of the General Court of Massachusetts, Hon. F. W. Cook, secretary of the Commonwealth, memorializing Congress in favor of legislation providing for the reimbursement by the Federal Government of cities and towns for the amount of welfare aid and relief granted by them to aliens; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2240. By Mr. PFEIFER: Petition of the State, County, and Municipal Workers of America, New York district, Association of Hospital and Medical Employees, Local 129, concerning an extension of the National Social Security Act according to the provisions of the O'Day bill (H. R. 101); to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2241. Also, petition of the United Federal Workers, Locals 96, 100, and 109, New York City, urging the passage of the $150,000,000 deficiency appropriation for Works Progress Administration and the Byrnes bill (S. 1265); to the Committee on Appropriations.

2242. Also, petition of the International Union United Automobile Workers of America, Detroit, Mich., favoring the $150,000,000 deficiency appropriation for Works Progress Administration; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2243. Also, petition of the Moran Towing & Transportation Co., Inc., New York City, urging the maximum appropriation recommended for river and harbor work; to the Committee on Appropriations.

2244. Also, petition of the State, County, and Municipal Workers of America, New York district, concerning tax on salaries of Federal employees; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

2245. Also, petition of the National Parks Association, Washington, D. C., favoring the creation of the John Muir-Kings Canyon National Park in California, House bill 3794; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

2246. Also, petition of the Independent Order Sons of Italy, New York City, urging consideration of House bill 2856; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

2247. Also, petition of the Anti-Cruelty Society, Chicago, Ill., urging support of House bill 3540 and Senate bill 1045; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

2248. By Mr. SCHIFFLER: Petition of John Deison, Jr., and 63 other members of the Onized Rod and Gun Club, of Fairmont, W. Va., urging that every attempt to repeal the act known as the Pittman-Robertson Act be defeated; to the Committee on Agriculture.

2249. By Mr. VREELAND: Memorial of the Legislature of the State of New Jersey, memorializing the Congress of the United States to consider its Joint Resolution No. 1, to refuse enactment of legislation which would becloud the sovereign rights of the State of New Jersey in its submerged lands; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

2250. By Mr. WHEAT: Petition of certain persons of Mattoon, Coles County, Ill., to promote the general welfare of the people of the United States by securing the passage of legislation which will stop, as far as possible, the advertising campaign by press and radio for the sale of alcoholic beverages; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

2251. By the SPEAKER: Petition of A. St. Clair, of San Francisco, Calif., and others, petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to Works Progress Administration appropriation deficiency; to the Committee on Appropriations.

SENATE

MONDAY, APRIL 3, 1939

The Chaplain, Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty, everlasting God, who, by Thy tender mercy toward mankind, hast sent Thy Son, Jesus Christ, to be the revelation of Thyself and to enclose Thy love toward us in robe of flesh that we might slowly learn with human eyes to spell the infinite meanings of our life: Grant in this holy week that we may find Him to be the true and living way.

We have seen many a righteous cause betrayed, its lofty dreams dispersed before the unyielding facts of life; at times the days hang heavy on our hands and the evening often finds the morning promise unfulfilled; the faces of the poor are ground; men labor still for naught, and we are tempted to despair; but, as in reverent thought we follow Him to the holy hill of consecration, teach us anew the meaning of the cross, its message of forgiveness and redemption as it lays bare Thy loving heart in Him who gave His life for all the world, Jesus, Thy Son, our Lord. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. BARKLEY, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Friday, March 31, 1939, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT—APPROVAL OF BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, who also announced that the President had approved and signed the following acts and joint resolution:

On March 25, 1939:

S. 1098. An act to amend section 12 of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, by authorizing advances for crop insurance; and

S. J. Res. 76. Joint Resolution to authorize the Postmaster General to withhold the awarding of star-route contracts for a period of 45 days.

On March 27, 1939:

S. 876. An act to authorize the purchase of certain lands for the Apache Tribe of the Mescalero Reservation, N. Mex.; and

S. 1477. An act to repeal section 9 of the act of March 3, 1875 (18 Stat. L. 450), as amended.

On March 28, 1939:

S. 877. An act to add certain public-domain land in Montana to the Rocky Boy Indian Reservation;

S. 1104. An act to provide for conveying to the United States the land, buildings, and improvements comprising the Choctaw and Chickasaw Sanatorium and General Hospital;

S. 1301. An act to create the office of Military Secretary to the General of the Armies of the United States of America, with the rank of colonel, and for other purposes; and

S. 1476. An act to authorize an appropriation to pay non-Indian claimants whose claims have been extinguished under the act of June 7, 1924, but who have been found entitled to awards under said act as supplemented by the act of May 31, 1933.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. MINTON. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Downey	Lee	Radcliffe
Andrews	Ellender	Lewis	Reed
Ashurst	Frazier	Lodge	Russell
Austin	George	Logan	Schwartz
Bankhead	Gerry	Lucas	Schwellenbach
Barbour	Gillette	Lundeen	Sheppard
Barkley	Glass	McCarran	Shipstead
Bilbo	Green	McKellar	Smathers
Bone	Guffey	McNary	Smith
Borah	Gurney	Maloney	Stewart
Brown	Harrison	Mead	Taft
Bulow	Hatch	Miller	Thomas, Okla.
Burke	Hayden	Minton	Thomas, Utah
Byrnes	Herring	Murray	Townsend
Caraway	Hill	Neely	Tydings
Chavez	Holman	Norris	Vandenberg
Clark, Mo.	Hughes	Nye	Wagner
Connally	Johnson, Calif.	O'Mahoney	Wheeler
Danaher	Johnson, Colo.	Overton	White
Davis	King	Pepper	Wiley
Donahey	La Follette	Pittman

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HOLT] is detained from the Senate because of a death in his family.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS], and the Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN] are absent on important public business.

The Senator from Idaho [Mr. CLARK], the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS], and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] are unavoidably detained.

Mr. McNARY. I announce that the Senator from Kansas [Mr. CAPPER] is absent because of a death in his family.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-three Senators have answered to their names. There is a quorum present.

SUPPLEMENTAL ESTIMATE. COUNCIL OF PERSONNEL ADMINISTRATION

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the President of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the Council of Personnel Administration for the fiscal year 1939, amounting to $15,000, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

SUPPLEMENTAL ESTIMATE, LEGISLATIVE ESTABLISHMENT

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the President of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the legislative establishment, United States Senate, contingent expenses, fiscal year 1939, amounting to $15,000, which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

PUNISHMENT OF RECEIVERS OF ARTICLES STOLEN FROM THE MAILS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Acting Postmaster General, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to amend the penal laws of the United States to provide punishment of receivers of stolen articles from the mails, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

AGRICULTURAL EXPERIMENT STATIONS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Acting Secretary of Agriculture, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report covering the receipts and expenditures, and work of the agricultural experiment stations in the States, Hawaii, Alaska, and Puerto Rico, for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1939, which, with the accompanying report, was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

REPORT OF THE BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Chief Scout Executive of the Boy Scouts of America, transmitting, pursuant to law, the Twenty-ninth Annual Report of the Boy Scouts of America, which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

REPORT OF AMERICAN WAR MOTHERS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the national president of the American War Mothers, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the American War Mothers for the period from October 1, 1937, to October 1, 1938, which, with the accompanying report, was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of Kansas, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

House Concurrent Resolution 16

Concurrent resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States to keep intact the embargo on livestock and its products from Argentina

Whereas the foot-and-mouth disease is prevalent among livestock in Argentina; and

Whereas the present embargo placed on Argentina livestock prevents the importation of livestock and its products from Argentina, thus preventing the spread of this disease among livestock in our country: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of Kansas (the senate concurring therein), That we request and urge the Congress of the United States to continue its vigilant guard against the importation of livestock and its products from Argentina and other countries infected with disease, encourage the Department of Agriculture to keep the embargo on Argentina livestock intact and discourage any trade agreements whereby the terms of said embargo will be circumvented; and be it further

Resolved, That this resolution be engrossed by the chief clerk of the house of representatives and the secretary of the senate and that copies thereof be transmitted by the secretary of state to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States and to several Members of said bodies representing this State therein, and to the President of the United States.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of Kansas, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor:

House Concurrent Resolution 10

Concurrent resolution memorializing Congress in regard to certain provisions of the National Housing Act amendments of 1938.

Whereas Congress enacted in 1938 the so-called National Housing Act (H. R. 8730) amendments of 1938; and

Whereas subsection (a) of section 2 of the National Housing Act as amended in 1938 which relates to insurance against certain losses and which authority expires on July 1, 1939; and

Whereas section 203 (a) limits mortgages to be insured after July 1, 1939, to (1) loans upon property not yet completed, (2) loans upon dwelling houses commenced since January 1, 1937, or (3) loans upon dwelling houses constructed prior to January 1, 1937, where such houses have previously been a security for an insured loan; and

Whereas section 203b (3) provides that until July 1, 1939, the maturity of mortgage insurance is 20 years and after such date will be 25 years from the date of the insurance of the mortgage; and

Whereas section 203 (c) relating to premium charges for insurance of mortgages expires on July 1, 1939; and

Whereas section 204 (a) relating to the payment of insurance expires on July 1, 1939: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of Kansas (the senate concurring therein), That the Congress of the United States at its present sitting be, and the same is hereby, urgently requested to enact such legislation, that will extend the provisions mentioned in the preamble to this resolution to those parts of the National Housing Act amendments of 1938 (H. R. 8730), which expire; and be it further

Resolved, That this resolution be engrossed by the chief clerk of the house of representatives and the secretary of the senate and that copies thereof be transmitted by the secretary of state to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States and to the several Members of said bodies representing this State therein, and to the President of the United States.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of Kansas, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration:

Senate Concurrent Resolution 28

Resolution memorializing the Federal Congress to enact adequate legislation providing for speedy deportation of all alien residents who do not signify their willingness, desire, and intention to become citizens of the United States within a reasonable time after entry into the United States of America.

Whereas it is estimated that there are approximately 8,000,000 residents within the boundaries of the United States of America who have neither become naturalized nor filed any declaration of intention to become citizens of this Nation; and

Whereas this large group of alien residents provides a fertile field for agitators and organizations who are not in sympathy with the American form of government; and

Whereas it is the sense of the Legislature of the State of Kansas that this large group of alien residents should not be permitted to enjoy the freedom and privileges of this Nation without assuming the corresponding duties and obligations of citizenship: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate of the State of Kansas (the house of representatives concurring therein), That the Federal Congress be, and it is hereby, requested to direct its attention to this condition and to enact adequate legislation which will provide for speedy deportation of all alien residents of this country who do not within a reasonable time signify their willingness, desire, and intention, and qualify, to assume the obligations of citizenship of the United States of America; be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of state be, and he is hereby, directed to transmit properly authenticated copies of this resolution to each branch of the Congress, to each Member of the Kansas congressional delegation, and to each of the United States Senators from Kansas; be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of state forthwith transmit properly authenticated copies of this resolution to each of the legislatures of the several States of the Union which are now in session, same for their consideration and action, if they so desire.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of Kansas, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

House Concurrent Resolution 12

Concurrent resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States to pass a Federal antilynching law

Whereas during the first 6 months of the year 1938 and while there was pending before the Congress of the United States a Federal antilynching bill, during which time not one lynching was reported within the territorial limits of these United States; and

Whereas during the second 6 months of the year 1938 and immediately after the adjournment of the Congress of the United States without having passed a Federal antilynching bill there occurred seven lynchings in various States of the Union in rapid succession; and

Whereas the Congress of the United States of America is again in session, and there has been introduced in the United States Senate bill No. 845 by Senators WAGNER, VAN NUYS, and CAPPER, a new Federal antilynching bill to assure to persons within the jurisdiction of every State the equal protection of the laws, and to punish the crime of lynching; and

Whereas it is the desire of the people of the State of Kansas as expressed by their legislature now in session to insure to all persons of every State the equal protection of laws, and to punish the heinous crime of lynching, which is in violation of every tenet of law and order and against the principles and ideals of American government: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of Kansas (the senate concurring therein), That we request and urge the Congress of the United States to pass during the present session the antilynching bill, same being Senate bill No. 845; be it further

Resolved, That sufficient copies of this resolution shall be printed and the secretary of state is hereby directed to transmit a copy of the same to the President of the United States, the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and to each Member of the Kansas delegation in the National Congress.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following resolution of the Legislature of Nebraska, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce:

Legislative Resolution 23

REPUBLICAN VALLEY FLOOD CONTROL

Whereas the Congress of the United States, by the adoption of acts pertaining to flood control and reclamation, has recognized responsibility on the part of the Federal Government to control the destructive floodwaters of the basins of the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers, has declared this to be a national problem, and has heretofore authorized the expenditure of Federal funds in considerable amounts in the area for the improvement of conditions resulting from floods and drought; and

Whereas the Republican River Valley drainage area in Nebraska, settled by people who are and have been making every effort to better their condition in the face of adverse circumstances beyond their control, comprises many hundreds of thousands of acres of valuable land which has been greatly damaged by floods and drought; and

Whereas the Republican River Valley in Nebraska, a part of the great drainage area of the Missouri and the Mississippi Rivers, has thus far received but scant Federal recognition for conservation and reclamation; and

Whereas, as a result of the 1935 floods in that valley, over 100 persons lost their lives, the property loss was tremendous, and much of the fertile and valuable land in the valley has been imperiled and made subject to repeated damage from floodwaters, while, on the other hand, many thousands of acres in the area are in urgent need of the waste waters of the river for irrigation; and

Whereas a constructive and comprehensive Federal program for the protection of life and property from destructive floods and drought within the drainage area of the Republican River, including its tributaries, is admittedly a national problem, and is needed for the control, conservation, development, and beneficial use of the water and land resources of said area as affecting the well-being of the hundreds of thousands of its citizens: Be it

Resolved by the Unicameral Legislature of Nebraska, That the Congress of the United States be, and it is hereby, requested and urged to cause to be made full, complete, and comprehensive survey and investigation into the claims of the residents of the Republican River Valley in Nebraska for flood control and reclamation therein, including the storing, preservation, and distribution of the waste and floodwaters of said river and its tributaries for beneficial use;

That the Congress be, and it is, urged to make early appropriation of Federal funds to insure the inauguration and carrying on of internal-improvement projects within said valley, and that the proper Federal agencies be empowered and directed to give early and careful consideration to the feasibility and advisability of constructing and maintaining dams in said area in Nebraska, including the various tributaries of the Republican River, for the Federal purpose of flood control, conservation, and other beneficial use of the water, including that of irrigation;

That a copy of this resolution be sent by the chief clerk of this unicameral legislature to each of the following: The President of the United States, the Honorable Franklin D. Roosevelt; United States Senator, the Honorable George W. Norris; United States Senator, the Honorable Edward R. Burke; to each of the five Congressman from Nebraska, to wit, the Honorable Carl T. Curtis, the Honorable Karl Stefan, the Honorable Charles F. McLaughlin, the Honorable Harry Coffee, the Honorable George H. Heinke; the Vice President of the United States, the Honorable John N. Garner, as President of the Senate; the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the Honorable William B. Bankhead; the Secretary of the United States Department of Agriculture, the Honorable Henry A. Wallace; the Secretary of Commerce of the United States, the Honorable Harry Hopkins; the Secretary of War of the United States, the Honorable Harry H. Woodring; the Secretary of the Interior of the United States, the Honorable Harold L. Ickes; the Governor of Nebraska, the Honorable R. L. Cochran; the Chief of the Army Engineers, Maj. Gen. Julian L. Schley, Washington, D. C.; the Office of Army Engineers, Kansas City, Mo.; the Mississippi Valley Flood Control Association; the National Rivers and Harbors Congress; the National Reclamation Association; the chairman of each congressional committee in Congress which has to do with the appropriation of Federal funds for the conservation of national resources; the Governors, respectively, of Kansas and Colorado.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, which was referred to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation:

Concurrent resolution requesting the Congress of the United States to include in any reclamation program it may adopt a project for the development of water resources on the Island of Molokai

Be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii (the senate of said legislature concurring):

Whereas a large portion of the Island of Molokai, Territory of Hawaii, is arid land not fit for agricultural purposes; and

Whereas surveys made by competent engineers under governmental authority have disclosed that the topographical structure of said island will lend itself well to the development of said arid land through proper diversion of the water resources of said island; and

Whereas the people of the Island of Molokai and of the Territory of Hawaii as a whole would greatly benefit by a development of the water resources of said island; and

Whereas the estimated cost of carrying such a project to completion is $5,000,000: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States be, and it is hereby respectfully urged and requested, to include in any program of reclamation which it may adopt a project for the development of the water resources of the Island of Molokai, Territory of Hawaii, and that it appropriate for that purpose the sum of $5,000,000; be it further

Resolved, That duly authenticated copies of this resolution be sent to the President of the Senate of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, the Delegate to Congress from Hawaii and the Director of Territories and Island Possessions of the Department of the Interior of the United States.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following joint memorial of the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor:

Senate Joint Memorial 9

To the Congress of the United States and to the Honorable A. J. Dimond, Delegate in Congress from Alaska:

Your memorialist, the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, in fourteenth regular session assembled, respectfully represents:

Whereas the Seventy-fifth Congress of the United States passed an act which was approved on June 25, 1938, known and cited as the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, and popularly known as the wage and hour law; and

Whereas the said law provides for maximum hours and minimum pay for employees who are engaged in commerce or in the production of goods for commerce; and

Whereas there is some doubt as to whether the law applies to gold mining in the Territory of Alaska, and the question of its applicability cannot be determined until some action is brought in court in order to get an interpretation of the act with reference to gold mining in the Territory of Alaska; and

Whereas placer mining in the interior of Alaska is the chief industry of the second and fourth divisions; and

Whereas placer mining is seasonal and the application of the provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act to placer mining operations is not practical for many reasons, including the following:

1. It is not possible to specify the number of days in any one season during which mining operations can be carried on, as the seasons vary in different districts and with different types of operations, and the length of the season is to a large extent governed by weather conditions, which change from year to year, so that placer mining operations, while highly seasonal, are not uniform.

2. That wages paid in placer mining operations in Alaska are much higher than wages paid for other employment, either within or without the Territory, and men employed are mostly skilled laborers who must earn sufficient during the short mining season to support them during the winter months, and if the pay were cut through reduction of working hours, it would work a great hardship on employees.

3. If the Fair Labor Standards Act is enforced in the placer mining industry, it will result in closing entirely many operations and curtailing others, as much of the ground now being worked over considerable areas is marginal ground, where the margin of profit will not justify any increased costs, and the enforcement of the law would have the effect of defeating the very purpose of the law and of curtailing employment.

4. Should the provisions of the law be strictly enforced, the earning capacity of men employed in the placer mining industry will be reduced to a point where they will not have sufficient funds to carry them through the winter months, thereby throwing them upon the Government for relief and subsistence.

5. That the placer mining industry is as seasonal in the Territory of Alaska as the fishing industry, which is exempted from the provisions of the law.

6. That if the provisions of the law were strictly enforced, it would result in lower pay for the workers and greatly increased costs, due to additional men required to do the same amount of work which can now be done by the present crews in the operations already being carried on and by a proportionate number of men in new operations during the coming season and the seasons thereafter.

Now, therefore, your memorialist earnestly requests that the Fair Labor Standards Act be amended so as to exempt from its provisions placer mining operations in Alaska in the same manner as the fishing industry is now exempted.

And your memorialist will ever pray.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following joint memorials of the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, which were referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads:

Senate Joint Memorial 4

To the Honorable Congress of the United States:

Your memorialist, the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, in the fourteenth regular session assembled, respectfully submits that:

Whereas there are three road-building agencies in the Territory of Alaska, namely, the Alaska Road Commission, under the Department of the Interior; the Bureau of Public Roads, under the Department of Agriculture; and the Territorial Board of Road Commissioners, a Territorial agency; and

Whereas it is believed that a single road-planning agency would function more efficiently and more economically and that the existing Territorial road-building agency understands the road needs and road problems in Alaska; and

Whereas the Territory of Alaska has contributed liberally in the past toward the construction of roads and will continue to support road development in the Territory to the limit of its financial ability; and

Whereas it is believed that the extension of the Federal Highway Act to the Territory of Alaska would not involve a greater expenditure of Federal funds than is now being expended under the existing arrangement; and

Whereas it is the sense of the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska that the people of Alaska should rightfully have a voice in the planning and building of all roads within the Territory and that the Territory is ready and willing to contribute on any equitable and fair basis toward highway construction within the Territory.

Wherefore, your memorialist respectfully petitions and prays that H. R. 1955, now before the Congress for the extension of the Federal Highway Act to the Territory of Alaska be enacted.

And your memorialist will ever pray.

Senate Joint Memorial 13

To the Honorable James A. Farley, Postmaster General, the Congress of the United States, and to the Honorable Anthony J. Dimond, Delegate to Congress from the Territory of Alaska:

Your memorialist, the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, in fourteenth regular session assembled, respectfully submits that:

Whereas, due to the higher costs of living that prevail in Alaska as compared with those elsewhere in the United States; and

Whereas several governmental agencies have recognized this fact by putting into effect an increased salary scale; and

Whereas the Post Office Department has not been able to take such action, and its employees are therefore at a distinct disadvantage; and

Whereas Delegate DIMOND has introduced a bill (H. R. 2640) in the Seventy-sixth Congress, first session, asking for a 25-percent increase in pay for all Post Office Department employees in Alaska:

Now, therefore, your memorialist, the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, endorses said measure and respectfully urges its speedy enactment by Congress.

And your memorialist will ever pray.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following memorials of the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, which were referred to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys:

Senatorial Memorial 1

To the Congress of the United States and to the Honorable Anthony J. Dimond, Delegate to Congress from the Territory of Alaska:

Your memorialist, the Senate of the Territory of Alaska, in fourteenth regular session assembled, respectfully submits that:

Whereas it is generally believed that Alaska contains several important deposits of petroleum, gas, and oil; and

Whereas prospecting and drilling in endeavoring to discover oil in the fields where indications point to the existence of such deposits is naturally slow and expensive; and

Whereas under the present Oil Leasing Act of February 25, 1920 (41 Stat. L. 447), as amended, prospecting permits are first issued, which are in effect for a period of only 4 years, at the expiration of which period it is necessary to exchange such permits for leases, the terms and provisions of which are not practically applicable until production in commercial quantities is established; and

Whereas certain prospecting permits have been issued and vast sums of money have been expended in prospecting for oil and gas in the Territory, and, in one instance alone, the sum of $750,000 has already been expended and a well has been drilled to a depth of 7,156 feet, but that further time is absolutely essential in order to bring such well into production and to complete the prospecting work so that it is practicable and possible to comply with the terms of the lease under the act of February 25, 1920, as aforesaid; and

Whereas it is a matter of primary importance, both to the United States and to the Territory of Alaska, that the oil fields and oil deposits be developed at as early a date as possible, not only from a standpoint of national defense, but for the purpose of revenue in the form of royalties to the United States and taxes to the Territory of Alaska;

Now, therefore, your memorialist respectfully prays that the Oil Leasing Act of February 25, 1920 (41 Stat. L. 447), as amended, be immediately amended so as to extend the prospecting period and the life of prospecting permits to 6 years, the same to apply not only to new permits hereafter issued but to those already in existence, so that the life of all new permits may be 6 years instead of 4, and the life of those permits already in existence be extended for an additional period of 2 years.

And your memorialist will ever pray.

Senate Joint Memorial 16

To the Honorable President of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, President of the Senate of the United States, and the Honorable Anthony J. Dimond, Delegate from Alaska:

Your memorialist, the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, in fourteenth regular session assembled, respectfully represents:

Whereas the Federal Government officials are again advocating the setting aside of Admiralty Island off the coast of Alaska as a national-park reserve; and

Whereas there is no need or demand on the part of the people of Alaska or other parts of the United States for such reservation; and

Whereas the national-park reservations in the Territory of Alaska have not been administered to the best interests of the people of the Territory and the United States; and

Whereas in national parks already existing in the Territory predatory animals have been allowed to increase and scatter to other parts of the Territory and to maraud to the great destruction of other game and fur-bearing wildlife both within and without the national parks; and

Whereas it is a matter of record that residents and settlers who have been brought within the bounds of national-park reservations in Alaska in the past have been persecuted and harassed by Park Service officials for the purpose of forcing them to move out of such boundaries;

Now, therefore, your memorialist strongly urges that Admiralty Island on the coast of Alaska do not be made a national-park reservation and that there be no other national-park reservations made in the Territory of Alaska on the grounds that they have proven detrimental to the best interests of the Territory and the United States.

And your memorialist will ever pray.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate House Memorial No. 1 of the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, being identical with Senate Memorial No. 1 of that Territory, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys. (Supra.)

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following joint memorials of the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, which were referred to the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs:

Senate Joint Memorial 5

To the Honorable the President of the United States, the Congress of the United States, the Secretary of the Interior, the Delegate in Congress from Alaska, and the Committees on Territorial and Insular Possessions in the Senate and House of Representatives of Congress:

Your memorialist, the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, in fourteenth regular session assembled, respectfully submits that—

Whereas the interior of Alaska is a rich area capable of supporting a large population based upon mining and allied industries. This area embraces the Yukon and Tanana River Basins and the Alaska Rail Belt; and

Whereas the excessive freight tariffs imposed by the Alaska Railroad, if viewed in the light of an indirect tax, make the population depending upon the service of the Alaska Railroad the highest-taxed people in the world today; and

Whereas the Alaska Railroad under present policies is failing to realize the development objective for which the road was originally constructed. On the theory of making the railroad self-sustaining, freight tariffs are demanded which are so economically oppressive as to reduce tonnage and to stifle the needed development; and

Whereas the lowering of these excessive tariffs would encourage a much greater industrial and mining activity and would thereby multiply population and the consumption of manufactured and processed goods, thereby raising standards of living and increasing tonnage; and

Whereas the administrative authority delegated to Interior Department officials allowing the imposition of tolls on freight passing over Alaska highways has led to the unjust and unfair practice of imposing tolls for the purpose of forcing freight over the Alaska Railroad at a figure far above that commensurate with the value of similar services rendered in other parts of the United States:

Now, therefore, your memorialist respectfully urges that Congress adopt a resolution setting forth a policy of development as the aim of the Alaska Railroad, making appropriations to cover the costs of operations thereunder.

And your memorialist will ever pray.

Senate Joint Memorial 10

To the Congress of the United States and to the Honorable A. J. Dimond, Delegate in Congress from Alaska:

Your memorialist, the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, in fourteenth regular session assembled, respectfully represents—

Whereas the Territory of Alaska has for a number of years expended great sums of money in an effort to control the damage to our fishing industry and fur industry by predators; and

Whereas for a period commencing April 1, 1937, and ending March 31, 1939, $245,000 were expended for predatory control, and whereas, notwithstanding this great expenditure of Territorial funds, the menace has not been abated; and

Whereas the organic act prohibits the Territorial legislature from making any rules or regulations governing fish or game; and

Whereas your petitioner, the Territorial Legislature of Alaska, feels that if it were enabled to regulate fish and game in cooperation with predatory control, more effective and efficient checking can be had:

Now, therefore, your memorialist earnestly requests that the organic act be amended so as to give the Territorial legislature authority to make regulations governing fish and game so as to protect our fishing and fur industry efficiently from predators and to enable us to make these important industries more permanent.

And your memorialist will ever pray.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a joint resolution of the Legislature of Wisconsin, favoring the adoption of a stabilization program for butter prices, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

(See joint resolution printed in full when presented today by Mr. WILEY.)

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a joint resolution of the Legislature of Wisconsin, favoring the enactment of general-welfare legislation, providing old-age assistance, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

(See joint resolution printed in full when presented today by Mr. WILEY.)

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a resolution of the Hawaii Equal Rights Commission, favoring amendment of the so-called Ellender sugar bill (S. 69) so as to eliminate therefrom any and all discriminatory provisions, existing or potential, against the Territory of Hawaii, its people or industries, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution of the Hawaii Equal Rights Commission, favoring an increase in the appropriation for the Hawaiian Agricultural Experiment Station from $55,000 to $80,000, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also laid before the Senate petitions of sundry citizens of Brooklyn, N. Y., praying for an additional appropriation of $150,000,000 for the Works Progress Administration, as recommended by the President, which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also laid before the Senate the petition of the chairman and committee for the original stock and guaranteed mortgage certificate holders in the Fidelity Union Title & Mortgage Guarantee Co., of Newark, N. J., praying for an investigation of the operations of the company and its successors, the New Jersey Realty Co. and the New Jersey Realty Title Insurance Co., Newark, N. J., which, with the accompanying data, was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

He also laid before the Senate a telegram from J. G. Berthold, secretary of the Huntington (W. Va.) Small Business Men's Association, relative to amendment of the National Labor Relations Act, taxes, slum clearance, and neutrality, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by a meeting of the Utah School Administrators, favoring the enactment of legislation granting Federal aid to the States for education, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also laid before the Senate a memorial of sundry citizens of Cincinnati, Ohio, remonstrating against amendment of the National Labor Relations Act, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also laid before the Senate a petition of sundry citizens of Montgomery, Ala., praying for the enactment of the so-called Wagner-Van Nuys-Capper antilynching bill, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also laid before the Senate a petition of sundry citizens of the United States, praying for the enactment of the so-called Wagner-Van Nuys-Capper antilynching bill, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also laid before the Senate a letter from the Italian-American Citizens Society, Altoona, Pa., relative to the immigration and naturalization laws, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. TYDINGS presented a resolution adopted by the Daughters of the American Revolution of Maryland, favoring the return of the frigate Constellation to Baltimore and to provide a permanent berth for the illustrious vessel at Fort McHenry, Md., which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. MEAD presented a petition of sundry citizens of New York State, praying for the enactment of House bill 11, a general-welfare bill providing old-age assistance, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Buffalo, N. Y., remonstrating against amendment of the National Labor Relations Act, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. GILLETTE presented petitions of several thousand citizens of the State of Iowa, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the advertising of alcoholic beverages by press and radio, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. LEE. I present petitions concerning the same proposed legislation referred to in the petitions of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. GILLETTE] and ask that the body of one of the petitions be published in the RECORD and that the petitions all be referred to the appropriate committee.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the body of one of the petitions will be printed in the RECORD, and the petitions themselves will be referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

The body of one of the petitions referred to is as follows:

To the Members of the Senate and House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States:

We, the undersigned citizens of Oklahoma City, of the county of Oklahoma, of the State of Oklahoma, do respectfully petition you to help promote the general welfare of the people of the United States by securing the passage of legislation which will stop, so far as is possible by Federal law, the great advertising campaign for the sale of alcoholic beverages now going on by press and radio.

The States cannot adequately regulate or prohibit the advertising of liquor so long as Congress permits such advertising through the medium of interstate commerce. Therefore we most earnestly urge your assistance in securing this proposed legislation in order that State regulations and laws upon the subject may thereby be made more adequate and effective and that radio advertising of alcoholic beverages may be stopped entirely.

Mr. BURKE presented petitions of sundry citizens of the State of Nebraska praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the advertising of alcoholic beverages by press and radio, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH presented petitions of sundry citizens of the State of Washington praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the advertising of alcoholic beverages by press and radio, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. STEWART presented petitions of sundry citizens of Tennessee praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the advertising of alcoholic beverages by press and radio, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. SHEPPARD presented petitions of sundry citizens of Abilene, Austin, Beaumont, Brownwood, Clarendon, Corsicana, Crandall, Denison, Denton, Fort Worth, Harlington, Hedley, Houston, Littlefield, Pearl, Perryton, Port Arthur, Plainview, Raymondville, Ropesville, San Antonio, San Marcos, Seagoville, Tahoka, Texarkana, Waco, Wichita Falls, and Weslaco, all in the State of Texas, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the advertising of alcoholic beverages by press and radio, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. LODGE presented a resolution of the General Court of Massachusetts favoring the enactment of legislation to provide for reimbursement by the Federal Government of cities and towns for the amount of welfare aid and relief granted by them to aliens, which was referred to the Committee on Claims.

(See resolution printed in full when laid before the Senate by the Vice President on the 31st ultimo, p. 5014 CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.)

Mr. WILEY presented the following joint resolution of the Legislature of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

Senate Joint Resolution 29

Joint resolution urging the Secretary of Agriculture of the national administration to continue the stabilization program for butter prices

Whereas the A. A. A. was established by an act of the Federal Congress to stabilize the price of five basic agricultural commodities, namely, wheat, corn, cotton, tobacco, and peanuts; and

Whereas in May of 1938, the commodities stabilized under the authority of said act were expanded to include butter; and

Whereas pursuant to the authority of said act, the price of butter was stabilized since May of 1938 at 75 percent of its parity price. The parity price of butter for stabilization purposes was fixed at 34½ cents per pound. The 75 percent thereof was 25½ cents per pound. The parity price was fixed by a careful determination of the related price of butter to the equivalent cost of staple consumer's goods. This method permitted the stabilized or pegged price of butter to be reasonably effective and consistent with prevailing consumer's costs; and

Whereas it is urgent and in the interest of a sound present agricultural economy to continue with the stabilization policy as it has pertained to the basic agricultural commodity of butter, particularly in view of an unprecedented accumulation of the butter surplus during the early and late fall months of the year 1938. Normally production at that season falls considerably below the peak production period of the summer months. Consequently the dammed-up surplus clogged the market and forced the price downward. A more serious spiralling downward of the price to the producer was stayed due largely to the influence of the butter price stabilization policy; and

Whereas it was observed that on Thursday, March 9, 1939, the Secretary of Agriculture and the agricultural commodities stabilization authority suspended the policy of stabilization of butter prices. The suspension or removal of this policy as to butter immediately caused the prevailing market price of butter to drop from 25 cents to 23 cents per pound, or a drop of 2 cents per pound, and the price of cheese to sag to 11½ cents per pound or 1 cent per pound below recent market quotations on cheese; and

Whereas the price reductions noted, which followed the discontinuance of the stabilization or price-pegging policy, have withdrawn from the farmers of Wisconsin and other dairy States a substantial part of an anticipated farm income. The reduced income to our farmers will automatically reflect itself adversely in the anticipated consumption of consumer's goods. The State's general economic order will be disrupted because of the close relation of agricultural income to the general economy; and

Whereas it is regarded sound practice and economic theory that particularly in the State of Wisconsin a fair and equitable price to the producer for butter is a minimum of 30 cents per pound and 15 cents per pound for cheese: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the senate (the assembly concurring), That the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin urges the Secretary of Agriculture and national administration to continue the butter price stabilization program, since discontinuance thereof will inevitably result in further price reductions, which in turn will cause substantially greater and added economic loss to the farmers of Wisconsin. It is the sense of this legislature that the stabilization program should of necessity continue for such time as will make possible the creation of a permanent stabilization program under Federal and State law. It is also the opinion of this legislature that a continuance of such stabilization program will win the commendation of all of the 200,000 farm owners and operators in Wisconsin, as well as those earnestly interested in a strong and vigorous economic and social order; be it further

Resolved, That properly attested copies of this resolution be sent to the President of the United States, the Secretary of Agriculture, the presiding officer of each House of the Congress and to each Wisconsin Member in the Congress of the United States.

Mr. WILEY also presented the following joint resolution of the Legislature of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on Finance:

Senate Joint Resolution 3

Joint resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States to enact a general-welfare law

Whereas there is now pending before the Congress of the United States a general-welfare bill (H. R. 2), which is now scheduled for public hearing before the House Ways and Means Committee; and

Whereas thousands of people in the State of Wisconsin in all walks of life are looking toward the Capital City of this land with expectant hope that this meritorious measure will be enacted into law; and

Whereas the proposed bill aims to humanely place in the hands of our citizens over 60 years of age sufficient purchasing power which, when put into circulation through such wealth distributing agency, to provide opportunity for our young people a higher level of well-being for our entire populace; and

Whereas many other schemes have been tried in an effort to restore prosperity, and all have failed except to provide temporary relief to the needy; and

Whereas repetition of such disregard of public need and sentiment on the part of the Congress of the United States will result in complete loss of faith on the part of our people in democratic government: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the senate (the assembly concurring), That this legislature deplores the action of the House of Representatives of the Seventy-fifth Congress, and the committee to which the general-welfare bill (H. R. 4199) was referred, for their refusal to provide for public hearings thereon and for failure to allow or compel the same to be considered for passage by the said House; and be it further

Resolved, That this legislature respectfully memorializes the Congress of the United States to take heed of the great public opinion in favor of the general-welfare bill (H. R. 2) by giving that measure careful consideration and enacting it into law; and be it further

Resolved, That properly attested copies of this resolution be sent to the President of the United States, the Chief Clerks of both Houses of Congress, the Wisconsin Members of Congress, and the members of the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives.

TAXATION OF STATE AND MUNICIPAL SECURITIES

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I present and ask to have referred to the Committee on Finance and printed in the RECORD a telegram from the Governor of Connecticut protesting against proposed legislation providing for the taxation of State and municipal securities.

There being no objection, the telegram was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

HARTFORD, CONN., March 31, 1939.

Hon. JOHN A. DANAHER,
United States Senator, Washington, D. C.:

Please enter my protest against possible attempt to revive Federal proposal to tax bonds of the State, municipalities, or their agencies, as this will result in increased financing cost both to our State, towns, and other municipalities. Such proposal, in my opinion, would require constitutional amendment guaranteeing reciprocal right to tax Federal securities.

RAYMOND E. BALDWIN, Governor.

FEDERAL AID TO EDUCATION IN THE STATES

Mr. THOMAS of Utah presented a resolution adopted by a meeting of the school administrators of the State of Utah, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Be it resolved by the school administrators of the State of Utah assembled:

Whereas there is now pending before Congress legislation which provides Federal support to the public schools of the several States for the purpose of aiding the States in the support of education; and

Whereas the sovereignty of the several States in matters pertaining to the administration and general control of the schools is in nowise jeopardized by the provision of said bill; and

Whereas the principle of equalization of educational opportunity has been recognized as sound in State and local administration, and is believed to be equally as sound nationally: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Utah School Administrators assembled, That we urge the Congress of the United States to give approval to Senate bill 1305.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. BURKE, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill (S. 1416) to make the provisions of the Employees' Compensation Act applicable to civil officers of the United States, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 243) thereon.

Mr. LOGAN, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 1018. A bill to authorize the procurement, without advertising, of certain aircraft parts and instruments or aeronautical accessories, and for other purposes (Rept. No. 245); and

S. 1020. A bill to authorize the purchase of equipment and supplies for experimental and test purposes (Rept. No. 246).

FEDERAL ASSISTANCE TO PUBLIC EDUCATION

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. From the Committee on Education and Labor I report back favorably with amendments the bill (S. 1305) to promote the general welfare through appropriation of funds to assist the States and Territories in providing more effective programs of public education, and I submit a report (No. 244) thereon.

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] has informed the committee that he intends to submit to the Senate minority views on this bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The report will be received and the bill will be placed on the calendar.

INVESTIGATION OF TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY—FINAL REPORT (S. DOC. NO. 56)

Mr. DONAHEY. Mr. President, there is submitted herewith the final report of the Joint Committee to Investigate the Tennessee Valley Authority in accordance with Public Resolution No. 83, Seventy-fifth Congress, and Public Resolution No. 2, Seventy-sixth Congress.

The final report consists of the following:

First. Printed report, with two appendices, approved by the chairman, Senators FRAZIER, MEAD, and SCHWARTZ, and Representatives BARDEN and THOMASON.

Second. A minority report submitted and approved by the following: Senator DAVIS, Representatives JENKINS of Ohio and WOLVERTON of New Jersey, and a special minority report by Representative THOMAS A. JENKINS.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The report and minority views will be received and printed, with the illustrations, as a Senate document.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED

Bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. MALONEY:

S. 2033. A bill for the relief of Manuel Joao Esteves; and

S. 2034. A bill for the relief of Luigi Scala; to the Committee on Immigration.

By Mr. GILLETTE (for himself and Mr. HERRING):

S. 2035. A bill to authorize the establishment of certain bank offices in communities which have no banking facilities; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. GILLETTE (for himself and Mr. LUNDEEN):

S. 2036. A bill to provide for adjusted-compensation payments to veterans of the Spanish-American War, the Boxer Rebellion, and the Philippine Insurrection; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. MEAD:

S. 2037 (by request). A bill to adjust the rate of pension to soldiers of the Indian wars who served 90 days or more in active service against hostile Indians, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. McNARY:

S. 2038. A bill for the relief of George H. Taylor; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. JOHNSON of California:

S. 2039. A bill granting a pension to Dellar Milam; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

S. 2040. A bill providing for preliminary examination and survey of Pine Island Bayou, Tex.; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. GILLETTE:

S. 2041. A bill to amend the act entitled "An act to extend further time for naturalization to alien veterans of the World War under the act approved May 25, 1932 (47 Stat. 165), to extend the same privileges to certain veterans of countries allied with the United States during the World War, and for other purposes," approved August 23, 1937; to the Committee on Immigration.

By Mr. SCHWELLENBACH:

S. 2042. A bill for the relief of Charles L. Lair; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma:

S. 2043. A bill authorizing the President to invite the States of the Union and foreign countries to participate in the International Petroleum Exposition at Tulsa, Okla., to be held May 18 to May 25, 1940; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

By Mr. CLARK of Missouri:

S. 2044. A bill making inapplicable certain reversionary provisions in the act of March 4, 1923 (42 Stat. 1450), and a certain deed executed by the Secretary of War in the matter of a lease to be entered into by the United States for the use of a part of the former Fort Armistead Military Reservation for air-navigation purposes; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. BROWN:

S. 2045. A bill to transfer to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation all Federal bank examining functions, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. RADCLIFFE:

S. 2046. A bill to change the designations of the Abraham Lincoln National Park, in the State of Kentucky, and the Fort McHenry National Park, in the State of Maryland; to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

By Mr. BARBOUR:

S. 2047. A bill to divest prize-fight films of their character as subjects of interstate or foreign commerce, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

By Mr. KING:

S. 2048. A bill authorizing the installation of parking meters and other devices on the streets of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. TYDINGS:

S. 2049. A bill for the relief of William W. Tingle; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. McCARRAN:

S. 2050. A bill to authorize a sale of the old Carson City (Nev.) Mint site and building notwithstanding the provisions of Joint Resolution No. 18 of February 23, 1865; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

S. 2051. A bill granting an increase of pension to Selina Dusang; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. LEE:

S. 2052. A bill to further amend section 344 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

By Mr. NEELY:

S. 2053. A bill for the relief of Emma Susan McMurdo; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. HAYDEN:

S. 2054. A bill for the relief of Joseph Alder, E. G. Allen, and E. G. Allen and By Hanchett jointly; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BONE:

S. 2055. A bill to authorize the acquisition, rehabilitation, and operation of the facilities for the public in the Mount Rainier National Park, in the State of Washington, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

By Mr. McKELLAR:

S. 2056. A bill for the relief of N. F. Clower and Elijah Williams; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. GILLETTE:

S. J. Res. 110. Joint resolution to provide for the publication of comprehensive statistics and data relating to agricultural adjustment and conservation programs; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

By Mr. PEPPER:

S. J. Res. 111. Joint resolution designating August 19 of each year as National Aviation Day; to the Committee on Commerce.

TAXATION OF JUDGES AND OTHER PUBLIC OFFICERS

Mr. BROWN submitted amendments intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 3790) relating to the taxation of the compensation of public officers and employees, which were ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

Mr. BONE and Mr. CONNALLY each submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by them, respectively, to the bill (H. R. 3790) relating to the taxation of the compensation of public officers and employees, which were ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

CANCELATION OF CERTAIN NOTES HELD BY FARM CREDIT ADMINISTRATION—AMENDMENT

Mr. NYE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 1710) to provide for the cancelation of certain notes acquired by the Farm Credit Administration as a result of the activities of the Federal Farm Board, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed.

AMENDMENTS TO AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. WILEY submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to House bill 5269, the Agricultural Department appropriation bill, 1940, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed, as follows:

On page 45, line 3, under the caption, "Forest Products", to strike out "$628,361" and insert in lieu thereof "$1,000,000."

Mr. WHEELER submitted amendments intended to be proposed by him to House bill 5269, the Agricultural Department appropriation bill, 1940, which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed, as follows:

On page 44, line 19, to strike out "$593,403," and insert in lieu thereof "$623,403,":

On page 44, line 19, to strike out "593,403" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "and not less than $58,350 shall be available for expenditure only for the conduct of investigations and experiments at the Northern Rocky Mountain Forest and Range Experiment Station."

On page 45, line 15, to strike out "$14,605,400" and insert in lieu thereof "$14,635,400."

On page 48, line 9, to strike out "$18,746,979" and insert in lieu thereof "$18,776,979."

On page 48, between lines 8 and 9, to insert the following:

"CONSTRUCTION OF ROADS FOR DEVELOPMENT OF MINERALIZED AREAS WITHIN NATIONAL FORESTS

"For surveys and such construction, reconstruction, repair, and maintenance of roads, trails, bridges as the Secretary of Agriculture may deem necessary in order to provide for the development of the mineral resources of areas which are located within the exterior boundaries of national forests and the greater portions of which are publicly owned, $1,500,000: Provided, That roads, trails, and bridges constructed, reconstructed, repaired, or maintained with any part of this appropriation shall be available for the use of the general public, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of Agriculture may prescribe, and for the official use of the United States."

On page 48, line 9, to strike out "$18,746,979" and insert in lieu thereof "$20,246,979."

BLOCK BOOKING AND BLIND SELLING OF MOTION-PICTURE FILMS

The VICE PRESIDENT. Resolutions coming over from a previous day are in order.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, resolutions coming over from a previous day I presume include a motion made by the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY] to discharge the Committee on Interstate Commerce from the consideration of Senate bill 280, dealing with the motion-picture industry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator is correct.

Mr. BARKLEY. A subcommittee of that committee today began hearings on the bill of which the Senator from West Virginia is the author. While the Senator is not present at the moment, I am sure he will not disagree to the unanimous-consent request I am about to make, that the motion go over without prejudice.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the motion will go over without prejudice.

THE SOCIAL SECURITY ACT AND THE TOWNSEND PLAN—ADDRESS BY SENATOR MALONEY

[Mr. MALONEY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a radio address delivered by himself on April 2, 1939, on the subject of the Social Security Act and the Townsend Plan; which appears in the Appendix.]

THE NEW DEAL ERA—ADDRESS RY SENATOR GREEN

[Mr. GUFFEY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a radio address delivered by Senator GREEN on The New Deal Era, at Washington, D. C., March 28, 1939; which appears in the Appendix.]

THE MULTIPLE-PURPOSE PROJECT—ADDRESS BY HON. JOHN C. PAGE

[Mr. NORRIS asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address on The Multiple-Purpose Project delivered by Hon. John C. Page, Commissioner of Reclamation, before the Rivers and Harbors Congress on March 23, 1939; which appears in the Appendix.]

THE LAKE ERIE CANAL—EDITORIAL FROM PITTSBURGH PRESS

[Mr. DAVIS asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial, under the heading "The Lake Erie Canal," published in the Pittsburgh Press of March 20, 1939; which appears in the Appendix.]

ORDER OF BUSINESS

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there be no further routine morning business, the consideration of bills on the calendar under rule VIII is in order.

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask unanimous consent that the call of the calendar be dispensed with.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Senators, the parliamentary situation is as follows under the rules of the Senate:

Ordinarily, if the Senate had not met today following an adjournment, the pending unfinished business would come before the Senate at this point in the proceedings; but under the rules of the Senate the unfinished business cannot come up until 2 o'clock, unless a motion to that effect is made.

Mr. BANKHEAD obtained the floor.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. I suggest that the Senator from Alabama withhold that motion for a moment so that the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY] may bring up at this time a joint resolution which I believe he desires to have considered.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Will it provoke debate?

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator from Wyoming has indicated that if it provokes debate he will withdraw it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill of the Senator from Alabama will automatically come before the Senate at 2 o'clock, if not earlier by his own motion.

TEMPORARY NATIONAL ECONOMIC COMMITTEE

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 90, Calendar No. 256, with the understanding that it will not delay the Senator from Alabama in the presentation of the measure in which he is interested.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the title of the joint resolution.

The CHIEF CLERK. Joint resolution (S. J. Res. 90) to amend the joint resolution approved June 16, 1938, entitled "Joint resolution to create a Temporary National Economic Committee."

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary, with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 1, page 1, line 6, after the word "thereof", to strike out "$2,500,000" and insert "$1,100,000", so as to make the section read:

Resolved, etc., That subsection (a) of section 6 of the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution to create a Temporary National Economic Committee," approved June 16, 1938, is amended by striking out "$500,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$1,100,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, page 1, line 9, after the word "thereof", to strike out "$500,000" and insert "$220,000"; and in line 11, after the word "thereof", to strike out "$2,000,000" and insert "$880,000", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 2. Subsection (b) of such section is amended by striking out "$100,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$220,000"; and by striking out "$400,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$880,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, when the joint resolution was considered by the Committee on the Judiciary, I opposed it, believing that there was no reason for the authorization of any sum or amount whatever. However, in view of the fact that the so-called Temporary National Economic Committee has not concluded its work, I was willing to support an appropriation for a few hundred thousand dollars, but, as stated, I was unwilling to vote for any authorization or for any sum in excess of $600,000.

When the resolution creating the committee was under consideration, I believed that the amount carried by the bill was adequate for any proper investigation. My recollection is that it was understood by the executive departments and the Congress that the amount of the appropriation provided for in the original bill was entirely sufficient. Undoubtedly, there are differences of opinion as to whether the work of the committee has been or will be satisfactory. There are some who believed that the investigation was to be in the nature of a witch-burning expedition. I think that view has been largely dissipated. There is some question as to whether any new facts have been developed or whether there is any valid reason for prolonging the life of the joint commission. It may be that the final report of the committee will prove disappointing. Be that as it may, I do not oppose the appropriation called for in the amended resolution, to wit, $600,000. With my present views, however, I shall oppose any further appropriation for the committee.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REDUCTION OF COTTON SURPLUS

Mr. BANKHEAD. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1514.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1514) providing in the interest of the general welfare for an appropriate reduction of the burdensome oversupply of American cotton and for further encouragement of soil conservation and soil improvement by making payments in kind in cotton, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert:

That every person who, as a producer of cotton, participates in the 1939 agricultural conservation program formulated under section 8 of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act and does not exceed his farm cotton acreage allotment under such program and in addition diverts to a soil-conserving or soil-building use, within the meaning of such program, an acreage equivalent to not less than 20 percent nor more than 75 percent (except that any producer may divert as much as 5 acres) of such allotment, shall be granted additional compensation by the Secretary of Agriculture for such additional contribution to such program by a payment in kind in cotton, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, in an amount representing the normal production, within the meaning of such program, of the additional acreage so diverted. Such producer shall be entitled to receive such additional compensation under one or the other or both of the following methods if, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, he has before June 16, 1939, signified his intention to make such additional diversion and shall have the right to choose the extent to which he shall benefit under one or the other or both if he files such choice not later than December 31, 1939.

(a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Commodity Credit Corporation shall permit such producer to withdraw, after July 31, 1939, and before March 1, 1940, so much of the cotton then pledged by him under the 1937 Commodity Credit Corporation loan as is not in excess of the amount which the Secretary of Agriculture finds he is entitled to receive as such additional payment. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, said Corporation is hereby authorized and directed to deliver to such producer or any person designated by him at a price of 3 cents a pound, basis Middling seven-eighths, warehouse receipts covering such cotton free from any lien, debt, or other obligation except warehouse charges subsequent to December 31, 1939, and such producer may sell or otherwise dispose of such cotton as he sees fit, except that no one may ever place it under any Government loan whatsoever. In determining the amount of cotton a producer may withdraw, a major fraction of a bale shall be reckoned as a whole bale and a minor fraction disregarded; or

(b) Such producer may obtain at a price of 3 cents a pound, basis Middling seven-eighths, participating trust certificates in a pool of cotton which the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized and directed to establish and operate in substantial accord with the 1933 cotton producers' pool. The amount of cotton covered by the producer's certificates shall be the difference between the total payment in kind for which he is eligible and the amount of cotton he has withdrawn under paragraph (a) hereof. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, Commodity Credit Corporation is hereby authorized and directed, after July 31, 1939, to acquire the title, pursuant to paragraph 4 of Commodity Credit Corporation Cotton Form A (1938–39), of such amount of cotton pledged by producers on said form as the Secretary finds is necessary to enable him to carry out this act and such cotton shall be acquired by the Corporation for loan value and accrued charges to August 1, 1939. Such cotton shall be delivered to the Secretary of Agriculture by the Corporation free from any lien, debt, or other obligation except warehouse charges subsequent to July 31, 1939.

The Secretary shall within a reasonable time liquidate the holdings of such pool in an orderly manner calculated to avoid so far as possible any disturbance of the cotton market and, after deducting the costs of the administration of the pool as ascertained or estimated by him, shall distribute the proceeds in one or more dividends to the participants in said pool. Such participating trust certificates may be sold, assigned, or transferred in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary designed to protect the original holders thereof from exploitation.

In subsequent programs, for the purposes of establishing acreage allotments and normal or average yields, the additional acreage diverted hereunder shall be treated as if it had been planted to cotton, and it shall be assumed that such acreage yielded the same amount of cotton per acre as the acreage actually planted to cotton on the farm in the year in which such additional diversion was made (or in the last previous year in which cotton was planted thereon in cases where the entire allotment not exceeding 5 acres was diverted).

SEC. 2. At the end of section 1 of the bill insert the following paragraph:

"Conformably to section 8 (f) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, wherever there is any reduction in the number of share tenants and share croppers below the average number on the farm during the 3 years 1936 to 1938 and the result of such reduction would be to increase the payment under this act to the landlord of the farm the payment to him shall be calculated by omitting such increase if the county committee disapproves such reduction as being not justified in view of all the circumstances."

SEC. 3. Not more than 3,000,000 bales averaging 500 pounds per bale shall be delivered to producers under the provisions of this act. If producers signify their intention to make the acreage diversion under this act in excess of 3,000,000 bales, the Secretary is authorized, under regulations to be made by him, to reduce, adjust, or abolish the quantity of cotton included in each producer's notice, so that the total amount will not exceed 3,000,000 bales.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Under the rules of the Senate the amendment in the nature of a substitute reported by the committee is considered as an original bill, and the amendment in the nature of a substitute is now open to amendment, or to explanation.

Mr. McKELLAR. I should like to have an explanation of the amendment.

Mr. McNARY. There will be an explanation if I have to make it. I assume, however, that the able author of the bill will make a reasonable explanation.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, I intend, of course, to explain the measure. Before proceeding to an explanation, however, I have two amendments, which will be taken up later, one merely to correct a clerical error, to substitute the word "apportion" for the word "abolish," and the other reducing from three million to two million bales the amount of cotton which may be taken under the proposed program. It is as well to get those amendments before the Senate.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Certainly.

Mr. McNARY. What has the Senator suggested in his amendment? I did not hear it.

Mr. BANKHEAD. The bill as reported limits the amount to 3,000,000 bales. I am reducing that figure, because of the lateness of the time, to 2,000,000 bales.

Mr. President, this subject is not only very important to the section of the country from which I come, but cotton plays a very important part in our national economy. The fact is that since our ports were opened, 150 years or more ago, our net balance of trade up to 1938, the last year for which figures are available, amounted to $31,138,000,000 for raw cotton, and for cotton manufactures $3,800,000,000, in round figures, or a total of $35,000,000,000. Of the entire balance of trade, the entire increase in the national assets of our country as a result of foreign trade, raw cotton and manufactured cotton goods account for all except $2,745,000,000 of the total. In other words, considerably more than 95 percent of the total increase in national wealth growing out of all of our foreign trade since our Government was established is traceable to the value of cotton and cotton manufactured goods exported from this country.

I submit, Mr. President, that a commodity which occupies such a status in our national economy should never be looked upon as a sectional or local or geographical problem. At all times it should be considered from a broad national standpoint. It is, of course, of paramount importance to the Cotton Belt that that should be so. That great area of country is almost entirely dependent upon the returns from the sale of cotton. The Cotton Belt was founded upon cotton as its chief economy. It has been built up on cotton, and it would surprise those who are not familiar with conditions in the Cotton Belt to realize that when one goes into the largest department store in all the South, from cellar to attic he finds for sale but few commodities, except local produce from the farms, which have been manufactured or produced in the Cotton Belt. All the clothes, hats, shoes, radios, victrolas, automobiles—in fact, all those articles which supply the comforts and needs of our people—are, with very few exceptions, produced outside of the Cotton Belt and imported into the Cotton Belt for purchase by our people.

It is true that every day the mail carries remittances in large numbers and in large amounts to the industrial sections of the United States with which to pay for all these things which are found on the shelves of practically all the stores in the South. It is true that checks move to the financial centers of this country in the East and the North to pay insurance premiums of all kinds—life, fire, and accident—and sureties of every kind. Checks of the same character move out of the Cotton Belt to pay the dividends and the interest on the securities of the railroads, the utility companies, and the other great industrial organizations operating in the South, because their stocks and their securities are owned outside of the Cotton Belt.

Whence comes the money to help operate the factories in the North and the East, the funds with which to pay all these interest and dividend charges? Permit me to say to Senators who are not familiar with conditions which I have just indicated by describing the situation in all the stores in the South that very few commodities, with the exception of cotton, bring in money throughout the year to pay and replace all these remittances. Cotton provides an annual return flow of money. Throughout the year we have also a return flow from the manufacture of certain cotton goods in the southern area, but, excluding those two items, we find very few other things in the Cotton Belt bringing money to that section to help support the national economy of this country.

When our cotton brings a reasonable price, and our farmers spend all the money that comes in, it goes into the stores and moves on until it goes out of the Cotton Belt. Trains operate bringing large quantities of commodities to fill the stores and supply the needs of the Cotton Belt. Industries in other sections of the country operate and give employment with more regularity and to a larger number of employees when the purchasing power of cotton is fair and approaches anything like the parity price. Our cotton farmers buy from the West hundreds of thousands of carloads of hay and oats and wheat and meat and lard, thus giving business to the West.

I have submitted these thoughts to indicate that the problem is not a sectional one. We hope that those who do not live in the cotton-producing area will realize the situation, and will cooperate with us when we get into trouble, as we are now.

Mr. President, we are now in the worst statistical position with respect to cotton that we have been in for a period as far back as I can recollect. We were moving upward until 1936. In common with people all over the country, particularly the farmers, we had desperate conditions in 1931 and 1932. The surplus of cotton, the largest up to that time in the history of the United States, was 13,000,000 bales, and the price was around 6 cents a pound. The annual income for cotton was reduced from a 14-year average of $1,400,000,000 to less than $400,000,000. With a billion dollars wiped out of that 14-year average of $1,400,000,000 received from the sale of raw cotton Senators can well understand the deplorable plight in which the people of the Cotton Belt, not only the farmers, but the people in the agricultural towns all over that belt, found themselves. But we proceeded to reduce that surplus. I will not go into the details. Most Senators are familiar with what happened. We reduced the surplus from 13,000,000 bales down to 6,000,000 bales. In doing so we increased the price from 6 cents a pound to 13 cents a pound. We were getting along nicely until the Supreme Court annulled the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and Congress, following that, in 1936, repealed the Bankhead Cotton Control Act.

Then came the deplorable year of 1937. With a good price, nearly 14 cents, in September of 1937, with better credit established for the farmers as the result of 2 or 3 years of rising prices, with better information about agricultural programs and processes to increase the yield per acre, our farmers in 1937, with control removed, increased their acreage between seven and eight million acres. They ran the production up to the highest in all the history of the United States. When the gins completed ginning for the season it developed that 19,000,000 bales of cotton had been produced.

In the meantime, unfortunately, consumption was decreasing. Exports were growing less. So that on August 1, 1938, following that great crop in 1937, we found on hand the largest carry-over in all the history of the United States, amounting to thirteen and a half million bales of cotton; and no one knows where the price of cotton would have gone but for the influence, the price-pegging effect of the cotton-loan program.

Without going into too many details, there we stood, with the greatest surplus in the history of the country. Was it decreased last year? No, it was not. Although we had a control program, although our farmers throughout the entire Cotton Belt voted by a majority of 84 percent for the control program, the acreage allotment permitted the production of a 12,000,000-bale crop, and later developments showed that the consumption of American cotton throughout the world for that year was only eleven and one-quarter million bales. So, on the 1st of August this year our surplus will again be increased, and will amount to 14,000,000 bales of cotton, against a present consumption of approximately 11,000,000 bales.

Senators, what are we going to do about it? That is our problem.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Gladly.

Mr. HATCH. The Senator just said that last year the acreage allotment permitted production of 12,000,000 bales of cotton. I quite agree with the Senator; but I think he should explain that under the 1938 act passed by the Congress, the prohibitions contained in the act itself were not simply with respect to allotment of acreage.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I do not quite understand the point. I know the Senator knows the facts, because I have worked with him.

Mr. HATCH. The 1938 act included a provision which prohibited the reduction of acreage to a less number than would normally produce 12,000,000 bales of cotton, and with the exceptions contained in the bill provision was made for the production of approximately eleven or twelve million bales of cotton.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I desire the Senator to understand that I do not wish to criticize anyone for the result, unless we criticize ourselves.

Mr. HATCH. I merely wanted to make it clear that such a prohibition was within the act itself, and it was not merely an act providing an allotment of acreage.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Oh, yes; a 12,000,000-bale crop was authorized by law; and the result was the largest surplus in the history of the world.

What are we going to do about it? We have a decreasing export trade. Where does the decrease lie, and what is responsible for it to begin with? Three countries account for practically all of it, nearly 3,000,000 bales—Germany, Japan, and this year Great Britain. This year in each of those countries the purchase of our cotton amounted to about 1,000,000 bales less than in preceding years. This is the first year that Great Britain has decreased its purchase of cotton from us.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. Does that decrease of practically a million bales each for Germany, Japan, and Great Britain, represent a decreased consumption of cotton in those countries, or have they purchased it from other countries, other producers?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, in part it represents a decrease in consumption of cotton. In part it represents a switching of their purchases to other countries. I do not know the motive of the Senator in asking the question, but regardless of his motive he has put his finger upon one of the most difficult problems of the American cotton producers. Consumption of cotton has been very greatly decreased by the development of a substitute in the form of fixed fibers, rayon and others.

Mr. BARKLEY. My motive, I will say to the Senator, is simply to get the facts.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I shall be glad to give them to the Senator if I can.

Mr. BARKLEY. My next question is, To the extent they have decreased their consumption of cotton, to what extent has it been made up by substitution of other materials which they use in lieu of cotton?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I will give the Senator a specific illustration. In 1925 the world production of rayon, synthetic fibers, amounted to 500,000 bales of cotton in weight. Last year the world production of synthetic fibers, chiefly rayon, displaced in weight 4,000,000 bales of cotton.

Mr. BARKLEY. Was that abroad?

Mr. BANKHEAD. In the world.

Mr. BARKLEY. Including this country?

Mr. BANKHEAD. We had lost a great deal of cotton to rayon. So did other countries. Within that period there has been developed a substitute for cotton which has removed markets for three and one-half million bales of cotton.

Mr. BARKLEY. Let me ask the Senator if he is going into a discussion of what the bill will accomplish and the process by which the cotton will be distributed? If so, I do not wish to question him about it now.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes; of course I am going into it, and I am going to hurry along.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not want to try to hurry the Senator. The problem is an important one. There is no more important problem before the people than the one under discussion. Those of us who do not come from the heart of the cotton region want to know the situation as it is. We are all interested in trying to help solve the problem. We may not know what the solution is. I have sometimes remarked that I do not believe anybody has the last word as to what ought to be done about cotton. I think it would be desirable to have a consensus of view on the subject among those who understand it. Senators who are not immediately concerned with the problem so far as their States are concerned are anxious to help Senators from the Cotton Belt work out the problem in a wise and constructive way.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I think the Senator is correct in that statement. It is the desire of Members of this body to help, if they know what to do.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. KING. If it will not divert the Senator from his line of argument, I should like to have him explain whether or not his investigation shows that the Smoot-Hawley Tariff Act and our tariff measures generally have been in part responsible for the loss of our markets abroad, both in manufactured goods and in raw materials.

Mr. BANKHEAD. In the discussion of this specific problem I am reluctant to enter upon so broad a field. However, I will say frankly and in specific terms that, in my judgment, the whole problem started with the passage of the Smoot-Hawley Act; and that is our difficulty today.

Everybody knows that we have about three-fourths or two-thirds of all the gold in the world. In the old days, up to a few years ago, gold was distributed throughout the world; and when the people of France, England, Japan, China, and elsewhere wanted to buy American cotton they had gold with which to pay the balance of trade. That situation has gone along until we own nearly all the gold. Other countries have so little left to back their currencies that they are reluctant to send any of it to America or to any other country in the world. That situation, among other things, has built up a spirit of nationalism. It has driven other countries to endeavor to produce within their own borders everything that will make them self-sustaining. So, without going into that question further, we have that situation. We have a change in world marketing conditions for cotton. For many long years 60 percent of our entire production found an outlet across the sea year in and year out.

I shall not undertake to say why Germany is not buying as much cotton from us as she formerly did. Other Senators know as much as I do about the reasons for that condition. I do not undertake to say why Japan, since she entered the war with China, has almost entirely stopped buying cotton from us. Whereas formerly she bought one and a half million bales a year, her purchases are now down to half a million bales. I shall not enter into a discussion of why China, formerly a good customer for cotton, is practically out of the world market for cotton. The only reason I know of why Great Britain this year has reduced her purchases from the former level of 1,500,000 bales a year down to half a million is the fact that, according to my information, Great Britain now is engaged in some of the trade practices which Germany and Italy have been engaged in for some years, that is, exchanging goods, especially with her own colonies, India and Egypt.

Someone may inquire about the quantity of cotton in foreign countries. I have heard it said that we needed to adopt an export subsidy plan because there is a shortage of American cotton in Europe. I have the figures, Mr. President, secured from the Department of Agriculture and from the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce.

On the 1st of February of this year, outside the cotton embraced within the loan, there were in the United States 6,250,000 bales of free cotton moving in the channels of commerce, subject to being bought and used in the United States, or bought and exported abroad.

What cotton was in foreign countries on the same date? On January 31, at mills in foreign countries, there were 597,000 bales of American cotton. In warehouses in Europe and afloat en route to Europe there were 1,148,000 bales. In the Orient there were 258,000 bales, making a total of stocks outside the United States of 2,003,000 bales of cotton.

In this country, as I have just pointed out, there are 6,250,000 bales, making a total in this country and abroad, not in the Government loan, of 8,253,000 bales of cotton, sufficient to continue the operation of mills desiring to use American cotton for two-thirds of the year, when we have only 4 months to go.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. The Senator has given this information before. Would the Senator mind stating how much cotton is embraced within the loan?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Eleven and a quarter million bales.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. How much is used in this country and throughout the world each year?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Last year the total world consumption of American cotton was 11,000,000 bales. The year before that it was eleven and a quarter million bales. At the present rate of consumption it will be less than 11,000,000 bales, because exports and foreign consumption have been considerably decreased as compared with the same months last year.

Mr. MINTON. If I understand the Senator correctly, the free American cotton in the world is about 8,000,000 bales, as against the year's consumption of 11,000,000 bales.

Mr. BANKHEAD. That is correct; and we have another crop coming. Under normal weather conditions there will be a crop of 12,000,000 bales more; and on top of that, eleven and a quarter million bales rest in warehouses under the Government loan.

Mr. MINTON. How much so-called free cotton in the world market is produced by other countries?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I do not have those figures before me, but I have them available. Other countries do not have quite so much as we have, but almost as much. They have a large supply.

I wish to discuss what can be done about the situation. I am sorry the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] is not in the Chamber at the moment. He asked about the details of the bill.

The bill proposes to offer to cotton producers at 3 cents a pound cotton now in the Government loan to the extent of not to exceed 2,000,000 bales.

What will be the effect of that action? In the first place, I will say with frankness that Mr. Duggan, the regional director, stated to me yesterday that he doubted if more than 1,000,000 bales of cotton would be taken by the farmers under the program at this late date. For that reason, I have made the reduction from 3,000,000 to 2,000,000 bales. I wish to have as much cotton available to the producers under this program as they are reasonably likely to take.

Some may think that such a program represents a considerable subsidy to the farmers. What does the farmer pay? That is a fair question. That is something everyone wishes to know. He pays 3 cents a pound for cotton under the bill.

Most of our cotton is produced by what are known as family size farms. No great quantity is produced by day labor or by machinery. It is produced either by the individual owner of the farm or by a sharecropper or tenant, who has control of the farm and who receives a part of the crop. In some instances he is required to furnish half the expense. He has to furnish the team and stock, half the fertilizer, and things of that sort. There are different arrangements. However, on family-size farms, which, in my judgment, produce at least four-fifths of the cotton, so far as I have knowledge of it, the family does the work. No labor is hired. The farmer has the work stock, which he would use in producing his regular allotted acreage on his farm if he did not take out any cotton under the program. So he has his expenses. He has his labor and stock. The only thing he saves is the fertilizer and the cost of the seed. On the other hand, he loses the income from the sale of the cottonseed, which is taken out. So when we balance the thing we find the farmer ready with a 12-acre allotment, we will say, with one one-sixth, or 2 acres, taken out, with his labor and that of his family; and we find him naturally inclined not to take out cotton under the program.

He will go along and get the price of his cottonseed. He has nothing else to do with his labor and his teams and land. Under this bill he cannot plant any competing cotton, but he must plant soil-conserving crops. So the farmers cannot make any money on the acreage taken out; the only thing they can possibly do is to help improve the land by planting legumes or something of that sort, and, in my judgment, and the judgment of the Department officials, an overwhelming proportion of these farmers will prefer to proceed with their normal planting of the 12 acres rather than take the two out, which would be about the proportion under this bill as it now stands.

Twelve million bales is the allotted crop. If 2,000,000 bales come out one-sixth of the acreage will not be used for cotton production. There will be no profit for the farmer in doing that. The loan cotton stands the Government about 9 cents a pound; the Government will recover 3 cents, leaving 6 cents on a 500-pound bale, or $30 a bale, that the Government must mark off the books of the R. F. C. This bill does not carry any appropriation or any authority for an appropriation; it simply provides for the elimination of that asset, in effect, upon the books of the R. F. C. because the farmer has already borrowed on it. We are dealing entirely with cotton under loan.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield, unless to do so will interfere with his argument?

Mr. BANKHEAD. It will not interfere at all.

Mr. BARKLEY. I was called out, and perhaps during my absence the Senator covered the point I am about to bring out. However, under the Senator's bill not over 3,000,000 bales——

Mr. BANKHEAD. The amount is 2,000,000 bales now; I have modified the bill in regard to the amount.

Mr. BARKLEY. Very well. Two million bales of the impounded cotton is turned back to those who produced it by the payment of 3 cents a pound. I do not gather from the bill whether the identical cotton produced by any grower is to be turned back to him. I presume it will be difficult to have him identify his crop.

Mr. BANKHEAD. There are two methods provided of securing the cotton. One is to draw back out of the loan the specific cotton that the farmer put in. He has his certificate; the cotton is in the warehouse in his own county; it has not been moved.

Mr. BARKLEY. Then, it can be identified?

Mr. BANKHEAD. The farmer can identify his own cotton.

Mr. BARKLEY. But, otherwise, it is put in a pool originally, and the farmer gets a certificate representing the amount he may draw back, if he wants to draw back, or the difference between what he actually draws back and what he could draw back?

Mr. BANKHEAD. That is correct.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is, 2,000,000 bales are drawn back by the producer at 3 cents a pound. He has already gotten, we will say, 9 cents; so that the Government, we will say, loses 6 cents a pound on it, and the farmer buys it back at 3 cents. That 2,000,000 bales, I assume, would be added to the 6,000,000 bales of what we call free cotton now that is not under loan?

Mr. BANKHEAD. No; that 2,000,000 bales takes the place of the 2,000,000 bales that, but for this plan, would be produced and go on the market at the next marketing season.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is true, but, for the time being, it does add——

Mr. BANKHEAD. No; that cotton is not released. The loan cotton stands under loan; it stays in the warehouse under the lien until the farmer has proven his compliance with the agreement to reduce his acreage.

Mr. BARKLEY. He cannot take it out?

Mr. BANKHEAD. He cannot take it out; it does not increase the free cotton.

Mr. BARKLEY. Let me ask the Senator another question. He may observe from my questions, I suppose, how ignorant I am on the subject of cotton and the machinery by which his bill will operate. The 2,000,000 bales are free cotton. Can the farmer sell it until after he has proven that he has complied by not producing an equivalent amount?

Mr. BANKHEAD. He could not get it.

Mr. BARKLEY. He could not sell it.

Mr. BANKHEAD. He has to prove his compliance.

Mr. BARKLEY. That, probably, destroys the necessity for my next question, that, having paid only 3 cents a pound for it, he could sell it, if he could sell it at all, at much less than the present market price and thereby affect the price of the 6,000,000 bales or the crop that is coming on this year? The Senator's theory is, instead of producing what might be regarded as a normal crop of 12,000,000 bales, that the return of the 2,000,000 bales will reduce the total to 10,000,000 bales? Is that the theory of the Senator?

Mr. BANKHEAD. No; for the farmers will merely produce 10,000,000 bales, and the 2,000,000 bales after the marketing season is opened will be added to the 10,000,000 bales. So we will have as much cotton this year as we did before, but there will be 2,000,000 bales less of surplus cotton.

Mr. BARKLEY. The same idea may be expressed in a different way by saying that if the 2,000,000 bales are not turned back under these conditions the farmers will produce, say, 12,000,000 bales of cotton this year. Is that right?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes; assuming normal weather.

Mr. BARKLEY. So that by turning back the 2,000,000 bales, under the circumstances provided in the bill, the farmers will produce only 10,000,000 bales; but when added to the 2,000,000 bales, it will make the 12,000,000 bales which would have been produced without this measure. That is correct, is it not?

Mr. BANKHEAD. That is exactly right.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator has very correctly, I think, stated one of our difficulties in regard to the cotton situation, namely, the falling off of our exports of cotton, following the decision of the Supreme Court in the Agricultural Adjustment Act case originally, and the production of 18,000,000 bales——

Mr. BANKHEAD. Nineteen million bales.

Mr. BARKLEY. Well, practically 19,000,000 bales in 1937. Those conditions have added to a surplus which is thus far unsalable; otherwise there would not be any cotton problem at all, if I understand the situation.

Mr. BANKHEAD. We had no real cotton problem in 1936.

Mr. BARKLEY. What is going to happen to the 12,000,000 bales made up of the ten million that will be grown this year and the two million provided for in the Senator's bill, with reference to the world market and with reference to the increase of our exports in order to get rid of the surplus? And unless we get rid of it by exporting it, we cannot get rid of it at all, except by burning it up or finding some other uses for it or by quitting the production of cotton. We all understand that that is not only true with respect to cotton but is also true with reference to tobacco, in which my State is very greatly interested. We cannot continue to pile up these unsalable surpluses. If we cannot use the product in the United States and cannot sell it abroad, we cannot continue to produce it and expect the Government to loan money on it, merely to hold it forever, no matter how long the unfavorable condition may last. What I am trying to get at—what worries me—is what is going to happen to cotton that is produced this year, which will be in addition to the nine and a half million bales that will be left in the loan? If this bill results in the withdrawal of 2,000,000 bales, then nine and a half million bales and 12,000,000 bales will amount to twenty-one and a half million bales at the end of this year. We sold abroad last year only 3,500,000 bales.

Mr. BANKHEAD. That is, this year up to date.

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes, three million five hundred thousand; and we used in the United States six and a half million bales. Unless we materially increase our domestic consumption and our exports of cotton, what will happen with regard to this 21,500,000 bales that we will have at the end of this year?

Mr. BANKHEAD. The only difference in the situation, whether we pass the bill or whether we do not pass the bill, will be the reduction in the carry-over that the farmers take out under this program. This is not a subsidy program; it is not so intended; that it is not so is verified by the judgment of the Department that very little cotton is going to be taken out because there will be very little profit in taking it out. The chief reason for taking it out will be in order to cooperate in some way in reducing the surplus. Our farmers understand the situation. The reason they voted so overwhelmingly for the control program is that they understand the situation and are willing to do their part.

Mr. BARKLEY. Let me ask the Senator another question. It may not be so material in view of the reduction of the amount of cotton from three to two million bales under the bill, but the suggestion has been discussed informally and I think it may be entitled to some consideration. What effect will the withdrawal of the 2,000,000 bales of cotton from production, and the consequent reduction from twelve to ten million bales for this year's quota, have upon those who are dependent upon the cotton-production industry for labor—the cotton pickers, the cotton hoers, and others?

Mr. BANKHEAD. In just a minute I will be very glad to go into that. Two questions have been presented; I will take them one at a time, and if I forget to get back to the last one in regard to the displacement of labor, I will ask the Senator to recall it to my mind.

The Senator asked what is going to happen to the large supply of cotton with 2,000,000 bales taken out. There will be left 9,000,000 bales in the loan. There is a considerable quantity of free cotton, and there will also be another crop of 10,000,000 bales coming on this year. What is going to become of it?

Mr. BARKLEY. I was mistaken in my figures. I did not, in my figures, include the 6,000,000 bales outside the loan cotton that is now in existence.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I am including that.

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; I understand the Senator is.

Mr. BANKHEAD. The answer is this——

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President——

Mr. BANKHEAD. Will the Senator from Oregon indulge me a moment until I answer the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. McNARY. Certainly.

Mr. BANKHEAD. The answer is that we shall have all of that cotton on our hands whether or not this bill is passed, and we shall have the same status with regard to each portion of that cotton whether or not the bill is passed, and that is our terrible problem. That is what is depressing us, and giving us such great annoyance and worry—having all of that cotton around. There is a great deal of free cotton, a great deal in the loan, and a great deal coming on again from this year's farming operations. As I have stated, we shall have 14,000,000 bales on the 1st of August, and under normal conditions we shall produce 12,000,000 bales again next year, which makes 26,000,000 bales of supply of American cotton, with a probable consumption, based upon the last 2 years, of 11,000,000 bales. Therefore, instead of a carry-over of 14,000,000 bales this year and thirteen and a half million bales last year, we shall have next year 15,000,000 bales of cotton in the carry-over. So I submit that it is absolutely necessary to do something to bring about a reduction in the carry-over.

The cotton keeps piling up. We cannot keep on putting it in the loan. We are just as anxious to avoid that as are the people outside the Cotton Belt. That is where it will go under present conditions unless the loan law is repealed, and if that is done we shall receive 1 or 2 cents a pound for cotton, and bankruptcy will ensue all over the South. We could not get any sort of a decent price for cotton with fourteen or fifteen million bales in the warehouse, added to a normal crop of 12,000,000 bales, which itself is more than the world is consuming for a whole year, without considering the great accumulation of cotton. Whether or not we had a loan, that cotton would have been in the warehouses or on the farms or somewhere else. It was produced; but there it is. We are not seeking a subsidy. It is too trifling. It is too small. We are seeking, in the best way we can, an assured plan for some reduction in the amount of cotton under the loan and in the carry-over. That is our problem. That is what we are working for. I am sorry the time has passed so that we cannot hope to get more, because unless we reduce the surplus in some way, unless we reduce the carry-over in some way, the time is coming when disaster will face us all over the Cotton Belt.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. STEWART in the chair). Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I gladly yield.

Mr. McNARY. I want to intrude just for an observation, if I may.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I welcome any contribution the Senator may care to make; but I hope he will not take too long, as I wish to finish.

Mr. McNARY. Oh, no; I shall not take any longer than the distinguished majority leader, the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY]. I shall deal with the same subject matter.

I am somewhat amused by the attempt of the Senator from Kentucky, the able Senator from Alabama, and even the President of the United States to lay upon the Supreme Court of the United States the responsibility for the cotton surplus. I am not here to defend that Court, even though it may, as I sometimes think, need a defender. But the Supreme Court was not at all responsible for the surplus, irrespective of its decision in the Butler case.

Let me give the Senator some interesting figures.

From 1928 to 1932, which the Senator is pleased to call the golden period in the production of crops, when the average price of cotton was 15 cents, forty-one and a half million acres were planted to cotton. The average annual production of cotton in those years was something like 12,000,000 bales.

In 1937, when the Supreme Court rendered the opinion in the Butler case, declaring the A. A. A. Act unconstitutional with respect to processing taxes, the acreage had been reduced from forty-one and a half million to thirty-four and a half million, or 7,000,000 acres; and that year the bumper crop of 19,000,000 bales of cotton was raised. Now it is claimed that that was the fault of the Supreme Court. I contend in the best of spirit that it was the fault of the weather man; that after the acreage had been reduced 7,000,000 acres over a 5-year period, and benefit payments had been made upon the basis of $500,000,000 for soil conservation, there still was produced on thirty-four and a half million acres a tremendously larger crop than the crop of the year about which complaint is now made. So if the Supreme Court had not decided the Butler case or if it had upheld the processing taxes, we still would have had the surplus, because, on account of favorable weather conditions, the Cotton Belt produced the largest crop of years, 19,000,000 bales, from which it is now suffering.

So I say it is not fair to blame the Supreme Court for the surplus when, after all, the weather conditions should be blamed.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I have had no purpose to drag the Supreme Court into this discussion.

Mr. McNARY. No; I appreciate that fact. Let me add that it is well known to those who observe conditions that acreage always yields to weather conditions. Acreage may be reduced or increased, but what happens in the way of yield depends upon weather conditions.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, of course, nobody disputes that statement; but the Senator from Oregon considers only one factor and declines to recognize the major factor. The two factors are yield per acre and weather conditions. Weather conditions, to which the Senator refers, affect yield directly; and in that year the weather conditions were ideal. Nobody seeks to conceal that fact. The Senator overlooks the fact, however, that with a high yield per acre the number of acres planted to cotton is the chief factor after all; and with a seven or eight million acre increase in the amount of land planted to cotton, of course, the higher yield was destructive, and destructive in the main because of the number of acres to which the yield was applied.

Mr. GILLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. GILLETTE. I have been trying to visualize the situation of the individual cotton producer. Under the alternative provision of subsection (a), if I, as a producer of cotton, have, say, 10 bales in the loan, will abide by the rules of the Soil Conservation Act and in addition will make a further reduction, I may withdraw a certain percentage of my 10 bales under the limitations of this bill at 3 cents a pound, free of all lien.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes.

Mr. GILLETTE. What is going to be the status of my loan? The rest of my cotton is there as security. The obligation still exists. I have taken part of it out of security at the price of 3 cents per pound, but what provision is there in the bill as to the status of the money I have borrowed, and for which the remainder of the cotton is security?

Mr. BANKHEAD. It does not affect the producer in any way. In the first place, as the Senator doubtless knows, the producer's loan is a nonrecourse loan. In the second place, I state here, with perfect frankness—the Senator may not have heard me—that that amount is charged off on the books of the R. F. C. It is a Government loss.

Mr. GILLETTE. The Senator means the 3 cents?

Mr. BANKHEAD. No; 6 cents. It is charged off. The Government now has a loss. It has a continuing loss of $4 a bale for each bale of cotton under the loan, including insurance, storage, and interest.

Mr. GILLETTE. If the Senator will bear with me for just one more question, I presume the theory is that the producer would be willing to reduce his crop acreage, in adition to the allotment, because he could get cotton at 3 cents a pound, and it would cost him more than that to produce it.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Very little more, as I have been trying to point out.

Mr. GILLETTE. But, as against that, he could not get a loan on that cotton.

Mr. BANKHEAD. No; he could not put that cotton back in the loan. That is one of the big advantages.

Mr. GILLETTE. So that would lessen the incentive for him to take the cotton out of the loan. If he raised the cotton, under the loan provision he could borrow money on it; but if he should elect to take the cotton out of the present loan, he would forfeit any right to borrow money on it. Am I correct?

Mr. BANKHEAD. There is a possibility of a difference in the market price and the loan price, but at present—the Senator may know it or may not know it—the price of spot cotton is above the loan price. It is above it right now because of the market situation, I assume, but, anyway, spot cotton now is about 8.50, a little above 8 cents, though there is not much margin there either way, if the situation remains as it is.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes.

Mr. MINTON. Was 1936 the year of the bumper cotton crop?

Mr. BANKHEAD. No.

Mr. MINTON. What year was it?

Mr. BANKHEAD. 1937.

Mr. MINTON. Of course, the control ceased in 1936, under the opinion in the Butler case?

Mr. BANKHEAD. That is correct.

Mr. MINTON. And the Bankhead Act was repealed?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes; it was repealed in the spring of 1936.

Mr. MINTON. So the first year in which we had no control was 1937, and we had splendid weather?

Mr. BANKHEAD. We had no control in 1936. The decision was rendered, and Congress acted after the farmers had practically made their plans; but that year there was an increase of 3,000,000 acres in the land planted to cotton.

Mr. MINTON. In the next year there was a large increase in acreage and a large yield per acre.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes; my recollection is that there was an increase of 8,000,000 acres.

Mr. MINTON. Then the opinion handed down by the Supreme Court did have something to do with the situation.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Of course; it did away with control. Under the control program, for 3 years—1933, 1934, and 1935—we reduced the carry-over, the surplus, from 13,000,000 bales to 6,000,000, and by doing that we increase the price from 6 to 13 cents. That was the effect of the operation of the control program. It was merely the working of an economic law. We held production down. Everyone knows the effect of that. Whether one agrees with that as a principle of government or not, the economic effect is not disputable.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not wish to drag the Supreme Court decision into the situation, as the decision was not rendered with the intention of having any effect on cotton; but it so happens that it was handed down on January 6, 1936, so that it took off control, so far as a decision could take it off at any time. Every farmer was free to produce as much as he desired to produce; the farmers did increase their acreage in 1936, and there was practically no control in 1937.

Mr. BANKHEAD. There was no control.

Mr. BARKLEY. There was no control at all in 1937.

Mr. BANKHEAD. No.

Mr. BARKLEY. It was in the year 1937 that the producers increased the production from 12,399,000 bales, the crop of 1936, to 19,000,000 bales, an increase of almost 6,000,000 bales in 1 year. So the decision and the date of the decision undoubtedly had something to do with the increased production in 1937.

Mr. BANKHEAD. In the spring of 1937, after 3 years of control and the reduction of the surplus from thirteen million to six million bales, the price of cotton went to 14 cents a pound, and with that attractive price and no control law, the farmers, responding to the impulses of human nature, increased their acreage planted to cotton, wanting a little more cotton to sell at that attractive price. That was the situation.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Alabama yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. McNARY. I do not desire to repeat my statement about the decision of the Supreme Court; I shall refer to that in my own time. However, I wish to ask the Senator about another matter. What does he claim the average charge per pound against the impounded cotton to be? In determining the loss the Government sustained on the 2,000,000 bales, which he now desires to give the farmers the right to repossess, what figure does the Senator use as the amount of investment per pound the Government has in the cotton at this time?

Mr. BANKHEAD. The investment was shown by the representative of the Commodity Credit Corporation who testified a few days ago before the Banking and Currency Committee, of which I am a member, on the subject of extending the time of the commodity loans.

The average figure for the 1938 crop of cotton which they may draw out was 9.45 cents, just above 9 cents. That covered all the carrying charges up to that time. The Senator will recall that the loan price was only 8.3 cents.

Mr. McNARY. Of course, my figures are different, and for the purpose of permitting me to submit them for the RECORD at this time, I assume the Senator will be happy to yield to me.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Certainly; I will cooperate with the Senator.

Mr. McNARY. I have a letter, dated Friday last, from the Commodity Credit Corporation, which loaned the money, and I assume their records to be accurate. They state that the estimate of the price per pound against loans on cotton, including all advances, accruals of interest, and storage charges, to March 1, 1939, on the 1934–35 crop of 1,666,350 bales, amounts to 15.25 per pound.

Mr. BANKHEAD. That evidence was before our committee.

Mr. McNARY. For 1937–38 the figure was 9.088 cents, for 1938–39 the figure was 9.098 cents. The total on the 11,000,000 bales averages 10.046 cents.

Mr. BANKHEAD. That does not conflict in any way with what I have stated.

Mr. McNARY. I do not wish to be put in the attitude of criticizing what the Senator says. We are all interested in having the figures accurate, however.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Certainly. Did not the Senator read that for the crop of 1938 the figure was nine with a fraction?

Mr. McNARY. Yes.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Did I not say it was that?

Mr. McNARY. Yes.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Then, what is the difference?

Mr. McNARY. I am stating that upon the impounded cotton, which is in excess of 11,000,000 bales, the Government to date has advanced, including carrying charges, insurance, and interest, a little in excess of 10 cents per pound. So when we measure our loss by permitting the cotton farmers to repossess cotton for the purpose of retiring acreage we must figure from 10 cents rather than 9.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I do not agree with the Senator's conclusion in that regard. The cotton of 1934–35 was a different lot. The loan on that went from the 10-cent basis to the 12-cent basis, but on cotton which is recoverable specifically under the proposed act the loan was made at 8.3 cents last fall.

Mr. McNARY. But is there anything in the bill which limits the 2,000,000 bales to the crop of 1937–38? It applies to all the crops now held as security by the Commodity Credit Corporation, so it must include the 1,666,000 bales upon which 15.25 cents per pound was loaned. I am speaking of the general average according to the records of the Commodity Credit Corporation, which is in excess of 10 cents a pound as of March 1 of this year.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I recognize the general average; but the farmer is allowed to withdraw his cotton out of the 1938 loan cotton; I assume he can do that.

The Senator from Kentucky asked me about the effect of this program upon labor on the farms, and that is a fair and proper question. I regret that the Senator was out of the Chamber when I made the statement that probably four-fifths of the cotton is produced on family-size farms, and is raised by the farmer's own family, no labor being hired. Of course, upon farms of that kind there would be no disturbance of labor of any kind.

In the first place, one-sixth of the small acreage that is allotted is not sufficient to require any additional labor. Let us assume a 12,000,000-bale crop, and allotments to farmers of 2,300,000 bales, and the average production, which is approximately 5 bales to the farm. The result is that the acreage allotted is small. So one-sixth of it is retired, after the farmer has made all his arrangements to plant 12 acres instead of 10, and therefore it cannot result in any labor displacement.

I call the Senator's attention to the further fact that there is no financial reason for displacement of labor upon the farm. Some people ask, How is the tenant, or laborer, or whatever position he occupies, to get his return, to get his income, as he would if the entire amount of cotton were produced? Such a query simply overlooks the fact that the farmer gets the same amount of money out if his crop whether he plants the entire allotment or only five-sixths of it. So he has the same income from his farm with which to pay his labor whether he plants 10 acres or plants 12 acres.

Mr. BARKLEY. Has the Senator any figures as to the proportion of cotton produced by sharecroppers?

Mr. BANKHEAD. No; I am sorry I have not; I do not know whether or not the Department has such figures; but I take it the proportion is around half of the cotton produced or more. I refer to tenants. There are different kinds of tenants, of course, as the Senator doubtless knows; some are cash renters and some pay so much cotton as rent.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am familiar with that. Suppose a man owning a cotton farm intended to have 12 acres in cultivation, and he raised the cotton by the sharecropper method, and had two tenants, we will say. I do not know whether or not that is a fair average, but we will say he had two tenants.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I think a fair average is about one-fourth of one. Most of the production is on family-size farms.

Mr. BARKLEY. Suppose that instead of planting 12 acres, he plants 10 acres. Will the reduction in the production on the farm for this year have any effect upon the income of the tenants, assuming that the landlord gets the benefit of the impounded cotton, which he buys back at 3 cents a pound?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Let me call the Senator's attention to section 2 of the bill, on page 8, which reads:

> SEC. 2. At the end of section 1 of the bill insert the following paragraph:
>
> "Conformity to section 8 (f) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, wherever there is any reduction in the number of share tenants and sharecroppers below the average number on the farm during the 3 years 1936 to 1938 and the result of such reduction would be to increase the payment under this act to the landlord of the farm the payment to him shall be calculated by omitting such increase if the county committee disapproves such reduction as being not justified in view of all the circumstances."

Mr. BARKLEY. The concrete answer to my former question with respect to labor is that the Senator's view is that the bill, if enacted, would not materially affect the volume of labor or the compensation of those who are hired either for cash or for part of the crop to produce the cotton crop of 1939.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I do not think it would affect it at all, because I believe that a man who already has labor hired will not avail himself of the provision, but will put in his full acreage.

Mr. BARKLEY. It might be an inducement to him not to hire labor and produce cotton if he could get the same amount of cotton, at 3 cents a pound.

Mr. BANKHEAD. The Senator recognizes that those who are going to produce cotton have what labor they need on their farms now.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is true.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. MILLER. I am in hearty sympathy with the objectives of the bill; but I wish to ask the Senator concerning the two provisions for the disposition of cotton after it is withdrawn. For instance, subsection (a) on page 6 sets up one method. As I understand that method, the farmer himself would withdraw the cotton, and he could assign the warehouse receipts to anyone.

Mr. BANKHEAD. After he got the cotton.

Mr. MILLER. Yes; after he got the cotton.

Mr. BANKHEAD. By proving that he had reduced his production.

Mr. MILLER. Yes; after proving that he had conformed to the requirements set forth. Then subsection (b) on page 7 provides another method of obtaining and selling the cotton. I am a little bit worried about subsection (a) being in the bill. It appears to me it would be much better if the cotton were disposed of under subsection (b), because we must face the fact that the average amount loaned against the cotton is approximately 10 cents a pound. That is above the present market value.

Mr. BANKHEAD. No; the loan on the cotton covered by section (a) does not exceed 9 cents.

Mr. MILLER. Even that is above the present market value.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes; by about one-half cent.

Mr. MILLER. In other words, the farmer would not have any equity in the cotton if he should withdraw it at 3 cents. I should like a measure to be enacted which would prevent the farmer from putting such cotton on the market at, say, as low as 5 cents a pound. There would not be any reason why he could not put it on the market at 5 cents a pound after it was withdrawn under subsection (a), whereas I think under subsection (b) a better method is provided.

Mr. BANKHEAD. There are two answers to the Senator's question. In the first place, I have no interest in retaining that section in the bill if anyone objects to it. The farmers themselves put it in the bill. But I am surprised to hear the Senator say that he thinks any farmer would sell the cotton below the market price.

Mr. MILLER. I do not think the farmer would.

Mr. BANKHEAD. The Senator knows that the farmer would not sell it below the market price. Farmers all over the country receive the same price. The price is published and is available everywhere.

Mr. MILLER. That is true; but I am afraid there would be an incentive to reduce the price.

Mr. BANKHEAD. If the farmer did that he would be the loser. Why should he take less than he could get for the cotton, and he could get the regular market price for the cotton?

Mr. MILLER. I agree that he would lose, but at the same time he would be gaining something by the release of the cotton. However, I believe there would be a more orderly disposition of the cotton if the sale were conducted as in 1933 under subsection (b).

Mr. BANKHEAD. I will make a further statement which, I think, Members of the Senate should have in connection with this subject. Personally I do not care so much about the method to be used. We had a meeting in Washington of farmers from 18 cotton-producing States. That statement may seem a strange one, but a little cotton is produced in a number of States such as the State represented in part by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LUCAS]. Early in January a farmers' meeting was held in Washington, to which came delegates from every cotton-producing State in the United States. They were not Government officials as we were told. They were farm organization representatives. They were leaders in agricultural production. They came here to consider, counsel together, about the horrible situation that was confronting us as we entered upon a new year's production with considerably more cotton in the warehouses than would be needed to supply the consumption of American cotton in the world if not a single bale of cotton were raised this year. So they came here confronted with that situation. They stayed here 3 days, and I understand they were invited by Secretary Wallace. During those 3 days they deliberated upon a program. After they had worked it all out together, after they had counseled together and endeavored to meet objections or to accept as valid the objections that were raised, that group unanimously agreed upon the provision and plan contained in the pending bill. They came to the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, 20 or 25 representatives from the farm group of nearly a hundred, to report the result of their efforts and the conclusion reached by them.

A large number of Senators were present at the meeting. All the Senators from the cotton-producing States and members of the House Committee on Agriculture from the cotton-producing States were invited. We had a room full of Members of Congress and representatives of the delegations representing farmers. The farmers' representatives came before us in person and reported the results of their deliberations, and recommended the pending program as the best they could suggest. They thought, even in January, that if we gave this cotton away—that is what they recommended—and made no charge, that not more than 3,000,000 bales would be taken by the farmers, because they would rather work all their acreage than to retire 2 or 3 acres. They would rather have the cottonseed and get the money for that. They would rather conduct their normal farm operations.

One of the spokesmen, a man from Mississippi, the president of the Farm Bureau in Mississippi, a man of very high intelligence and of considerable farm interests, said under the plan he would not take any cotton out.

I wanted to point out to the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. MILLER] and to other Senators who are interested, that this is really a farmers' plan, voted upon favorably in Washington and recommended to Congress, and sponsored by me. I put the plan in the bill some time ago.

They presented the reasons why a farmer should be allowed to take out his own cotton; and they put in the section to which the Senator from Arkansas objects, or about which he seems to be doubtful. They gave their reason. They said a good many farmers had loans on cotton above seven-eighths inch Middling in grade. They had their certificates upon that cotton. Why not let them draw their own cotton out at their own home town; let them get their own cotton out of the warehouse? So they had the bill prepared at the Department of Agriculture, and they brought it to me, and it was introduced in that form.

I wanted the Senate to know that the measure is really the result of the meetings of the farmers, and their efforts and deliberations, rather than my own production, although I did favor that provision.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. The distinguished Senator from Alabama was kind enough a few moments ago to refer to certain of my constituents who came from Illinois to meet other farm representatives in Washington and discuss this very important problem. Of course, I presume the statement that Illinois raises some cotton in the extreme southern part is news to a great many Senators.

Mr. BANKHEAD. We became liberal with Illinois the last time.

Mr. LUCAS. And I am very happy to make another observation or two with respect to the productivity and the versatility of the great State of Illinois. Let us begin with the first city of America—Chicago, on the north. Leaving that great metropolitan center and going south, there is found one of the most famous dairy sections in the United States of America. Then farther south there is found the heart of the Corn Belt itself. Travel with me on to the south and we find oil and coal. In that locality are probably the greatest oil fields in this country, or at least they will be when developed to a final stage. And one of the largest coal mines in all the world is located in Franklin County.

Then in the extreme southern part of Illinois cotton, of which the Senator from Alabama has spoken, is produced.

However, I did not rise for the purpose of discussing the wonders of my State. I rose primarily for the purpose of speaking upon what I believe to be a very practical question in connection with the difficult problem which the Senator is attempting to solve. I wish to say to the Senator from Alabama and to all the Senators from the cotton-producing States of the South that I am extremely sympathetic with the position they are taking with respect to the difficulties they are attempting to meet by the pending measure. I have a tremendous amount of interest in doing something, not only for the cotton farmer, Mr. President, but for all agriculture throughout America.

Therefore, I wish to ask one practical question in line with what the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] was discussing with the Senator from Alabama a few moments ago with respect to the labor problem. If I correctly understood the distinguished Senator from Alabama in his answer to the question asked by the Senator from Kentucky, he said that the proposed legislation would not affect the labor in the South and in the cotton fields, practically all of which is employed at the present time to plant or to prepare the ground for the cotton crop of 1939.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I think that is correct.

Mr. LUCAS. If that be true, I should like to ask one further question. What is the latest date at which cotton can be planted in the Senator's State with good prospects for a successful crop?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I think it could be planted as late as the first of May.

Mr. LUCAS. What percentage of the acreage would the Senator say is now planted to cotton in the State of Alabama?

Mr. BANKHEAD. A very little. I should say 10 percent, if that much, on the lower border of the Gulf.

Mr. LUCAS. What part is being prepared?

Mr. BANKHEAD. It is all being prepared. However, the preparation is not up-to-date. Work is going on.

Mr. LUCAS. If the bill should be enacted, would the fact that a certain portion of the crop has already been planted, and the soil in other parts of the State is now being prepared for the cotton crop of 1939, interfere with the efficacy of the measure?

Mr. BANKHEAD. It would mean that those who have planted would not have the privilege of obtaining any of the cotton.

Mr. LUCAS. Those who have planted would not have the right to obtain any of the benefits under this bill; and the longer we delay passage of the bill, the greater the acreage which will be planted, and the less effective the measure will become.

Mr. BANKHEAD. That is true. I think if we do not have speedy action on the bill, it will be worthless. I have no illusions about that question. I think speed is of the essence of the program.

Mr. LUCAS. How long a time would have to elapse before the bill would become practically worthless?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Does the Senator mean how much notice it would be necessary to give the farmers?

Mr. LUCAS. No. If we kept the bill in Congress, how long would it be before it would become ineffective?

Mr. BANKHEAD. It becomes weaker every day. There is no doubt about that. However, I think if we could pass the bill in 2 or 3 weeks 1,000,000 bales might be taken out. Every bale of cotton removed from the loan and from the surplus is that much more help.

Mr. LUCAS. I wish to say in conclusion, Mr. President, as I said in the beginning, that I have every sympathy with Senators from the Southern States in connection with the cotton problem in part because I have a little of it in my State of Illinois. I honestly believe that if we pass the bill at the present time, and the bill goes to the House, we will again have the same chaos and confusion over agricultural legislation that existed in the House last week. I am interested in corn; I am interested in the dairy products of this country; I am interested in the wheat farmer; in fact, I am interested in what I conceive to be an all-American program whereby every farmer in America will be benefited in some way by legislation that the Congress can enact, and will enact before it adjourns. I have a sincere and deep interest in the cotton problem, because it is a serious one. I know that something must be done about it in one form or another, from the standpoint of legislation, during this session of Congress. However, I witnessed what transpired in the House. When the question arose of parity payments of $250,000,000 for certain special commodities, namely: Cotton, wheat, corn, rice, and tobacco, we know exactly what happened. Why did it happen? Simply because the dairy farmers, the fruit and vegetable farmers, and many other farmers who are just as much entitled to benefits as the corn, cotton, and wheat farmers, would have received no benefits under the legislation which was passed by the House of Representatives. If we pass the cotton bill in the Senate today and send it over to the House of Representatives for action, the same situation will be produced in the House of Representatives which existed only a week ago, when parity payments were defeated and the farmers of the country received nothing from the standpoint of benefits insofar as farm legislation is concerned. Confusion and chaos will be added to our already muddled agriculture situation.

We will soon have the question of parity payments before the Senate. It will come along in the form of an amendment to an appropriation bill. Mr. President, parity-payment legislation affects the five basic commodities, including cotton, on which we are working today. I undertake to say that it is for the best interests of the cotton farmers to defeat this bill in order that ultimately a plan may be worked out in the United States Senate, in cooperation with certain Members in the House of Representatives who are vitally interested in all agriculture, to the end that a unified program may be presented affecting all agriculture so vital and so necessary to a prosperous life for this great country of ours.

I wish to move on a united front. I do not wish to go at the problem piecemeal. In order to obtain the kind of program which American agriculture deserves—not for cotton alone, not for wheat alone, or for corn, vegetables, fruit, or dairy products alone, but for them all—we must sit down and try to work out a definite, concrete program which will affect American agriculture as a whole. That is what a group of Senators are trying to do at the present time.

Mr. President, I am not standing on my feet today because I am interested in making a speech. I am standing here deeply concerned about a great fundamental problem, which affects the economic and social life of the Nation. I want it to succeed. However, I can foresee danger in the bill when it goes over to the House. It will be said, "Here is something more for cotton. Where do we come in?"

Mr. President, it is to the interest of the cotton farmers of the South that the bill be defeated in order that we may ultimately come before the Senate with a strong, united program in which every United States Senator will be interested. If we legislate for the dairy farmers, the fruit and vegetable farmers, the wheat, cotton, and corn farmers, the Republican Members on this side of the aisle will at least give the bill serious consideration from the standpoint of our national economy, which is so necessary to the future of agriculture. There is no Senator, regardless of politics, but who is interested in some phase of agriculture.

I am sorry to take so much time from my distinguished friend. I thank him very much for permitting me to use his time.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, I am always glad to hear the distinguished Senator from Illinois. I am not so sure that he is as much interested in cotton as I am; I am not so sure that many other Senators are. However, the Senator certainly knows that a broad program has been suggested. Of all the crops produced, cotton occupies the worst statistical position. Some weeks ago I went to the Senator and asked him if he had any program along these lines in which he wanted to join us. He was not prepared to do so. I have not moved solely for cotton. I have always been willing to cooperate with dairy farmers, corn farmers, wheat farmers, fruit and vegetable producers, and anyone else who makes his living on the farm.

I am sorry that the Senator has raised the flag against cotton legislation. Probably he will win. I know what it means when a flag of that sort is raised. When the issue on cotton is raised, I know what the result will be. I have no illusions about that. I am sorry he did it. I would rather someone else had done it.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. I hope the Senator does not construe my remarks as raising the flag against cotton. If there is anyone who is sympathetic toward cotton producers, it is the Senator from Illinois. If the Senator construes what I said as raising the flag against cotton, of course I regret it. My approach to the solution is different, and I have a notion that what I have said here, has perhaps helped the cotton farmer rather than injured him. That I assure my able friend is the spirit in which the remarks were made.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. WILEY. I should like to ask a few questions. Suppose a coordinated plan such as the Senator from Illinois suggests were brought forward. Is there any reason why the plan of the Senator from Alabama could not fit into such a coordinated plan?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I will say to the Senator that the most important factor is that of time. The Senator from Illinois, who has just spoken, leaves the impression, with me at least, and doubtless with other Senators, that if this one piece of proposed legislation designed to reduce the supply of cotton, a bill applying solely to cotton and to nothing else, is passed, the representatives of the cotton section will quit, walk out, and lose their interest in other agricultural legislation. That would not be the effect on our interest. We have always voted, and will continue to vote, for agriculture. Nearly every Senator from the cotton-producing States has his heart in agricultural legislation. So the pending bill does not dispose of our interest in agricultural legislation. It simply accelerates it, if anything. Those who represent other sections, which have other problems, should not say to us: "You stand aside; nobody else has a situation such as you have, but you cannot get yours, although time is moving against you, until we get our share."

Mr. WILEY. What is the average cost per pound of producing cotton?

Mr. BANKHEAD. That is a difficult question to answer. The cost varies a great deal. It depends upon the parts of the Cotton Belt, and it depends a good deal upon what elements of cost are considered. It is generally asserted by everybody who knows anything about it that it costs more to produce cotton than the farmers have been getting for it for some time.

Mr. WILEY. Would the Senator say that the average cost of producing cotton is 6 cents or 7 cents per pound?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. It costs probably 10 cents per pound.

Mr. McNARY. On that point, I think the best records indicate that the cost is about 10 cents per pound.

Mr. WILEY. And the present market is about 8 cents?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes.

Mr. WILEY. If 2,000,000 bales were taken, that would mean a subsidy, would it not, of the difference between 3 cents and 8 cents, or about $70,000,000 of loss to the Government?

Mr. BANKHEAD. The bill limits the amount to 2,000,000 bales, and it would mean a loss of $60,000,000.

Mr. WILEY. On that basis the loss would be $60,000,000?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes; assuming, of course, that the Government is going to get back all of its loan and all of its carrying charges hereafter, which I think is a rather violent assumption unless the Government does something like this and helps put up the price.

Mr. WILEY. I will say to the Senator that I was in the committee when the discussion arose, and the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] said he thought the farmers would take the cotton as quickly at 6 cents as they would at 3 cents. Does the Senator from Alabama think that is is true?

Mr. BANKHEAD. No. The Senator from South Carolina and I have differed about that matter all the way through. We have had a friendly but open difference of opinion on the subject.

Mr. WILEY. There was some discussion as to labor. Suppose the price for the small farmer, as he is called, were placed at 3 cents, would it be advisable to give the large farmer the same opportunity to buy at 3 cents?

Mr. BANKHEAD. The Senator misunderstood what was said. There is no difference as between farmers. There is a uniform price.

Mr. WILEY. Would it not be advisable to change the provision or fix a limit so that one farmer could not take, say, over 100, 500, or a thousand bales?

Mr. BANKHEAD. The bill authorizes the Secretary, when the bids are all in, just as the Treasury would do in the case of bonds, to apportion the amount if it is in excess of 2,000,000 bales.

Mr. WILEY. The problem I have in mind is this: Suppose a large farmer formerly had produced a thousand bales. If he did not have to do anything, he could afford to pay 3 cents a pound, which would be in the neighborhood of $15 a bale; and if he should sell that cotton at a price of 8 cents a pound, he would make a big clean-up, would he not?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I did not catch the Senator's question.

Mr. WILEY. Assume that a large farmer who ordinarily produces a thousand bales of cotton could go to the Government and buy 1,000 bales at 3 cents a pound instead of producing it: He would make a good deal of money.

Mr. BANKHEAD. The answer to that question is that under this program he cannot do it if there is any demand at all for the cotton, because it has to be apportioned; so the question is a speculative one.

Mr. WILEY. The Senator said about one-fourth or one-fifth of the farmers live on large farms, as I understand, and the other four-fifths live on small farms.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Most of the large farms are made up of a number of small farms.

Mr. WILEY. I thank the Senator very much.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes; I yield to the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. HATCH. I observe that the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LUCAS] has left the Chamber. I wanted to ask him a question, and I am sorry he is not now present. I came in just as he was concluding his remarks. Did I correctly understand him to say that a coordinated and unified bill is in process of preparation?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes; that is the way I understood the Senator.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at that point?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes.

Mr. McNARY. I think there is a good deal to commend in what the Senator from Illinois said.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I regret that the Senator from Illinois did not let the Senator from Oregon say it.

Mr. McNARY. I have always regretted that in the Soil Conservation Act we have dealt with only a few crops. I think that act should apply generally and without discrimination to all crops; but I disagree with the Senator from Illinois in one respect. He was speaking of the 1939 crops raised on the farms of the country. This measure deals with cotton which is now impounded with the Commodity Credit Corporation for loans, cotton which we are trying to dispose of and get back in the channels of trade, and at the same time decrease production.

I think we are dealing with a little different problem than that mentioned by the Senator from Illinois. I want to make my contribution to getting rid as quickly as we can of the cotton upon which the Government has loaned practically $500,000,000. I want to see it sold. I want to see the surplus disposed of. I have no particular quarrel with the able Senator from Alabama.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Will the Senator from Oregon let me ask him a question?

Mr. McNARY. Yes; I shall be happy to have the Senator do so.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Does not the Senator realize that the best way for the Government to get its money back out of its loan on cotton would be to reduce the surplus and thus increase the price?

Mr. McNARY. Exactly.

Mr. BANKHEAD. That is what I am trying to accomplish.

Mr. McNARY. I say, I agree with the objectives of the bill, and I think we are treating one particular phase of the problem in the bill. If the Senator would accept an amendment from me, I should cordially and warmly support this provision. I am glad he proposes to reduce the acreage.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I think the Senator should be fair enough to state what his amendment is before he asks me to accept it.

Mr. McNARY. I was about to do so. If the Senator would increase from 3 cents to 5 or 6 cents per pound the amount which the farmer should pay in order to repossess himself of cotton, I should be glad to support the measure.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I should be glad to make the suggestion; but I think we might just as well indefinitely postpone the bill, because I do not think the Senator would get any of the cotton out at that figure.

Mr. McNARY. For instance, I have in mind the act of 1933—I think it is called the Smith Act—in which the same proposition was expressed, and in which it was provided that the cotton grower, in order to repossess himself of his cotton and thereby decrease his acreage, should pay 6 cents per pound upon a price level similar to that which obtains today. In all fairness, it seems to me that the farmer who had received on his loan more money than he would receive if he sold in the market should be willing to pay enough for the cotton to justify the Government in releasing it to him in order that he might sell it in the open market. If he paid 5 or 6 cents per pound he would then net a very good profit; and before the discussion ends I shall offer an amendment to the effect that the grower, in order to recover his cotton, shall pay 6 cents per pound, in conformity with the act of 1933.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Will the Senator support the bill at 4 cents per pound?

Mr. McNARY. No; I do not think that is quite fair.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I am just trying to take some cotton out of production and help the Government save as much as possible of the money it has loaned.

Mr. McNARY. I will support the bill, reduced as the acreage is to 2,000,000 bales, if it is provided that the cotton grower shall pay 5 cents instead of 3 cents.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, while the Senator from Alabama is considering the proposition of the Senator from Oregon, I desire to make an observation similar to that which the Senator from Oregon has already very ably made in connection with the remarks of the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LUCAS]. The Senator from Illinois is sponsoring, I presume, some mysterious bill that is to deal with agriculture as a whole. In his desire and wish I join him heartily. I should like to deal with a complete agricultural bill, and treat the entire subject as a whole, and I think we should do it; but, as the Senator from Oregon has pointed out, the bill of the Senator from Alabama, which is before us today, deals only with one phase of a question which must be acted upon immediately. It cannot wait until committees meet, and bills are introduced and considered, when planting time is right on us now; and, as the Senator from Oregon pointed out, I think the Senator from Illinois must understand the purpose and effect of this measure.

I am speaking in the time of the Senator from Alabama; but I desire to say that I have served on the committee with the Senator from Alabama since I have been in the Senate. The statement I am about to make applies also to the chairman of the committee, who is likewise interested in cotton. Both these Senators have at all times been perfectly willing to treat with other crops, giving them the same generous and kindly type of treatment that they have asked for cotton.

I think the Senator from Alabama is entitled to have that statement made.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I appreciate the statement.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator one question?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Certainly.

Mr. SMITH. Does the Senator think 2,000,000 bales is enough to allocate for the purpose of repossession?

Mr. BANKHEAD. No; but I saw that I could not get any more. Mr. Duggan, director of the southern division, Department of Agriculture, says that we cannot get more than a million bales out at this late date anyway; so I was actuated by those two motives.

Mr. SMITH. I do not want to interfere with this debate; but I am perfectly convinced of certain things after the experience of 1934–35, when Mr. Hoover failed to sign the bill, and the incoming President did not take advantage of the time limit that still remained for him to sign it, waiting for a general bill. The same principle involved in this bill was part 1 of that bill. I knew farmers who plowed up their cotton at 6 cents a pound because they knew that if they went on with the production of cotton they could not make it for less than 12 cents a pound. Therefore, so far as I am concerned, in order to get the bill passed and get something done, I am perfectly willing to put the price at 5 cents, if necessary, in order to get it through.

I desire to make a suggestion in this connection, and then I do not think I shall have anything more to say about the bill.

There is another bill on the calendar which I am going to seek to have considered and let it meet its fate. I think it would be very well if the Senator were to propose in this bill that the eleven and a half million bales of cotton should be used next year and the year following for the purpose of supplementing production. I am satisfied that the minute the trade is convinced that we have a fixed, definite policy regarding cotton, we shall see exports go right back to normal.

Members of the Liverpool delegation that represented the Manchester spinners were in my office 2 weeks ago. I asked them what was the cause of the decrease in exports. They said, "Why, it is because we do not know what you are going to do with your cotton." They said, "Do you think we would go in the market and buy cotton to the extent of eleven and a half or thirteen million bales, when some people say you are going to export your cotton at 2 cents under the market and others say you are going to hold it? We are not going to buy."

There is one point with reference to figures that I want to have go in the RECORD, so that those who are interested in this question may understand the facts.

Exports have decreased almost 50 percent this year, while the amount of American cotton consumed abroad is exactly equal to the amount so consumed last year. Why? Because the holders of American stocks in Europe are exhausting their ordinary carry-over supply, waiting for us to settle the question as to price. I invite any Senators who doubt that statement to go to the Bureau of Statistics in the Department of Commerce and get the figures from our Commissioner who has charge of the exchanges. It will be found that the amount of American cotton consumed in Europe during the first 6 months of this year is exactly equal to the corresponding amount last year. They are consuming their stocks, waiting for us to determine what we are going to do with the impounded cotton. There has been much loose talk about American cotton being out of all parity with the price of foreign cotton. American cotton sets the price for world cotton. If anyone has any doubt about that, let him investigate it.

When the pending bill was reported to the Senate with the other part unanimously, cotton went up more than $2 a bale, and Worth Street sold 60,000,000 yards of cotton cloth. The dealers thought the bill would pass and that the question of the disposition of the cotton would be settled. The minute there was talk about this export subsidy, immediately the market broke more than it had gained, and Worth Street is not selling a thing.

It seems to me that every Member of the Senate ought to know that until we fix upon some definite plan no one is going to buy cotton. When the other part of the bill comes before us, as I shall ask to have it considered, I want to go into this question. There is no "hocus" about it. We make 46 percent of all the cotton made in the world, and, therefore, we dominate the price.

I should like to see this surplus cotton held for 3 years, with the understanding that we will give the farmers the opportunity in 1939, 1940, and 1941 of substituting this cotton, or a percentage of it, in lieu of production, they to become the beneficiaries of the rising price which will certainly come about, and, if necessary, when the price shall rise, provide that the Government be the beneficiary of the extra price. In other words, suppose that as a result of substituting this cotton the price should go to 12 cents. That is the parity for which we are striving. If it went to 13, we would remit the extra cent to the Government.

The first thing for us to determine is, What is our policy; what are we going to do? I think the corn producers, the wheat producers, and those who produce other agricultural commodities might give us credit for good faith in trying to solve the problem. I thought I had some figures here in my desk which I wanted to present, but I do not find them. Suffice it to say that from 1917 to 1929 the actual value of American lint cotton averaged, for the 12 years, $1,480,000,000 a year, $800,000,000 of which was foreign money sent here for the purchase of American cotton. From 1932 to 1939 the average total income per year from the sale of American lint cotton was $489,000,000, showing a loss per year of a billion dollars, distributed amongst 6,000,000 producers. Those producers buy cheese and meat and flour from the West. Think of the shrinkage in the purchasing power when a billion dollars of income is lost.

Mr. President, this question should not be viewed as a local or sectional one. It is a national question, and we are trying to solve it, and I do not think we will ever solve it satisfactorily until we modify some of the laws which are already on the statute books.

I am willing to accept the 5-cent figure. In my original bill I placed the figure at 6 cents. I wish to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that when we put it at 6 cents a pound cotton was then down to 5 cents. Now it is at 8 cents.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SCHWARTZ in the chair). Does the Senator from South Carolina yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. SMITH. I yield.

Mr. McNARY. I think the Senator's statement is very fair, and I entertain a very high opinion of the judgment of those engaged in the cotton industry. It was in 1933 when there was provision for the cotton option contract, which was offered by the distinguished Senator from South Carolina. At that time 6 cents was agreed upon as the amount the farmer should pay to recapture, to repossess, the cotton which he had under a loan.

Mr. SMITH. That is correct.

Mr. McNARY. I am suggesting now that with cotton at 8 cents it is not fair to agriculture generally, to the producers of other crops, to permit the cotton to be repossessed at 3 cents. I am willing to cooperate, so far as I am concerned, one lone Senator, if the figure should be changed. I should like to propose an increase from 3 cents to 5 cents and a reduction of the 3,000,000 bales to 2,000,000, and with those changes I think the bill should pass.

Mr. BANKHEAD. How much cotton?

Mr. McNARY. Two million bales.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Let us raise the amount a little, if we are to raise the price so high. Would the Senator agree to 4,000,000 bales? I do not know that we could get an agreement on that, but it would help if the Senator would make that agreement.

Mr. McNARY. What is the use doing an idle thing which may bring opposition which should not be aroused? I am assuming that the Senator stated a fact when he said that a million bales of loan cotton is probably all that can be taken out this year. Why make it 4,000,000 and scare someone when only 1,000,000 can be taken out?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I state frankly that there is a difference of opinion. Some around me differ from me.

If the Senator is not willing to make it 4,000,000, I will agree to his proposal and make it 3,000,000.

Mr. McNARY. The Senator will agree to make it 3,000,000?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes; instead of 5,000,000.

Mr. McNARY. If the Senator will modify his proposal, I will offer the 5-cent proposal.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I will withdraw my amendment. It has not been adopted, and I will leave the figure at 3 cents.

Mr. McNARY. Will the Senator yield, that I may offer an amendment?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes; if the Senator from South Carolina will permit.

Mr. SMITH. I yield.

Mr. McNARY. I move that on page 7, line 3, the figure "3" be deleted and "5" be inserted in lieu thereof, so that it will read "at a price of 5 cents a pound." That phrase may occur at some other place in the bill; and if so, the amendment may be carried out by virtue of an understanding.

Mr. SMITH. Wherever in the bill the figure is "3" let us substitute "5."

Mr. BANKHEAD. Let us have the amendment agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LA FOLLETTE in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY] to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, when we took the bill up, I gave notice that I had two amendments which would be offered at the proper time, one reducing the quantity of cotton from 3,000,000 to 2,000,000 bales. That amendment has not been acted on; and on the advice of numerous associates on the floor of the Senate, I am agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Oregon; and I will not offer the amendment I gave notice I would present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is withdrawn. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment as amended.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, inasmuch as I have offered an amendment changing the price and it has been accepted, an amendment satisfactory to me, I should like to have a quorum called before the bill is finally passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In order that there may not be any misunderstanding, the Chair calls to the attention of the Senator from Alabama the fact that he offered two amendments.

Mr. BANKHEAD. One is to correct a clerical error.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 9, line 9, it is proposed to strike out the word "abolish" and insert in lieu thereof the word "apportion."

Mr. BANKHEAD. It is merely to correct a clerical error.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment to the amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Perhaps the Chair ought to state for the information of the Senate that when the committee amendment as amended shall have been agreed to, the bill will not be open to further amendment. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment as amended.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, the ruling of the Chair is that if the amendment shall be agreed to the bill will not be subject to further amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the understanding of the Chair, in the parliamentary situation.

Mr. McNARY. Then I think that in all fairness I should suggest the absence of a quorum, and I do so.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Barbour	Brown	Chavez
Andrews	Barkley	Bulow	Clark, Mo.
Ashurst	Bilbo	Burke	Connally
Austin	Bone	Byrnes	Danaher
Bankhead	Borah	Caraway	Davis

Donahey	Holman	Mead	Sheppard
Downey	Hughes	Miller	Shipstead
Ellender	Johnson, Calif.	Minton	Smathers
Frazier	Johnson, Colo.	Murray	Smith
George	King	Neely	Stewart
Gerry	La Follette	Norris	Taft
Gillette	Lee	Nye	Thomas, Okla.
Glass	Lewis	O'Mahoney	Thomas, Utah
Green	Lodge	Overton	Townsend
Guffey	Logan	Pepper	Tydings
Gurney	Lucas	Pittman	Vandenberg
Harrison	Lundeen	Radcliffe	Wagner
Hatch	McCarran	Reed	Wheeler
Hayden	McKellar	Russell	White
Herring	McNary	Schwartz	Wiley
Hill	Maloney	Schwellenbach

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-three Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment as amended.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, may the amendment to the amendment be stated?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is in the nature of a substitute, the Chair may say to the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. FRAZIER. I understood there was an amendment to the substitute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Certain amendments have been agreed to. But the question now recurs on the committee amendment as amended, which is in the nature of a substitute for the original bill.

Without objection, the committee amendment as amended is agreed to.

The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading and read the third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill having been read a third time, the question is, Shall the bill pass? [Putting the question.] The Chair is in doubt.

On a division the bill (S. 1514) was passed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. SMITH obtained the floor.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SMITH. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I wish to ask the Senator a question. It was understood that following action upon the Bankhead bill, the Brown reciprocal tax bill would be taken up. What is it the Senator from South Carolina desires to have considered?

Mr. SMITH. I should like to have the Senate consider part 2 of the bill reported by the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. That is Senate bill 1303. Part 1 of the bill has already been passed.

Mr. President, I ask that the bill be made the unfinished business. I do not care to discuss it this afternoon, because there are some necessary amendments to part 2 which must be made, and as it is an important bill I should like to have it made the unfinished business, and then to lie on the table until the amendments may be prepared.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SMITH. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator can get recognition at any time to move to take up his bill. I think it is bad legislative practice to make a bill the unfinished business and then leave it suspended here while other business is considered. I suppose I misunderstood the situation, but it was my understanding that if the Senator from Alabama got his bill up and action was taken on it, the Senator from South Carolina for the time being would not insist on taking up his bill.

I do not know how long it will take to dispose of the reciprocal tax bill, but it has been on the calendar for some time, and it was agreed last week that we would consider it today. However, the Bankhead bill was taken up for consideration, and everyone agreed that it might take precedence. The Senator from South Carolina will not lose any rights, as I understand, by not having his bill made the unfinished business. I do not think the Senate ought to adjourn at 2:30 p. m. simply by making the bill the unfinished business and then laying it aside temporarily. If the Senator from Michigan [Mr. BROWN] is ready to proceed with his reciprocal tax bill it might be disposed of this afternoon. I am not certain about that, but I wonder whether it would not be better legislative order to take up a measure and finish it and then take up some other measure. Unless there is some urgency about taking up part 2 of the bill, which might have been considered in one bill, as it was originally introduced, I think it should not be taken up at this time.

Mr. SMITH. The reason why I consented to the division was because of the necessity of getting early action if the farmers were going to substitute cotton in lieu of production. The other part of the bill is an attempt to get rid of the unfortunate loan feature. We have worked to try to bring about a condition so that the farmers would sell their cotton as it matured and receive whatever pay they were going to get—whatever the Senate agrees upon—at the time of the sale rather than putting it in a loan and pile up cotton. That is part 2.

I wanted the Senate to discuss what could be done in the way of parity payments. We started out with farm legislation 5 years ago, declaring that the farmer was entitled to parity. Cotton has never been within $20 a bale of parity. Corn has been around parity, and wheat has been around parity, but in all these years cotton has not been within 70 percent of parity.

With respect to the loan feature, lending the farmer so much, he would rather take that than to see the market go down. The result is that we are holding it there, hoping for a better price.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not want to get into a discussion of the merits of the bill. My mind is now dwelling upon the orderly legislative procedure. The Senator's bill originally contained practically the provisions which have been considered today in the Bankhead bill.

Mr. SMITH. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. And, in addition to that, part 2.

Mr. SMITH. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. What advantage is derived by splitting them up and passing them one at a time, when the Senator's original bill contained both provisions?

Mr. SMITH. The only advantage we thought was that perhaps there might be more difficulty with respect to part 2 than part 1.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SMITH. I yield.

Mr. McNARY. I was interested in the bill that has been passed, particularly after the adoption of my amendment increasing the price from 3 cents to 5 cents in order to dispose of the accumulated cotton. But the bill of the Senator from South Carolina deals with the cotton program for 1939, and the marketing year does not begin until September 1. So I can see no hurry.

Mr. SMITH. The reason I am trying to get some action is that a number of Senators, I understand, are meeting together—and I suppose they should know more about cotton than I do—in an effort to get some kind of an export-subsidy plan.

Mr. McNARY. I do not know about that. I am interested only in the growers of cotton, and not those who attempt to legislate for them. I say to the Senator that I hope he will not move to make his bill the unfinished business. I have not had time to study his bill. There is no immediate hurry about it. Let us go forward with the suggestion made by the Senator from Kentucky, the Senator's able leader, and take up the bill of the Senator from South Carolina a little later in the week. That is my suggestion to the Senator.

Mr. SMITH. Of course, Mr. President, I have got to do what the Senator says to do. For certain reasons any proposition advanced by me would not be very popular, I assume. However, let that pass. I shall attempt to have the bill considered immediately upon the passage of the bill referred to by the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is the tax bill.

Mr. SMITH. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. Very well.

Mr. McNARY. I thank the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. SMITH. I know the Senator wants me to—well, I will not say it. I have said too much already, perhaps. Now, however, it is understood that when the reciprocal tax measure shall have been disposed of, my bill will be taken up. The reciprocal tax bill, I presume, is the one which provides for giving State governments the right to tax Federal employees and gives the Federal Government the right to tax all State employees, taking the instrumentalities of a sovereign and all that. That is a fine bill. Yes; we are making progress. [Laughter.] With one or more grants we can do away with the States and legislate entirely from this august body and the one at the other end of the Capitol. I yield, Mr. President; but I serve notice that, with all the power I have, I am going to resist and vote against this palpable intrusion upon the fixed policy of our Government for 150 years.

I shall ask that my bill be taken up as soon as action is taken on the reciprocal tax measure.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, has the Senator from South Carolina completed his statement?

Mr. SMITH. I have.

Mr. BORAH. I want to ask the able Senator from Michigan [Mr. BROWN], who has charge of the bill, a question before the bill is taken up.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state the parliamentary situation. There is no motion or bill pending before the Senate at this time. Under the rule, there is nothing now before the Senate for debate.

RECIPROCAL TAXATION OF FEDERAL AND STATE OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES

Mr. BROWN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 3790, relating to the taxation of the compensation of public officers and employees.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be stated by title for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 3790) relating to the taxation of the compensation of public officers and employees.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion made by the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I wish to ask a question of the Senator in charge of the bill [Mr. BROWN]. As I read the bill, it deals with the question of salaries of the two sovereigns alone.

Mr. BROWN. Exactly. It does not go any further than that.

Mr. BORAH. Is it the intention of the Senator in charge of the bill, or of the committee, to offer amendments to include securities, and so forth?

Mr. BROWN. I will say to the Senator from Idaho that the committee did not authorize an amendment of that kind. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] has prepared an amendment covering taxation of State and Federal funds. As to whether or not he will offer that amendment, he can speak for himself. I do not know. I shall be very glad to yield to him for that purpose.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] has the floor.

Mr. BORAH. I yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I will say to the Senator from Idaho that it has been my intention to offer an amendment providing for the mutual taxation of State securities by the Federal Government and, if necessary—and I do not believe it is and never have so believed—granting permission to the States to tax Federal securities, so long as the taxation is not discriminatory. I propose to offer such an amendment to the bill, not because I do not realize that to consider a subject of such vast magnitude by way of amendment to another bill has many undesirable features, but because I have been for many years, at least ever since I have been a Member of the Senate, very anxious to bring about a consideration of that question, and because I am not willing to have the consideration of that very important question indefinitely postponed. Therefore, if that were the only way in which the matter could be brought before the Congress, I was perfectly willing and determined to offer the amendment to which I have referred, which I have had printed for the information of the Senate and also printed in the RECORD as an amendment to the bill.

I was not willing to wait until the closing days of the session, when another measure may be brought in, under whip and spur, to provide for the extension of the so-called nuisance taxes, at a time when it would be suggested that to precipitate any discussion on another question in connection with that bill might result in depriving the Government of hundreds of millions of dollars of necessary revenue for the extension of the nuisance taxes. However, Mr. President, since the matter has been under discusion, and since I presented my amendment for the purpose of having it printed and inserted in the RECORD, the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], the chairman of the Finance Committee, and I have conferred with members of the House Ways and Means Committee, and have been informed by them that the Ways and Means Committee has already decided to proceed immediately with the consideration of the matter of reciprocal taxation of incomes from securities. I should like to have the Senator from Mississippi listen to this statement. We received assurances that the matter would receive from the Ways and Means Committee the earliest consideration compatible with the importance of the question.

Mr. President, I recognize, as does everyone else, that the matter is one which should preferably originate in the House of Representatives. I recognize the desirability of having the matter considered by the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives, and having them undertake such hearings as they may consider desirable upon the subject. I realize further, of course, as does everyone else, that even if the amendment which I intended to propose were adopted, and the bill were sent back to the House, it would be inevitable that the Ways and Means Committee of the House would desire to have hearings on the subject.

Therefore, Mr. President, in view of the assurances which the chairman of the Finance Committee and I have received that the matter will be the subject of immediate consideration, and that the Congress in all probability will have the opportunity of passing on the subject at this session of Congress, and in view of the desirability of having the portion of the whole question covered by this measure cleared up at the earliest possible moment to avoid confusion in levying taxes, I have determined not to press the amendment I have had printed. However, I now give notice that unless the matter shall receive the attention and action of Congress in an independent bill, when any other tax bill comes before this body at the present session of Congress I shall offer my amendment.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, that is satisfactory to me; but, so far as we know, the sole question to be dealt with by taking up the bill is the question of salaries.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I concur in what the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] has said. When the proposed legislation was being considered in the Finance Committee, the Senator served notice that he intended to offer his amendment at this time. For that reason, in common with other members of the committee, I felt that the question was so important that it should have full consideration in a manner separate and distinct from the salary-tax bill.

The Senator from Missouri and I discussed the matter with the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DOUGHTON], chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DOUGHTON] is very much interested in bringing the matter up in an orderly way, and he gave us every assurance that it would be considered by his committee. He felt that it should be. The administration feels that it should be; and I have no doubt that the Ways and Means Committee will consider the proposal in an orderly manner. When it comes to the Senate, the Finance Committee will consider it and make its recommendations to the Senate. Personally I do not know whether we have the right to tax the interest or income from the future securities issued by States and municipalities by straight statute or whether it should be done by the passage and submission of a constitutional amendment. I imagine there are many Senators whose minds are not fully made up on this question.

The Senator will recall that at the previous session of Congress a resolution was adopted providing for a special committee of the Senate to study the question of the reciprocal taxation of governmental securities and salaries. That committee has been studying the securities tax question for several months. Except for a preliminary statement of its chairman [Mr. BROWN], it has made no report to the Finance Committee or to the Senate. I understand from the Senator from Michigan [Mr. BROWN] that the committee which was appointed is divided about 3 to 3. That fact indicates the strong difference of opinion existing as to the question of taxing the income from future State and municipal securities.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, our report to the Finance Committee dealt entirely with the public salary side of the controversy. It did not relate to the bond question at all. We did not attempt to give our views on the bond question. The Senator is correct in stating that we are divided approximately 3 to 3, as closely as I can estimate it, on the constitutionality of the proposal to tax State and municipal bonds through the income tax.

Mr. HARRISON. That is what I understood from the preliminary statement which the Senator made. However, as to the reciprocal salary tax bill, there was unanimity. All agree that it should be passed. So I am delighted to hear the Senator from Missouri say that he will not at this time press his amendment. I hope we can pass promptly the measure relating to the taxation of the salaries of Federal, State, and local employees under the reciprocal arrangement provided in the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. BROWN].

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I wish to bring another matter to the attention particularly of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] because it involves another possible amendment which might be offered to the bill which it is now proposed to consider.

The Senator is familiar with the fact that for some time I have been urging a change in the pay-roll tax schedule under title II of the Social Security Act. On March 13 I offered an amendment to the pending bill under which pay-roll taxes would be frozen at 2 percent, instead of increasing by 50 percent next year and 200 percent in the subsequent 6 years. I offered it as an amendment to this bill because it seemed to be the only opportunity I would have to bring the subject to an issue.

Since then the Treasury Department has yielded in respect to this phase of social security, and has indicated before the House Ways and Means Committee a willingness to accept a new program of social-security taxes, under which the pay-roll taxes may be frozen where they are. That is the precise objective to which the amendment 3 weeks previously was addressed.

Since the Treasury has changed its attitude subsequent to the offering of the amendment, and since the whole subject matter has been opened before the House Ways and Means Committee, I concede that the orderly process would be for me not to press my amendment to the pending bill, but to await the action of the House upon a change in the social-security taxes, provided we are to have a subsequent opportunity to consider the matter. I submit to the Senator from Mississippi this question: Is it his understanding that the House intends to act upon social-security taxation, and that the Senate subsequently will have a similar opportunity to act?

Mr. HARRISON. Most assuredly so. The Committee on Ways and Means will without doubt report a bill carrying substantially the suggestion which the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] has made, and in which he has been so persistent. When that bill comes to the Senate, with other amendments affecting the Social Security Act, the Committee on Finance will take it up and report it to the Senate with its recommendations. So, the Senate will have an opportunity to vote on the question. I doubt if there will be very much division on the question. I might say, while I have the floor, that I hope other Senators will not offer amendments which will bring about lengthy discussion or which might delay the salary tax bill so that we may pass this very important legislation with speed in order that our friend from South Carolina may obtain consideration for his cotton bill.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, in view of the statement of the Senator from Mississippi, I think the orderly process is not to press the amendment which I have offered and which has been printed. Therefore I shall not do so. However, I wish to reassert my belief that the most important single tax encouragement that Congress can give to business is to freeze pay-roll taxes under title II of the Social Security Act where they are for the present, and thus at least save the business structure of the country a 50-percent tax increase in this particular item next January.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. BROWN] that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 3790.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3790) relating to the taxation of the compensation of public officers and employees, which had been reported from the Committee on Finance, with amendments.

The first amendment of the Committee on Finance was, under title I, in section 1, page 1, line 6, after "section 1", to strike out "(a) section 22 (a) of the Revenue Act of 1938" and insert in lieu thereof "section 22 (a) of the Internal Revenue Code", and on page 2, line 3, to strike out "(b) The amendment made by this section shall apply only to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1938", so as to make the section read:

SECTION 1. Section 22 (a) of the Internal Revenue Code (relating to the definition of "gross income") is amended by inserting after the words "compensation for personal service" the following: "(including personal service as an officer or employee of a State, or any political subdivision thereof, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing)."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under title I, in section 2, page 2, line 5, after "Sec. 2", to strike out "Section 116 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1938 (exempting compensation of teachers in Alaska and Hawaii from income tax) shall not apply to any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1938", and insert in lieu thereof "Section 116 (b) of the Internal Revenue Code (exempting compensation of teachers in Alaska and Hawaii from income tax) is repealed", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 2. Section 116 (b) of the Internal Revenue Code (exempting compensation of teachers in Alaska and Hawaii from income tax) is repealed.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I wish to ask the Senator from Michigan [Mr. BROWN] whether or not he desires to proceed with the consideration of the bill at the present time. My inquiry is prompted by the fact that for several days we have been postponing holding an executive session for the consideration of nominations on the Executive Calendar, one of which is the nomination of Mr. Douglas to be a member of the Supreme Court. I do not know how much debate there will be on that nomination, or whether there will be any debate. However, if there is to be lengthy debate, we ought to begin the consideration of the nomination at an hour sufficiently early to dispose of it today, if possible.

Unless the Senator is anxious to proceed now with the consideration of the bill, I suggest to him that we go into executive session and consider nominations on the Executive Calendar, including the nomination referred to, with the understanding that if there is no debate upon it, and it is confirmed as a matter of routine, we can then resume legislative session and proceed with the consideration of the bill.

Mr. BROWN. I am agreeable to whatever the majority leader wishes to do in that respect.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. HARRISON. If no amendments that will provoke great discussion are to be offered to the bill, why would it not be better to dispose of it this afternoon?

Mr. BARKLEY. It would be, except that in my judgment we ought not to go beyond today in the consideration of the Executive Calendar. If we are to have a couple of hours' debate on any nomination, we ought to be able to go into executive session early enough to dispose of it. If there is to be no debate on the bill, and no controversy about it, I have no objection to disposing of it. However, we cannot assume that there is no controversy.

Mr. BROWN. Suppose we proceed for half an hour, and if we have not passed the bill by that time we can go into executive session.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is satisfactory.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment on page 2, line 5.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I am not familiar with the amendment, but that is not of any particular importance. The able Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN] is interested in the bill and the amendments. Because of his absence, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Downey	Lee	Radcliffe
Andrews	Ellender	Lewis	Reed
Ashurst	Frazier	Lodge	Russell
Austin	George	Logan	Schwartz
Bankhead	Gerry	Lucas	Schwellenbach
Barbour	Gillette	Lundeen	Sheppard
Barkley	Glass	McCarran	Shipstead
Bilbo	Green	McKellar	Smathers
Bone	Guffey	McNary	Smith
Borah	Gurney	Maloney	Stewart
Brown	Harrison	Mead	Taft
Bulow	Hatch	Miller	Thomas, Okla.
Burke	Hayden	Minton	Thomas, Utah
Byrnes	Herring	Murray	Townsend
Caraway	Hill	Neely	Tydings
Chavez	Holman	Norris	Vandenberg
Clark, Mo.	Hughes	Nye	Wagner
Connally	Johnson, Calif.	O'Mahoney	Wheeler
Danaher	Johnson, Colo.	Overton	White
Davis	King	Pepper	Wiley
Donahey	La Follette	Pittman

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-three Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The next amendment reported by the committee will be stated.

The next amendment was, in section 206, on page 5, line 23, after the word "in", to strike out "title I of the Revenue Act of 1938" and insert "chapter I of the Internal Revenue Code", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 206. The terms used in this act shall have the same meaning as when used in chapter I of the Internal Revenue Code.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is before the Senate and open to further amendment.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, there is at the clerk's desk a committee amendment which I ask to have stated. I have a copy of it here.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 6, after line 3, it is proposed to insert:

SEC. 208. No collection of any tax (including interest, additions to tax, and penalties) imposed by any State or local taxing authority on the compensation, received before January 1, 1939, for personal service as an officer or employee of the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof (except a corporate agency or instrumentality the majority of the stock of which is not owned by or on behalf of the United States) shall be made after the date of the enactment of this act.

SEC. 209. This title shall not apply with respect to any officer or employee of a State, or any political subdivision thereof, or any agency or instrumentality of any one or more of the foregoing, after the Secretary of the Treasury has determined and proclaimed that it is the policy of such State to collect from any individual any tax, interest, additions to tax, or penalties, on account of compensation received by such individual prior to January 1, 1939, for personal service as an officer or employee of the United States or any agency or instrumentality thereof. In making such determination the Secretary of the Treasury shall disregard the taxation of officers and employees of any corporate agency or instrumentality the majority of the stock of which is not owned by or on behalf of the United States.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, I think I should make a brief explanation of the amendment. It is a committee amendment which has been approved by the Finance Committee. It came about because of the recent decision in the O'Keefe case by the Supreme Court a week ago today. It provides, in substance, that Federal officials shall be immune from State income taxation prior to January 1, 1939.

In the O'Keefe case the constitutionality of a provision of that kind was left as the Court said to another day. In order to make certain that the reciprocal tax arrangements we are endeavoring to establish by the bill between State taxation of Federal officials and Federal taxation of State officials shall be effective, we have added a second section, 209, which provides, in substance, that all State officials shall be immune from Federal taxation prior to January 1, 1939, and that all Federal officials shall be immune from State taxation prior to January 1 of this year. It further provides that if any State attempts to impose a tax upon the salary income derived from Government by Federal officials and Federal employees prior to January 1, 1939, then the Federal Government does not consent to the elimination of Federal taxation on officials of such a State prior to that date.

If I have not made that matter clear, I shall be glad to have any Senator ask me about it. The amendment carries out the reciprocal exemption and applies it to all taxes levied before January 1, 1939. As to all taxes, State and Federal, after January 1, 1939, there is no such immunity. All such officials and employees are subject to the taxing authority.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. BROWN. I yield to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. BORAH. Am I to understand that the committee was unanimous on this matter?

Mr. BROWN. Yes; there was no dissenting vote.

Mr. KING. With respect to the amendment.

Mr. BROWN. Yes; with respect to the amendment submitted. The committee was not unanimous in reporting the original bill. The vote on reporting it was 14 to 3, as I recall.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, in this long amendment we are dealing with a rather delicate subject. Would it be out of order to ask, under the circumstances, that the bill go over until tomorrow?

Mr. BROWN. No; I have no objection whatever to that.

Mr. BORAH. I am frank to say that I do not know the exact purport of the amendment. The Senator has explained it as carrying out the reciprocal feature embodied in the bill.

Mr. BROWN. I may say to the Senator, very briefly, that the purpose of the original bill was to enable the States to tax Federal officials and employees after January 1, 1939, and to permit the Federal Government to tax State officials and employees after January 1, 1939. The decision in the O'Keefe case came last Monday. This amendment is necessary to clear up the situation which arose by reason of that case, and to make it certain—and that is all it does—that no retroactive taxes shall be imposed by either taxing authority, by the Federal Government against State officials and employees or by the State governments against Federal officials and employees. This amendment is necessary to make that condition certain.

Mr. BORAH. The sole effect of the amendment, as I understand, is to do away with retroactive taxes.

Mr. BROWN. That is correct.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President——

Mr. BROWN. I yield to the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. If I correctly understand the Senator, there is a further provision; namely, that if any State does impose retroactive taxes on Federal officials, then, in return, the officials of that State will not be immune from retroactive Federal taxes.

Mr. BROWN. That is correct.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator a question.

Mr. BROWN. I yield to the Senator from Florida.

Mr. ANDREWS. The Constitution, in section 1 of article III, provides that—

> The judges, both of the Supreme and inferior courts, shall hold their offices during good behavior, and shall, at stated times, receive for their services a compensation which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office.

Does this bill affect the salaries of Justices of the Supreme Court?

Mr. BROWN. The pending amendment does not affect the salaries of judges. However, I have offered an amendment which imposes the income tax on the salaries of all Federal judges. I should prefer to have the Senator wait until that amendment is pending before asking his question.

Mr. ANDREWS. Certainly.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BROWN. I yield to the Senator from Texas.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator's amendment relating to the salaries of judges, however, applies only to the Federal tax. At the proper time I propose to offer an amendment to section 3 providing that the States may tax the salaries of Federal judges just as they tax the salaries of other Federal officers. If it is sound for the Federal Government to tax the salaries of judges, and if it is sound for the States also to tax the salaries of all other Federal officials, why should not the States tax the salaries of Federal judges?

Mr. BROWN. I agree with the Senator that they should be taxed. I will say, however, that both propositions raise legal and constitutional questions which are not present in the pending amendment. It is our intention to permit State taxation of the salary of Federal judges by this bill.

Mr. CONNALLY. To be sure.

Mr. BROWN. I wish we could dispose of the pending amendment, to which I think there is no material objection, and then take up the judgeship amendment tomorrow, when we shall have disposed of the nominations on the Executive Calendar.

Mr. CONNALLY. I will say to the Senator that I have never agreed to the doctrine announced by the Court, which held that a nondiscriminatory tax on a judge's salary was a diminution of the salary within the meaning of the Constitution. Since the Supreme Court now has come around to that theory as to everybody else, I see no reason why it should not be included, because if a nondiscriminatory tax is not a burden on a State official, it ought not to be a burden on a Federal judge.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Michigan.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, I send to the desk another perfecting amendment, which I ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 5, lines 10 and 11, after the words "doctrines in", it is proposed to strike out "the case of Helvering against Gerhardt (304 U. S. 405)" and insert "the cases of Helvering against Therrell (303 U. S. 218), Helvering against Gerhardt (304 U. S. 405), and Graves et al. against New York ex rel. O'Keefe, decided March 27, 1939."

Mr. KING. Mr. President, what is the purpose of inserting the names of cases in the Supreme Court?

Mr. BROWN. If the Senator will take his copy of the bill and look at page 5, lines 10, 11, and 12, I think he will better understand what I am about to say. Under the decisions in the cases there named, certain State employees under the practice have been heretofore taxed, such as employees of State liquor stores and employees of the New York State Port Authority; and the drafting service knew of no better way to cover that situation than by referring to the doctrines in those cases. We merely add the names of the two recent cases which were decided last week, so that they may be brought under the general provisions of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Michigan.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, I now offer the amendment relating to the salaries of Federal judges; and, in view of the attitude of some Members of the Senate, perhaps it would be just as well to lay the bill aside now, and take it up tomorrow, after the completion of the routine morning business.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the Senator might have his amendment read.

Mr. BROWN. I ask to have the amendment read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 2, after line 10, it is proposed to insert the following:

> SEC. 3. Section 22 (a) of the Internal Revenue Code is amended by adding at the end thereof a new sentence to read as follows:
> "In the case of judges of courts of the United States who took office on or before June 6, 1932, the compensation received as such shall be included in gross income."

On page 6, after line 3, it is proposed to insert the following:

> SEC. 210. In the case of the judges of the Supreme Court and of the inferior courts of the United States created under article 3 of the Constitution, who took office on or before June 6, 1932, the compensation received as such shall not be subject to income tax under the Revenue Act of 1938 or any prior revenue act.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, I should like to amend the numbering of the second section so that it would be section 210 instead of section 208, because of the inclusion of a section 208 heretofore.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment to the pending bill, which I ask to have printed and to lie on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be received and printed, and will lie on the table.

CONSOLIDATION OF BANK EXAMINING AGENCIES

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, earlier this afternoon I introduced Senate bill 2045, to consolidate the bank examining agencies of the United States by placing the examining division of the Federal Reserve Board and the office of the Comptroller of the Currency under the control of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. That is a reorganization which cannot be undertaken by the President under the reorganization measure we recently passed, because the Federal Reserve Board was included in the excepted agencies of the Government.

For many years I have thought that this was a desirable reform, and, after consultation with the chairman of the committee having charge of reorganization legislation, I decided to introduce the bill to which I have referred. It will not in any way or manner interfere with the President's reorganizing authority; it goes into a field which he cannot touch under the exceptions provided in the bill we passed last week.

I have prepared a brief summary of the provisions of the bill, and ask that it be printed in the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the summary presented by Mr. BROWN was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

> The general purpose of the bill is to consolidate the bank examining departments of the Government into one agency. The subject matter has been discussed generally for many years and particularly in the Senate and House Banking Committees. Extensive discussion of the subject appears in the House hearings on the Banking Act of 1935, particularly at pages 107, 389, 690, et seq. The views of Mr. Crowley, of the F. D. I. C., of Mr. Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board, and of Mr. O'Connor, the then Comptroller of the Currency, are there set forth. It is fair to say that there was quite general agreement that a consolidation of the banking agencies was desirable. Which agency would perform the function was a question of considerable debate, and the gentlemen who testified were, naturally, averse to expressing an opinion because of the effect on their respective organizations. At the present time the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation is the only all-inclusive banking agency of the Federal Government. It is concerned with national banks, member banks of the Federal Reserve System, and State nonmember banks of the Federal Reserve System. Its principal function is to guarantee the deposits in all of these banks. This, necessarily, requires examination by the Corporation and supervision of all banks. For this reason the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation is deemed to be the logical organization in which to vest the examining power.

The Comptroller's Office has had the longest experience, it has the largest personnel, and probably is the best equipped agency to handle examinations. Therefore, the bill attempts to hold its personnel intact and transfer it to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, making it the foundation upon which will be built, it is hoped, a unified examining agency which will at once eliminate duplication of organization and in time result in reduction of personnel and should result immediately in considerable reduction of expense.

The bill transfers the bank examining function of the Federal Reserve Board and banks and the bank examining function of the Comptroller's Office to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Inasmuch as this leaves the Comptroller with very little to do in connection with banks, the question of the transfer of his other functions with respect to closed banks and the chartering power is also disposed of by transfer to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Section (1) sets out the title of the act, which is an amendment of section (12) (b) of the Federal Reserve Act which we have designated as section (12) (c).

Section (a) sets forth certain definitions.

Section (b) transfers the examining functions of the Federal Reserve System and the Comptroller of the Currency to the F. D. I. C. It also makes it the duty of the Corporation to cooperate with State bank examiners for the purpose of eliminating duplication of examinations so far as practicable.

Section (c) transfers all other functions exercised by the Comptroller with respect to open and closed banks of the Corporation.

Sections (d), (e), (f), and (g) are technical. They relate to the application of existing provisions of law, orders, rules, and regulations of the Board; the commencement of suits, the substitution of parties, and the making of regulations.

Section (h) transfers the personnel of the examining divisions of the bureau and of the Federal Reserve Board to the Corporation and preserves the pension and annuity rights that have arisen thereunder to the individuals concerned.

Section (i) transfers the funds which have been assessed and collected for the purpose of paying for examinations and for the pension system.

Section (j) directs the Corporation to consolidate the various branch offices from which examinations are conducted.

Section (k) transfers the power of the Comptroller to assess for expenses of examinations to the Corporation.

Section (l) provides for the furnishing of reports by the Corporation to the Comptroller and the Federal Reserve Board.

Sections (m) and (n) are technical. They preserve the existing status of duties to be performed by the Comptroller and Board of Governors, but require the performance thereof by the Corporation.

Section (o) continues the Comptroller as a Director of the F. D. I. C. until the expiration of his term of office.

Sections (p) and (q) are technical provisions relative to the transfer of appropriations and of functions.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate proceed to consider executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LA FOLLETTE in the chair) laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. HUGHES, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of Wiley Blount Rutledge, Jr., of Iowa, to be an associate justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, to fill a position created by the act of Congress of May 31, 1938.

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of several postmasters.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The reports will be placed on the Executive Calendar.

If there are no further reports of committee, the nomination passed over will be stated.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICE, SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

The legislative clerk read the nomination of William O. Douglas, of Connecticut, to be Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if there is to be any debate on this nomination, I suggest that it be passed over until we conclude the calendar, and that we then take it up separately.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the nomination will be passed over.

CUSTOMS SERVICE

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the Customs Service.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations in the Customs Service are confirmed en bloc.

UNITED STATES PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Filip C. Forsbeck to be surgeon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

COMPTROLLER GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Fred H. Brown, of New Hampshire, to be Comptroller General for a term of 15 years.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask unanimous consent that the postoffice nominations be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the postoffice nominations are confirmed en bloc.

IN THE ARMY

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the Army.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations in the Army are confirmed en bloc.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I ask that the President be immediately notified of the confirmation of the nomination of Francis Vincent Logan to be brigadier general, National Guard of the United States.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the President will be notified.

FLORENCE CLARKE LYNCH

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I inquire whether the nomination of Florence Clarke Lynch, of New York, to be appraiser of merchandise in customs collection district No. 10, with headquarters at New York, N. Y., has been considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The nomination has been confirmed.

Mr. KING. I received some information this morning which justifies me in asking that this nomination go over until I can ascertain the correctness of the information. I ask unanimous consent that the vote by which the nomination was confirmed be reconsidered.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I should like to have the motion go over until the Senators from New York can be on the floor.

Mr. BARKLEY. The junior Senator from New York [Mr. MEAD] is on the floor at the present time.

Mr. KING. I may say to the Senator from New York that I have asked that the vote by which the nomination of Florence Clarke Lynch was confirmed be reconsidered, in view of information which came to my office this morning, and that the nomination go over until tomorrow, in order that I may make inquiry as to the validity of the statements which have been made.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the vote whereby the nomination was confirmed is reconsidered, and the nomination will remain on the Executive Calendar.

The clerk will now state the nomination passed over.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICE, SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

The legislative clerk read the nomination of William O. Douglas, of Connecticut, to be Associate Justice, Supreme Court of the United States.

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Downey	Lee	Radcliffe
Andrews	Ellender	Lewis	Reed
Ashurst	Frazier	Lodge	Russell
Austin	George	Logan	Schwartz
Bankhead	Gerry	Lucas	Schwellenbach
Barbour	Gillette	Lundeen	Sheppard
Barkley	Glass	McCarran	Shipstead
Bilbo	Green	McKellar	Smathers
Bone	Guffey	McNary	Smith
Borah	Gurney	Maloney	Stewart
Brown	Harrison	Mead	Taft
Bulow	Hatch	Miller	Thomas, Okla.
Burke	Hayden	Minton	Thomas, Utah
Byrnes	Herring	Murray	Townsend
Caraway	Hill	Neely	Tydings
Chavez	Holman	Norris	Vandenberg
Clark, Mo.	Hughes	Nye	Wagner
Connally	Johnson, Calif.	O'Mahoney	Wheeler
Danaher	Johnson, Colo.	Overton	White
Davis	King	Pepper	Wiley
Donahey	La Follette	Pittman

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-three Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of William O. Douglas to be Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States?

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, a few days ago some communications came to me calling attention to various newspaper articles in regard to the nomination of Mr. Douglas to be an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. I took occasion to look into the matter and sent to the Library for the newspapers referred to, and have found that the charges made seem to be substantiated in the newspaper reports.

It seems that during the past several months—in fact, since Mr. Martin became president of the New York Stock Exchange—Mr. Douglas has been very intimate with him; that they have held conferences and have collaborated a great deal.

It seems also that after Mr. Douglas was being considered as a probable appointee to the Supreme Court, on the 15th of March, Mr. Douglas took occasion to give out an interview which severely criticized the New York Stock Exchange. Then his name was sent to the Senate for confirmation as an Associate Justice on the Supreme Court.

A little later on, after the committee had reported the nomination favorably for the Executive Calendar, an interview appeared, on the 28th of March, which was printed in the New York Times on the 29th of March, in which Mr. Douglas seems to have practically repudiated what he stated about the New York Stock Exchange on the 15th of March. In fact, he seems to have changed his mind entirely and turned about face and complimented the exchange and agreed to work with it, and stated that the Security and Exchange Act needed no amendment at the present time. I have the newspapers here and will refer to the statements later on.

Some questions naturally arise as to why Mr. Douglas was so deluded by the New York Stock Echange for 10 months that he praised it to the country as a reform organization until March 15, 1939, when he publicly denounced it as attempting to put over on the country what he termed "phony" amendments to the stock exchange regulatory act.

There seems to have been a sudden about face by Mr. Douglas, after his friends had been pushing his name for the Supreme Court for several weeks, and this had led to sharp criticism that Douglas, instead of being a reformer in finance, was naively sacrificing the public interest by his dealings with the stock exchange. Was Mr. Douglas' terrific attack on the exchange of March 15, 1939, a mere coincidence, or did it have any relation to the effort to get him nominated to the Court and to the criticism of Douglas for his fraternization with the New York Stock Exchange?

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, what did he say about the New York Stock Exchange on March 15? I should like to hear what he had to say.

Mr. FRAZIER. I shall be glad to refer to the article during the course of my remarks. I am having the papers sent to the Senate from my office.

In May 1938 Mr. William Martin was elected chairman of the board of the New York Stock Exchange, and in July 1938 he was selected as the first paid president of that exchange.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, what was the date? I did not catch the date.

Mr. FRAZIER. He was made president in May 1938 and in July 1938 was elected as the first paid president of the exchange. An article in the New York Times intimates that Mr. Martin was really Mr. Douglas' creation or selection.

From the time Martin became head of the exchange, Douglas issued one public statement after another and one public interview after another giving full support to Martin, praising him as a reformer, and offering the fullest cooperation of the Securities and Exchange Commission with the stock exchange under Martin's administration.

What would be thought of the chairman of a State or Federal board which regulates railroads or power companies if, on the election of a president of a railroad or of a public-utility company, the head of the Government regulating body gave his public benediction to the new executive as a reformer and pledged support to that new executive?

This program continued for 10 months. In fact, in November 1938, when the Securities and Exchange Commission published a report severely condemning the stock exchange for what had been shown up in the investigation of Richard Whitney, a paragraph was added at the end to absolve the stock exchange under Martin's administration and to make it clear that with the coming of Martin's administration a new day had dawned on the stock exchange and a new spirit of reform had come into its affairs. In December 1938 President Hutchins, of the University of Chicago, a friend of Mr. Douglas who had gone on the governing body of the New York Stock Exchange as a so-called representative of the public, resigned because the governing body refused to take any action as a result of disclosures made in the investigation of the Richard Whitney matter. What happened was that after the disclosure of the disgraceful goings on in the New York Stock Exchange, Hutchins thought something ought to be done by this "reform" administration. But every member of the reform administration of the stock exchange, except Hutchins, voted Hutchins' motion down.

Mr. Douglas was promptly interviewed. He said that the Washington-New York "axis"—and I may say that Mr. Douglas in several instances in newspaper reports makes reference to an axis being formed between the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington and the New York Stock Exchange. I do not know just what he meant by the term "axis," but it has been used a great deal and was used again in this case. Mr. Douglas, as I said, was promptly interviewed. He said that the Washington-New York "axis" between the Securities and Exchange Commission and the New York Stock Exchange would continue untouched. The following is a statement by Arthur Krock as published in the New York Times, December 27, 1938:

> "Instead of going off its gears", said Mr. Douglas, "the axis has withstood its first shock perfectly. For the S. E. C. as for the exchange the Whitney case is closed. From it we both have learned something."

Mr. Douglas does not say what they had learned. Perhaps it was that it does not pay for officials of the New York Stock Exchange to embezzle a great deal of money that had been entrusted to them and then get caught. Senators remember that Mr. Whitney was sentenced to the Federal penitentiary for 5 years for embezzling several hundred thousand dollars which had been entrusted to him.

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FRAZIER. I yield.

Mr. MALONEY. The Senator, of course, understands that it was wholly as the result of the activities of Mr. Douglas and the Securities and Exchange Commission that Mr. Whitney was prosecuted and sent to prison.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. Whitney was not prosecuted until these embezzlements had been going on for months, and until officials knew about it, until his brother was called in and put up money for him, as did others, and then they tried to quiet it up, and in the meantime Richard Whitney embezzled more money.

Mr. MALONEY. Yes; but it was entirely under the direction and jurisdiction of Mr. Douglas that the prosecution took place.

Mr. FRAZIER. Yes, certainly.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FRAZIER. I yield.

Mr. HATCH. The Senator says the officials knew about these embezzlements having gone on over a period of years.

Mr. FRAZIER. No, Mr. President; for months.

Mr. MALONEY. To what officials does the Senator refer?

Mr. FRAZIER. The officials of the New York Stock Exchange.

Mr. MALONEY. The officials of the New York Stock Exchange. That is what I wanted to make clear.

Mr. FRAZIER. Yes.

Mr. MALONEY. The Senator does not charge that the officials of the Securities and Exchange Commission knew about the situation?

Mr. FRAZIER. No. I do not know how long the officials of the S. E. C. knew about it, but it was known for a long time in New York. At any rate, President Hutchins, who was put on the board as a representative of the public, thought there should be some further investigation, because, according to reports, some members and officials of the New York Stock Exchange knew what this man Whitney was doing, and apparently had something to do with it. He offered a motion before the board to have a further investigation made, but the motion was rejected. He was the only man who voted in favor of that motion, and because it was not adopted he gave notice that he would resign. I shall read his letter later.

Mr. MALONEY. Of course, the Senator is not trying to make a point that there was any connection between the Securities and Exchange Commission or Mr. Douglas and Wall Street, is he?

Mr. FRAZIER. I will read the statement of Commissioner Douglas again. It was made after Dr. Hutchins had resigned. I first repeat my previous statement. Mr. Douglas was promptly interviewed. He said that the Washington-New York axis between the Securities and Exchange Commission and the New York Stock Exchange would continue untouched. The following is a statement by Arthur Krock as published in the New York Times December 27, 1938. This is what Mr. Krock said, and, according to all newspaper reports, Mr. Krock was apparently a very close friend of Mr. Douglas and likewise of the president of the University of Chicago:

"Instead of going off its gears," said Mr. Douglas, "the axis has withstood its first shock perfectly. For the S. E. C. as for the exchange the Whitney case is closed. From it we both have learned something."

In other words, Mr. Douglas was not interested in Dr. Hutchins' theory that there should be further investigation made, and Dr. Hutchins resigned because they would not take any further action. Mr. Douglas apparently was not interested. So Dr. Hutchins resigned.

Mr. MALONEY. That is not what I gathered from the article. The Senator, of course, has complete liberty to read into it or get from it what he chooses, but that is not my interpretation.

Mr. FRAZIER. I will read the letter of Dr. Hutchins later. The Senator can draw his own conclusion from that, of course.

The second paragraph of the article by Mr. Krock in the New York Times of December 27, is as follows:

When these statements were repeated to Mr. Martin on the long-distance telephone—

He was in St. Louis—

He said to this correspondent they represented his own views entirely and accurately. On this inspection record it seems proper to chalk up on the axis an emphatic O. K.

That was the statement by the New York Times reporter, Mr. Krock.

Justice Brandeis retired from the Supreme Court early in February. Immediately efforts were begun to have Douglas nominated to the Supreme Court. Two or three weeks thereafter, Douglas' so-called liberalism was severely attacked in various quarters as not being of the kind that would stand scrutiny. It was not claimed that Douglas was dishonest, it was merely claimed that he was the kind of man who can be misled. His liberalism, for example, was questioned in The Nation, a liberal periodical, and principally on the ground of his relation to the New York Stock Exchange.

At the close of the day on March 14, 1939, representatives of the New York Stock Exchange and of smaller exchanges throughout the country submitted to Douglas proposals for amendments of the Stock Exchange Act of 1934. The following day, less than 24 hours after these proposals were submitted to him, Douglas issued a public statement on behalf of the Securities and Exchange Commission castigating these proposals in the most severe terms and warning the country that these proposals would carry us back to the evil days of the past, and ringing the alarm against the detestable efforts made by the exchanges. He added an oral interview in which he called the proposals submitted by the exchanges "phony."

The very least that must be said in the light of these incidents is that Douglas had for 10 months been backing the stock exchange, fraternizing with it, praising it publicly, and at the end of the 10 months delivered a verbal diatribe against proposals submitted by the exchanges. Implicit in this diatribe is a confession by Douglas that he was wrong, dead wrong, for 10 months in selling to the country at large the idea that the New York Stock Exchange was a reform administration, and in implying in consequence that this reform stock exchange was a safe place to which the country should bring its money again, in spite of the hard-earned lessons of the past.

Douglas' vigorous attack was on Wednesday, March 15, 5 days before his name was sent to the Senate for the Supreme Court. How did Douglas come to learn of the evil proposals of the exchanges so late in the day?

In November 1938 the New York Stock Exchange called the smaller exchanges of the country to conferences on various matters. At that time, or perhaps earlier, was developed the idea of seeking amendments to the Stock Exchange Act. Douglas and Martin had repeatedly said in previous months, and stated in subsequent months, that they were in constant communication with each other and were solving all problems possible around the conference table. Is it possible that for 5 months the efforts of the New York Stock Exchange and all these conferences with the smaller exchanges of the United States were kept secret by Martin, and especially secret from Douglas, with whom Martin was supposed to be in almost daily communication?

It was announced in the newspapers, at least 2 weeks before the stock exchanges submitted their proposals to Douglas on March 14, that they were going to make such proposals and, in particular, were going to propose an amendment on the point on which Douglas' public statement of March 15 was most severe, and to which Douglas in that statement gave the greatest space. All that Douglas and the Securities and Exchange Commission had to do was to read the newspapers, even if Martin had tried to keep these items secret.

Is it conceivable that Douglas, engaged in close and intimate communication with Martin and the New York Stock Exchange, passed no word to the exchanges that he thought that the proposals on which they were working were "phony" and subject to the most severe castigation? If the stock exchanges were warned by Douglas, is it conceivable that they would have come to Washington for a 2-day conference on March 13 and 14, 1939, would have stuck out their necks so far, knowing that those necks would immediately be cut off by the blade of Douglas' moral indignation?

Mr. BARKLEY. Does the Senator know what operations were referred to in the newspaper article in which Mr. Douglas was quoted as having said they were "phony"?

Mr. FRAZIER. Yes; I have that article.

Mr. BARKLEY. I say, Does the Senator know what operations were conducted by the stock exchange which Mr. Douglas was quoted as having referred to as "phony"?

Mr. FRAZIER. Yes; I have those, too. Some changes had been proposed in the regulations or in the law in regard to short selling, and so forth. I do not remember just what they were, but, at any rate, the stock exchange seemed to be in favor of the changes.

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FRAZIER. I yield.

Mr. MALONEY. I remember very clearly that Mr. Douglas' answer to the suggestions was quite contrary to the wishes of the stock exchange. Does the Senator recall that?

Mr. FRAZIER. That was on March 15.

Mr. MALONEY. Yes.

Mr. FRAZIER. Yes; that is true. What seemed strange to me, however, was that he did not make any objection in the 5 months prior to that time, when the stock exchange was considering the changes.

Mr. MALONEY. Until the proposed changes were submitted it was hardly appropriate for him to make objections.

Mr. FRAZIER. Of course, but still the intimation had gone out that he was very close to Mr. Martin all those months and that they were working together.

It seems very plain that there must be some indication in the communications between the New York Stock Exchange and the smaller exchanges in the period from November 1938 to March 1939, and there must be something in the way of memoranda recording conversations between various of the men active in the negotiations leading up to the proposals made on March 14, 1939, that would show whether any assurances were given to the stock exchanges, or any sympathetic utterances—utterances that run 100 percent contrary to the violent attack on the stock exchange proposals made by Douglas on March 15, 1939.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President——

Mr. FRAZIER. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. Does the Senator know whether or not one of the proposals which was put up to the Commission for its approval or rejection was that the margin requirements on the New York Stock Exchange should be reduced from 40 percent to 25 percent?

Mr. FRAZIER. I do not remember that particular proposal; but there were some suggested changes along that line.

How is it that various financial writers in the New York press and elsewhere carried intimations for days before the stock exchange conference of March 13 that it was understood their proposals were going to have a sympathetic hearing from the Securities and Exchange Commission and from Douglas? In none of the many news reports in the New York financial press which preceded the conferences and which reported what was going on at the conferences was there the slightest intimation that the Securities and Exchange Commission or Douglas would give the exchanges the severest tongue lashing any responsible Government official has directed at them in years.

That, Mr. President, seems to be the strange situation of the case. Mr. Douglas and Mr. Martin had been getting along very nicely for about 10 months; and during the last 4 or 5 months, up to their meeting in Washington on the 13th or 14th of March, the exchange had been considering these changes. Mr. Douglas must have known what they were. Being such a close friend of Mr. Martin—as the newspapers indicated, he was Mr. Martin's preference for president of the stock exchange of New York—it would naturally seem that Mr. Douglas would give Mr. Martin some advice on the matter if he was so bitterly opposed to the changes suggested. However, nothing was said, apparently, until the 15th of March.

Some further questions naturally arise.

Why was it that Mr. Douglas did not much earlier call to the attention of the public the attempts of the New York Stock Exchange to amend the Stock Exchange Act, waiting instead until March 15, 1939, to denounce those attempts?

Why has there been no investigation by the Securities and Exchange Commission into the efforts of the New York Stock Exchange to bring about statutory changes which Mr. Douglas on March 15 attacked as grossly dangerous to the country?

Was it appropriate for Mr. Douglas, as head of the Government regulating agency, to set up an "axis" or partnership with the management of the New York Stock Exchange?

Why did Mr. Douglas grant an interview in the nature of appeasement of the Wall Street group, the substance of the interview appearing in print on March 29, 1939, the day after it was expected his confirmation would be obtained at the hands of the Senate? In other words, the interview was to appear after it was too late to criticize Mr. Douglas for renewing his policy of kindness and favor toward the Wall Street interests.

On the 15th of March Mr. Douglas issued a statement in which he very severely criticized the New York Stock Exchange for the action it had taken; but on the 28th of March, the day on which the Washington morning newspapers stated that Mr. Douglas would undoubtedly be unanimously confirmed by the Senate on that date, an interview was given to his friend Krock, of the New York Times, which was published on the morning of the 29th. I have the article before me. It is quite a long article. I wish to read some of it later. The article which was published by Mr. Krock on March 29, and the one which was published in criticism of the Stock Exchange on the 15th of March, are just the opposite. In one, Mr. Douglas is very much opposed to the Stock Exchange. In the other, he pats them on the back and says they are good fellows, and he is going to cooperate with them.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FRAZIER. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. Awhile ago I asked the Senator to read those articles first. It seems to me, in fairness to other Senators who are listening, that we should be able to know what those articles are. Will not the Senator read the articles of which he complains, those of March 14 and 15, and the other one of March 29?

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, I would rather prceed with my manuscript and then read the articles when I come to them a little later, if that is satisfactory.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FRAZIER. I yield.

Mr. HATCH. I was a little confused about the article of March 29. I confused it, perhaps, with what the Senator had said before about the same article. As I understood the Senator, in the interview of March 29, Mr. Douglas said that the securities and exchange law did not need amendment. Perhaps I am mistaken.

Mr. FRAZIER. The statement was along that line. I shall read from that article a little later. It was to the effect that the law did not need any amendment at the present time.

Mr. HATCH. That is, the securities and exchange law did not need any amendment?

Mr. FRAZIER. Yes. He said also that the stock-exchange law did need some amendment.

Mr. HATCH. I am still confused. However, if I correctly understand the Senator, I see no inconsistency between the statements of March 15 and March 29.

Mr. FRAZIER. I think the Senator will see my viewpoint a little later, if he will be patient.

The amendment proposal which Mr. Douglas most severely attacked was one which related to one of the numerous present prohibitions of the statute intended to eliminate manipulation. The stock exchange claimed that the particular provision it desired to amend was so broad as to cover innocent market activities. It proposed that the particular provision should be changed so as to give the Securities and Exchange Commission the power to clear the innocent activities, and to proscribe manipulative activities.

Ten days before this proposal was submitted to Mr. Douglas the New York Times carried an article making it clear that the stock exchanges were going to propose amendment of this very provision of the statute, either mitigating the effect of the present statutory provision or eliminating it altogether. Even if the whole scheme had been kept secret from Mr. Douglas by the New York Stock Exchange up to that date, Mr. Douglas must have known it no later than March 4, 1939, when the New York Times carried a story about it. Why did not Mr. Douglas warn the public?

It must be borne in mind that Mr. Douglas' statement of March 15, 1939, did not treat the stock-exchange proposals, and in particular this one, as a mere passing incident or a mere trivial error of judgment. His statement of March 15 viewed this particular attempt of the New York Stock Exchange as virtually nefarious. Mr. Douglas sent for the newspaper reporters and begged them to carry the warning to the country. He said that the exchange's proposal would "legalize manipulation" and—

> Would redound only to the benefit * * * of the insider and the market rigger.

He warned the country that this was an attempt by Wall Street to have "another party" at the expense of the public. He called the stock-exchange proposals "phony." I think he was right in opposing them, but his opposition should have been voiced at an earlier date.

If this attempt of the stock exchange was so dangerous, why did not Mr. Douglas get out on the firing line as soon as he got wind of it? It was not necessary for him to withhold his hand and to withhold his warning to the public until the stock exchange had formally submitted what it had in mind. A true guardian of the peace would not keep from the officers of a bank the news of a conspiracy to rob it until the conspirators were breaking the lock of the bank.

Furthermore, a man who claimed, as Mr. Douglas did for 10 months, that he was in close and intimate cooperation with the New York Stock Exchange, would not let that exchange and all the other exchanges in the country put their heads in the noose so that he could then pull the string and catch them in a trap, and expose them to the public and the entire country as men engaged in an evil attempt which struck, as he put it, "at the very heart of stock-market regulation."

The Securities and Exchange Commission had power to investigate what the stock exchanges were up to. It had the power to do so before they submitted their proposal as well as afterward. Why did Mr. Douglas make no attempt to get at the facts by an investigation? Why did Mr. Douglas make no attempt to get into the files of the New York Stock Exchange and of the other exchanges, as the Securities and Exchange Commission has full power to do, to see who was fomenting this plot against the public interest? The Securities and Exchange Commission has in the past frequently gotten at the files of the New York Stock Exchange and other exchanges. Why not in this instance?

An examination of all the files, whether so-called personal files or not, would undoubtedly show correspondence between the exchanges, memoranda recording conferences, and phone talks, and so forth.

Is it possible that in the 5 months in which the New York Stock Exchange was communicating with the smaller exchanges of the country on the general subject of possible changes in the law no one in any of the exchanges ever said, "What does the S. E. C. think about it? What does Mr. Douglas think about it?" Is it possible that no one ever volunteered some indication of how the S. E. C. or Mr. Douglas felt about it? If Mr. Douglas was never consulted, and if no question as to his attitude was ever raised by any of the stock-exchange men, and if no indication was ever given by any of them or their associates as to how Mr. Douglas felt about it, this would run counter to the elaborately built theory, widely advertised in preceding months by both Mr. Douglas, and Mr. Martin, of the New York Stock Exchange, that they were in the closest collaboration with each other on all matters relating to Government regulation of the stock markets.

What would a thorough inquiry by S. E. C. or a congressional committee disclose?

Why did Mr. Douglas build up what he called the axis with the New York Stock Exchange? Whether it be called the Washington-New York axis or the Douglas-Martin axis or the S. E. C.-Wall Street axis, it is all the same thing. This is a new note in the theory of Government regulation. We have heard before the charges that an occasional State commission or Federal regulating body has been too close to the industry it was regulating; but we have rarely, if ever, heard that the regulating authority set up an axis with the industry it was regulating.

The New York Times on March 19 stated that Mr. Martin, the so-called reform president of the stock exchange, was Mr. Douglas' own creation. During the period when an effort was made to have Mr. Douglas nominated to the Supreme Court, laudatory articles attributed to him the so-called reorganization of the stock exchange last year and the bringing in of the present reform administration. Is it possible that the Government regulating agency tried to do more than regulate, and made the mistake, however innocent and well-intentioned, of dictating to the principal exchange that it was regulating who should be its officers? When President Hutchins, of the University of Chicago, became a so-called public member of the governing board of the New York Stock Exchange, it was widely commented that he has for years been one of the closest friends, and indeed sponsors, of Mr. Douglas. Is it possible that Mr. Douglas had the remotest hand in selecting any member of the governing board of the New York Stock Exchange?

What would the files of the stock exchanges and of their leading committees and officials show on these various points? Although such files would be very valuable, it is not necessary to await their production. Mr. Douglas has himself made clear the policy which he has pursued. He has done so by repeated statements backing Mr. Martin, of the so-called reform administration, and praising him, and referring to the axis built up by him between himself and the New York Stock Exchange.

It should be assumed that Mr. Douglas meant well by what he was doing and had no intention of selling the public down the river. But if Government functions are performed in juvenile fashion, it is quite possible innocently to sell the public interest down the river; and the danger to the public that can be done through innocent mishandling of a situation of this kind can be about as great as the danger from intentional wrongdoing.

Mr. Douglas' policy subsequent to his March 15, 1939, attack on the stock exchanges seems like a return to his preceding policy of maintaining an "axis" with the New York Stock Exchange. For 10 months he had been praising the so-called reform management of the New York Stock Exchange. On March 15, 1939, in the midst of the campaign to have him nominated to the Supreme Court, and after he had been attacked for his dangerously close relations with the New York Stock Exchange, he issued a statement which, as reported in the New York Times on March 19, 1939, was "more bitter on the Wall Street new deal than ever on the old guard." Wall Street was greatly shocked by this statement, because it was in such complete contrast to Mr. Douglas' previous policy of embracing the management of the stock exchange responsible for the very proposals which Mr. Douglas so severely attacked.

The New York Times, which had for months been praising Mr. Douglas for his friendly sympathy with the New York Stock Exchange, published the following:

LIBERALISM

> If the tone of comment means anything, the manner of the Douglas reply has wrecked the painfully built structure of cooperation between S. E. C. and stock exchange. Perhaps that looks like a gain to the Commission's chairman, for it was that cooperation which had produced hints that he had lost his liberalism. That ghost, at least, is laid.

Mr. Douglas' nomination to the Supreme Court was sent to the Senate on March 20, 1939. During that week the subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee reported favorably on the nomination. Thereafter, on Sunday, March 26, 1939, the New York Times published an article saying that word had been received from the S. E. C. by the financial community that Mr. Douglas' "denunciation of proposals made by a group of representatives of the securities exchanges of the country need not be taken too seriously."

Meantime, the axis between the S. E. C. and the New York Stock Exchange was being reestablished. But Mr. Douglas himself had not been quoted publicly, so that the financial interests could not see for themselves what his feelings toward the exchange really were.

This brings us down to March 28, 1939. This was Tuesday, the day on which, according to press reports, Mr. Douglas' nomination was going to be confirmed overwhelmingly, if not unanimously, by the Senate.

After such confirmation and even before taking the oath it might have been deemed quite improper for Mr. Douglas to discuss stock exchange and S. E. C. matters in a public interview. Thus, it would appear that the latest time for an interview on the subject was March 28, even though the published report of the interview might not appear until March 29, after he had been confirmed. On the other hand, if such an interview held out olive branches to Wall Street, this could not become the basis for any attack on Mr. Douglas' liberalism affecting his confirmation in any way whatsoever; for the public would not learn of the interview until after the Senate had confirmed the nomination and it was too late to point to his interview as unduly kind to Wall Street.

Mr. Douglas, in fact, gave an interview on March 28 to Mr. Krock, of the New York Times. This interview, in fact, appeared in the New York Times on March 29. Thus, his interview was still in time, and its publication would have followed the date of his probable confirmation had it not been for the unexpected adjournment of the Senate on March 28 without acting on the nomination.

Two of the lines taken by Mr. Douglas in this interview are significant. One relates to the subject of amendments to the New York Stock Exchange act. Mr. Douglas, in his farewell interview, described as the summing up of the results of his experience on the subject, stated that he favored amendments to the Stock Exchange regulatory act. He went further. In 1933 he even stated that he favored amendments to the Securities Act. To be sure, this interview with Mr. Krock was only 2 weeks after his vigorous attack on certain statutory changes which had been proposed; only, however, to one of the two statutes. In his interview he said that the statutory amendments should not be made at this particular time. But the fact that he favored amendments not only to one act but to both was an important olive branch, whether intended as such or not.

In his interview he also stated that for the time being the S. E. C. had about all the jurisdiction or functions it ought to have, had reached the peak of regulating power it should have, and should not take on more work. This is in strange contrast with some of the bills which Mr. Douglas has been urging on Congress, such as the bill for S. E. C. regulation of big banks and trust companies in certain of their important activities in the field of high finance, specifically the so-called corporate-trust activities. It is well known that the big, powerful financial institutions in Wall Street have been vigorously opposed to proposals of this sort. The S. E. C. bills on this subject have been fought by the big Wall Street interests for 2 years. The Investment Bankers' Association joined in the fight against such proposals that would have added to the jurisdiction and functions of the S. E. C. In what seemed to be his final public interview with respect to S. E. C. affairs, he was definitely stating that for some considerable time to come no more jurisdiction should be conferred on the S. E. C. Whether so intended or not, this was a very large favor to the big interests in Wall Street.

Mr. President, there are other reasons why I feel that Mr. Douglas is not the proper nominee for the Supreme Court. I have tried to find when, if ever, Mr. Douglas has made any statements regarding his interest in agriculture, his interest in labor, and other matters of that kind.

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FRAZIER. I am glad to yield.

Mr. MALONEY. Of course, the Senator knows that Mr. Douglas is not in the Labor Department, and he is not connected with the Department of Agriculture. He is chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Mr. FRAZIER. The Senator knows that if Mr. Douglas becomes a member of the Supreme Court he will have to deal with labor problems and agricultural problems.

Mr. MALONEY. That is correct; and then he will be concerned with agricultural and labor problems.

Mr. FRAZIER. Yes; but after a man gets to be middle-aged and has never seemed to take any interest in labor problems or agricultural problems or other problems affecting the masses of the people, it seems to me a little strange that he should be considered a proper nominee for the Supreme Court.

Mr. MALONEY. If the Senator will yield again, I am sure if he will review Mr. Douglas' life he will find an expressed interest in all those problems. I had assumed that the Senator was talking about what Mr. Douglas had been dealing with up to this time, namely, his position since he became a member of the Securities and Exchange Commission. During that period of time I think the Senator will agree that he has not been trespassing upon the rights of other governmental agencies, and perhaps of Congress, by interfering with their functions.

Mr. FRAZIER. That may be true; but I have not been able to find any utterances by him favoring labor, or agriculture, or anything of the kind.

The Supreme Court of the United States is, and has been for many decades, the most important tribunal affecting the civil liberties of the people and the rights of labor. In consequence, it has for a long time been deemed essential to ascertain the record of a prospective Supreme Court Justice in the field of civil liberties and of labor. The Supreme Court must also pass upon important and vital agricultural questions.

It is, of course, possible for men to have no record in these fields, but it seems to me that such men should not be aspirants for elevation to the Supreme Court. A place on that court calls for statesmanship and an understanding of the problems of the day, in particular the problems with which the court deals; and thus, in particular and above all, the civil liberties of the people and the problems of labor and of agriculture. If a man has reached middle age, and has no discernible record on these most vital of present-day issues, one of several conclusions is almost unavoidable. Perhaps the man was too busy in some specialty; but the Supreme Court is not made up of technical specialists. Specialists would be unable to understand and grasp and deal properly with great general issues. Perhaps the man had no interest in the subject. It certainly cannot be said of him that he had no opportunity to take part in labor disputes, in agricultural questions, and in civil liberties matters, either in protest against unsound court decisions or in protesting against improper police or militia action in strikes, or in seeking to uphold movements for proper amendments, such as the child-labor amendment, or in the mediation or arbitration of strikes, or in getting out, in any one of the numberless aspects of these problems, either on the firing line or on some other line.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I do not wish to interrupt the train of the Senator's thought; but will he yield to me?

Mr. FRAZIER. I am glad to yield to the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. ASHURST. The able Senator stated that he feared that the nominee had no familiarity with the problems of the labor world. I recognize that as a legitimate argument when we are considering the confirmation of a man to an office. Of course, he should not be oblivious to these great things; but let me say that, in my opinion, this nominee is familiar with the toils and privations of those who have had unadventitious circumstances in their early youth.

For example, this young man worked in the fields as a boy; he worked in apple orchards gathering apples for his daily bread; he worked gathering cherries in order to obtain sufficient money to subsist himself. He worked in a restaurant as a waiter.

These activities brought him into sharp and daily contact with the adversities of life. Many persons, including many eminent Senators, have risen from the ranks of toil, and it cannot be said that they forget the duties and obligations of life. They never drift away from sympathy with those who toil. I am quite certain that if the experiences of early life are to count at all, this man, without adventitious aids of family, wealth, fame, or fortune, has acquitted himself well. It is not in human nature to forget the experiences of early life.

I thank the Senator for permitting this interruption.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, I am glad to have the Senator's contribution. We often read of men who have become great or wealthy. Even some of the members of the New York Stock Exchange who have become exceedingly wealthy were farm boys, and worked hard on the farm in their early days, and they perhaps remember their experiences. But they do not seem to be interested in having farm legislation enacted to aid those who are still producing the food they eat.

Mr. ASHURST. It may be true that if Mr. Douglas becomes an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, as I certainly hope he will, he will properly dissociate himself from any idea of originating or securing legislation. He will do very well if he will content himself with passing judicially upon the legislation we formulate or originate. He may be, and I think he ought to be, concerned with judicial interpretation of what we do rather than himself undertaking to originate any farm legislation. I hope he will not enter the field of originating legislation.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, if a man has had no interest in any of these subjects, if he has not been moved by injustices in the general area of modern life to take any action whatsoever, it is very significant on the point as to whether he is qualified or fitted to become a member of the Supreme Court of the United States. At the very least, it is necessary to say that he did not care about these injustices, he was not moved by these injustices, or he did not have the courage to speak out. Worse still, a man who comes to the court with no substantial record in these fields does not have a sufficient grip on the practical facts and the practical problems to make it possible for him to decide cases in the light of the true situation, rather than in the light of some fancied conceptions such as might easily mislead him. Of course, it might be possible for a young man who has never taken any interest in these important questions to understand and weigh them properly when he by chance becomes a member of the United States Supreme Court, but this is too big a risk for the country at large, and especially for labor and agriculture, to take.

It is fair to ask whether Mr. Douglas has any substantial record on the subject of civil liberties, or on labor issues or on agricultural problems. Such a question does not challenge his good faith, his honesty, his ability, or his desire to perform public service.

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FRAZIER. I yield.

Mr. MALONEY. The Senator has referred to specialists. I wonder if the Senator would be willing to recall to us some member of the Supreme Court, down through its history, who was other than a specialist?

Mr. FRAZIER. I do not recall any who have specialized as much as Mr. Douglas has, at least. He was a law professor for some years at Yale University, and specialized in a particular branch of the law, as I understand. Perhaps the last Justice appointed before Mr. Douglas was also a specialist in law, but he seemed to have a very broad understanding of general conditions. Whether or not Mr. Douglas has I do not know, but I have not been able to find any articles at least to show that he has.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, Mr. Justice Brandeis was very much of a specialist, as I recall, and he made one of the greatest Justices ever to sit on the Supreme Court.

Mr. FRAZIER. There can be no question that he did make an excellent judge.

I may be all wrong, but I have been unable to find anything to demonstrate that he has any interest in these important subjects or to show what his attitude is likely to be.

It is significant that on these important subjects his record seems to be blank. It is indeed significant that in the many articles written about Mr. Douglas little, if anything, has been mentioned to indicate that he has taken any interest in these important questions. There have been articles about Mr. Douglas in recent years in such magazines as the Literary Digest, Time, News Week, Collier's, Fortune, Nation's Business, Review of Reviews, and The Nation. Why is it that we have not heard about Mr. Douglas in connection with labor matters or on other subjects in which the common people are interested? One can search far and wide and find nothing that he has ever done about labor, civil liberties, or agriculture, or similar matters.

A true liberal, who is called upon to deal with such matters in the highest tribunal in our land, would have some real experience with these subjects, would have some real knowledge on these subjects, would have taken an active part in the achievement of justice in these fields. Mr. Douglas, no matter how fine his intentions, no matter how desirous of serving the public, has demonstrated during his life that he has no deep interest in these matters; that he did not care about them sufficiently even to lift a finger for the redress of wrongs and for the promotion of the general good in these branches of our national life.

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. President will the Senator yield further?

Mr. FRAZIER. I yield.

Mr. MALONEY. I promise I shall not interrupt the Senator again, and I am sorry I have interrupted so many times, but I cannot let go unchallenged the particular statement he has just made.

The Senator stated a few moments ago that he may be all wrong, and I think that is a generous thing for him to say, and I hope it will be noted. He said, however, if I understood him correctly, that Mr. Douglas has demonstrated throughout his life that he is not interested in the matter of civil liberties, in labor, and in agriculture. That is not fair.

Mr. FRAZIER. From his writings, at least.

Mr. MALONEY. No; the Senator said he had demonstrated that. It would have been more nearly fair if the Senator had stated Mr. Douglas had failed to demonstrate his interest, but the Senator's language was that Mr. Douglas had demonstrated that he had no interest in those things, and I know the Senator does not mean that.

Mr. FRAZIER. I have been unable to find any demonstration at all or any writings which indicate that he has taken any interest in labor or labor troubles or in civil liberties or even in agriculture.

Mr. MALONEY. Would the Senator be willing to say whether or not in all the history of his life he has ever known of a man named for the Supreme Court or mentioned in connection with any other office, excepting the Presidency of the United States, who has been so widely praised in a period of weeks as this particular nominee has been?

Mr. FRAZIER. It made me rather suspicious when some of the big interests in Wall Street started to praise him.

Mr. MALONEY. I failed to see that. I am talking about the press of the country.

Mr. FRAZIER. I, too, refer to the press.

Mr. MALONEY. I am talking about the New York Tribune and other conservative newspapers. I fail to find praise there.

Mr. FRAZIER. There has been plenty of it, apparently.

Mr. MALONEY. I did not see it.

Mr. FRAZIER. If Mr. Douglas is the real liberal and real progressive he is supposed to be, it seems very strange that he has no outstanding record on important questions so vital to the welfare of the common people.

Now, Mr. President, I propose to refer to some of the statements again, and to give the quotations from the newspapers and magazines to which I have referred.

Mr. Douglas established an "axis" with the New York Stock Exchange in May 1938, praised its management, and repeatedly reaffirmed his intention of working in close collaboration with the New York Stock Exchange, which he was supposed to regulate rather than establish an "axis" with it. For example, when Chairman Martin, of the New York Stock Exchange, was elected as its first paid president, Mr. Douglas took occasion publicly to congratulate him, and offered his support to Mr. Martin.

I have already referred to how it would look for a State or Federal body regulating public utilities to congratulate the duly elected president of a stock exchange on being a progressive, and as being willing to cooperate with him. That was what Mr. Douglas did in the case of the selection of Mr. Martin.

A portion of Mr. Douglas' letter quoted in the New York Times of July 1, 1938, is as follows:

> Your actions as chairman of the board give clear evidence of your determination to render conscientious public service and of your courage and ability to bring about expeditious action toward the objectives which must be jointly ours and yours. At this time I want to pledge to you our fullest cooperation and our unqualified support in working out the solutions to the items of unfinished business which are before us.
>
> I personally wish you every success.

That was a letter by Mr. Douglas to Mr. Martin upon the latter's selection as president. Then, after they had considered for 4 or 5 months changes in the law governing the stock exchange, apparently he did not know anything about what the duties were to be until they were put up to him on the 14th of March.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FRAZIER. I am glad to yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not think either law or custom requires the Chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission to keep currently, day by day, officially informed as to proposals which may be confidential or executive of the New York Stock Exchange with respect to changes in their methods of doing business. He would not have any official knowledge of them until they were presented to the Commission for their consideration, either for their approval or rejection. Is the Senator drawing any inference from the fact that Mr. Martin happened to be a friend of Mr. Douglas that he wrote him a letter congratulating him on his selection as head of the New York Stock Exchange and wishing him success, and that for 4 or 5 months he did not know officially about any proposed changes until they were presented to him or presented to the Commission? I myself do not see anything unusual about that.

Mr. FRAZIER. He referred in this letter to the "objectives which must be jointly ours and yours," referring to the Securities and Exchange Commission and to the New York Stock Exchange.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is true. The objectives of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the railroads are jointly theirs. Whatever is done by way of regulation of the railroads is a joint objective of the railroads and of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The same thing might be said of the Federal Reserve Board and the banks. What they are looking forward to is cooperation in the operation of banks and railroads and other institutions which are subject to regulation. The mere fact that the Chairman of the Commission wishes the head of some organization success in the conduct of its business seems to me to be a far-fetched reason why he should be disqualified to be appointed to the Supreme Court, or to any other office.

Mr. FRAZIER. Mr. President, I present another example. In November 1938 the S. E. C. published its report on the embezzlement by Richard Whitney, former president of the New York Stock Exchange, and on the long-continued concealment of the truth by leading exchange figures who had learned of those embezzlements. The report severely criticized all of them but concluded with a paragraph stating that conditions in the exchange were quite different under the Martin management and making it clear that the New York Stock Exchange under the Martin management was a very different market place from the exchange in previous years. The S. E. C. report made public by Mr. Douglas states:

> Happily, a new management has assumed control of the New York Stock Exchange.

That is found in the New York Times of November 2, 1938.

Mr. Douglas' report referred to "the cooperative efforts of that management with the Commission," to the creation of a reform program as the result of such cooperation, to the chief cornerstone of that program, "the erecting of higher standards," and to "other significant results of this new attitude" of the New York Stock Exchange. Mr. Douglas' report concluded with this reassuring sentence:

> These several steps taken together constitute a major advance toward reconstruction, along sound and progressive lines, of our national securities exchanges.

This can be found on page 184 of volume 1 of the report on this case issued by the S. E. C.

The next example shows, however, that the "reform" management of the New York Stock Exchange ran out on Mr. Douglas and still Mr. Douglas continued to support him. In December 1938 Mr. Douglas' friend, Robert Hutchins, a so-called public member of the governing board of the New York Stock Exchange, resigned because of the refusal of Mr. Martin and the "reform" management of the exchange to take any further action in the Richard Whitney case. Mr. Douglas backed up the Stock Exchange and did not back up Mr. Hutchins.

The letter of resignation from the exchange is as follows:

> DECEMBER 15, 1938.
>
> DEAR MR. MARTIN: As I intimated at the board meeting yesterday, I must resign as a representative of the public on the board of governors of the New York Stock Exchange.
>
> In the hearings before the Securities and Exchange Commission there was evidence tending to show that members of the exchange or their partners knew of Richard Whitney's criminal conduct or of the condition of his firm some months before its failure. The public interest, the good name of the exchange, and the good name of the members referred to all require the board of governors to institute proceedings in which the question of the responsibility of these members may finally be disposed of. The decision of the board yesterday to take no action compels me to present my resignation.
>
> Very truly yours,
>
> ROBERT M. HUTCHINS.

Promptly after the publication of Mr. Hutchins' letter of resignation Mr. Douglas was interviewed by his friend, Arthur Krock, of the New York Times, and made it clear to him that the relationship between Mr. Douglas and the New York Stock Exchange had not been affected by this incident or by its disclosure as to what might be expected from the New York Stock Exchange.

The following is quoted from Mr. Krock's column in the New York Times of December 27, 1938:

> "Wall Street fervently hopes," wrote Mr. Elliott V. Bell in Sunday's Times, "that harmonious relations which the exchange and the S. E. C. have enjoyed in the past 9 months are not to be thus ruptured." At this end of the axis, so far as Mr. Douglas is concerned, there isn't a sign of it. In giving his views to this correspondent he said:
>
> "Mr. Martin and I have worked closely together and we are going to continue to do so."
>
> The chairman of the S. E. C. then expanded his views a bit. He said the Washington-New York axis was new; the system is young; "both Bill Martin and I are young." He said difficulties which may arise will not be permitted by either of them to disrupt the system.
>
> "Instead of going off its gears," said Mr. Douglas, "the axis has withstood its first shock perfectly. For the S. E. C. as for the exchange the Whitney case is closed. From it we both have learned something."

Even after the president of the University of Chicago thought it of sufficient importance to cause him to resign his position on that board, Mr. Douglas said the case was closed. I continue to quote from Mr. Krock's article:

When these statements were repeated to Mr. Martin on the long-distance telephone (he was in St. Louis) he said to this correspondent they represented his own views entirely and accurately. On this inspection record it seems proper to chalk up on the axis an emphatic "O. K."

Still another sort of example can be given with respect to the attitude of the public utility holding companies which are under the jurisdiction of the S. E. C. It will be remembered that Mr. Douglas' name for the Supreme Court vacancy was sent to the Senate on March 20, 1939. On Sunday, March 26, 1939, the New York Herald Tribune, in its financial section, carried an article speculating on the effect on the utility companies of Mr. Douglas' departure from the S. E. C. and the substitution of someone in his place. The article contains the following paragraph:

As Chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, Mr. Douglas was regarded by the power group as having a friendly understanding of their difficulties under New Deal legislation, and some fear that his removal from the Commission may mean a change in policy of administering the Public Utility Holding Act. Should the chairmanship be conferred upon Commissioner Jerome Frank and a subordinate S. E. C. officer be moved up, utility men say their relations with the Commission might remain unchanged, whereas the appointment of an outsider might be disturbing.

Consider what some of the liberal publications thought of Mr. Douglas' closeness to Wall Street, not after he was nominated to the Supreme Court, when objection might be useless, but at the time of Mr. Douglas' activities in dealing with Wall Street. In the issue of The Nation of March 11, 1939, some days before he was nominated to the Court, appears the following editorial comment:

Chairman Douglas is an expert on corporation law and reorganizations. In an article in the Yale Law Review for December 1933 dealing with the Federal Securities Act he advanced much the same arguments for revision and amendment as those put forward at the time by Wall Street. An article on Protective Committees in Railroad Reorganizations in the Harvard Law Review of February 1934 evinces a faith in the readiness of insurance companies and savings banks to fight the influence of railroad bankers in defense of the investor that has been completely exploded by the testimony brought out in the Wheeler investigation. His unexpected failure, of more recent date, to support President Hutchins, of Chicago, when he resigned as a public trustee of the stock exchange because of the way the present "reform" management handled the Whitney case is also disturbing. We wonder how hardy Mr. Douglas' liberalism would prove to be in the cold isolation of the Supreme Court.

In The Nation of January 14, 1939, appears a lengthy article on the Richard Whitney case. The article referred to the fact that Mr. Gay had been president of the exchange until Mr. Martin took over the management of the exchange in May 1938. Press accounts indicated that Mr. Douglas was back of Mr. Martin, and apparently he did not care for Mr. Gay. The article contains the following comments:

The reader who compares Mr. Gay's refusal to postpone action and his expulsion of Richard Whitney with the conditions revealed by Dr. Hutchins' letter may wonder which is the "reform" administration of the exchange—the present Martin administration or Mr. Gay's, bad as it may otherwise have been?

The ghost of the Whitney case still walks. * * * The "reformed" management of the exchange has done its best to write finis to the story. Chairman Douglas now says, "For the S. E. C., as for the exchange, the Whitney case is closed." Must there be a congressional investigation to answer questions which still remain unanswered?

In the same issue of The Nation, at page 49, appears the following editorial:

The questions raised by I. F. Stone in an article in this issue on the challenge of the Whitney case merit the attention of Congress. The failure of the attorney general of New York and the nationally famous "racket busting" district attorney of Manhattan, Mr. Dewey, to go as deeply into this case as they might cannot be corrected by Congress. But the readiness of Chairman Douglas of the S. E. C. to declare the Whitney case closed, even after the resignation of Dr. Hutchins as a public representative on the board of governors of the exchange, warrants inquiry at Washington. Is the S. E. C. so anxious to fraternize with President "Bill" Martin of the exchange that it is willing to shut its eyes to facts which disturb the carefully built-up picture of a "reformed" stock exchange? Are the results of past New Deal investigations to evaporate in the warm but treacherous atmosphere of an era of good feeling between the exchange and the S. E. C.? Is our most important market, the market in which the value of the savings of the American people is in large part established, to be left in the hands of a sham "reform" administration? The unwillingness of the exchange to inquire into the circumstances that enabled an embezzler to serve so long as its officer is apparent. Chairman Douglas's statement to Arthur Krock, "For the S. E. C., as for the exchange, the Whitney case is closed," will be comforting at Broad and Wall Streets, but it should raise the alarm on Capitol Hill.

That is from the article in The Nation.

There are other records showing the closeness of the relationship between Mr. Douglas and the New York Stock Exchange, and some of them will be mentioned hereafter.

It will be well now to take up the next subject, which relates to Mr. Douglas' very liberal anti-Wall Street statement of March 15, 1939.

From November 1938 to March 1939 the stock exchanges of the country were engaged in conferences and correspondence to develop amendments to the Stock Exchange Regulatory Act. During the entire period Mr. Douglas made no public statement indicating any objection to the line being followed by the exchanges. Later on March 14, 1939, they submitted their proposals in writing; and on the following afternoon Mr. Douglas delivered a most severe, bitter attack on the proposals. As the Wall Street Journal of March 16, 1939, states:

S. E. C. Chairman William O. Douglas vehemently denounced the report as a "phony" so far as business recovery is concerned. Chairman Douglas' discussion of the matter yesterday was entirely and vigorously critical.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. FRAZIER. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. May I inquire of the Senator whether or not he will be able to conclude his remarks on this matter this afternoon?

Mr. FRAZIER. I shall require three-quarters of an hour more.

Mr. BARKLEY. I had not contemplated that the session would go beyond 5 o'clock. If the Senator cannot finish by 5 o'clock, we may as well suspend at this time.

Mr. FRAZIER. That is perfectly satisfactory to me.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, is it the intention of the majority leader to take up the public salary bill tomorrow?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; it is planned to take up that bill, and have another executive session later in the day.

Mr. BROWN. I thank the Senator.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senator resume the consideration of legislative business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate resumed legislative session.

MAINTENANCE OF NATIONAL GALLERY OF ART

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 108, Calendar No. 252.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 108) amending the joint resolution providing for the construction and maintenance of a National Gallery of Art, approved March 24, 1937.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the joint resolution merely authorizes the necessary appropriation to maintain the National Gallery of Art, which is now under construction on Constitution Avenue. There is no opposition to it, and it is desired that the authorization be enacted so that the proper appropriations may be provided during the present session.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That section 4 (a) of the joint resolution approved March 24, 1937, providing for the construction and maintenance of a National Gallery of Art, is hereby amended so that the last sentence thereof shall read as follows: "For these purposes, and to provide, prior to the completion of the National Gallery of Art, for the protection and care of the works of art in said gallery and for administrative and operating expenses and equipment preparatory to the opening of the gallery to the public, there are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary."

NATIONAL ECONOMY AND BANKING SYSTEM OF THE UNITED STATES

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, from the Committee on Printing I report back favorably, without amendment, Senate Resolution 113, and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

There being no objection, the resolution (S. Res. 113) submitted by Mr. LOGAN on March 30, 1939, was considered and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That 6,000 additional copies of Senate Document No. 23, current session, entitled "National Economy and the Banking System of the United States," be printed for the use of the Senate document room.

RECESS

Mr. BARKLEY. If there is no further business, I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 48 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Tuesday, April 4, 1939, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate April 3, 1939

UNITED STATES PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

The following-named senior surgeons to be medical directors in the United States Public Health Service, to rank as such from the dates set opposite their names:

Alvin R. Sweeney, March 7, 1939.
Harry F. White, March 12, 1939.
Francis A. Carmelia, May 19, 1939.
Lionel E. Hooper, May 14, 1939.

APPOINTMENTS, BY TRANSFER, IN THE REGULAR ARMY

TO QUARTERMASTER CORPS

Maj. Ernest Clifton Adkins, Infantry, with rank from August 1, 1935.

Capt. Stanley Noble Partridge, Infantry, with rank from October 1, 1934.

First Lt. Jack Griffin Pitcher, Infantry, with rank from August 1, 1935.

TO ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT

First Lt. William Alden Call, Coast Artillery Corps, with rank from August 1, 1935.

APPOINTMENTS TO TEMPORARY RANK IN THE AIR CORPS IN THE REGULAR ARMY

TO BE LIEUTENANT COLONEL

Maj. Otto Gresham Trunk, Air Corps, from April 1, 1939.

TO BE MAJORS

Capt. Park Holland, Air Corps, from April 2, 1939.

Capt. Donald Frank Stace, Air Corps, vice Maj. Otto G. Trunk, Air Corps, nominated for appointment as temporary lieutenant colonel, Air Corps.

PROMOTIONS IN THE REGULAR ARMY

TO BE CAPTAIN WITH RANK FROM MAY 1, 1939

First Lt. Robert Edward Lee Choate, Air Corps.

TO BE CAPTAINS WITH RANK FROM MAY 2, 1939

First Lt. Edwin Roland French, Air Corps.
First Lt. John Williams Persons, Air Corps.
First Lt. William Chamberlayne Bentley, Jr., Air Corps.
First Lt. Sam Williamson Cheyney, Air Corps.
First Lt. Max Harrelson Warren, Air Corps.
First Lt. Edwin Lee Tucker, Air Corps.
First Lt. Ralph Rhudy, Air Corps.
First Lt. Isaac William Ott, Air Corps.
First Lt. Edward Holmes Underhill, Air Corps.
First Lt. Trenholm Jones Meyer, Air Corps.
First Lt. John Joseph Keough, Air Corps.
First Lt. William Houston Maverick, Air Corps.
First Lt. William Pryor Sloan, Air Corps.
First Lt. George Frost Kinzie, Air Corps.
First Lt. Albert Boyd, Air Corps.
First Lt. James Wayne McCauley, Air Corps.
First Lt. Thomas Robert Starratt, Cavalry.
First Lt. Edward Harrison Alexander, Air Corps.
First Lt. Frank Alton Armstrong, Jr., Air Corps.
First Lt. William Albert Matheny, Air Corps.
First Lt. John Patrick Kenny, Air Corps.
First Lt. Lambert Spencer Callaway, Air Corps.
First Lt. Reginald Franklin Conroy Vance, Air Corps.
First Lt. William Lecel Lee, Air Corps.
First Lt. Davis Dunbar Graves, Air Corps.
First Lt. Haywood Shepherd Hansell, Jr., Air Corps.
First Lt. William Truman Colman, Air Corps.
First Lt. Paul Mueller Jacobs, Air Corps.
First Lt. Dudley Durward Hale, Air Corps.
First Lt. Herbert Leonard Grills, Air Corps.
First Lt. Benjamin Scovill Kelsey, Air Corps.
First Lt. Thomas Lee Mosley, Air Corps.
First Lt. Raymond Lloyd Winn, Air Corps.
First Lt. Leonard Franklin Harman, Air Corps.
First Lt. Kingston Eric Tibbetts, Air Corps.
First Lt. Richard Henry Lee, Air Corps.
First Lt. Robert Wilson Stewart, Air Corps.
First Lt. Lewis R. Parker, Air Corps.
First Lt. William Maurice Morgan, Air Corps.
First Lt. Richard Irvine Dugan, Air Corps.
First Lt. Edwin Minor Day, Air Corps.
First Lt. Jack Weston Wood, Air Corps.
First Lt. James Herbert Wallace, Air Corps.

TO BE CAPTAINS WITH RANK FROM JUNE 13, 1939

First Lt. Horace Fennell Sykes, Jr., Corps of Engineers.
First Lt. Raymond Leslie Hill, Corps of Engineers.
First Lt. Frank Lee Blue, Jr., Corps of Engineers.
First Lt. George Arthur Lincoln, Corps of Engineers.
First Lt. Kenneth David Nichols, Corps of Engineers.
First Lt. Don Zabriskie Zimmerman, Air Corps.
First Lt. Ernest Ward Carr, Corps of Engineers.
First Lt. James Adolph Ostrand, Jr., Corps of Engineers.
First Lt. Charles Theodore Tench, Corps of Engineers.
First Lt. Frank Hartman Forney, Corps of Engineers.
First Lt. Frederick Rodgers Dent, Jr., Air Corps.
First Lt. Harold Huntley Bassett, Air Corps.
First Lt. Paul Williams Thompson, Corps of Engineers.
First Lt. Howard Moore, Air Corps.
First Lt. John Floyd McCartney, Corps of Engineers.
First Lt. Carl Roemer Jones, Corps of Engineers.
First Lt. Alvin Galt Viney, Corps of Engineers.
First Lt. Walter King Wilson, Jr., Corps of Engineers.
First Lt. Bruce Douglas Rindlaub, Corps of Engineers.
First Lt. Herbert Milwit, Corps of Engineers.
First Lt. Ward Terry Abbott, Corps of Engineers.
First Lt. Benjamin Richard Wimer, Corps of Engineers.
First Lt. John Lloyd Person, Corps of Engineers, subject to examination required by law.
First Lt. Harry Gage Montgomery, Jr., Air Corps.
First Lt. Frank Eugene Fries, Corps of Engineers.
First Lt. Thomas Atkins Adcock, Corps of Engineers.
First Lt. Thomas Jahn Sands, Field Artillery.
First Lt. John Stein Walker, Ordnance Department.
First Lt. James Burt Evans, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Frederic Henry Chaffee, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Roger James Browne, Air Corps.
First Lt. Joseph Jennings Ladd, Air Corps.
First Lt. Richard David Wentworth, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Robert George Henry Meyer, Signal Corps.
First Lt. William Jonathan Thompson, Field Artillery.
First Lt. James Percy Hannigan, Field Artillery.
First Lt. John Gresham Minniece, Jr., Cavalry.
First Lt. DeVere Parker Armstrong, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Merle Russell Thompson, Coast Artillery Corps.
First Lt. Douglas Golding Dwyre, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Clayton Earl Hughes, Air Corps.
First Lt. Paul Singer Thompson, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Franklin Pierce Miller, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Dominick Joseph Calidonna, Signal Corps.
First Lt. David Ferdinand Brown, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Thomas Ludwell Bryan, Jr., Air Corps.
First Lt. Philip Henry Draper, Jr., Field Artillery.
First Lt. Richard Lee Scott, Infantry.
First Lt. Paul Elias, Coast Artillery Corps.
First Lt. Paul William Shumate, Cavalry.
First Lt. Harold Quiskie Huglin, Air Corps.
First Lt. William Lewis Bell, Jr., Ordnance Department.
First Lt. James Theodore Barber, Coast Artillery Corps.
First Lt. Andrew Samuels, Jr., Coast Artillery Corps.

First Lt. Lawrence McIlroy Guyer, Coast Artillery Corps.
First Lt. Harold George Hayes, Signal Corps.
First Lt. Joseph Horridge, Coast Artillery Corps.
First Lt. Carl Henry Jark, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Donald Philip Graul, Signal Corps.
First Lt. Charles Blake McClelland, Jr., Cavalry.
First Lt. Robert Emzy Chandler, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Edwin Hugh John Carns, Cavalry.
First Lt. Charles Sommers, Air Corps.
First Lt. Joseph Milton Colby, Ordnance Department.
First Lt. Roy Eugene Hattan, Field Artillery.
First Lt. John James Lapage, Cavalry.
First Lt. Wayland Henry Parr, Coast Artillery Corps.
First Lt. John Elliot Theimer, Field Artillery.
First Lt. William Price Connally, Jr., Field Artillery.
First Lt. John Coleman Horton, Air Corps.
First Lt. Dale Raymond French, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Walter Elmer Kraus, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Marshall Stanley Roth, Air Corps.
First Lt. David Mural Perkins, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Rudolph Fink, Air Corps.
First Lt. Oliver Hardin Gilbert, Coast Artillery Corps.
First Lt. Ralph Robert Mace, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Edwin George Griffith, Coast Artillery Corps.
First Lt. William Lewis McCulla, Ordnance Department.
First Lt. Norman Edwin Poiner, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Laurance Hilliard Brownlee, Coast Artillery Corps.
First Lt. John David Francis Phillips, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Sidney Andrew Ofsthun, Air Corps.
First Lt. George Richard Carey, Coast Artillery Corps.
First Lt. William Evens Hall, Air Corps.
First Lt. Frederic Harrison Smith, Jr., Air Corps.
First Lt. William James Latimer, Jr., Ordnance Department.
First Lt. Donald John Keirn, Air Corps.
First Lt. Luster Azil Vickrey, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Airel Burr Cooper, Signal Corps.
First Lt. William Miller Vestal, Coast Artillery Corps.
First Lt. Myles Wilkenson Brewster, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Dwight Bahney Schannep, Air Corps.
First Lt. George Waite Coolidge, Cavalry.
First Lt. James Franklin Brooke, Jr., Signal Corps.
First Lt. Kenneth Johnson Woodbury, Coast Artillery Corps.
First Lt. Norman Alverton Congdon, Coast Artillery Corps.
First Lt. Robert Moffat Losey, Air Corps.
First Lt. Daniel Norman Sundt, Field Artillery.
First Lt. James Lee Beynon, Field Artillery.
First Lt. William Tremlett Kirn, Field Artillery.
First Lt. William Hopkins Greear, Cavalry.
First Lt. Harold Stevens Whiteley, Field Artillery.
First Lt. John Jackson O'Hara, Jr., Air Corps.
First Lt. James Gordon Harding, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Chandler Prather Robbins, Jr., Cavalry.
First Lt. Emery Scott Wetzel, Air Corps.
First Lt. Frank M. Steadman, Quartermaster Corps.
First Lt. William Lafayette Fagg, Infantry.
First Lt. Jacob George Reynolds, Finance Department.
First Lt. William Darwin Hamlin, Signal Corps.
First Lt. Francis Emmons Fellows, Field Artillery.
First Lt. John Myron Underwood, Infantry.
First Lt. Thomas West Hammond, Jr., Infantry.
First Lt. Henry Ray McKenzie, Quartermaster Corps.
First Lt. Edmund Chauncey Rockefeller Lasher, Quartermaster Corps.
First Lt. Paul Donal Harkins, Cavalry.
First Lt. Thomas Fowler Taylor, Cavalry.
First Lt. Edward Jamet McNally, Cavalry, subject to examination required by law.
First Lt. Eric Hilmer Frithiof Svensson, Jr., Cavalry, subject to examination required by law.
First Lt. Donald Alexander Poorman, Infantry.
First Lt. William Milstead Talbot, Signal Corps.
First Lt. George Elial Bush, Infantry.
First Lt. William Carson Bullock, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Calvin Luther Partin, Coast Artillery Corps.
First Lt. Robert William Ward, Infantry.
First Lt. Frank Dow Merrill, Cavalry, subject to examination required by law.
First Lt. Louis Mortimer deLisle deRiemer, Field Artillery.
First Lt. George Eldridge Keeler, Jr., Coast Artillery Corps.
First Lt. Hugh Warner Stevenson, Cavalry.
First Lt. Robert Loomis Anderson, Coast Artillery Corps.
First Lt. James Leitch Grier, Infantry.
First Lt. Joseph Reisner Ranck, Cavalry.
First Lt. Joseph Marcellus Lovell, Infantry.
First Lt. Edward Blackburn Hempstead, Coast Artillery Corps.
First Lt. William Ernest Karnes, Air Corps.
First Lt. George Rich Barnes, Infantry.
First Lt. Robert Gordon Crandall, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Kai Eduard Rasmussen, Coast Artillery Corps, subject to examination required by law.
First Lt. John Wesley Hammond, Infantry.
First Lt. Laurence Neville Buck, Infantry.
First Lt. Paul Wyatt Caraway, Infantry.
First Lt. William Fulton McKee, Coast Artillery Corps.
First Lt. Elmer Elsworth Kirkpatrick, Jr., Quartermaster Corps.
First Lt. Wayne James Dunn, Cavalry.
First Lt. William Gilmer Bowyer, Air Corps.
First Lt. Eugene Louis Moseley, Infantry.
First Lt. Edgar Thomas Conley, Jr., Infantry.
First Lt. Kenneth Milton Briggs, Coast Artillery Corps, subject to examination required by law.
First Lt. Ezekiel Wimberly Napier, Air Corps.
First Lt. Richard Claire Carpenter, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Paul William Steinbeck, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Charles Clarke White Allan, Cavalry.
First Lt. Harlan Robinson Statham, Infantry.
First Lt. James Bernard Quill, Cavalry.
First Lt. William Kerr Ghormley, Quartermaster Corps.
First Lt. Robert Little Cook, Infantry.
First Lt. James Maurice Gavin, Infantry.
First Lt. Fred Winchester Sladen, Jr., Infantry.
First Lt. Ralph Nisley Woods, Infantry.
First Lt. Russell Lowell Vittrup, Infantry.
First Lt. Dale Joel Kinnee, Infantry.
First Lt. John Drury Cone, Infantry.
First Lt. Lester Skene Bork, Infantry.
First Lt. Ralph Bishop Strader, Chemical Warfare Service.
First Lt. Ernest Fred Heidland, Coast Artillery Corps.
First Lt. Ralph Van Strauss, Infantry.
First Lt. Charles Greene Calloway, Quartermaster Corps.
First Lt. George Robert Evans, Infantry.
First Lt. William Hastings Francis, Coast Artillery Corps.
First Lt. Thomas Benton McDonald, Air Corps.
First Lt. Charles Theodore Arnett, Air Corps.
First Lt. Louis Anderson Hammack, Infantry.
First Lt. Daniel William Quinn, 3d, Infantry.
First Lt. John Russell Seward, Coast Artillery Corps.
First Lt. Melie John Coutlee, Air Corps.
First Lt. Thomas Jefferson DuBose, Air Corps.
First Lt. Daniel Campbell Doubleday, Air Corps.
First Lt. Harlan Clyde Parks, Coast Artillery Corps.
First Lt. Paul Lamar Freeman, Jr., Infantry.
First Lt. James Joseph Mathews, Infantry.
First Lt. Marshall Stubbs, Chemical Warfare Service.
First Lt. Joseph Allen McNerney, Infantry.
First Lt. Clarence Renshaw, Quartermaster Corps.
First Lt. Charles Newton Hunter, Infantry.
First Lt. Jerald Worden McCoy, Air Corps.
First Lt. Logan Clarke, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Randolph Bolling Hubard, Field Artillery.
First Lt. George Edward Lynch, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Hugh Mackintosh, Infantry.
First Lt. David Xavier Angluin, Infantry.
First Lt. William Erwin Maulsby, Jr., Infantry.
First Lt. Carl Bascombe Herndon, Infantry.
First Lt. Charles Guthrie Rau, Infantry.
First Lt. Pearl Harvey Robey, Air Corps.

First Lt. Charles Glendon Williamson, Air Corps.
First Lt. James Julius Winn, Field Artillery.
First Lt. Wesley Carlton Wilson, Infantry.
First Lt. John Lyford Hornor, Jr., Quartermaster Corps.
First Lt. Daniel Fulbright Walker, Field Artillery.
First Lt. John Kauffman Bryan, Field Artillery.
First Lt. George Putnam Moody, Air Corps.
First Lt. Nelson Marquis Lynde, Jr., Infantry.
First Lt. Charles Dudley Wiegand, Infantry.
First Lt. Charles Howard Treat, Infantry.
First Lt. Thomas Bolyn Smothers, Jr., Infantry.
First Lt. John Francis Regis Seitz, Infantry.
First Lt. Bruce Easley, Jr., Infantry.
First Lt. Edgar Wright, Jr., Infantry.
First Lt. William Lester Nave, Infantry.
First Lt. Edward Edgecombe Cruise, Infantry.
First Lt. Brendan McKay Greeley, Cavalry.
First Lt. Ralph Copeland Cooper, Field Artillery.
First Lt. John Ambrose Geary, Infantry.
First Lt. John Warren Joyes, Jr., Infantry.
First Lt. Everett Clifton Hayden, Quartermaster Corps.
First Lt. William Henry Shimonek, Infantry.
First Lt. David Haytor Buchanan, Infantry.
First Lt. Stanley Walker Jones, Infantry.
First Lt. Ronald John Pierce, Infantry.
First Lt. James Joseph Fitzgibbons, Infantry.
First Lt. Robert Henry Chard, Infantry.
First Lt. Herbert John Vander Heide, Infantry.
First Lt. Luke Bruce Graham, Infantry.
First Lt. Rexford Wellington Andrews, Infantry.
First Lt. James Oliver Stephenson, Infantry.
First Lt. George Mulick Reilly, Infantry.
First Lt. Cornelius Zane Byrd, Infantry.
First Lt. Charles Randolph Kutz, Infantry.
First Lt. Normando Antonio Costello, Infantry.
First Lt. John Nicholas Stone, Air Corps.
First Lt. Phineas Kimball Morrill, Jr., Air Corps.
First Lt. Philip William Merrill, Infantry.
First Lt. Thomas Richard Lynch, Air Corps.
First Lt. Allan Gullick Fadness, Infantry.
First Lt. Samuel Fayette Silver, Infantry.
First Lt. Charles Freeman Kearney, Quartermaster Corps.
First Lt. Julian Broster Lindsey, Infantry.
First Lt. Robert Lawrence Love, Infantry.
First Lt. Thomas Norfleet Griffin, Infantry.
First Lt. George Frederick Conner, Quartermaster Corps.
First Lt. Clebert Leon Hail, Infantry.
First Lt. Arthur Knight Noble, Infantry.
First Lt. Samuel Edwin Mays, Infantry.
First Lt. Robert Campbell Johnson, Infantry.
First Lt. George Van Millett, Jr., Infantry.
First Lt. Edwin Michael Van Bibber, Infantry.
First Lt. Whitside Miller, Cavalry.

TO BE FIRST LIEUTENANTS, WITH RANK FROM JUNE 12, 1939

Second Lt. Oliver Garfield Haywood, Jr., Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. Charles Henry Waters, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. Ralph Dickson King, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. Raymond John Harvey, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. Bruce Palmer, Jr., Cavalry.
Second Lt. William Reeves Shuler, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. Roy Dean McCarty, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. John Herbert Kerkering, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. Cecil Edward Combs, Air Corps.
Second Lt. Pierre Victor Kieffer, Jr., Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. Karl Theodore Klock, Jr., Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. Richard Rawlins Waugh, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. Arthur Milton Jacoby, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. Charles Barnard Stewart, Air Corps.
Second Lt. Dwight Oliver Monteith, Air Corps.
Second Lt. Robert Warren Davis, Signal Corps.
Second Lt. Walter Alexander Faiks, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. George Ervan White, Jr., Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. Carroll Keleher Bagby, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. Gilbert Meding Dorland, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. Thomas Jay Hayes, 3d, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. Gordon Henry Holterman, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. George Alexander Finley, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. William Mellard Connor, Jr., Field Artillery, subject to examination required by law.
Second Lt. Henry Jacob Katz, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. Wright Hiatt, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. Arthur Kramer, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. Howard Allen Morris, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. Stephen Elliott Smith, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. Edgar Hall Thompson, Jr., Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. William David Milne, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. John Keeler Neff, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. Benjamin Oliver Davis, Jr., Infantry.
Second Lt. James Benjamin Lampert, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. Gerald Herman Duin, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. Reginald Joseph Beauregard Page, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. Lawrence Edward Laurion, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. Walter Bernard Bess, Signal Corps.
Second Lt. Clarence Albert Cozart, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. Andrew Davis Chaffin, Jr., Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. William Nott Beard, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. John Edward Kelly, Infantry.
Second Lt. Stephen Walsh Holderness, Cavalry.
Second Lt. James Emmett Goodwin, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. Paul Francis Oswald, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. Gordon Harrison Austin, Air Corps.
Second Lt. Cecil Eldon Spann, Jr., Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. Foster LeRoy Furphy, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. Jay Dean Rutledge, Jr., Air Corps.
Second Lt. Warren Smith Blair, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. Robert Frederick Frost, Signal Corps.
Second Lt. Howard Pinkney Persons, Jr., Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. Clement Wirt Crockett, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. Adam Stephen Buynoski, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. John Daniel McElheny, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. Kenneth Einar Madsen, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. Eugene Roberts Patterson, Signal Corps.
Second Lt. Edwin Van Valkenburg Sutherland, Infantry.
Second Lt. Thea Lewis Lipscomb, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. Robert Dean Gapen, Air Corps.
Second Lt. Oren Swain, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. David McCoach 3d, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. Robert Henry Kessler, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. Harry Edgar Mikkelsen, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. William Henry Kinard, Jr., Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. Eugene Everett Lockhart, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. Maxwell Morrison Kallman, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. Howell Marion Estes, Jr., Cavalry.
Second Lt. Ralph Richard Ganns, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. Everett George Hahney, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. Clifford Frederick Cordes, Jr., Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. Robert Matthew Burnett, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. John Knox Arnold, Jr., Air Corps.
Second Lt. Clinton Dermott Vincent, Air Corps.
Second Lt. Richard Henry Mattern, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. David Woodrow Hiester, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. Charles Dudley Hartman, Jr., Field Artillery.
Second Lt. John James Phelan, Infantry.
Second Lt. Selwyn Dyson Smith, Jr., Field Artillery.
Second Lt. Raymond Lemuel Cato, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. John Walter Romlein, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. William Aldrich Davis, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. William Charles Hay, Infantry.
Second Lt. Edward Alexander Grove, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. Joseph Barry Yost, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. Seward William Hulse, Jr., Air Corps.
Second Lt. Richard Henry Carmichael, Air Corps, subject to examination required by law.
Second Lt. Robert Bruce Partridge, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. Edward Worthington Williams, Cavalry.

Second Lt. Frank Walter Gillespie, Air Corps.
Second Lt. James Rutland Gunn, Jr., Air Corps.
Second Lt. Wilmer Charles Landry, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lt. Hervey Bennett Whipple, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. Nicholas Tate Perkins, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. Eldred George Robbins, Jr., Field Artillery.
Second Lt. Napoleon Robertson Duell, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. Howard McCrum Snyder, Jr., Infantry.
Second Lt. Carl Kenneth Bowen, Jr., Air Corps.
Second Lt. Orville Newton Stokes, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. James Edward Landrum, Jr., Infantry.
Second Lt. John Davis Torrey, Jr., Field Artillery, subject to examination required by law.
Second Lt. Albert Patton Clark, Jr., Air Corps.
Second Lt. Willam Raymond Prince, Cavalry.
Second Lt. Donald Gilbert Grothaus, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. Ned Taylor Norris, Cavalry.
Second Lt. William Childs Westmoreland, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. John Earl Barlow, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. John Richard Kelly, Air Corps.
Second Lt. Kenneth Francis Dawalt, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. Norman Calvert Spencer, Jr., Air Corps.
Second Lt. Benjamin Merritt Warfield, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. Frederick Reynolds Terrell, Air Corps.
Second Lt. Leonard Copeland Shea, Cavalry.
Second Lt. Charles Bernard Tyler, Jr., Field Artillery.
Second Lt. Fredrick Bell, Air Corps.
Second Lt. Harold Roy Low, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lt. Frederick Charles Bothwell, Jr., Field Artillery.
Second Lt. Beverley Evans Powell, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. Donald Read Bodine, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. Charles Milton McCorkle, Air Corps.
Second Lt. Earl Franklin Holton, Infantry.
Second Lt. Leland Rodman Drake, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. Ridgway Pancoast Smith, Jr., Infantry.
Second Lt. Robert Hall Safford, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. Edward Clare Dunn, Cavalry.
Second Lt. Chester Victor Clifton, Jr., Field Artillery.
Second Lt. William Denton Cairnes, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. John Godfrey Brimmer, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. William Hamilton Jordan, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. Wilbur Maben Griffith, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. Langdon Andrew Jackson, Jr., Infantry.
Second Lt. Wilfred Henry Tetley, Cavalry.
Second Lt. Joshua Asher Finkel, Infantry.
Second Lt. James Walter Twaddell, Jr., Air Corps.
Second Lt. William Russell Grohs, Air Corps.
Second Lt. Henry David Lind, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. Donald Paul Christensen, Cavalry.
Second Lt. Clarence Edward Gooding, Infantry.
Second Lt. Carl LaVerne Rickenbaugh, Cavalry.
Second Lt. William Swinton Steele, Infantry.
Second Lt. John Milton Bartella, Air Corps.
Second Lt. Loyd Kenneth Pepple, Infantry.
Second Lt. William Charles Haneke, Infantry.
Second Lt. James Tillman Willis, Infantry.
Second Lt. Karl William Schwering, Infantry.
Second Lt. Claude Lee Crawford, Infantry.
Second Lt. Robert George Fergusson, Cavalry.
Second Lt. Francis McDonald Oliver, Jr., Cavalry.
Second Lt. Robert Edward McCabe, Cavalry.
Second Lt. John Joseph Jakle, Infantry.
Second Lt. Clinton Utterback True, Air Corps.
Second Lt. Turner Clifton Rogers, Air Corps.
Second Lt. Robert Walter Breaks, Infantry.
Second Lt. William Loud Longley, Infantry.
Second Lt. Louis Frederick de Lesdernier, Infantry.
Second Lt. Frederick Harold Gaston, Jr., Cavalry (nomination submitted for transfer to Cavalry from Infantry, March 27, 1939).
Second Lt. Roy Wheaton Cole, Jr., Cavalry.
Second Lt. James Rainier Weaver, Infantry.
Second Lt. George Paul Champion, Air Corps.
Second Lt. Carl Baehr, Jr., Field Artillery.
Second Lt. John Arnold Heintges, Infantry.
Second Lt. Harry Ripley Melton, Jr., Air Corps.
Second Lt. John Harold Daly, Field Artillery.
Second Lt. Robert James Quinn, Jr., Cavalry.
Second Lt. Edward Daniel Mohlere, Cavalry.
Second Lt. William Francis Meany, Infantry.
Second Lt. Peter Woods Garland, Jr., Infantry.
Second Lt. Ned Butler Broyles, Infantry.
Second Lt. Randolph Charles Dickens, Infantry.
Second Lt. Elmer Willford Grubbs, Infantry.
Second Lt. Lawrence Frederick Prichard, Infantry.
Second Lt. Fred Livingood Walker, Jr., Infantry.
Second Lt. George Weldon Childs, Infantry.
Second Lt. John Henry Chiles, Infantry.
Second Lt. Creighton Williams Abrams, Jr., Cavalry.
Second Lt. Samuel Edwin Beggs, Jr., Infantry.
Second Lt. William Thomas Ryder, Infantry.
Second Lt. William Edward Sievers, Infantry.
Second Lt. Hilwert Schuyler Streeter, Cavalry.
Second Lt. William John Priestley, Infantry.
Second Lt. Russel Victor Dolmar Janzan, Cavalry.
Second Lt. Alfred William Hess, Infantry.
Second Lt. Karol Anthony Bauer, Infantry.
Second Lt. James Latham Crandell, Jr., Infantry.
Second Lt. Thomas Worthington Cooke, Infantry.
Second Lt. William Garnett Lee, Jr., Air Corps.
Second Lt. McPherson LeMoyne, Cavalry.
Second Lt. Louis Stewart Chappelear, Jr., Infantry.
Second Lt. Laurence John Ellert, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lt. Richard Wilkins Ripple, Infantry.
Second Lt. Robert Emmett O'Brien, Jr., Cavalry.
Second Lt. Philip Sheffield Greene, Infantry.
Second Lt. Thurman Wesley Morris, Infantry.
Second Lt. Albert Burnton Turner, Jr., Cavalry.
Second Lt. Clyde Lafayette Layne, Infantry.
Second Lt. Jesse Cyrus Drain, Jr., Infantry.
Second Lt. John Marvin Williams, Infantry.
Second Lt. David Henry Brown, Infantry.
Second Lt. Carl Theodor Goldenberg, Air Corps.
Second Lt. Jackson Holt Gray, Air Corps.
Second Lt. Warren Newcomb Wildrick, Infantry.
Second Lt. Austin Glenwood Fisher, Infantry.
Second Lt. Charles Lee Simpson, Infantry.
Second Lt. Robert Thomas Crowder, Infantry.
Second Lt. Allen Leeds Peck, Infantry.
Second Lt. John Hersey Michaelis, Infantry.
Second Lt. Franklin Rogers Sibert, Infantry.
Second Lt. James Michael Illig, Infantry.
Second Lt. Henry Kreitzer Benson, Jr., Infantry.
Second Lt. Augustus Herbert Bode, Jr., Infantry.
Second Lt. John Proctor Stone, Infantry.
Second Lt. Duncan Buist Dowling, Jr., Infantry.
Second Lt. Von Roy Shores, Jr., Air Corps.
Second Lt. William Ellerbe Covington, Jr., Air Corps.
Second Lt. Philip Stearns Gage, Jr., Infantry.
Second Lt. Robert Francis Curran, Infantry.
Second Lt. Thomas Edgar Clifford, Jr., Infantry.
Second Lt. Charles Burnham Milliken, Infantry.
Second Lt. Peter McGoldrick, Infantry.
Second Lt. Allen Clinton Miller, 2d, Infantry.
Second Lt. Thomas Reuben Conner, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lt. James Renwick Hughes, Infantry.
Second Lt. Leonard Clement Godfray, Infantry.
Second Lt. William Hartman Hendrickson, Infantry.
Second Lt. Howard Franklin McManus, Infantry.
Second Lt. Robert John Trout, Infantry.
Second Lt. Raymond Horace Tiffany, Infantry.
Second Lt. John Clarke Goldtrap, Infantry.
Second Lt. John Rigden Van Dickson, Infantry.
Second Lt. John Roland Singletary, Jr., Infantry.
Second Lt. William Barret Sullivan, Infantry.
Second Lt. Glenn Austin Sikes, Infantry.
Second Lt. Godfrey Arthur Fowler, Infantry.
Second Lt. Clark Lewis Hosmer, Air Corps.
Second Lt. Donald Wallace Noake, Infantry.
Second Lt. William Wesley Jones, Air Corps.
Second Lt. David Lincoln Edwards, Infantry.

Second Lt. Benjamin Otto Turnage, Jr., Infantry.
Second Lt. Thomas James Lawlor, Infantry.
Second Lt. William Pelham Yarborough, Infantry.
Second Lt. Aloysius Elliott McCormick, Jr., Infantry.
Second Lt. Joseph James Nazzaro, Air Corps.
Second Lt. Frank Edward Shea, Infantry.
Second Lt. Charles Billingslea, Infantry.
Second Lt. Benjamin Franklin Evans, Jr., Infantry.
Second Lt. James Billy Leer, Infantry.
Second Lt. Edmund Whritner Miles, Infantry.
Second Lt. William Levere Kimball, Air Corps.
Second Lt. Robert Sears Blodgett, Infantry.
Second Lt. Henry Andrew Mucci, Infantry.
Second Lt. Thomas Walker Chandler, Cavalry.
Second Lt. Frederick Caesar Augustus Kellam, Infantry.
Second Lt. John Matthew Lynch, Infantry.
Second Lt. Charles Manly Pack, Infantry.
Second Lt. Ernest Samuel Holmes, Jr., Air Corps.
Second Lt. Thomas Ryall Davis, Infantry.
Second Lt. Wallace Conrad Barrett, Air Corps.
Second Lt. Theodore Janof, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lt. Frank Pattillo Norman, Jr., Infantry.
Second Lt. Conrad Francis Necrason, Air Corps.
Second Lt. Victor Hermann Wagner, Signal Corps.
Second Lt. William Arthur Joyce, Signal Corps.

POSTMASTERS

ARKANSAS

Harry T. Colvert to be postmaster at Cullendale, Ark., in place of W. L. Ellis, resigned.

Moses Preston Muse to be postmaster at Junction City, Ark., in place of N. F. Brown, removed.

Evelyn B. Gowen to be postmaster at Knobel, Ark., in place of L. E. Wilkerson, removed.

Carl A. Lovell to be postmaster at Mountainburg, Ark., in place of I. N. Anglen, Jr., resigned.

CALIFORNIA

William E. Dixon, Jr., to be postmaster at Elk Grove, Calif., in place of H. S. Markofer. Incumbent's commission expired March 6, 1938.

Clota Boykin Bowen to be postmaster at Midland, Calif. Office became Presidential July 1, 1938.

IDAHO

Lynn S. Kearsley to be postmaster at Victor, Idaho, in place of E. N. Kearsley, resigned.

INDIANA

Herbert I. McEndarfer to be postmaster at North Liberty, Ind., in place of C. L. Worster, transferred.

LOUISIANA

Golden D. Mizell to be postmaster at Forest Hill, La. Office became Presidential July 1, 1937.

MAINE

Alberta A. Cheney to be postmaster at Wells, Maine, in place of Grover Cheney, deceased.

MARYLAND

George W. Bryant to be postmaster at Greenbelt, Md. Office became Presidential July 1, 1938.

MASSACHUSETTS

Raymond V. McNamara to be postmaster at Haverhill, Mass., in place of G. F. McNamara, deceased.

MISSOURI

Pleas M. Malcolm to be postmaster at Sikeston, Mo., in place of C. F. Bruton, deceased.

NEBRASKA

Hubert B. Bowley to be postmaster at Taylor, Nebr., in place of L. E. Bowley, resigned.

NEW JERSEY

Marguerite Fox Sando to be postmaster at Hewitt, N. J. Office became Presidential July 1, 1938.

NEW YORK

Daniel A. Driscoll to be postmaster at Buffalo, N. Y., in place of D. A. Driscoll. Incumbent's commission expired January 16, 1939.

Gilbert W. Rosenquest to be postmaster at Jamaica, N. Y., in place of G. W. Rosenquest. Incumbent's commission expired January 22, 1939.

Thomas J. O'Brien to be postmaster at Sauquoit, N. Y., in place of A. J. Radell, removed.

PENNSYLVANIA

Leo A. Werner to be postmaster at Harrisburg, Pa., in place of R. S. Black, resigned.

Albert W. Watts to be postmaster at McVeytown, Pa., in place of A. W. Watts. Incumbent's commission expired February 5, 1936.

TEXAS

Clarence B. Haynes to be postmaster at Chillicothe, Tex., in place of M. T. Jones, resigned.

VERMONT

Laurence E. McShane to be postmaster at Bristol, Vt., in place of R. S. Smith, resigned.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate April 3, 1939

COMPTROLLER GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES

Fred H. Brown to be Comptroller General of the United States for a term of 15 years.

COLLECTORS OF CUSTOMS

Fannie Dixon Welch to be collector of customs for customs collection district No. 6, with headquarters at Bridgeport, Conn.

Charles E. Kemper to be collector of customs for customs collection district No. 40, with headquarters at Indianapolis, Ind.

Abe D. Waldauer to be collector of customs for customs district No. 43, with headquarters at Memphis, Tenn.

UNITED STATES PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

Filip C. Forsbeck to be a surgeon in the United States Public Health Service.

APPOINTMENT IN THE REGULAR ARMY

First Lt. Don Lee Mace to be first lieutenant, Veterinary Corps.

APPOINTMENTS BY TRANSFER, IN THE REGULAR ARMY

First Lt. Melville Brown Coburn to Field Artillery.
First Lt. Shelby Francis Williams to Cavalry.
Second Lt. Frederick Harold Gaston, Jr., to Cavalry.

PROMOTIONS IN THE REGULAR ARMY

Burton Oliver Lewis to be colonel, Ordnance Department.

Withers Alexander Burress to be lieutenant colonel, Infantry.

Paul Thomas Hogge to be major, Infantry.

APPOINTMENT TO TEMPORARY RANK IN THE AIR CORPS, IN THE REGULAR ARMY

Cornelius Emmett O'Connor to be major, temporary rank, in the Air Corps.

APPOINTMENT IN THE NATIONAL GUARD OF THE UNITED STATES

Francis Vincent Logan to be brigadier general, National Guard of the United States.

POSTMASTERS

CALIFORNIA

Louis C. De Armond, Blairsden.
Margaret S. Dewhurst, Brisbane.
Ruth E. Palmer, Calwa City.
Mary B. Buswell, Delhi.
Irene Crane Jones, Nubieber.
George A. Chapman, Seaside.

COLORADO

William D. McIntyre, Oak Creek.

INDIANA

Albert Rea Petscher, Aurora.
Sue E. Reese, Greens Fork.
Adolph Hannie, Monroe.
Simon C. Hilsmier, Ossian.
Mary Dugan, Pittsboro.
Alton L. Metzger, Rossville.

LOUISIANA

James F. Ellis, Sulphur.

MISSISSIPPI

William E. Mitchell, Stewart.

MONTANA

Edward F. O'Neil, Glendive.

NEW MEXICO

George T. Meyers, Hillsboro.
Eugene Montague, Lordsburg.

NEW JERSEY

Edward J. Gleason, New Brunswick.

NEW YORK

Samuel B. Cline, East Hampton.
John F. Gleason, Le Roy.
Katherine M. Nortz, Lowville.
Donald S. Ryan, McGraw.
Kathryn R. Fuselehr, Malverne.
Robert C. McCarthy, Palmyra.
Mabel B. Williams, Westhampton Beach.

NORTH CAROLINA

James M. Hall, Roseboro.

PENNSYLVANIA

Frank J. Studeny, Johnstown.
W. Fred Williams, Shippenville.

TEXAS

Tom Calhoon, Liberty.

WISCONSIN

James F. Trainer, Lyndon Station.
Dan F. Vicker, Park Falls.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

MONDAY, APRIL 3, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Thou Saviour of the world, bid us enter the secret place that we may commune with Thee. We rejoice that the heart of the infinite God will never cease to bless until the sun goes empty of light, the stars forget to shine, and the universe itself is lost. He is over all and blessed for evermore. O speak Thy benediction to us: "Thou shalt speak peace to the nations; and Thy dominion shall be from sea to sea and from the river even to the ends of the earth. Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever. The scepter of Thy kingdom is the scepter of righteousness." O lead Thy white battalions against the hosts of rebellion which are error against truth, oppression against justice, and frightfulness against humanity. Inscribe in letters of living light across the skies: "King of kings and Lord of lords." May a chivalrous faith discern the coming of the peace of God. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Friday, March 31, 1939, was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a concurrent resolution of the House of the following title:

H. Con. Res. 11. Concurrent resolution continuing the special Joint Committee on Forestry.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed a bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 572. An act to provide for the common defense by acquiring stocks of strategic and critical materials essential to the needs of industry for the manufacture of supplies for the armed forces and the civilian population in time of a national emergency, and to encourage, as far as possible, the further development of strategic and critical materials within the United States for common defense.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. FADDIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Wednesday next, after the reading of the Journal and the disposition of matters on the Speaker's desk, and following the legislative program of the day, I may be permitted to address the House for 20 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Mexico?

There was no objection.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call to the attention of the Members of this House the conditions existing in the Post Office Department with particular reference to third- and fourth-class post offices.

It undoubtedly is common knowledge with every Member of this body that criticism frequently is made because of the appointment of incompetent persons as postmasters, particularly in these two classes of offices. It has been my personal experience that these appointments constitute one of the chief problems which confronts a Member of the Congress when he is asked to make a recommendation as to the proper appointee.

Recently in my State of New Mexico considerable criticism resulted from a case wherein a woman appointed as postmistress in a fourth-class office was found guilty of a violation of the postal laws. She was charged with a shortage in her accounts. Criticism of this woman's appointment was made, despite the fact that she was listed by the Post Office Department as the only available eligible, meeting the civil-service requirements of the Department. There was no choice in regard to this particular appointment, and virtually every patron of the office petitioned for this appointee.

To me it is not at all strange that there should be but one eligible applicant for such an appointment because the remuneration in this particular office was shown to be but $249 a year—a compensation of approximately $20 a month. There are many post offices where the remuneration is even lower. What manner of public servant can we expect for such compensation?

In this day when we are talking about one-third of the Nation being ill-fed, ill-clothed, and ill-housed, and are appropriating billions of dollars for relief of unemployed who are given a minimum of about $40 a month income, it appears to me shameful and disgraceful in the extreme that persons in the employ of the Government, serving in one of the most important branches of our governmental activity, which is in direct contact with nearly every citizen, should receive a mere pittance. Most certainly we cannot expect to obtain the highest type of governmental employee under these conditions.

It is difficult, indeed, for me to reconcile the toleration of such a condition by the executive and legislative branches of this Government, in view of the fact that we are insisting that private employers shall pay not less than 25 cents an hour to any person engaged in occupations that have to do with interstate business.

Most certainly we cannot continue to proceed on the premise that competent postmasters can be obtained under conditions such as these and for the compensation they are to be paid. In most every business or profession compensation is gaged largely on the competency of the employee and the duties to be performed. Under our present requirements it would appear that postmasters in the third- and fourth-class post offices must be prompted either by civic pride or a deep sense of patriotism to virtually donate their services; otherwise, I do not see how, in view of the meager compensation paid them, we could expect them to assume the duties and the responsibilities of such a position.

It is hard for me to find consistency in our attitude in appropriating billions for the various agencies of the Government, with full knowledge that travel and telephone expense for one relief agency alone approximates the staggering total of $600,000 a month, and then put our stamp of approval legislatively on post-office regulations which require that a governmental employee in an important position of public trust shall be remunerated so poorly that there is an ever-present temptation to misappropriate a few dimes to buy bread.

It is a poor commentary, indeed, on our sagacity and fitness as lawmakers that we continue to countenance such conditions and I for one shall insist that provisions shall be included in any further Post Office Department appropriation requests so that these third- and fourth-class postmasters shall receive at least a living wage. It is my contention that a letter handled by a third- or fourth-class post office is just as vitally important to the recipient and the sender as is a letter handled by the metropolitan offices in New York or Chicago, and the trust and responsibility involved are as great. The only difference in the service rendered is in the volume of business handled.

I believe that this Congress is fully justified in insisting that these underpaid public employees shall be included within the provisions of the existing minimum-wage law and I propose to offer legislation to that end.

Until we take action of that kind it is my firm conviction that the criticisms directed toward the Post Office Department and the Congress, itself, growing out of the incompetency and unfitness of many of the appointees to third- and fourth-class post offices are fully justified and will continue. We are unfair with both the public and the appointees themselves.

There may be the contention that the establishment of a proper minimum-wage level for this class of employees would work financial hardship on the Post Office Department and on the Government. I for one do not feel that such a contention is well founded. The time has arrived when this justly criticized condition must be corrected by paying the employees in this Government service a living wage. The full responsibility rests upon this Congress.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, on the front page of the Washington Post this morning there appears an article to the effect that Germany is asking for negotiations with the United States for reopening or readjusting trade relations between the two countries.

In that article it is stated that when the Secretary of the Treasury imposed a 25-percent countervailing duty on German imports he killed a deal that would have involved the sale to Germany of 500,000 bales of cotton, 500,000 tons of wheat, 30,000 tons of dried plums, and 110,000,000 pounds of lard over and above Germany's purchase from this country during the year 1938.

In other words, it is killing our trade with a country that is one of the greatest consumers of American cotton, as well as American wheat and other American farm products.

This cutting off of our portion of the foreign trade places a terrible burden on the American farmer by leaving upon his hands an additional surplus which drives the market down further below the cost of production.

It looks as if everything that is done now reacts to the detriment of the American farmer. The tariff robs him without compensation. He is discriminated against in transportation rates and pays the highest utility rates, as well as the highest interest rates, of any man under the American flag.

Every interference with our foreign trade penalizes him by closing the markets for his surplus products.

While this injures the wheat, corn, cattle, and dairy farmers, its greatest burden falls upon the cotton growers of the South, who are already handicapped with an enormous surplus, which means they will be driven to the growing of other crops or else forced to engage in other activities which will bring them in direct competition with other farmers or with Americans engaged in other pursuits.

Instead of further interrupting our foreign trade to the detriment of the farmers of the Nation, we should do everything possible to stimulate that trade. I know there is an international element throughout this country that is doing everything possible to drag us or shove us into a European war.

Europe does not want any war with us, and America does not want a war with Europe; yet these influences are busy day and night trying to make a war for us. Their propaganda rings on the radio every hour and screams from the headlines of the subsidized press every day. They are not only willing to punish the American farmer and drive him further toward bankruptcy, but they are willing to jeopardize the peace of mankind and run the risk of plunging America into war, the cost and consequences of which no man can foresee.

We went into a European war 20 years ago and won it, although our allies, for whom our young men sacrificed their lives and for whom America fought and financed the war, have never given us credit for what we accomplished. On the other hand, they have repudiated their debts and instilled into their children a contempt for America and American institutions.

Uncle Sam of 1918, when we were aiding, and paying, and our boys were doing the bleeding, became "Uncle Shylock" a few years later, in the European vernacular, when all that we asked was that they pay their honest debts.

Now they are in trouble again; the age-old jealousies and competitions are at work, and these same nations that repudiated their debts and branded Uncle Sam as "Uncle Shylock" are using their influences to try to drag America into the broils and hatreds of European affairs.

The international bankers, munitions manufacturers, and others who grew rich out of the war, coining their money from the blood and tears of the suffering men, women, and children of the world, are again busy trying to stir up trouble in order that they may again profit at our expense.

I hold no brief for any dictator, but it is not our duty to attempt to run the internal affairs of other countries, and I for one am unalterably opposed to plunging this country into a war that would probably mean the wreck and ruin of what civilization we have left.

I make the prediction now that if we will let Europe alone and give them to understand that we are not going to get mixed up in their broils there will not be any war in Europe.

I also want to warn the Members of Congress that you are going to have trouble in this country whenever you attempt to reach out and drag the youth of this land to the colors and send them to die on foreign soil.

If war were to break out in Europe tomorrow, the large cities of every country involved would lie in ruins within 60 days. Thousands, if not millions, of innocent men, women, and children would be killed, blown to pieces, or burned to death in their own homes.

If America should be drawn into it, it would mean that every city along our Atlantic seaboard, and probably along the Pacific and Gulf coast, would be visited with a rain of terror from the air, the like of which our people have never known. Such a war would probably last for years and years. It would probably send millions of our young men down to nameless graves and leave a crepe on every doorknob, broken hearts and widow's weeds and vacant chairs in every home. It would leave our country economically and financially exhausted, our institutions swept away, and probably chaos and anarchy in its wake.

The same condition would prevail on the other side, with the result that this great civilization that it has taken mankind 2,000 years of toil, struggle, and sacrifice to build, would be destroyed.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I say that instead of agitating international ill will and aiding and abetting this element throughout the world that would gloat over the downfall of our civilization, it is our duty as responsible representatives of the American people to do everything in our power to keep this country out of war, and in that way help to maintain the peace of the world.

I deplore the action of Secretary Morgenthau in arbitrarily raising the impost duty on German goods. We are at peace with Germany and I hope we may always be at peace with the German people. It seems to me that under these conditions wisdom would dictate a different course from that of attempting to apply economic restrictions against a friendly people, especially when by so doing we are penalizing our own farmers and making it impossible for them to find a market for those products upon the sale of which they must depend for any appreciable measure of prosperity.

European nations are trading with Germany. England and France are trading with Germany, and neither one of them have even contemplated imposing such restrictions. Of course, they do not object to the United States imposing such restrictions, because it gives them advantages in the German markets as well as in the American markets.

They care nothing about destroying the American market for cotton, wheat, corn, hogs, or dairy products. They are looking out for their own selfish interests.

We can never recover from this depression until agriculture leads the way, and every obstacle we throw in the way of that recovery by interfering with our foreign trade simply tends to postpone the day when we can hope to enjoy Nation-wide prosperity.

I hope that this request for the readjustment of our trade relations will be granted and that, instead of further penalizing the farmers of the South and West, plans may develop that will materially extend their foreign markets in such a way as to raise the prices of those products they are now selling below the cost of production, and in that way help to maintain the peace of the world, or at least keep America from becoming embroiled in another foreign war. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks in the RECORD and quote therein from the article in the Washington Post to which I have referred.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I wish to speak on the same general subject as that to which the gentleman from Mississippi has just referred, namely, the possible negotiation of a trade treaty with Germany. However, my position is directly contrary to that which he has taken. The gentleman is looking at the proposal from the standpoint of his cotton producers, who stand to benefit by the proposed treaty at the expense of the rest of the country. I am looking at the matter from the standpoint of the country as a whole.

The reason the German officials now in this country are asking the same rights and privileges that other nations have is that they realize that trade treaties are beneficial to those countries by giving them a larger share of our rich home market. They are not concerned with the fact that the tariff reductions they desire are detrimental to the people of this country.

If there is one country today with which we ought not to have trade relations, it is Germany. Therefore, I protest against our people negotiating a treaty at this time with Germany, as it will be detrimental to our interests here at home. I am against the present trade treaty program, whether it involves making a treaty with Germany or any other country.

For some time I have been contending that the trade-treaty program is inimical to American interests. No better proof of this fact can be found than in the great anxiety of foreign countries to enter into these trade treaties with us.

The twenty-first treaty—that with Turkey—has just been signed. In this morning's press we are informed that now Germany is seeking a trade treaty with this country.

Among the items which Germany is anxious to ship into our market in competition with our own products are farm and industrial machinery, chemicals, and numerous manufactured products. I recently called the attention of the Treasury Department to the fact that Germany was dumping these very products on our market by means of a complicated barter system, under which American concerns shipping certain products to Germany had to take these articles in exchange, which were then sold in the American market at sacrifice prices. Shortly thereafter, the Treasury Department imposed countervailing duties on these subsidized imports as required by the tariff law of 1930.

The imposition of these duties has temporarily forced the abandonment of this dumping of German goods on the American market. Now Germany is anxious to have these countervailing duties removed, and at the same time receive a substantial reduction in the regular duties of her imports into the United States. In other words, she wants to gain access to our market under a trade treaty so as to accomplish the same purpose she has been accomplishing by barter and by dumping.

Let me repeat at this time what I have said many times, namely, that the only valid purpose of foreign trade is to exchange our surpluses for the things we need and do not produce ourselves.

There can be no justification for opening our markets to the products of Germany, the like of which we already produce. Nor is there any net advantage to this country by trading off our surpluses for products that compete with other lines of industry.

I cannot emphasize too strongly that if our trade treaty program was not of such great benefit to foreign countries at the expense of our own people, these foreign countries would not be so anxious to enter into them.

At the present time we have no Ambassador in Germany, nor does Germany have an Ambassador here. It is extremely nervy, in my opinion, for the German Chargé d'Affaires, Herr Thomsen, to suggest how we should regulate our tariffs on German imports. Of course he wants for his own country the same advantages in our markets which other foreign countries now have under the trade-treaty program. He is jealous of these other countries which are now getting benefits which are denied to Germany. It is to be expected that Germany would want to get its nose under the tent also.

If we open the door to German imports by drastic tariff reductions such as have been granted to other countries, our manufacturers might just as well close down and throw up the sponge, because we cannot possibly compete on equal terms with the cheap products of Germany. This administration should not ask the American workingman, who, thank God, is still a free citizen, to compete with the regimented labor of the Nazi regime of Adolf Hitler. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, there are about 8,000,000 aliens within the United States who have neither become citizens nor even declared their desire and intention to become citizens, and of assuming the duties and responsibilities of citizens.

This to my mind is gross ingratitude for our hospitality and the generosity of this Nation which has made them welcome and extended its incomparable opportunities and domicile to them. Not only have millions of these aliens taken advantage of our generosity by failing and neglecting to assume the duties of citizenship but many have so far abused their privilege to reside in this country as to engage in subversive propaganda, communistic, Nazi, and Fascist.

The presence and bold activities of so many of these aliens in radical labor trouble in which they fomented and encouraged violent action, was largely responsible for the severe rebuke and censure administered to the Secretary of Labor,

Miss Perkins, by the 10 minority members of the Committee on the Judiciary for laxness and want of energy in the enforcement of the immigration laws in the proposed impeachment proceedings brought against the Secretary of Labor and members of her staff. While no one on the committee believed that the evidence adduced justified the extreme constitutional remedy of impeachment provided in the Constitution, yet the bold and persistent subversive and violent activities of so many aliens did not produce an enviable record for the Department of Labor in the energetic enforcement of our immigration statutes.

There are said to be one and one-half millions of unnaturalized aliens on our relief rolls which cost the taxpayer many millions. In the event of war with their mother country they would be subject to call to fight against the country whose generosity fed them and which necessarily denied that much to our own unemployed citizens.

It is said upon good authority that there are 6,000,000 unnaturalized aliens holding jobs in American industry and agriculture. Their employment means that our own citizens are deprived of that number of jobs, so that the employment of unnaturalized aliens accounts for nearly half of our unemployment. They should be forced to choose between naturalization and deportation. If they want to become citizens let them so declare and proceed to become citizens. That they are of alien birth does not at all discredit them, for some of the best and most useful citizens we have are of alien birth. It is to those who fail to take advantage of the privilege to become citizens after long residence in our country, and particularly those who engage in subversive propaganda, that I direct my disapproval.

It is estimated that there are in this country 500,000 aliens who are within our gates illegally; who have stolen into the country in one way or another contrary to law. They have no right of residence in this country and should be immediately deported. Many thousands of these unnaturalized persons are reservists in foreign armies subject to being called to the colors of their mother country in the event of war that might be a war against the United States.

The Legislature of the State of Kansas, recently in session, has passed senate concurrent resolution No. 28 memorializing the Congress to enact laws providing for the deportation of all aliens who do not within a reasonable time signify their intention to become citizens of the United States. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and to include this resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, the resolution to which I have referred is as follows:

Senate Concurrent Resolution 28

Resolution memorializing the Federal Congress to enact adequate legislation providing for speedy deportation of all alien residents who do not signify their willingness, desire, and intention to become citizens of the United States within a reasonable time after entry into the United States of America

Whereas it is estimated that there are approximately 8,000,000 residents within the boundaries of the United States of America who have neither become naturalized nor filed any declaration of intention to become citizens of this Nation; and

Whereas this large group of alien residents provides a fertile field for agitators and organizations who are not in sympathy with the American form of government; and

Whereas it is the sense of the Legislature of the State of Kansas, that this large group of alien residents should not be permitted to enjoy the freedom and privileges of this Nation without assuming the corresponding duties and obligations of citizenship: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate of the State of Kansas (the house of representatives concurring therein), That the Federal Congress be, and it is hereby, requested to direct its attention to this condition and to enact adequate legislation which will provide for speedy deportation of all alien residents of this country who do not within a reasonable time signify their willingness, desire, and intention, and qualify, to assume the obligations of citizens of the United States of America; be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of state be, and he is hereby, directed to transmit properly authenticated copies of this resolution to each branch of the Congress, to each member of the Kansas congressional delegation, and to each of the United States Senators from Kansas; be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of state forthwith transmit properly authenticated copies of this resolution to each of the legislatures of the several States of the Union which are now in session, same for their consideration and action, if they so desire.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Tuesday, April 11, after the disposition of the business on the Speaker's desk and following the legislative program of the day, I may be permitted to address the House for 15 minutes in regard to Government waste in the scissors brigade, an organization set up by the New Deal for clipping newspaper articles and filing them.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein an article from the Chicago Evening American.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. SHAFER of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD on the subject of Government subsidies and to include therein a statement made by T. B. Robertson, international president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the W. P. A. appropriation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. BOLLES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 25 minutes on Tuesday next, April 11, after the disposition of the legislative program of the day and any previous special orders.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. KEEFE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an editorial written by Mr. William J. McHale, of Chilton, Wis.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a letter from a constituent.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Connecticut?

There was no objection.

HAWLEY-SMOOTISM VERSUS RECIPROCAL-TRADE TREATIES

Mr. KITCHENS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. KITCHENS. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY], who has just spoken, condemns any trade treaty with Germany. We are not surprised because such opposition is merely carrying out the suggestion of his great leader, Hon. Herbert Hoover.

I presume the gentleman's opposition to trade treaties in general is what Mr. Hoover calls the "oxygen" of representative government. The national weekly news magazine Time, in its issue of February 20, 1939, gives an account of a gathering on February 13, 1939, of Republican leaders assembled in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York City, under the pretext of celebrating the birthday of Abraham Lincoln. There they wined, dined, danced, perspired, and became inspired. There was conviviality and congeniality within the cloistered walls of that exclusive hotel surrounded by walled streets where trade is walled in for a few. Mind you, my colleagues, those gentlemen were celebrating the birthday of Abraham Lincoln. Nothing happened there that in the least would meet the approval of Abe Lincoln. From all that took place there honest old Abe would not have known he ever had a birthday. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, reverting to that grand ballroom celebration of Lincoln's birthday, the Time magazine further states that Hon. Herbert Hoover was present and took occasion to give advice and direction to Republican leaders, old and young, whether in Congress or out of Congress. Time states in its issue of last February 20 that Mr. Hoover appeared in the ballroom "hands in pockets, stomach to the fore," and gave warning to the coming generation. In his warning he offered a remedy to save the people, as he said, "from their rendezvous with debt." His remedy was a little late forthcoming, as the people know from experience. But what was that remedy the great leader of the Republican Party offered to the people? The magazine Time states that Mr. Hoover, to that great audience and Republican leaders in general, recommended the "oxygen of opposition." [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, we thought Mr. Hoover was famous only as a great engineer and promoter. We did not know he was also learned in physics. It is true we knew him as a clairvoyant, a man able to see around the corners, but no one ever proclaimed him to be a doctor, but rather a doctrinaire. [Applause.]

Time says he recommended "oxygen" as a sure remedy for the evils of the day and for future generations. One would judge that Mr. Hoover desired his followers, in Congress and out, to pour out and administer "oxygen" in both large and small doses. From time to time on the floor of this House I note strained efforts to administer this panacea of all ills. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, Webster's unabridged dictionary defines "oxygen" as a "colorless, tasteless, odorless, active gas element in the atmosphere." I appreciate that the gas element may be for the purpose of lulling, soothing, and putting the people to sleep. Webster further says, in defining "oxygen," "It forms in combination eight-ninths by weight of water and nearly one-half by weight of the rocks composing the earth's crust." I can see the quenching virtues of the water, and the held-out hope for a "crust," but am unable to see any virtue in the rock. Webster further says "oxygen" is a constituent of all but a very few acids. A simpleton ought to be able to understand the simplicity of this remedy suggested by the leader of the Republican Party and adopted by his followers. [Applause.]

In other words, Mr. Speaker, Mr. Hoover, after due consultation and deliberation, seriously seeking a remedy or program, ponderously recommends air, water, and gas. [Applause.] That is the only constructive remedy the Republican Party has so far been able to suggest or devise. I find here on the floor of the House, over here on my left, that Mr. Hoover's advice is taken seriously by members of his party because from day to day pure "oxygen" is being poured and dosed out generously in opposition to all the policies of this administration. The Time magazine quotes Mr. Hoover as saying "give them the 'oxygen of opposition,' give them air, gas, and water." If Mr. Hoover were not serious, then he seems to be misunderstood here on the floor of the House because his Republican coadjutors come every day well equipped with kits and bags of this airy, gaseous, and watery solution, and are doing their level best to fill the prescription and administer the dose as recommended. [Applause.]

History tells us that once when the people of France were crying for bread the French queen suggested they eat cake when there was no cake. Our ex-President, ably aided, abetted, and encouraged by his followers, says that the people should be given air, water, and gas, "oxygen" if you please, and these atmospheric elements are plentiful. The only difference between these recommendations is that one recommended for the people an unprocurable article, while the other recommended an abundant invisible substance.

Mr. Speaker, those leaders of the Republican Party in that "Walledoff" hotel in New York City, freely imbibing inspiration from their immediate surroundings, were not able to appreciate the beneficent results to flow from the remedy suggested at that great meeting.

Only a few days ago the farmers of America were given by the Republicans in this House a good and generous dose of "oxygen." A diagnosis of troubles of farmers of America brought forth the recommendation that they be given the air mixed with a little soothing gas and diluted with water, a concoction believed to be a most satisfying cure, and that was what Republican leadership here administered to the farmers on the farm parity income proposal a few days ago.

Sometimes I am inclined to believe that the new Republican Governor of Vermont, Mr. Aiken, was about right last year when he suggested one of the best things for the Republican Party to do was to change its name. That suggestion very quietly so far has been disregarded. This hushed proposal is awaiting, no doubt, the effect of the immense possibilities of air, water, and gas when administered in proper doses, and there is a disposition to wait hoping to convince the American people once more that it has discovered a new remedy for the solution of all our problems.

True to form, true to the dictators of their party, the Republican leadership in this House is attacking the trade treaties negotiated and now in process of negotiation with other nations with nothing really more substantial than air and gas. The American people must not be misled by all these opposition platitudes and generalities, half truths and misstatements, which are nothing more than the "oxygen of opposition."

I have been studying the trade treaties negotiated since 1934, under the direction of that great statesman and Christian gentleman, our great Secretary of State, Hon. Cordell Hull, and have reached the opinion that these trade treaties are opening up the most wonderful possibilities, capable of being invisioned, for universal peace, the progress and prosperity of America and all the nations. These treaties represent the true spirit of Christianity, and I hope to see them negotiated with all friendly and, if any, unfriendly nations.

Mr. Speaker, March 22, 1939, as appears in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of that date, I made some observations on the viciousness of State barriers to trade in this country. Among other things, I stated that I am interested in facilitating the development of trade, not only among the States but between our Nation and all other countries. I wish to see demolished, consistent with the best interest of our people as a whole, every barrier that causes friction and obstruction in the exchange of goods and commodities.

The score of reciprocal-trade agreements concluded under the authority of the Trade Agreements Act, which Congress passed in 1934 and extended in 1937, have been effective instruments in promoting such exchange of goods. The American producers on farms and in factories and American workmen on railroads and ships and in offices will reap the undoubted benefits which come to a nation with a healthy foreign trade.

PARTISAN ATTACKS CANNOT DEFY FACTS

Blind partisan attacks, such as have been made recently on this floor and elsewhere, against the reciprocal trade agreements program cannot controvert this fact. Such attacks cannot destroy facts or obvious truth.

I repeat my stand for the demolition of trade barriers consistent with the best interest of the people of the United States as a whole. Too much of the opposition to these agreements has been based upon narrow views as to their effect upon a few specific lines of activity. That opposition has closed its mind to the very real benefits conferred upon these very industries and their laborers through the expansion of our foreign trade. The opponents of the program like to hunt for a single tree against which they can batter their foreheads until the vision of the forest as a whole is entirely lost. They have the facts, but still quibble, deny, and pour out oxygen.

FOREIGN TRADE VITAL IN AMERICAN ECONOMY

The whole agricultural and industrial economy of the United States has been built upon the basis of advantageous trade with foreign countries. This building started back in colonial days before this Government was established. The Colonies, and later the United States, exported the products of their agriculture to the old countries and exchanged them there for manufactured goods which the new nation was ill-prepared to produce for itself. It later sent its products abroad in exchange for the capital that was essential to develop the vast natural resources of the United States and establish the industries to which we point with pride.

The exchange of goods and products between men and between groups constitute the most important economic step mankind has yet taken in advancing from a rude and primitive civilization. No individual unit can depend wholly upon itself for every need, no matter whether it be qualified and so situated as to be able to satisfy that need or not.

Those who obstruct an exchange of goods and services push us back toward the primitive, force humanity back to a lower subsistence level, deprive the individual of all the benefits he he is not able to produce for himself within his own little circle, and thereby generate a spirit of hate, retaliation, reprisal, and the causes of war.

FOREIGN-TRADE FIGURES AN INDEX TO PROSPERITY

Foreign trade and commerce are vital factors in the economic welfare of our Nation. The figures on foreign trade and commerce are accurate indexes to the degree of that economic welfare. We remember the period from 1925 to 1929 as a period of prosperity, and it was, in some aspects. The foreign trade of the United States in those years averaged about nine and one-fourth billion dollars a year. We recall the years from 1930 to 1933 as depression years. In those years the foreign trade of the United States averaged about four and one-third billion dollars a year, dropping to less than $3,000,000,000 in 1932.

It is easy to say there was a world-wide depression in the latter period and that the depression was the cause of the drop in foreign trade. Thinking people know that the deliberate obstruction of foreign trade by high tariffs instigated by this country and followed in self-defense by almost every other country in the world was, no doubt, the major factor in bringing on a world-wide depression and in making it deeper, wider, longer, and more severe than it otherwise would have been.

TRADE BARRIERS STRANGLED WORLD COMMERCE

In 1930 the Smoot-Hawley Tariff Act set United States tariffs at practically embargo levels on every possible foreign commodity, and the United States thus led the world in erection of barriers against the exchange of goods among nations. This destruction of trade was remarkably successful. United States imports in 1929 amounted to nearly four and two-fifths billion dollars and by 1932 they had dropped to one and one-third billions.

If preventing imports were the key to prosperity, what a boom under the Smoot-Hawley Tariff Act we should have enjoyed in 1932 and 1933. As it was, we went upon the rocks. If the United States can live within itself, if we are better off without foreign trade, as was actually asserted by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. GRISWOLD] on this floor last week, and as virtually contended for by the gentleman from New York [Mr. REED] and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY] then the cutting off of those imports should have made us prosperous. If such an argument be sound or logical, what a depression we should have been having in 1929, when our imports reached the highest figure in our history.

TRADE BARRIERS INTENSIFIED DEPRESSION

Ordinary Arkansas and Wisconsin horse sense and experience show the contrary to be the fact. When our imports went down, so did our exports. When our exports went down, so did our volume of production and our prices, on the farm and in the markets. When our volume of production went down, so did our employment; men walked the streets without jobs, and our dairy, cotton, corn, wheat, and other farmers became distressed because others could not buy. Jobless Americans are no customers for American goods, as the dairy industry particularly should be well aware by this time.

TRADE AGREEMENTS ACT AN ATTACK ON DEPRESSION

The reciprocal trade agreements program, based upon the Trade Agreement Act of 1934, was a plain, common-sense, and necessary attack on that depression factor, the trade barriers. Its whole purpose and effect have been to gradually remove such barriers by the most sensible and effective method, restore once more the opportunity of the American producer to exchange his product for those of other nations, give him a job producing something he can sell at a remunerative price, and make him, because he has that job, once more a customer for the products of other Americans.

The United States in 1934 took the lead in a movement, that has since become world-wide, toward removing trade barriers and reestablishing world commerce. Twenty other countries have followed that lead, and the commerce that goes on among the 21 countries accounts for more than half of all the commerce of the world at the present time.

Opponents of the program are in the habit of pointing with a good deal of cynicism at the fact that there is still unemployment in the United States. From that fact alone they announce the prompt conclusion that the trade-agreements program has been a failure. It is not an effective retort to them to say merely that things would have been worse than they are if there had been no trade agreements, true as that retort would be, unless the retort be based upon some concrete facts.

EXPORTS MADE JOBS IN 1938

Here are those concrete facts: The United States, in the year 1938, exported goods to the value of more than $3,000,000,000, of which nearly three-fourths were industrial. American manufacturers and workmen, therefore, did have business and did have jobs producing nearly two and one-fourth billion dollars' worth of manufactured products that found foreign markets in 1938. The rest of the exports were agricultural and amounted to nearly a billion dollars. American farmers and American farm land produced that—nearly a billion dollars' worth of exported farm goods.

If we had had no foreign markets, one of two things would have had to happen—either the workmen would have been unemployed and the farm land idle, or the goods would have piled up further in this country and forced the prices down to more ruinous levels. American industrialists are not in the habit of keeping men in jobs when there is no sale for the products those men are making.

No one has ever claimed that trade agreements are the only reason for the increases in American foreign trade and exports since 1933. Such a claim would be as absurd as the assertion that increases in foreign trade have not been stimulated by removing, on both sides, the tariff and other artificial barriers which have been obstructing that trade. No one claims that trade agreements alone, regardless of other factors, valuable as they are, can cause a steady, progressive increase, year after year, in foreign trade.

TRADE GROWS UNDER TRADE AGREEMENTS

But the statistics do show that American foreign trade, and especially American exports, with countries with which we have trade agreements, has mounted more rapidly, and has decreased less in 1938 as compared with 1937, than has American foreign trade with non-trade-agreement countries.

Start with the yearly average for the 2 years 1934–35, the years when the Trade Agreements Act was passed and the program was just getting under way. United States exports in those years to all countries averaged a little less than two and one-fourth billion dollars, and United States imports averaged one and three-fourths billion dollars, making a total foreign trade averaging slightly better than $4,000,000,000.

In that 2-year period the total foreign trade of the United States with countries which, in 1938, had concluded trade agreements, averaged $760,000,000 a year in exports and $794,000,000 in imports, a total of more than a billion and a half dollars. Trade with countries which have not signed trade agreements or which, like the United Kingdom, did not sign the agreements until too late for the results to show up in 1938, amounted in 1934–35 to a yearly average of less than a billion and a half dollars in exports and a little over a billion in imports, a total foreign trade averaging about two and one-half billion dollars a year.

FOREIGN COMMERCE UP ONE-FOURTH IN 1938

Now, compare those figures with 1938, when our total foreign trade with all countries had risen by nearly 25 percent to over $5,000,000,000, of which exports accounted for more than three billion. In 1938 our exports to trade-agreement countries were well over a billion dollars, showing a gain of 55 percent over exports to the same countries in 1934–35 before the trade-agreements program was in operation, while our imports from these trade-agreement countries amounted to $892,000,000, an increase of about 12½ percent. Total foreign trade with these countries was more than $2,000,000,000, a gain of 33 percent over 1934–35.

In the same year, 1938, total foreign trade of the United States with non-trade-agreement countries amounted to slightly less than $3,000,000,000, a gain of less than 19 percent compared with 1934–35. United States imports from non-trade-agreement countries amounted to slightly over a billion dollars, a gain of about 1 percent, and United States exports to non-trade-agreement countries amounted to slightly less than $2,000,000,000, showing a gain of 32 percent as compared with 1934–35, whereas the exports to trade-agreement countries, as I said a moment ago, had gained 55 percent.

A BIGGER SHARE OF A BIGGER MARKET

Put it another way: In 1934–35 United States trade with the 17 countries with which trade agreements were in effect during the greater part of 1938 amounted to 38 percent of all our foreign trade. In 1938 trade with those same countries amounted to more than 41 percent of a foreign trade nearly one-fourth larger.

It should not need all the figures and statistics that I have given you to demonstrate the perfectly simple proposition that if water in a stream is being dammed up by obstructions the water will flow more freely if the obstructions are removed. That proposition represents exactly what happens to world trade when obstructions in the form of trade barriers are removed, as many hundreds of them have been removed through the effects of the trade-agreements program.

It should not be forgotten that in all these figures the United Kingdom and Turkey have been listed with the non-trade-agreement figures because the agreement which covers the United Kingdom and more than 50 British colonies did not become effective until January 1, 1939, and the one with Turkey until last Saturday, April 1, 1939. The United Kingdom and these colonies in 1937 and 1938 have accounted for more than one-fifth of American exports and have been the source of more than one-sixth of American imports. When the hundreds of concessions on American products have been obtained through the agreement with the United Kingdom begin to show results in the 1939 trade figures, the comparison with 1934–35 will be even more striking and convincing than it is at the present time.

ABNORMAL FACTS OPERATED IN 1937

Likewise, it should not be forgotten that the figures for 1938, which have been quoted, are considerably less impressive than the figures for 1937, when, because of unusual and even abnormal conditions, United States foreign trade was greater than it has been during 1938. It is a favorite device of the opponents of this program to point to this fact, ignore the abnormal influences, and assert that foreign trade and exports are decreasing from a normal level. They conveniently disregard the facts of the drought of 1936 which reduced domestic production of many crops and, for the first time in years, brought about the net imports of these crops until the bumper crops of 1937 were available. They conveniently ignore the fact that industrial activity in this country was at a level higher than it had been since the boom times of 1928 and 1929, with the result that American workers with jobs and wages were in the market for more goods, both domestic and imported, than they had been buying in previous years.

They conveniently ignore the fact that a great proportion of the imports that were coming into this country were such things as rubber, tin, silk, and the like, not produced in this country but essential to the very manufactures that were enjoying the boom.

In 1938, on the other hand, American agriculture had harvested the biggest crops in its history and was no longer on an import basis for drought-reduced crops. And there had been a recession in business activity, a recession which the trade-agreements program was not sufficient to eliminate, but which it did alleviate by helping to provide foreign markets for over $3,000,000,000 worth of American manufactures and American farm products.

AGREEMENTS CREATED JOBS IN PRODUCTION AND TRANSPORTATION

The reciprocal-trade agreements have helped not only to promote this market for American goods, and thus give employment to American workers and farmers, but export business has made employment for workers in every line of industry. Especially is this true about the transportation industry. Every ton of American goods exported and every ton of foreign goods imported make jobs for the men on ships, in ports, and on railroads handling those goods. Goods in foreign trade make business for bankers and insurance companies and a thousand and one other lines of activity, as well as for the workmen who do the actual producing.

The United States Department of Commerce has made some estimates of the number of workers engaged in producing and distributing export goods. These estimates indicate that in 1937 the labor of approximately 2,400,000 wage earners went into the production of export goods. Actually a far greater number of persons owed at least a part of their work to exports. Even these figures, which are admittedly an understatement, show, however, that more than 5 percent of the total employment in the United States and nearly 10 percent of the total employment in agriculture, manufactures, mining, and transportation are dependent upon export trade for their livelihood. Manufactured products that were exported called for the labor of some 673,000 persons, and exports from mines for the labor of some 75,000 persons. Agricultural exports represented the output of some 1,432,000 workers, and distribution industries, such as railroads, trucks, pipe lines, shipping, and longshoremen, and exporters and export agents utilized the labor of some 204,000 workers in handling export products.

The home market for American products that is offered by these workers and their families, because they have jobs and pay that depend on foreign trade, is a market well worth the attention of American producers. Yet opponents of foreign trade would destroy practically every one of them.

GIVE AMERICAN FARMERS A BETTER MARKET

When that well-worn wail about "giving the American farmer the American market" is raised the American farmer and all other American producers should give some serious thought as to how an American market is made, its size, and profitableness. The American farmer must remember that 100,000,000 of Americans cannot farm, do not farm, and they must have paying jobs if there be a paying market.

They should recall their situation in 1932 when they had as nearly 100 percent of the American market—what there was of it—as the Republican Party with its Smoot-Hawley embargo tariffs could give them. In that year farm cash income in the United States was $4,328,000,000, and imports into the United States amounted to less than one and a third billion dollars. Imports of agricultural products, such as are produced in the United States, were practically nonexistent in 1932. Yet you could then sell, if at all, corn, wheat, butter, meat, cotton, and so forth, only at the lowest price level in history.

Then they should recall—and the spokesmen for farmers who have been particularly vocal about "the American market for American farmers" should recall that in 1937, when imports were considerably more than double what they had been in 1932 and when those imports included an unusually large proportion of things such as are produced on American farms—they should recall that in 1937 the American market was good enough to return a cash farm income of over $10,000,000,000.

DAIRY INDUSTRY DEPENDS ON HOME MARKET

These truths have particular force for dairymen, because no agricultural industry depends more than the dairy industry upon general national prosperity and less upon exports and imports of its products. The income of dairy farmers goes up and down in direct relation to the amount of employment and the amount of wages that American workmen earn. Dairy products, unfortunately for the health and proper nutrition of the Nation, are regarded by the bulk of the working population as luxuries, to be enjoyed when the wage earner has a job and curtailed when he does not. One of the first economies made when jobs become insecure is in the amount of milk and butter bought for the family. If cold statistics are needed to demonstrate this well-known fact, they are available.

DAIRY INCOME MOVES WITH INDUSTRIAL INCOME

In 1929, when the income of industrial workers in the United States was eleven and one-half billion dollars, United States dairy producers drew a cash income of well over one and three-quarters billion dollars—$1,844,000,000. In 1932, when industrial workers' income was down to less than $5,000,000,000—$4,900,000,000—cash income from the sale of dairy products was down to less than a billion dollars—$991,000,000. In 1937, when industrial workers' income was again up to nearly ten and one-half billion dollars—$10,400,000,000—cash income from the sale of dairy products was more than one and one-half billion dollars—$1,530,000,000.

In 1929 the value of imports of dairy products was equal to 1.6 percent of cash income for dairying. In 1932 the value of imports was 1.3 percent of dairy cash income. In 1937 the value of imports was 1.03 percent of the dairy cash income. So dairy farmers should no longer be misled at their expense by political jobseekers, and political jobholders.

SOME DISPROVED ASSERTIONS ARE HEARD AGAIN

It should be abundantly clear, even to the most partisan mind, that United States dairymen benefit by a good domestic market and that the trade-agreements program contributes to the size and the profitableness of that market. The talk of a flood of imports which, to quote statements made on this floor "has practically ruined the American dairy industry" has no foundation in any fact. It is not new talk. It was heard when the first agreement with Canada went into effect in 1936, and the Republican candidate for President raised the terrifying threat of a babassu-nut invasion of the dairy industry. The threat of a baboon invasion of the country would have been equally as feasible, if not so plausible. The subsequent increases in the income of American dairy farmers have entirely disproved that talk, just as further developments under the new agreement will disprove it again.

OPPONENTS DO NOT WANT THIS AMERICAN MARKET

The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. GRISWOLD] has held that because the agreement with Canada contains concessions on industrial products such as engines, typewriters, automobiles, and machinery, and because—I quote his words as given in the RECORD:

> I find that almost none of them are products of my district and very few of them are products of the State of Wisconsin.

He has held—I quote again from the RECORD:

> It becomes very apparent from a study of the agreement that the great dairy industry in the State of Wisconsin was traded off for the benefit of the industrial cities in other sections of the United States. The Canadian trade treaty is destroying the market of the dairy farmer.

The gentleman from Wisconsin seems to be indifferent and unconcerned as to whether the dairymen of his district sell milk and cream and butter and cheese to the American workmen and the families of American workmen across his boundary line and in the States of Michigan, and Iowa, and Illinois, and Indiana, and Ohio, and Arkansas, and in many other States. Workmen there will have jobs and be able to buy the products of his district because of the Canadian concessions on the engines and typewriters and machinery and other products which they manufacture and sell in Canada. Neither Wisconsin nor any other State can buy more than a small portion.

The gentleman from Wisconsin also quotes from a report by the State Department to the effect that by opening up markets for export crops, grown by farmers not engaged in dairying, the trade-agreements program is helping to make it unnecessary for these farmers to go into the dairy business and compete with established dairymen, such as those in the gentleman's own district. And he applies to this report the peculiar interpretation—not warranted even when he takes a single sentence, as he has done, from its context—that to improve export markets for corn, tobacco, pork, cotton, and cottonseed oil and meal is to keep down the prices of dairy products. Such distortion and illogical reasoning is doing no service to dairymen. The people of Arkansas will buy more of butter and cheese if they can be helped to sell their products.

"FLOOD OF IMPORTS" IS PURE MYTH

The gentleman has made a good deal of the fact that under the new agreement with Canada the quota of imports of dairy cattle at the reduced rates, which was 20,000 head in the 1936 agreement, has been removed. But he avoids and does not divulge the fact that in 1938 such imports amounted to less than 37 percent of the quota and that in January of 1939 imports of dairy cattle into the United States numbered only 626 head.

He has made a good deal of the fact that under the new agreement with Canada the duty on cream has been further reduced on a quota of one and one-half million gallons of cream a year, but he has said nothing about the fact that actual imports of cream in 1938 totaled one-third of 1 percent of the quota and that up to the end of February 1939 imports of cream totaled 95 gallons, of which exactly 29 gallons came in from Canada. He prefers to leave the impression that the trade agreement has permitted the importation of cream equal to the importation of 6,000,000 pounds of butter at a 7-cent tariff. The gentleman's reason for talking about a 7-cent tariff on butter when he admits there has been no reduction in the 14-cent tariff is too much even for the credulous.

The reason why prices of dairy products are not higher than they are is not hard to find. The alleged flood of dairy imports from Canada is mystical and hard to find, and it is only by hiding and ignoring the facts that even the possibility of such a flood of imports can be conjured up. Conjured facts are a poor foundation for permanent political prestige and glory.

DOMESTIC DAIRY PRODUCTION HIGH

Dairy production in this country is at record high levels. Consumption in this country is no more than keeping up with production. That, in simple fact, is the explanation of present dairy price levels. And it points clearly enough to the necessity of taking every possible measure to make increased domestic consumption possible. The trade-agreements program, as I have pointed out, is a definite and effective factor in increasing that very domestic consumption of dairy products.

The United States Department of Agriculture, on March 24, in its regular monthly report on domestic production of butter and American cheese, made this statement:

> The output of creamery butter in February 1939 is estimated by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics at 121,065,000 pounds. This is an increase of 8 percent over that of February 1938, and 10 percent larger than the February average for the 8 years, 1930–37. It is the third largest output of creamery butter for February on record, being exceeded in 1932 and 1933.

Similarly, the same report says of American cheese:

> The February output of American cheese is estimated by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics at 27,175,000 pounds. This is the third largest February production in the 21 years of record, being exceeded only in 1937 and 1938.

DOMESTIC CONSUMPTION ONLY AVERAGE

As for the demand side of the market, the monthly dairy-situation report issued by the Department of Agriculture on March 17, said:

Milk production continues high, and with no marked change in consumption of fluid milk and cream, the production of manufactured dairy products has continued at a record high level with the biggest increase occurring in production of butter * * *. For the 4 months from October through January, apparent consumption of the principal manufactured dairy products was the highest on record for the period. Consumption in January was up 13 percent from a year earlier and about equaled the preceding peak for the month in 1934. A considerable part of the increase in consumption was due to the distribution of butter for relief. Even with the increase, however, consumption has only been about average in relation to production, and storage stocks continue large.

UNITED STATES ON A BUTTER-EXPORTING BASIS

When the facts are brought out of hiding, the alleged flood of dairy imports that is supposed to be ruining the American dairy industry completely disappears. Here are some more facts that have been ignored. In the first 7 months of the fiscal year beginning July 1938 the United States shifted to an export basis on butter, and the figures include January, ordinarily the month of heaviest butter importation. In that 7-month period the United States exported more than twice as much butter as it imported. In that same period, as compared with the same months of the preceding fiscal year, United States imports of all agricultural products decreased by more than one-fourth, while exports of American farm products—excluding cotton which is not grown in the district represented by the gentleman from Wisconsin, but is grown in my district—increased by one-fifth. I have discussed Wisconsin probably more than I should, but Wisconsin is putting a wall around itself, and wants the remainder of the country as merely its province.

Now where are these floods of farm imports we hear so much about? They are nowhere except in the partisan and biased minds of people who pound their desks and shout for the American market for the American farmer and, at the same time, do their best to obstruct the soundest measure yet taken to build and make the American market a better market. They want to give him the American market, all right, as they did in 1932, but their program will make it a dwindling market resulting in the smallest possible market with the lowest possible price before they give it to him. Nothing could be more self-evident.

TARIFF CONCESSIONS ECONOMICALLY SOUND

The tariff concessions that have been granted by the United States in the Canadian agreement and in the 19 other agreements have been carefully and soundly considered, and designed to benefit the whole economy of this Nation without jeopardizing the welfare of any group. They have been worked out, as the Trade Agreements Act requires them to be, through the joint efforts of Government experts of long experience, high technical training, and nonpartisan viewpoints. These experts represent all the Government departments and agencies that are concerned with national commercial policy—the Departments of Agriculture, Commerce, State, and the Treasury, and the bipartisan Tariff Commission.

NOT BASED ON POLITICAL LOGROLLING

The provisions of these agreements are founded on sound economic principles and facts, in sharp contrast to the provisions of past tariff legislation that have been arrived at through logrolling, discrimination, political expediency, and complete disregard of the economic facts affecting the welfare of the people of the United States.

The agreements have worked and are working to provide more jobs and more pay for Americans and bigger and more profitable markets both at home and abroad, for American products. To attack them as they have been attacked on this floor and elsewhere with half-truths and misleading statements, with "oxygen," is to attack the welfare of the people of the United States. Political expediency, truckling to special interests with powerful lobbies, willful blindness to plain facts, must be behind such attacks. Mr. Speaker, the people are becoming tired of demagogic and partisan attacks, and they will not be deceived very long.

W. P. A. APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, when the W. P. A. appropriation was under consideration last week I stated that in spite of a steady upturn in employment that we were having a build-up in the W. P. A. I have in my hands a clipping from the Cleveland Plain Dealer, an administration supporter, indicating that the number of jobs filled in March were 2,447 as against 1,345 in the previous month, and that the index of employment of 100 key firms in that city had gone up about 1 percent over the previous month.

I just want to call this to the attention of the House and to say that notwithstanding this increase in private employment there still continues a large increase of expenditures along the W. P. A. line.

Probably there is a larger percentage of funds spent in the State of Ohio for a unit of population for W. P. A. than any other State in the Union. Local responsibility and local management of the relief problem with a requirement that they must pay themselves a definite percentage of the cost would cure this situation.

The demoralizing effect of the continued operation of the W. P. A. means that business cannot recover and cannot put people to work. Its continuance means that we are taking bread out of the mouths of the poor by postponing and preventing recovery.

[Here the gavel fell.]

CONSENT CALENDAR

The SPEAKER. This is Consent Calendar day. The Clerk will call the first bill on the calendar.

AMENDMENT OF SOIL CONSERVATION AND DOMESTIC ALLOTMENT ACT

The Clerk called the first bill on the Consent Calendar, H. R. 3800, to amend section 8 (e) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. GILCHRIST. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I may say that a bill of this sort in some form is necessary. It has been held up time after time. It is the poor tenant that this bill helps. It does not help the big man. I have letters and telegrams in my pocket showing that they are charging tenants 35 cents an acre extra in some places, because the big corporations cannot go into the farm program, and therefore they make the tenant and sharecropper pay for this loss. The bill is for the purpose of providing that the tenants who live on family sized farms, or who rent their lands under the usual terms in the community, can go into the program. It will be too late in another 2 weeks. We ought to do something to help these folks. Something ought to be done now. I do not care what the limitation is—write your own ticket on that—but let us fix it so that the poor tenant or the sharecropper can be helped and not be charged extra by the big folks or by the corporations who have a hundred or 200 farms in one State, as they are now charging them. Why not help the poor man, the poor tenant, or the poor sharecropper?

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan that the bill be passed over without prejudice?

There was no objection.

T. V. A.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed out of order for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, I do this to call to the attention of the Members of the House that the joint committee appointed at the last session of Congress to investigate the Tennessee Valley Authority is today filing its report. In fact, I have just filed it with the Clerk of the House. The printed report, with two appendixes, has been approved by the chairmen, Senator DONAHEY, of Ohio, and Senators FRAZIER, MEAD, and SCHWARTZ, and Representatives THOMASON and BARDEN. I am reliably advised that a minority report will be submitted and filed by Senator DAVIS and Representatives JENKINS of Ohio and WOLVERTON of New Jersey.

Under the resolution that was passed extending the time, we were supposed to file this report last Saturday, the 1st day of April. That was the day before yesterday. Unfortunately neither House of Congress was in session at that time. I call attention of the House to this fact so that the membership may be informed why the report was not filed on Saturday.

CONSENT CALENDAR

CONSTRUCTION OF CERTAIN VESSELS, COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 138) to authorize the construction of certain vessels for the Coast and Geodetic Survey, Department of Commerce, and for other purposes.

On the request of Mr. WOLCOTT, the bill was passed over without prejudice.

PAYMENT OF BURIAL EXPENSES OF NATIVE EMPLOYEES IN GOVERNMENT SERVICE ABROAD

The Clerk called the bill (S. 1523) to authorize the payment of burial expenses and expenses in connection with last illness and death of native employees who die while serving in offices abroad of executive departments of the United States Government.

On request of Mr. WOLCOTT, the bill was passed over without prejudice.

REPAIRS TO CERTAIN NAVAL VESSELS

The Clerk called the bill (S. 829) to authorize alterations and repairs to certain naval vessels, and for other purposes.

On request of Mr. WOLCOTT, the bill was passed over without prejudice.

CONVERSION OF CERTAIN AUXILIARY VESSELS FOR THE NAVY

The Clerk called the bill (S. 828) to permit the President to acquire and convert, as well as to construct, certain auxiliary vessels for the Navy.

On request of Mr. CHURCH, the bill was passed over without prejudice.

AMENDING AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ACT, 1938

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 3955) to amend section 335 (d) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938.

On request of Mr. WOLCOTT, the bill was passed over without prejudice.

CANCELING REIMBURSABLE FEATURES OF ACT OF JUNE 16, 1933

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 4679) to amend title II, section 208, of the act approved June 16, 1933 (48 Stat. 205–206), to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to adjust or cancel reimbursable features of said act insofar as they apply to Indians, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. PIERCE of Oregon. Mr. Speaker, I object.

REPEALING SUBSECTION (4) OF AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ACT OF 1938

The Clerk called the bill (S. 1363) to repeal subsection (4) of subsection (c) of section 101 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subsection (4) of subsection (c) of section 101 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, which reads as follows:

"(4) Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection, if, for any reason other than flood or drought, the acreage of wheat, cotton, corn, or rice planted on the farm is less than 80 percent of the farm acreage allotment for such commodity for the purpose of payment, such farm acreage allotment shall be 25 percent in excess of such planted acreage"; is hereby repealed.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

TWELFTH OLYMPIC GAMES

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 3126, to authorize the Secretary of War to pay certain expenses incident to the training, attendance, and participation of the equestrian and modern pentathlon teams in the Twelfth Olympic Games.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill S. 1019 may be substituted for the House bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to direct the training and attendance of personnel and animals of the Regular Army as participants in the Twelfth Olympic Games: Provided, That all expenses incident to training, attendance, and participation in the Twelfth Olympic Games, including the use of such supplies, material, and equipment as in the opinion of the Secretary of War may be necessary, may be charged to the appropriations for the support of the Army: Provided further, That applicable allowances which are or may be fixed by law or regulations for participation in other military activities shall not be exceeded.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A similar House bill (H. R. 3126) was laid on the table.

SALE OF AVIATION SUPPLIES AND SERVICES TO AIRCRAFT OPERATED BY FOREIGN MILITARY ATTACHÉS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 3221, to authorize the Secretary of War to provide for the sale of aviation supplies and services to aircraft operated by foreign military and air attachés accredited to the United States, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the the Secretary of War, under such regulations as he may prescribe, may provide for the sale to any aircraft operated by any foreign military or air attaché accredited to the United States of fuel, oil, equipment, and supplies, and for the furnishing to such aircraft of mechanical service, shelter, and other assistance. Except for shelter for which no charge shall be made, all such articles shall be sold and such mechanical service and other assistance furnished at the cost thereof to the United States. All amounts received shall be credited to the appropriation from which such cost was paid.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RETIREMENT PRIVILEGES OF COMMANDING GENERAL, HEADQUARTERS AIR FORCE

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4087, to amend an act entitled "An act for making further and more effectual provision for the national defense, and for other purposes," approved June 3, 1916, as amended by the act of June 4, 1920, so as to confer on the commanding general, General Headquarters Air Force, the same retirement privileges now enjoyed by chiefs of branches.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act for making further and more effectual provision for the national defense, and for other purposes," approved June 3, 1916, as amended by the act of June 4, 1920 (41 Stat. 762), be, and the same is hereby, amended by inserting immediately after the word "branch", in line 27 of section 4c of that act, as amended, the words "or as commanding general of the General Headquarters Air Force", and by inserting in line 29 of said section, immediately preceding the word "grade", the word "highest", and immediately after the word "chief", the words "or commanding general of the General Headquarters Air Force."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PAPERS OF CHARLES COTESWORTH PINCKNEY AND THOMAS PINCKNEY

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 917, authorizing the Library of Congress to acquire by purchase, or otherwise, the whole, or any part, of the papers of Charles Cotesworth Pinckney and Thomas Pinckney, including therewith a group of documents relating to the Constitutional Convention of 1787, now in the possession of Harry Stone, of New York City.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Library of Congress is hereby authorized and empowered to acquire by purchase, or otherwise, the whole, or any part, of the papers of Charles Cotesworth Pinckney and Thomas Pinckney, including therewith a group of documents relating to the Constitutional Convention of 1787, now in the possession of Harry Stone, of 24 East Fifty-eighth Street, New York, N. Y., and there is hereby authorized to be appropriated to the Library of Congress for that purpose not to exceed the sum of $37,500.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NAVY AND MARINE MEMORIAL

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 3234, to provide for the completion of the Navy and Marine Memorial.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

Mr. JENKS of New Hampshire. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this bill has to do with the uncompleted memorial to our brave men of the sea service who have gone down to the sea in ships. This memorial has been standing in an uncompleted condition for 5 years on Columbia Island, near the Memorial Highway. Those of you who have seen it will agree that it is a fine, artistic piece of work.

In 1924 the late Representative Bacon, of New York, introduced a bill in Congress, which was passed, to provide for acquisition of the land on which to erect this memorial. In 1934 the Congress passed a bill authorizing an appropriation of $13,000 for the purpose of bringing this memorial from Cleveland, Ohio, to Washington. There it stands on Columbia Island in an unfinished condition, lacking only the steps the design calls for as a base. Briefly, the history of this memorial is that the marine and naval men of this country, school children, and other citizens, numbering more than 2,000,000, contributed money for the erection of this memorial, but due to economic conditions sufficient money could not be raised to complete it. So they are asking Congress to appropriate $100,000 for its completion.

In the last session of Congress I introduced a resolution providing for the completion of this memorial, calling for $189,634, which was reported favorably by the Committee on the Library to the House. In the closing days of Congress it was passed over, with the result that the Congress expired without having accomplished anything toward the completion of the memorial.

I wonder if the Members of this Congress want to kill this project entirely? I wonder if the Members of Congress do not feel that the courageous men who lost their lives at sea in the service of this country should be remembered by a fitting memorial in Washington in the same manner that the services of others have been recognized.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENKS of New Hampshire. I will, gladly.

Mr. McCORMACK. The House Committee on the Library has gone into this matter very exhaustively. I understand this is a unanimous report, and the House Committee on the Library has reduced the amount requested, about $89,000.

Mr. JENKS of New Hampshire. The gentleman is right.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. JENKS of New Hampshire. I will be very glad to.

Mr. TABER. When this bill was considered in the House in 1934 it was represented to the Congress that the amount carried in the bill would be sufficient to complete the proposition and that it would complete it. Then after it was set up a statement was made that more money was to be required on a large scale. Frankly, I do not understand that there has been any explanation of the failure of the Representative who had charge of this proposition to keep within the limitation that was promised at the time the other bill was passed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California that the bill be passed over without prejudice?

There was no objection.

AMENDING STATUTES PROVIDING PUNISHMENT FOR TRANSMITTING THREATENING COMMUNICATIONS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 3230, to amend the statutes providing punishment for transmitting threatening communications.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That sections 1 and 2 of the act of July 8, 1932 (47 Stat. 649), as amended (U. S. C., title 18, secs. 338a and 338b), be, and the same are hereby, further amended to read as follows:

"SECTION 1. (a) Whoever shall knowingly deposit or cause to be deposited in any post office or station thereof, or in any authorized depository for mail matter, to be sent or delivered by the Post Office Establishment of the United States, or shall knowingly cause to be delivered by the Post Office Establishment of the United States according to the direction thereon, any written or printed letter or other communication, with or without a name or designating mark subscribed thereto, addressed to any other person, and containing any demand or request for ransom or reward for the release of any kidnaped person; or whoever, with intent to extort from any person any money or other thing of value, shall deposit, cause to be deposited, or cause to be delivered, as aforesaid, any letter or other communication containing any threat to kidnap any person or any threat to injure the person of the addressee or of another, shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than 20 years, or both.

"(b) Whoever shall knowingly deposit or cause to be deposited in any post office or station thereof, or in any authorized depository for mail matter, to be sent or delivered by the Post Office Establishment of the United States, or shall knowingly cause to be delivered by the Post Office establishment of the United States according to the direction thereon, any written or printed letter or other communication with or without a name or designating mark subscribed thereto, addressed to any other person and containing any threat to kidnap any person or any threat to injure the person of the addressee or of another shall be fined not more than $1,000, or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

"(c) Whoever, with intent to extort from any person any money or other thing of value, shall knowingly deposit or cause to be deposited in any post office or station thereof, or in any authorized depository for mail matter, to be sent or delivered by the Post Office Establishment of the United States, or shall knowingly cause to be delivered by the Post Office Establishment of the United States according to the direction thereon, any written or printed letter or other communication, with or without a name or designating mark subscribed thereto, addressed to any other person and containing any threat to injure the property or reputation of the addressee or of another, or the reputation of a deceased person, or any threat to accuse the addressee or any other person of a crime shall be fined not more than $500, or imprisoned not more than 2 years, or both.

"(d) Any person violating this section may be prosecuted in the judicial district in which such letter or other communication is deposited in such post office, station, or authorized depository for mail matter, or in the judicial district into which such letter or other communication was carried by the United States mail for delivery according to the direction thereon.

"SEC. 2. (a) Whoever shall knowingly deposit or cause to be deposited in any post office or station thereof, or in any authorized depository for mail matter, of any foreign country any written or printed letter or other communication addressed to any person within the United States, for the purpose of having such communication delivered by the Post Office Establishment of such foreign country to the Post Office Establishment of the United States and by it delivered to such addressee in the United States, and as a result thereof such communication is delivered by the Post Office Establishment of such foreign country to the Post Office Establishment of the United States and by it delivered to the address to which it is directed in the United States, and containing any demand or request for ransom or reward for the release of any kidnaped person; or whoever, with intent to extort from any person any money or other thing of value, shall deposit or cause to be deposited, as aforesaid, any letter or other communication for the purpose aforesaid, containing any threat to kidnap any person or any threat to injure the person of the addressee or of another, shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than 20 years, or both.

"(b) Whoever shall knowingly deposit or cause to be deposited in any post office or station thereof, or in any authorized depository for mail matter, of any foreign country any written or printed letter or other communication addressed to any person within the United States, for the purpose of having such communication delivered by the Post Office Establishment of such foreign country to the Post Office Establishment of the United States and by it delivered to such addressee in the United States, and as a result thereof such communication is delivered by the Post Office Establishment of such foreign country to the Post Office Establishment of the United States and by it delivered to the address to which it is directed in the United States, and containing any threat to kidnap any person or any threat to injure the person of the addressee or of another, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

"(c) Whoever, with intent to extort from any person any money or other thing of value, shall knowingly deposit or cause to be deposited in any post office or station thereof, or in any authorized depository for mail matter, of any foreign country, any written or printed letter or other communication, addressed to any person within the United States for the purpose of having such communication delivered by the post-office establishment of such foreign country to the Post Office Establishment of the United States and by it delivered to such addressee in the United States, and as a result thereof such communication is delivered by the post-office establishment of such foreign country to the Post Office Establishment of the United States and by it delivered to the address to which it is directed in the United States, and containing any threat to injury the property or reputation of the addressee or of another, or the reputation of a deceased person, or any threat to accuse the addressee or any other person of a crime, shall be fined not more than $500 or imprisoned not more than 2 years, or both.

"(d) Any person violating this section may be prosecuted either in the district into which such letter or other communication was carried by the United States mail for delivery according to the direction thereon, or in which it was caused to be delivered by the United States mail to the person to whom it was addressed."

SEC. 2. That the act of May 18, 1934 (48 Stat. 781; U. S. C., title 18, sec. 408d), be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"(a) Whoever shall transmit in interstate commerce, by any means whatsoever, any communication containing any demand or request for a ransom or reward for the release of any kidnaped person; or whoever, with intent to extort from any person, firm, association, or corporation, any money or other thing of value, shall transmit, as aforesaid, any communication containing any threat to kidnap any person or any threat to injure the person of another shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than 20 years, or both.

"(b) Whoever shall transmit in interstate commerce by any means whatsoever any communication containing any threat to kidnap any person or any threat to injure the person of another shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

"(c) Whoever, with intent to extort from any person, firm, association, or corporation, any money or other thing of value, shall transmit in interstate commerce by any means whatsoever any communication containing any threat to injure the property or reputation of the addressee or of another or the reputation of a deceased person or any threat to accuse the addressee or any other person of a crime shall be fined not more than $500 or imprisoned not more than 2 years, or both.

"(d) Any person violating the provision of this section may be prosecuted in the judicial district from or into which such threat is transmitted, as aforesaid. The term 'interstate commerce,' as used in this section, shall include communication from one State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, to another State, Territory, or the District of Columbia."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PNEUMATIC MAIL TUBE SYSTEMS IN NEW YORK AND BOSTON

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 3811, to provide for the appraisal of the pneumatic mail tube systems in New York and Boston.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Postmaster General is authorized and directed to provide for an appraisal by competent engineers of the properties comprising the pneumatic mail tube systems in New York and Boston and the franchises enjoyed and patent rights utilized in connection therewith.

SEC. 2. There is authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sum as may be necessary to carry out this act, but not to exceed $25,000.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NATURALIZATION PETITIONS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 2200, to dispense with particular allegations as to renunciation of allegiance in petitions for naturalization and in the oath of renunciation of foreign allegiance by omitting the name of "the prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty" of which the petitioner for naturalization is a subject or citizen.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman from Massachusetts explain the bill?

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, being the author of the bill, and the inquiry of the gentleman from Tennessee being a proper one, I want to make a brief explanation of the bill. Under present law, anyone who applies for naturalization must in his application state not only the country in which he was born but who is the particular king, prince, potentate, or government in control. When he is naturalized, he must not only make a general renunciation of allegiance to all foreign princes, potentates, states, or sovereignties but he must make a specific renunciation. This bill in no way changes existing law with reference to naturalization. The requirements of the existing law are in no way disturbed or affected by this bill, except that it dispenses with particular allegations to renunciation of allegiance.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the second paragraph of the second subdivision of section 4 of the act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. 597; U. S. C., title 8, sec. 379), is amended to read as follows: "The petition shall set forth that he is not a disbeliever in or opposed to organized government or a member of or affiliated with any organization or body or persons teaching disbelief in or opposed to organized government, a polygamist or believer in the practice of polygamy, and that it is his intention to become a citizen of the United States and to renounce absolutely and forever all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty, and that it is his intention to reside permanently within the United States, whether or not he has been denied admission as a citizen of the United States, and if denied, the ground or grounds of such denial, the court or courts in which such decision was rendered, and that the cause for such denial has been since cured or removed and every fact material to his naturalization and required to be proved upon the final hearing of his application."

SEC. 2. The third subdivision of section 4 of said act of June 29, 1906 (34 Stat. 597–598; U. S. C., title 8, sec. 381), is amended to read as follows: "He shall, before he is admitted to citizenship, declare on oath in open court that he will support the Constitution of the United States, and that he absolutely and entirely renounces and abjures all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty of which he was before a citizen or subject; and he will support and defend the Constitution and laws of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and bear true faith and allegiance to the same."

With the following committee amendments:

Insert after the enacting clause the following language:

"That the first subdivision of section 4 of the act of June 29, 1906, as amended (45 Stat. 1545; U. S. C., title 8, sec. 373), is amended to read as follows:

" 'First. He shall declare on oath before the clerk of any court authorized by this act to naturalize aliens, or his authorized deputy, in the district in which such alien resides, 2 years at least prior to his admission, and after he has reached the age of 18 years, that it is his bona fide intention to become a citizen of the United States and to reside permanently therein, and that he will, before being admitted to citizenship, renounce forever all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty. Such declaration shall set forth the name, age, occupation, personal description, place of birth, last foreign residence, the date of arrival, the name of the vessel, if any, in which he came to the United States, and the present place of residence in the United States of said alien. No declaration of intention or petition for naturalization shall be made outside of the office of the clerk of court.' "

Page 1, in line 3, strike out the first word "That" and insert in lieu thereof "Sec. 2."

Page 2, line 13, strike out the figure "2" and insert in lieu thereof the figure "3," so that it will read: "Sec. 3."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ALIEN VETERANS OF WORLD WAR

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 805, to extend further time for naturalization to alien veterans of the World War under the act approved May 25, 1932 (47 Stat. 165), to extend the same privileges to certain veterans of countries allied with the United States during the World War, and for other purposes.

Mr. GORE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman withhold his request to permit me to make a statement?

Mr. GORE. I withhold the request for the present, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the author of the bill, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. LESINSKI], and at his request, I shall be very happy to explain the purpose of the bill.

The purpose of this bill is to extend from May 25, 1938, until May 25, 1940, the privilege we have heretofore granted those aliens who fought in the allied armies during the World War to become citizens of this country without going through the long and tedious procedure usually required in citizenship proceedings. This bill originally has been endorsed by the Disabled American Veterans of the World War and various other patriotic and veterans' organizations. It is approved by the Department.

It seems that during the World War about 30,000 aliens, who were not subject to the Draft Act and, under the encouragement of the Government, particularly the committee presided over by George Creel, appointed by President Wilson, went abroad, fought in the allied armies shoulder to shoulder with the American troops. They were under the supervision of our Army Industrial College of our War Department. Of the 30,000, about 16,000 returned. The rest were killed or lost in action or remained abroad. Of these 16,000, only 10,000 availed themselves of the privileges we accorded them under the statute as passed originally. We allowed them to become citizens without the filing of the certificate of registration, certificate of arrival, and, most important, without having to file first papers. We thus accorded such alien veterans, as well as our own veterans, the right to have their application for citizenship expedited. The time limit fixed by the original act has expired, but there still remain between 5,000 and 6,000 of these veterans who have not availed themselves of their rights under that act. Many of them did not know what their privileges were. These were and are uninformed. They are not necessarily members of the American Legion, and knowledge of their rights under this bill did not come to many of them, for the bill was not advertised. Many of them are yearning to become American citizens. It is particularly disastrous not to be citizens now, especially in view of the W. P. A., the P. W. A., and other governmental policies. Since these men were willing to go through the valley of the shadow in the interest of our country, and since we have accorded these rights to so many others of these aliens, there seems to be no reason to withhold the privilege from those remaining. There will be, however, no further application to extend the time.

Mr. GORE. Can the gentleman tell me what the vote in the committee was?

Mr. SCHULTE. If the gentleman will yield, Mr. Speaker, I, as a member of the committee, may say that the vote was unanimous.

Mr. GORE. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my request and my objection.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I notice the bill contains the words "or with countries allied with the United States in the World War." What countries would that include?

Mr. SCHULTE. It would include Poland, for instance.

Mr. PATMAN. Name the countries.

Mr. CELLER. Great Britain, France, Poland, Italy, Czechoslovakia—all the allied countries. I cannot recall them all.

Mr. PATMAN. In other words, any veteran who was in the service of a government allied with the United States during the World War?

Mr. CELLER. That is right.

Mr. PATMAN. This privilege is extended to them?

Mr. CELLER. That is right.

Mr. PATMAN. I do not see why you should let it go so far. If it were limited to the United States Government that would be all right, but the gentleman embraces Poland, Italy, and Russia was our ally part of the time. Would Russia be included in this?

Mr. CELLER. Yes. The aliens primarily affected are the Polish aliens. For example, they were actually encouraged to leave the country and proceed to Europe and fight; so the Poles are the principal ones involved. I do not believe any Russians are involved. I am sure they are not.

Mr. SCHULTE. It is not only the Poles. It is every other.

Mr. CELLER. Remember this is not an immigration bill. It is a naturalization matter. All those to be benefited are already here. They must comply with all provisions of the naturalization laws, must be here for permanent residence, must show 5 years' good moral character immediately preceding the filing of the petition. He must show actual service in the American or allied armies and honorable discharge, legal admission into the United States, and so forth.

The regular order was demanded.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is, Is there objection to the request that the bill be passed over without prejudice?

Mr. GORE. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my request.

Mr. PACE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. PACE]?

There was no objection.

GENERAL PULASKI'S MEMORIAL DAY

The Clerk called the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 133) authorizing the President of the United States of America to proclaim October 11, 1939, General Pulaski's Memorial Day, for the observance and commemoration of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the House joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States of America is authorized to issue a proclamation calling upon officials of the Government to display the flag of the United States on all governmental buildings on October 11, 1939, and inviting the people of the United States to observe the day in schools and churches, or other suitable places, with appropriate ceremonies in commemoration of the death of Gen. Casimir Pulaski.

The House joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

INTERNATIONAL BOUNDARY COMMISSION, UNITED STATES AND MEXICO, AMERICAN SECTION—LEASE OF LAND ACQUIRED TO CITIZENS OF THE UNITED STATES

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 3065, to amend Public Law No. 370, Seventy-fourth Congress, approved August 27, 1935 (49 Stat. 906).

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. LEWIS of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask for an explanation of this bill.

Mr. THOMASON. Mr. Speaker, when the treaty with Mexico for the rectification of the channel of the Rio Grande was agreed upon and the work got under way, certain claims for damages arose. That undertaking is nearing completion and a fine job was done. But during the course of that work certain small claims arose in connection with the matter. The State Department, together with the International Boundary Commissioner for the United States, Mr. Lawson, have requested authority to settle these small claims of less than $1,000 from appropriations that have been allocated to them for this particular work, and, as I understand it, there are only a few of them less than $1,000. There may be a few larger claims, but they will have to take the regular course by way of the Claims Committee.

Mr. LEWIS of Colorado. I thank the gentleman for his explanation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Public Law No. 370, Seventy-fourth Congress, approved August 27, 1935, is amended by adding a paragraph to the said act reading as follows:

"The Secretary of State, acting through such officers as he may designate, is further authorized to consider, adjust, and pay from any appropriated funds any claim for damages accruing after March 31, 1937, caused to owners of lands or other private property of any kind by reason of the operations of the United States, its officers or employees, in the survey, construction, operation, or maintenance of any project constructed or administered through the American Commissioner, International Boundary Commission, United States and Mexico, if such claim for damages does not exceed $1,000 and has been filed with the American Commissioner within 1 year after the damage is alleged to have occurred, and when in the opinion of the American Commissioner such claim is substantiated by a report of a board appointed by the said Commissioner."

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 8, strike out "any appropriated funds" and insert "funds appropriated for the project the construction of which resulted in damages."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDMENT OF NATURALIZATION LAWS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4100, to amend the naturalization laws in relation to any alien previously lawfully admitted into the United States for permanent residence and who is temporarily absent from the United States solely in his or her capacity as a regularly ordained clergyman or representative of a recognized religious denomination or organization existing in the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I have the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts explain this bill?

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I am very glad the gentleman asked me to explain the bill, because this illustrates very interesting experiences which each and every member of a legislative body, particularly of Congress, meets. I think a brief story would be the best way of explaining the bill.

I was in my office in Boston last December when a young Catholic priest called to see me. It seemed he was born in Lithuania in 1913. He came over to this country with his mother when he was about 3 months old. His father came over shortly thereafter. The young man was 26 or 27 years old, I should judge. He had been recently ordained into the priesthood and was a member of a missionary order. He was ordered to Burma for missionary work. Just about that time he found out he was not a naturalized citizen. He always assumed he had been naturalized, in the belief that his father had become naturalized. The young man, just prior to leaving, with these mixed conditions existing, faced the loss of his right of naturalization and whatever rights he had by going abroad and doing his duty as a missionary, being away for several years performing his duty. Naturally, he responded to his duty.

He came to me to find out what, if anything, could be done. I made inquiry and found that the law had to be amended. I found that under existing law anyone similarly situated going abroad for business reasons could stay abroad, provided they were engaged in American business abroad, which is a very good thing. Instead of introducing a bill for this young man I introduced a general bill to cover all religions and also relating to representatives of any religious organization assigned to duty in the missionary field. All religions have not only their clergymen, but some of them have teachers, some have nuns, and some may have others in other capacities. This also would cover the Y. M. C. A. I introduced a bill to cover all such cases.

About 10 days or 2 weeks ago I had the pleasure of having a representative of the Christian and Missionary Alliance of New York City, Mr. A. C. Snead, who was a foreign secretary, call to see me. He told me they had a few similar cases which this bill, in its retroactive effect, will cover. I asked him to send me a letter, and under date of March 27 he sent me a letter, as follows:

THE CHRISTIAN AND MISSIONARY ALLIANCE,
New York, N. Y., March 27, 1939.

The Honorable JOHN W. McCORMACK,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We are much interested in your bill, H. R. 4100. I am sure it will be of help to us in the case of a number of our missionaries who would be glad to become American citizens but feel they cannot, in justice to the great need for continued missionary work in their fields, spend the required 5 years in the United States at any one time.

At present we have the case of the Rev. Paul H. Bartel, whose parents are missionaries in China and who has no citizenship. He had planned to remain in this country 5 years when he and his family came home on their present furlough because of his desire to become a citizen, but the need in China is so great and the opportunities for loving service are so abundant that he felt he could not remain longer here and has gone back to his field in the Kweichow-Szechuan Provinces. Mrs. Bartel is an American citizen. Mr. Bartel spent about 2 years here, took out his first papers and desires to complete his citizenship but cannot afford to return once a year to this country.

We trust that you will be prospered in regard to this bill and that it will be passed both by the House of Representatives and a similar one by the Senate.

Our organization has a total of 549 missionaries, 470 of them being in active service in 20 mission fields around the world.

Again expressing our appreciation for the fine step you have taken in the introduction of your bill and wishing you every success, I am

Very sincerely,

A. C. SNEAD, Foreign Secretary.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to include the entire letter at this point in my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. BARDEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. BARDEN. I certainly do not want to retard church work either in this country or in any other country, but I am interested to know just how this bill would operate with relation to people coming from another country into this country for 6 months or 1 month. Could they preserve their right to become citizens and then go back and exercise this right if they saw fit?

Mr. McCORMACK. If they come in temporarily, of course, they do not come within the purview of this bill.

Mr. BARDEN. What would be the requirements under the gentleman's bill?

Mr. McCORMACK. Under this bill the present naturalization law is in no way changed except when a person is regularly in the United States on a permanent visa, coming in under the quota and complying with all the provisions of our law.

Mr. BARDEN. I believe the gentleman has answered the question when he says that person must come in under a permanent visa.

Mr. McCORMACK. Exactly. This bill relates only to those who are here under a permanent visa.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McCORMACK. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. How will this bill apply to this kind of a case? I have a case in mind where a man has been in the ministry in this country for 20 years but has never yet thought enough of this country to take out his first papers. This man is here lawfully, and he wants to go back and forth to the country of his nativity. Is there not some way under the gentleman's bill whereby we can be protected against such a situation? I appreciate the situation in the case referred to by the gentleman from Massachusetts, where a young man has come to this country not of his own volition but with his parents; but the case to which I refer is the case of a man who came in of his own volition—in fact, I know of two such cases, where men came in of their own volition and have been here 20 years, yet have not thought enough of this country to take out their first citizenship papers. I do not want to give that sort of fellow any more privileges.

We cannot send him out, and I have no desire to invoke any activity that might result in his being sent out.

Mr. McCORMACK. That man would not come within the purview of this bill unless he left the country, and it must be for missionary work. He cannot leave for anything else, because the bill is linked definitely to missionary work, and that fact must be established. He cannot leave the country and engage in any business activities, and no one can under this bill.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. The gentleman says his leaving has to be for missionary work. The bill does not state that. It states "in his or her capacity as a regularly ordained clergyman."

Mr. McCORMACK. The bill reads as follows:

In his or her capacity as a regularly ordained clergyman or representative of a recognized religious denomination or religious organization existing in the United States, shall be considered as residing in the United States for the purpose of naturalization notwithstanding any such absence from the United States, but he or she shall in all other respects comply with the requirements of the naturalization laws. Such alien shall prove to the satisfaction of the Secretary of Labor at the naturalization court that his or her absence from the United States has been solely in the capacity hereinbefore described.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I am entirely in sympathy with the situation as outlined by the gentleman in his opening statement. I have no objection at all to the gentleman's bill as it applies to the case in which the gentleman is individually interested. However, this bill goes much further. It is so broad that in section 2 it states:

The Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, with the approval of the Secretary of Labor, shall prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary for the enforcement of this act.

Mr. McCORMACK. Of course, that is necessary to carry out the purposes of the bill. This provision was recommended by the Department of Labor itself, and it is necessary.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Will the gentleman ask that this bill be passed over without prejudice, so we can look into the question and perhaps modify the bill? I may say to the gentleman that I am not opposed to his proposition or any similar proposition. It is one thing when a man who is engaged in the ministry or is a missionary came into this country without his volition because he came with his parents, but when a man sneaks across the border——

Mr. McCORMACK. This has nothing to do with that question.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I withdraw the words "sneaks across the border."

Mr. McCORMACK. This bill applies only to persons regularly in this country.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Very well. I bear no ill will toward anyone who has come into this country regularly or who has been here so long he cannot be deported, whether he came in regularly or not, but I say that anyone who stands up before the people, let him be a minister or a priest or anyone—and I have in mind only two ministers—and is an exponent of certain views, yet has not seen fit even to take out his first papers, should not be given any preference or any privileges whatever.

Mr. McCORMACK. We are not giving such men any preference, I assure the gentleman. Of course, if the gentleman wishes to submit a unanimous-consent request that the bill be passed over without prejudice I shall not object, but I hope the gentleman will not let the cases of the two men to whom he referred influence him to make such a request. If they are the men the gentleman says they are they will not go into the missionary field as do men and women of all creeds who face the hard work that is involved, and sacrifice their lives, if necessary in the work of God, and take the vows of charity, as they all do, if not expressly then by implication. Furthermore, I submit to the gentleman, assuming the men to whom the gentleman refers did enter the missionary field, why stop the passage of such a deserving piece of legislation just because there are one or two men of the type to which the gentleman has referred?

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I object, Mr. Speaker; but I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

CEREMONIES IN ROTUNDA—PRESENTATION OF STATUE OF LATE WILL ROGERS

The Clerk called the concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 1) authorizing the holding of ceremonies in the rotunda in connection with the presentation of a statue of the late Will Rogers.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the concurrent resolution?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and, of course, I shall not object, but I wish we might have some interpretation of the word "temporarily" in line 3, of page 1; otherwise, we might establish a precedent with respect to the placing of memorials in the rotunda. Under the law as it now exists each State has authority to put two statues in the Capitol, presumably in Statuary Hall, but because of the condition of foundation, I understand they have found it necessary to spread the statues throughout the Capitol Building. We give specific authority for these ceremonies in the rotunda, which is all right, and it is also all right that during these ceremonies and for a reasonable time thereafter the memorial remain in the rotunda, but I am wondering who is going to be the judge of how long the memorial remains in the rotunda.

Mr. KELLER. I believe the gentleman will recall that last session we passed a resolution here authorizing and directing the Architect of the Capitol to replace these statues. You know this hall of horrors was entirely full and even running over with statues and there was finally passed a resolution at the last session providing a limitation of one statue to each State in the hall that was used for that purpose, the old House of Representatives Hall.

This concurrent resolution is simply to provide for the ceremony in the Rotunda and then to let the Architect of the Capitol and the committee place it wherever they may find it necessary. If Oklahoma has somebody else they prefer to Will Rogers, they can place that statue there, and if not they can place this one in Statuary Hall.

Mr. WOLCOTT. So far as I am concerned, a statue of Will Rogers could remain in the rotunda permanently, but we are establishing a precedent in this bill and I am wondering if the gentleman had in mind who would have authority for placing such a memorial permanently.

Mr. KELLER. That has been done heretofore entirely upon the request of the States. For instance, when Illinois voted on what statue should be left there, they naturally voted for one and we took the other one out and put it at some other place.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Those are not now in the rotunda.

Mr. KELLER. There is no provision for placing anything in the rotunda except what was already there.

Mr. WOLCOTT. What would the gentleman consider, in order that we may establish legislative intent, a reasonable length of time to modify the word "temporarily," in line 3?

Mr. KELLER. I think the Architect of the Capitol and the Representatives from Oklahoma would be the best ones to decide that. I would not like to undertake that, but, undoubtedly, Oklahoma will hold a proper ceremony there at the right time, subject to determination by the people of Oklahoma and the representatives here in the Government.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Do I understand the Architect of the Capitol has jurisdiction over that?

Mr. KELLER. Yes. Certainly.

Mr. WOLCOTT. And after the ceremonies he may move it to some other location, either within the rotunda or outside of the rotunda, as he wishes?

Mr. KELLER. Yes.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Reserving the right to object, there is nothing in this bill that would preclude this statue from being in Statuary Hall proper?

Mr. KELLER. Oh, certainly not.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the Senate concurrent resolution, as follows:

Senate Concurrent Resolution 1

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Will Rogers Memorial Commission be, and it is hereby, authorized to place temporarily in the rotunda of the Capitol a statute of the late Will Rogers, of Oklahoma, and to hold ceremonies in the rotunda on said occasion; and that the Architect of the Capitol be, and he is hereby, authorized to make the necessary arrangements therefor.

The Senate concurrent resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PNEUMATIC-TUBE-SYSTEM EMPLOYEES

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4771, limiting working hours of pneumatic-tube-system employees to 8 in 10 hours a day.

Mr. BARDEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I ask the author of this bill, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS] to explain the necessity for the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARDEN. Yes.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, when Calendar No. 63 was called, I expected that someone would ask for an explanation of the bill. No one did so, and the bill was passed; and Calendar Nos. 70, 71, 72, and 73 are all in respect of this same question of these pneumatic postal tubes in Boston and New York.

Mr. BARDEN. If the gentleman will permit me, I was unable to see why he should read five bills and pass them all at the same time with the possibility of overlapping in each bill.

Mr. WOLCOTT. My question is whether these employees of this contract system are now Federal employees?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. These bills were prepared and introduced at the request of the Post Office Department. Until recently the employees of these tube companies have been private employees. They now, however, are Federal employees, and these bills were designed to give them the same rights and benefits that other Federal employees have, since they are now on the Federal pay roll. They have been taken into the civil service.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I read the report on H. R. 3811. That has to do with the purchase of this system. There is no reference in there to the status of the employees. I considered that formerly the employees of these tube companies under this contract were civilian employees and I wondered if they had been just blanketed into the civil service.

Mr. ROMJUE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Yes.

Mr. ROMJUE. We have only two tube systems, one in New York and one in Boston. Formerly the Government let these contracts out for handling the mails through the tubes.

Mr. WOLCOTT. The gentleman says "formerly."

Mr. ROMJUE. Yes.

Mr. WOLCOTT. H. R. 3811 is the authority for the Postal Department or the United States Government to appraise the system with a view to purchasing it.

Mr. ROMJUE. That bill provides for an investigation to be made; and the purpose of that investigation——

Mr. WOLCOTT. Is to determine the amount or to appraise the amount the Government would pay? If the Government should purchase this system, as indicated by H. R. 3811, which authorizes this appraisal, then by what authority are those employees of this company now in the civil service?

Mr. ROMJUE. I shall explain that to the gentleman.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Are they in the civil service?

Mr. ROMJUE. They are in the classified civil service now because they have changed their status. Formerly when the Government made the contract with these tube owners, the tube owners employed their own people, but since the first of last July the Government has had its own employees in there.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Are they the same employees who were formerly there?

Mr. ROMJUE. Some are and some are not.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Have they been blanketed into the civil service?

Mr. ROMJUE. They have been put under the civil service.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Under what authority?

Mr. ROMJUE. The Civil Service Commission; and in making the new contract the Government furnished men, but at that time they did not have a classification under the civil service. They have had now since the 1st of July last.

Mr. WOLCOTT. And the Government is now leasing these tubes?

Mr. ROMJUE. That is right.

Mr. WOLCOTT. And handling them itself?

Mr. ROMJUE. Yes; and the purpose of this bill just passed is to make an inspection of these tubes; not necessarily for the purchase of them, but also to determine whether we are paying a fair rental value and also whether it will be feasible for the Government to purchase them.

Mr. WOLCOTT. And they are now being leased by the Government?

Mr. ROMJUE. That is correct.

Mr. WOLCOTT. And the employees are under the classified civil service, blanketed in by Executive order?

Mr. ROMJUE. That is correct.

Mr. WOLCOTT. So that these four bills, which might better have been put in one—70, 71, 72, and 73 on the calendar—are merely to put these employees on the same basis as other postal employees?

Mr. ROMJUE. Yes.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. The Department thought it would be more expeditious to have the employees who are handling the Government mail, some of which is valuable, under the control of the Government. Formerly these men handled the mail for the company, valuable mail, which went through these tubes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the fifth paragraph of section 116, title 39, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"Special mechanics, general mechanics, mechanics' helpers, driver-mechanics, and garagemen-drivers in the motor-vehicle service, and employees of the pneumatic-tube system, shall be required to work not more than 8 hours a day. The 8 hours of service shall not extend over a longer period than 10 consecutive hours, and the schedules of duties of the employees shall be regulated accordingly. In cases of emergency, or if the needs of the service require, special clerks, clerks, special mechanics, general mechanics, mechanics' helpers, driver-mechanics, and garagemen-drivers in the motor-vehicle service, and employees of the pneumatic-tube system, can be required to work in excess of 8 hours per day, and for such overtime service they shall be paid on the basis of the annual pay received by such employees. In computing the compensation for such overtime the annual salary or compensation for such employees shall be divided by 306 (5?), the number of working days in the year less all Sundays and legal holidays enumerated in section 119 of this title; the quotient thus obtained will be the daily compensation which divided by 8 will give the hourly compensation for such overtime service. When the needs of the service require the employment on Sundays and holidays of route supervisors, special clerks, clerks, dispatchers, mechanics in charge, special mechanics, general mechanics, mechanics' helpers, driver-mechanics, and garagemen-drivers in the motor-vehicle service, and employees of the pneumatic-tube system, they shall be allowed compensatory time on one day within 6 days next succeeding the Sunday, except the last 3 Sundays in the calendar year, and on one day within 30 days next succeeding the holiday and the last 3 Sundays in the year on which service is performed: Provided, however, That the Postmaster General may, if the exigencies of the service require it, authorize the payment of overtime in lieu of compensatory time for service on Sundays and holidays."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

T. V. A. INVESTIGATION

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I understand that this morning the gentleman from Texas [Mr. THOMASON], a member of the T. V. A. investigating committee, presented a majority report of that committee and filed it with the Clerk. In the Senate, Senator DONAHEY presented a majority and also a minority report signed by Senator DAVIS and Representative WOLVERTON and myself, together with a special minority report presented by myself. It is apparent that the House is about to adjourn shortly, and we are not quite ready to present the report on this side, because it will need some stenographic changes. I ask unanimous consent to be permitted to file the minority report signed by Senator DAVIS, Mr. WOLVERTON, and myself, and the special minority report filed by myself, some time before midnight tonight.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

CONSENT CALENDAR

TIME CREDITS FOR SUBSTITUTES IN THE PNEUMATIC-TUBE SERVICE

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4772, to provide time credits for substitutes in the pneumatic-tube service.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the last paragraph of section 11 of the act entitled "An act reclassifying the salaries of postmasters and employees of the Postal Service, readjusting their salaries and compensation on an equitable basis, increasing postal rates to provide for such readjustment, and for other purposes," approved February 28, 1925, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"Substitute clerks, substitute garagemen-drivers, substitute driver-mechanics, and substitute general mechanics, when appointed regular clerks, garagemen-drivers, driver-mechanics, or general mechanics in the motor-vehicle service, and substitutes in the pneumatic-tube service when appointed as regular employees in the pneumatic-tube service, shall be given credit for the actual time served as a substitute on the basis of 1 year for each 306 days of 8 hours, and shall be appointed to the grade to which such clerk, garageman-driver, driver-mechanic, general mechanic, or employee in the pneumatic-tube service, would have progressed had his original appointment as a substitute been made to grade 1. Substitute service shall be computed from the date of original appointment as a regular classified substitute, and the salaries of the employees shall be fixed accordingly upon the date of their advancement to a regular position under section 116 of this title. Any fractional part of a year's substitute service, rendered after the enactment of this sentence, shall be included with his service as a regular clerk, garageman-driver, driver-mechanic, or general mechanic in the motor-vehicle service or employee in the pneumatic-tube service, in determining eligibility for promotion to the next higher grade following appointment to a regular position."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DIFFERENTIAL IN PAY FOR NIGHT WORK TO PNEUMATIC-TUBE-SYSTEM EMPLOYEES

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4785, to provide a differential in pay for night work to pneumatic-tube-system employees in the Postal Service.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act to provide a differential in pay for night work in the Postal Service," enacted May 24, 1928 (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 39, sec. 828), is amended by striking out the words "motor-vehicle service" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "motor-vehicle and pneumatic-tube services."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENDING PROVISIONS OF 40-HOUR LAW TO PNEUMATIC-TUBE-SYSTEM EMPLOYEES

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4786, to extend the provisions of the 40-hour law to pneumatic-tube-system employees in the Postal Service.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the first section of the act entitled "An act to fix the hours of duty of postal employees, and for other purposes," approved August 14, 1935, as amended, is further amended by striking out the words "motor-vehicle service" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "motor-vehicle and pneumatic-tube services."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ATTENDANCE OF MARINE BAND AT UNITED CONFEDERATE VETERANS' REUNION

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 3946, to authorize the attendance of the Marine Band at the United Confederate Veterans' 1939 reunion at Trinidad, Colo., August 22, 23, 24, and 25, 1939, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President is authorized to permit the band of the United States Marine Corps to attend and give concerts at the United Confederate Veterans' reunion to be held at Trinidad, Colo., on August 22, 23, 24, and 25, 1939.

SEC. 2. For the purpose of defraying the expenses of such band in attending and giving concerts at such reunion there is authorized to be appropriated the sum of $10,500, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to carry out the provisions of this act: Provided, That in addition to transportation and Pullman accommodations the leaders and members of the Marine Band be allowed not to exceed $5 per day each for actual living expenses while on this duty, and that the payment of such expenses shall be in addition to the pay and allowances to which they would be entitled while serving at their permanent station.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CONSTRUCTION AND MAINTENANCE OF A NATIONAL GALLERY OF ART

The Clerk called the next business, House Joint Resolution 225, amending the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution providing for the construction and maintenance of a National Gallery of Art," approved March 24, 1937.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, can the gentleman give us some estimate as to this cost? In line 3, on page 2, and I quote from the resolution, it reads, "there are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary."

I have always taken a very decided stand against these blanket authorizations, without some indication as to how much money is involved.

Mr. KELLER. Of course, the gentleman will permit me to suggest that it is safe to assume the Appropriations Committee will never appropriate too much. If the gentleman will look on page 4 of the report, in the third paragraph, he will find there set out the items mentioned making up the total of $184,200. When we went over it we found there were two items there that are permanent and will not be repeated. About $2,000 for printing and $123,000 for office furniture. Of course, when that is bought, it is bought for a long time to come. If you will take $125,000 away from $184,000, you have $59,200. In other words, that represents the light, heat, keeping the gallery clean, and so forth. As you will remember, the original act provides that there is an endowment fund to pay all the high officials and to look after the art gallery, but the Government assumes the responsibility of keeping it clean, keeping a watchman there at night, and keeping it lighted.

The object of having it done at the present time is to permit the opening of the gallery a year sooner than otherwise would be possible. The gallery will be finished during 1940. They are getting ready to make the proper arrangements.

Mr. WOLCOTT. What does the gentleman say will be the maximum which this Commission will ask from the Appropriations Committee under the authorization of this act?

Mr. KELLER. About $118,400 a year is the calculation of it. Those two items, printing and office furniture, are paid for a long time to come.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Then why does not the gentleman authorize annual appropriations?

Mr. KELLER. We went over that very carefully in the committee and studied it with a great deal of care. We found great difficulty in writing a bill that would meet all the considerations that the gentleman is now raising. I think if the gentleman had sat with us he would agree that we have done the wise thing. Our Committee on Appropriations is not a committee that will raise appropriations beyond reason. While somebody suggested to me it would be well for the Library Committee to keep some control of it, I said we had no desire to do that. We are perfectly willing to leave that in the hands of the Committee on Appropriations.

I certainly can see nothing against it.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the last sentence of section 4 (a) of the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution providing for the construction and maintenance of a National Gallery of Art", approved March 24, 1937, is hereby amended to read as follows: "For these purposes, and to provide, prior to the completion of the National Gallery of Art, for the protection and care of the works of art in said gallery and for administrative and operating expenses and equipment preparatory to the opening of the gallery to the public, there are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary."

The resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

COOPERATION WITH PUBLIC SCHOOL DISTRICT, WOLF POINT, MONT.

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 961, for expenditure of funds for cooperation with the public-school board at Wolf Point, Mont., for completing the construction, extension, equipment, and improvement of a public-school building to be available to Indian children of the Fort Peck Indian Reservation, Mont.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

SPANISH WAR PENSIONS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 2301, to amend section 2 of the act entitled "An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the War with Spain, the Philippine Insurrection, or the China Relief Expedition, to certain maimed soldiers, to certain widows, minor children, and helpless children of such soldiers and sailors, and for other purposes," approved May 1, 1926.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I object.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I desire to place in the RECORD a brief explanation of H. R. 2301, which will be called up for consideration as soon as the Committee on Pensions has the call on Calendar Wednesday.

PURPOSE OF H. R. 2301

The purpose of this bill is to advance the restricting date of marriage for Spanish War widows incorporated in section 2 of the act of May 1, 1926, from September 1, 1922, to January 1, 1938.

POLICY OF COMMITTEE

It is and has been the policy of the Committee on Pensions to accord the same rights and benefits to Spanish-American War veterans and their dependents as has been granted to veterans and dependents of the Civil War. This policy has the unanimous approval of the United Spanish War Veterans. Their representatives, when appearing before the committee, urgently requested the committee to perpetuate this policy. The Congress established a precedent whereby the Civil War widows were permitted to marry a veteran 40 years after the war, and, applying this precedent to the widows of the Spanish War, this bill will permit the widow of a Spanish War veteran to marry 40 years after the war.

RIGHTS OF WIDOWS UNDER EXISTING LAW

A short résumé of the act of May 1, 1926, granting pensions to widows of the Spanish-American War, provides pensions to widows, remarried widows, children, and helpless children. Ninety days' service and an honorable discharge is required or, regardless of length of service, if the veteran was discharged for, or died in service of, a disability incurred in service in line of duty. This act provides that the widow must have married the soldier prior to September 1, 1922. Thirty dollars per month is paid to the widow or the remarried widow during widowhood. Six dollars per month additional is paid to each minor child under 16 years of age. A remarried widow, if divorced from a subsequent husband, has title if divorced on any ground except adultery on the part of the wife. In the event of the death or remarriage of the widow, or a forfeiture of the widow's title for any reason, the pension shall continue from the date of such death, remarriage, or forfeiture to the minor child or children, if there be any, until the age of 16 years. The child takes the $30 pension in addition to the $6 pension in this event.

COST OF BILL

The Veterans' Administration, reporting on this bill, estimated that approximately 2,000 widows would be paid a pension at a cost of approximately $739,000 for the fiscal year of 1940, increasing gradually to affect a maximum of 8,300 widows, at a possible ultimate cost of $3,067,000. The increased cost is questioned by the representatives of the United Spanish War Veterans. It is the contention of that organization that it could not possibly affect more than 3,500 persons, at a maximum additional cost of $1,000,000. The bill was reported unanimously by the Committee on Pensions.

CONSENT CALENDAR

THE PAINTING OF THE SIGNING OF THE CONSTITUTION

The Clerk called House Joint Resolution 224, to authorize the painting of the signing of the Constitution for placement in the Capitol Building.

Mr. KEAN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, until we have our finances in better shape, I shall have to object to these little extravagances. I object.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman withhold his objection for the moment?

Mr. KEAN. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my objection to permit the gentleman from Illinois to make a statement, but reserve the right to object.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, I may say to the gentleman from New Jersey that we are now celebrating the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the Constitution. We have in the rotunda of the Capitol a great painting of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. A great many people feel that the signing of the Constitution was a greater event than the signing of the Declaration of Independence. I do not necessarily agree with that, but that the signing of the Constitution was one of the great events of our history there can be no doubt.

After going over this carefully last year and again this year the committee arrived at a unanimous report. We cut the price from $35,000 to $30,000, which is as low as any first-class painter would do the job for; and we did something else, instead of naming some one man to make the selection we appointed a commission composed of the Vice President, the Speaker of the House, and the Architect of the Capitol to pass on the matter, and we instruct them to consult with the Fine Arts Commission in the selection of the man who shall do the painting.

It does seem to me that where the amount is so small and where the occasion is so important that we ought not to let our idea of economy become one of parsimony.

I am sure the gentleman will not object when I suggest to him that among the most permanent works in the world are the paintings of the world. When the National Gallery of Art is opened down here we shall see paintings 700 years old in as fresh and beautiful condition today as they were the day the artist finished them. The event of the signing of the Constitution certainly ought to be painted at the present time while we still hold these portraits together. We have portraits of all but two signers of the Constitution, I understand. They have been gathered with a great deal of care from families here, there, and yonder, and unless we go through with this proposition at this time we will probably lose this benefit. I may say to the gentleman further that I have no possible interest in it aside from feeling that it ought to be done.

Mr. KEAN. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Resolved etc., That a commission consisting of the Vice President of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and the Architect of the Capitol be, and is hereby, created and authorized and directed to employ an artist to paint upon canvas (approximately 20 feet by 30 feet in size), at a price not exceeding $35,000, a painting of the scene at the signing of the Constitution. The said painting shall be subject to the approval of the Joint Committee on the Library and, when so approved, shall be mounted in a space in the Capitol Building to be selected by the commission.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 8, strike out "$35,000" and insert "$30,000."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PURCHASE OF COAL AND WOOD FOR PUBLIC USE IN DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 2751, to repeal sections 3711, 3712, and 3713 of the Revised Statutes, which relate to the purchase in the District of Columbia of coal and wood for public use, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That sections 3711, 3712, and 3713 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 40, sec. 109) are hereby repealed.

SEC. 2. Those parts of the acts making appropriations for the Treasury and Post Office Departments approved March 15, 1934 (48 Stat. 425), May 14, 1935 (49 Stat. 218), June 23, 1936 (49 Stat. 1827), May 14, 1937 (50 Stat. 137), and March 28, 1938 (Public, No. 453, 75th Cong.), which provide "That the requirements of sections 3711 and 3713 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 40, sec. 109) relative to the weighing of coal and wood and the separate certificate as to the weight, measurement, or quantity of coal and wood purchased shall not apply to purchases by the Procurement Division at free-on-board destination outside of the District of Columbia" (U. S. C., title 40 sec. 109a), are hereby repealed.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SIMPLIFICATION OF ACCOUNTING

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4830, to amend the act approved April 27, 1937, entitled "An act to simplify accounting."

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc. That the act approved April 27, 1937 (Public, No. 57), is amended to read as follows:

"Hereafter, in making payments for commodities or services the quantity of which is determined by metered readings, such as gas, electricity, water, steam, and the like, and for telephone services, where the period covered by the charge begins in one fiscal year or allotment period and ends in another, the entire amount of the payment may be regarded as a charge against the appropriation or allotment current at the end of such period."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS WABASH RIVER, PERU, IND.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4243, granting the consent of Congress to the State of Indiana to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Wabash River at or near Peru, Ind.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the State of Indiana to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge and approaches thereto across the Wabash River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at or near Peru, Ind., in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS MAHONING RIVER, WARREN, OHIO

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4432, granting the consent of Congress to the city of Warren, Ohio, to construct, maintain, and operate a free footbridge over Mahoning River near Stiles Street NW., Warren, Ohio.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the city of Warren, Ohio, to construct, maintain, and operate a free footbridge, and approaches thereto, across the Mahoning River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at or near Stiles Street NW., Warren, Trumbull County, Ohio, in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges and other structures over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS MISSISSIPPI RIVER, ROCK ISLAND, ILL.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4527, to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Rock Island, Ill., to a place at or near the city of Davenport, Iowa.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Rock Island, Ill., to a place at or near the city of Davenport, Iowa, authorized to be built by the city of Rock Island, Ill., or its assigns, by an act of Congress approved March 18, 1938, are hereby extended 1 and 3 years, respectively, from the date of the approval of this act.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS MISSISSIPPI RIVER AT OR NEAR CHESTER, ILL.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4370, authorizing the city of Chester, Ill., to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Chester, Ill.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to promote interstate commerce, improve the Postal Service, and provide for military and other purposes, the city of Chester, Ill., be, and is hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Mississippi River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at or near Chester, Ill., in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act.

SEC. 2. There is hereby conferred upon the city of Chester, Ill., all such rights and powers to enter upon lands and to acquire, condemn, occupy, possess, and use real estate and other property needed for the location, construction, maintenance, and operation of such bridge and its approaches, as are possessed by railroad corporations for railroad purposes or by bridge corporations for bridge purposes in the State in which such real estate or other property is situated, upon making just compensation therefor, to be ascertained and paid according to the laws of such State, and the proceedings therefor shall be the same as in the condemnation or expropriation of property for public purposes in such State.

SEC. 3. The said city of Chester, Ill., is hereby authorized to fix and charge tolls for transit over such bridge, and the rates of toll so fixed shall be the legal rates until changed by the Secretary of War under the authority contained in the act of March 23, 1906.

SEC. 4. In fixing the rates of toll to be charged for the use of such bridge the same shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay for the reasonable cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridge and its approaches under economical management, and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to amortize the cost of such bridge and its approaches, including reasonable interest and financing cost, as soon as possible, under reasonable charges, but within a period of not to exceed 30 years from the completion thereof. After a sinking fund sufficient for such amortization shall have been so provided, such bridge shall thereafter be maintained and operated free of tolls, or the rates of toll shall thereafter be so adjusted as to provide a fund of not to exceed the amount necessary for the proper maintenance, repair, and operation of the bridge and its approaches under economical management. An accurate record of the cost of the bridge and its approaches, the expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same, and of the daily tolls collected shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested.

SEC. 5. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 3, line 7, after the word "tolls", strike out the remainder of line 7 and all of lines 8, 9, 10, and 11, down to and including the word "management."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ARKANSAS-MISSISSIPPI BRIDGE COMMISSION

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 964, creating the Arkansas-Mississippi Bridge Commission; defining the authority, power, and duties of said commission; and authorizing said commission and its successors and assigns to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Friar Point, Miss., and Helena, Ark., and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I have the chairman of the subcommittee explain the proposed amendment on page 7, with reference to the provision to charge tolls. Is it to be presumed that in the event of an emergency or anything of that sort tolls may be charged the Army or War Department for the transportation of troops or anything of that kind over the bridge?

Mr. CHAPMAN. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman is entirely correct in presuming that there is no intention on the part of the committee to leave the way open for either the bridge commission or the States of Arkansas and Mississippi at some subsequent time to attempt to charge the Federal Government tolls for the use of the bridge by troops in times of emergency or public peril.

Mr. COSTELLO. That is satisfactory to me.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. May I ask the gentleman from Kentucky a question? I observe that the committee, in reporting this bill, has reduced the time for the maturity of the bonds originally from 25 to 20 years and the time for refunding the bonds from 50 to 30 years. I should like to ask the gentleman from Kentucky if that embodies a policy of the committee with respect to bridge bills?

Mr. CHAPMAN. I may say to the gentleman from Mississippi that it has been the policy of the committee for some time to discourage long amortization periods. The whole purpose in enacting these bills into law and authorizing the construction of these bridges on which tolls are to be collected is that as soon as possible the bridges will be free bridges.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. With the consent of the gentleman from California, is it the purpose of the committee to embrace similar amendments in all bridge bills to be reported, and similar limitations?

Mr. CHAPMAN. In these reports before the House today there were two bills that involved that question, and a similar limitation has been placed on both of them.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. That is the policy to be pursued by the gentleman's committee?

Mr. CHAPMAN. It is the policy of the committee to make the amortization period just as brief as possible.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Personally, I wish it were that the bonds could be matured not later than 25 years and refinancing in 35 years.

Mr. CHAPMAN. The experience of the committee has been that it is much easier to secure the passage of these bills when that period is short. We have encountered objection to bills in the past because there was a long amortization period. The Members are very insistent on making these bridges free at the earliest possible time.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I believe if maturity were provided at 25 years and the time for refinancing extended to 35 years it would be better and I trust before this legislation has been finally passed that course will be taken.

Mr. CHAPMAN. I thank the gentleman for his suggestion. If the other body fails to concur in this amendment, then that question may be taken up in conference.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain to me by what authority the Congress of the United States seeks to regulate the manner in which the bonds on a bridge will be retired?

Mr. CHAPMAN. I do not know whether I understand the gentleman's question.

Mr. WOLCOTT. In every bridge bill with which I have had anything to do, we seem to regulate the manner in which the bonds shall be retired. If tolls are to be charged, we require that they retire the bonds in a given time, which is good business, of course; but by what authority does the United States Congress or the Federal Government regulate the financial machinery by which the construction of these bridges is undertaken?

Mr. CHAPMAN. Pursuant to the general bridge legislation and the practice of the Congress, all of which is based on the constitutional power of Congress to regulate commerce between the States. The whole purpose of the committee and the whole purpose of the Congress in authorizing the construction of these bridges is to provide for the financing of them in a proper way, so that at the earliest possible date the people will have free bridges.

Mr. WOLCOTT. We know the purpose, of course, but where does the United States Government get its authority to give permission to build a bridge? It is on the assumption that we have control over the navigable streams. Now, what connection is there between the retirement of bonds on a bridge and the navigability of that stream?

Mr. CHAPMAN. That is a very vital part of the bill. The retirement of the bonds and the time in which they shall be retired determines the time when the bridge will become usable by the public without charge. The Congress has exercised that power as a part of its power to authorize the construction and maintenance of bridges across navigable waters and interstate and international boundaries. Its right in this respect has never to my knowledge been questioned.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Does it make any difference to a boat going under a bridge whether the bonds are retired in 30 or 35 years?

Mr. CHAPMAN. These bills are referred to the War Department where navigation is involved, and the War Department has jurisdiction over that feature.

Mr. WOLCOTT. What have bonds got to do with navigation?

Mr. CHAPMAN. Where the question of highways is involved, we refer the bills to the Department of Agriculture, whose Bureau of Roads advises in regard to the effect of the proposed bridge on interstate highway transportation. Certainly that is very important so far as the use of the bridges by the public is concerned.

The Secretary of War deals with the navigation problems and the Bureau of Roads deals with the highway problems. The construction of bridges and retirement of the bonds have an important bearing on the use and enjoyment by the public of our interstate roads.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I wish the gentleman and his committee would explain to me some time what obstacle to navigation a bond issue or the lack of a bond issue is. I cannot see the connection between our authority to regulate traffic on navigable streams and the issuance of bonds to construct bridges over them, and I never have been able to see it. I hope the gentleman and his committee will give some deep study to that question some day. It will be very illuminating.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to facilitate interstate commerce, improve the postal service, and provide for military and other purposes, the Arkansas-Mississippi Bridge Commission (hereinafter created and hereinafter referred to as the "commission"), and its successors and assigns, be, and are hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Mississippi River at or near the cities of Friar Point, Miss., and Helena, Ark., at a point suitable to the interest of navigation, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906, subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act.

SEC. 2. There is hereby conferred upon the commission and its successors and assigns the right and power to enter upon such lands and to acquire, condemn, occupy, possess, and use such real estate and other property in the State of Arkansas and the State of Mississippi as may be needed for the location, construction, operation, and maintenance of any such bridge and its approaches, upon making just compensation therefor, to be ascertained and paid according to the laws of the State in which such real estate or other property is situated, and the proceedings therefor shall be the same as in the condemnation of private property for public purposes in said State, respectively. The commission, its successors, and assigns is further authorized to enter into agreements with the States of Arkansas and Mississippi, and any political subdivision thereof, for the acquisition, lease, or use of any lands or property owned by such State or political subdivision.

SEC. 3. The commission and its successors and assigns are hereby authorized to fix and charge tolls for transit over such bridge in accordance with the provisions of this act, subject to the approval of the Secretary of War, as provided by the act of Congress approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 4. The commission and its successors and assigns are hereby authorized to provide for the payment of the cost of such bridge as may be constructed, as provided herein, and approaches (including the approach highways which, in the judgment of the commission, it is necessary or advisable to construct or cause to be constructed to provide suitable and adequate connection with existing improved highways) and the necessary lands, easements, and appurtenances thereto, by an issue or issues of negotiable bonds of the commission, bearing interest at the rate or rates of not more than 6 percent per annum, the principal and interest of which bonds, and any premium to be paid for retirement thereof before maturity, shall be payable solely from the sinking fund provided in accordance with this act, and such payments may be further secured by a mortgage of the bridge. All such bonds may be registrable as to principal alone, or both principal and interest, shall be in such form not inconsistent with this act, shall mature at such time or times not exceeding 25 years from their respective dates, shall be in such denominations, shall be executed in such manner, and shall be payable in such medium and at such place or places as the commission may determine. The commission may repurchase and may reserve the right to redeem all or any of said bonds before maturity in such manner and at such price or prices, not exceeding 105 and accrued interest, as may be fixed by the Commission prior to the issuance of the bonds. The commission, when it deems it to be to the best interest of the commission, may issue refunding bonds to repurchase and redeem any outstanding bonds before the maturity thereof: Provided, That the refunding bonds shall mature at such time or times, not exceeding 50 years from the date of approval of this act, as the commission may determine. The commission may enter into any agreement with any bank or trust company in the United States as trustee having the power to make such agreement, setting forth the duties of the commission in respect to the purchase, construction, maintenance, operation, repair, and insurance of the bridge, the conservation and application of all funds, the security for payment of the bonds, the safeguarding of money on hand or on deposit, and the rights and remedies of said trustee and the holders of the bonds, restricting the individual right of action of the bondholders as is customary in trust agreements respecting bonds of corporations. Such trust agreement may contain such provisions for protecting and enforcing the rights and remedies of the trustee and the bondholders as may be reasonable and proper and not inconsistent with the law.

Said bonds shall be sold in such manner and at such time or times and at such price as the commission may determine, but no such sale shall be made at a price so low as to require the payment of interest at the rate of more than 6 percent per annum on the money received therefor, computed with relation to the absolute maturity of the bonds in accordance with standard tables of bond values, and the face amount thereof shall be so calculated as to produce, at the price of their sale, the cost of the bridge constructed, and approaches and the lands, easements, and appurtenances, used in connection therewith when added to any other funds made available to the commission for the use of said purposes. The cost of the bridge to be constructed as provided herein, together with approaches and approach highways, shall be deemed to include interest during construction of said bridge, and for 12 months thereafter, and all engineering, legal, architectural, traffic surveying, and other expense incident to the construction of the bridge and the acquisition of the necessary property, incident to the financing thereof, including cost of acquiring lands. If the proceeds of the bonds issued shall exceed the cost as finally determined, the excess shall be placed in the sinking fund hereinafter provided. Prior to the preparation of definite bonds the commission may, under like restrictions, issue temporary bonds or interim certificates, with or without coupons, of any denomination whatsoever, exchangeable for definite bonds when such bonds that have been executed are available for delivery.

SEC. 5. In fixing the rates of toll to be charged for the use of such bridge, in accordance with the act of Congress approved March 23, 1906, the same shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay for the reasonable cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridge and approaches under economical management, and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to pay the principal and interest of such bonds as the same shall fall due, and the redemption or repurchase price of all or any thereof redeemed or repurchased before maturity as herein provided. All tolls and other revenues from said bridge are hereby pledged to such uses and to the application thereof as hereinafter in this section required. After payment or provision for payment therefrom of all such cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating, and the reservation of an amount of money estimated to be sufficient for the same purpose during an ensuing period of not more than 6 months, the remainder of tolls collected shall be placed in the sinking fund, at intervals to be determined by the commission prior to the issuance of the bonds. An accurate record of the cost of the bridge and approaches, the expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same, and of the daily tolls collected, shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested. The commission shall classify in a reasonable way all traffic over the bridge so that the tolls shall be so fixed and adjusted by it as to be uniform in the application thereof to all traffic falling within reasonable classes, regardless of the status or character of any person, firm, or corporation participating in such traffic, and shall prevent all use of such bridge for traffic except upon payment of tolls so fixed and adjusted. No toll shall be charged officials or employees of the commission, nor shall toll be charged officials of the Government of the United States while in the discharge of duties incident to their office or employment, nor shall toll be charged members of fire departments or peace officers when engaged in the performance of their official duties, nor shall toll be charged in movement of the armed forces of the United States.

Within a reasonable time after the construction of the bridge the commission shall file with the Bureau of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture a sworn itemized statement, showing the cost of constructing the bridge and its approaches, the cost of acquiring any interest in real or other property necessary therefor, and the amount of bonds, debentures, or other evidence of indebtedness issued in connection with the construction of said bridge.

SEC. 6. After payment of the bonds and interest, or after a sinking fund sufficient for such payment shall have been provided and shall be held for that purpose, the commission shall deliver deeds or other suitable instruments of conveyance of the interest of the commission in and to the bridge extending between the State of Arkansas and the State of Mississippi, that part of said bridge within Arkansas to the State of Arkansas, or any municipality or agency thereof as may be authorized by or pursuant to law to accept the same (hereafter referred to as the "Arkansas interest") and that part of said bridge within Mississippi to the State of Mississippi, or any municipality or agency thereof as may be authorized by or pursuant to law to accept the same (hereinafter referred to as the "Mississippi interest"), under the condition that the bridge shall thereafter be free of tolls and be properly maintained, operated, and repaired, by the Arkansas interest and the Mississippi interest as may be agreed upon; but if the Arkansas interest or the Mississippi interest, or any other interest hereinabove mentioned, shall not be authorized to accept or shall not accept the same under such conditions, then the bridge shall continue to be owned, maintained, operated, and repaired by the commission, and the rates of tolls shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund of not to exceed the amount necessary for the maintenance, repair, and operation of the bridge and approaches under economical management, until such time as the Arkansas interest and the Mississippi interest, or any other interest hereinabove mentioned, shall be authorized to accept and shall accept such conveyance under such conditions.

Notwithstanding any restriction or limitation imposed by the act entitled "An act to provide that the United States shall aid the States in the construction of rural post roads, and for other purposes," approved July 11, 1916, or by the Federal Highway Act, or by an act amendatory of, or supplemental to either thereof, the Secretary of Agriculture, or any other Federal Department or agency of the United States Government may extend Federal aid under such acts for the construction of said bridge out of any money allocated to the State of Arkansas with the consent of the State highway commission of said State, and out of money allocated to the State of Mississippi with the consent of the highway department of said State.

SEC. 7. For the purpose of carrying into effect the objects stated in this act, there is hereby created the Arkansas-Mississippi Bridge Commission, and by that name, style, and title said body shall have perpetual succession, may contract, and be contracted with, sue and be sued, implead and be impleaded, complain and defend in all courts of law and equity; may make and have a common seal; may purchase or otherwise acquire and hold or dispose of real estate and other property; may accept and receive donations or gifts of money or property and apply the same to the purposes of this act; and shall have and possess all powers necessary, convenient, or proper for carrying into effect the objects stated in this act.

The commission shall consist of six members to be appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture, three of whom are to be residents and citizens of the State of Mississippi and the other three to be residents and citizens of the State of Arkansas. Such commission shall be a public body corporate and politic. Each member of the commission shall qualify within 30 days after his appointment by filing in the office of the Secretary of Agriculture an oath that he will faithfully perform the duties imposed upon him by this act, and each person appointed to fill a vacancy shall file in like manner within 30 days after his appointment. Any vacancy occurring in said commission by reason of failure to qualify as above provided, or by reason of death or resignation, shall be filled by the Secretary of Agriculture, and in filling such vacancy the Secretary of Agriculture shall at all times make the appointment so that the respective States shall at all times have equal representation on said commission. Before the issuance of bonds, as hereinabove provided, each member of the commission shall give such bond as may be fixed by the Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads of the Department of Agriculture, conditioned upon the faithful performance of all duties required by this act. The cost of such surety prior to and during the construction of the bridge shall be paid or reimbursed from the bond proceeds and thereafter such cost shall be deemed an operating expense. The commission shall elect a chairman and vice chairman from its members and shall establish rules and regulations for the government of its own business. A majority of the members shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

SEC. 8. The commission shall have no capital stock or shares of interest or participation, and all revenues and receipts thereof shall be applied to the purposes specified in this act. The members of the commission shall be entitled to a per diem compensation for their services of $10 for each day actually spent in the business of the commission, but the maximum compensation of the chairman in any year shall not exceed $1,200, and of each other member shall not exceed $600. The members of the commission shall also be entitled to receive traveling-expense allowance of 10 cents a mile for each mile actually traveled on the business of the commission. The commission may employ a secretary, treasurer, engineers, attorneys, and such other experts, assistants, and employees as they may deem necessary, who shall be entitled to receive such compensation as the commission may determine. All salaries and expenses shall be paid solely from the funds provided under the authority of this act. After all bonds and interest thereon shall have been paid and all other obligations of the commission paid or discharged, or provision for all such payment shall have been made as hereinbefore provided, and after the bridge shall have been conveyed to the Arkansas interest and the Mississippi interest, as herein provided, or otherwise disposed of, as provided herein, the commission shall be dissolved and shall cease to have further existence by an order of the Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, made upon his own initiative or upon application of the commission or any member or members thereof, but only after a public hearing in the city of Helena, Ark., notice of time and place of which hearing and the purpose thereof shall have been published once, at least 30 days before the date thereof, in a newspaper published in the cities of Helena, Ark., and Clarksdale, Miss. At the time of such dissolution all moneys in the hands of or to the credit of the commission shall be divided and distribution made between the interests of the States as may be determined by the Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads of the United States.

SEC. 9. Notwithstanding any of the provisions of this act, the commission shall have full power and authority to negotiate and enter into a contract or contracts with the State Highway Commission of Arkansas, and the State Highway Commission of Mississippi, the cities of Helena, Ark., and Clarksdale, Miss., or any county or municipality in the State of Arkansas and State of Mississippi, whereby the commission may receive financial aid in the construction or maintenance of the bridge and approaches thereto, and said commission, in its discretion, may avail itself of all of the facilities of the State highway commissions of the State of Arkansas and the State of Mississippi with regard to the construction of said bridge, and the commission may make and enter into any contract or contracts which it deems expedient and proper with the State Highway Commissions of Arkansas and Mississippi, whereby said highway departments, or either of them, may construct, operate, and maintain, or participate with the commission in the construction, operation, and maintenance of said bridge constructed hereunder, and the approaches thereto. It is hereby declared to be the purpose of Congress to facilitate the construction of a bridge and proper approaches across the Mississippi River at or near Helena, Ark., and Friar Point, Miss., and to authorize the commission to promote said object and purpose, with full power to contract with either the State Highway Commission of Arkansas or the State Highway Commission of Mississippi, or with any agency or department of the Federal Government, or both, in relation to the construction, operation, and maintenance of said bridge and approaches.

SEC. 10. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to authorize or permit the commission or any member thereof to create or obligate or incur any liability other than such obligations and liabilities as are dischargeable solely from funds contemplated to be provided by this act. No obligation created or liability incurred pursuant to this act shall be a personal obligation or liability of any member or members of the commission but shall be chargeable solely to the funds herein provided, nor shall any indebtedness created pursuant to this act be an indebtedness of the United States.

SEC. 11. The design and construction of any bridge which may be built pursuant to this act shall be in accordance with the standard specifications for highway bridges adopted by the American Association of State Highway Officials.

SEC. 12. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 3, line 24, strike out "25" and insert in lieu thereof "20."
Page 4, line 13, strike out "50" and insert "30."
Page 7, strike out lines 13 to 20, inclusive.
Page 9, line 2, beginning with the word "and", strike out the remainder of line 2 and down through "management", in line 5, and insert in lieu thereof "as a free bridge."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER AT OR NEAR DELTA POINT, LA., AND VICKSBURG, MISS.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 3224, creating the Louisiana-Vicksburg Bridge Commission; defining the authority, power, and duties of said commission; and authorizing said commission and its successors and assigns to purchase, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Delta Point, La., and Vicksburg, Miss.

Mr. McGEHEE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. PATRICK. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I may say this bill was reported under my name simply because I live nearer the location in question than any other member of the committee. As I understand the situation, the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. MILLS] stated that he introduced a similar bill 2 years ago in the House and that a similar bill was introduced in the Senate, and that bill has been held up in the Senate, by Senator OVERTON, I believe, until action is taken on this bill. The gentleman from Louisiana, whose district is at one end of this bridge, introduced the bill and has knowledge of the facts concerning the matter, and would like, before the bill is passed, to present his facts to the House. The gentleman has asked that I object to the bill's being passed over, which I am only too pleased to do. I have no personal interest in the matter; it is his bill.

Mr. McGEHEE. I thought I had an agreement with the gentleman from Louisiana a moment ago that the bill be passed over without prejudice. If that is not agreeable, then I object to its present consideration.

Mr. MILLS of Louisiana. I corroborate the statement of the gentleman from Mississippi as to his agreement. The gentleman agreed to pass this bill over without prejudice and I agreed I would go on record and favor his position in the matter. However, if it is in order, I should like to make a statement to the gentleman.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi that the bill be passed over without prejudice?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. This concludes the call of all bills eligible for call on the Consent Calendar.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MILLS of Louisiana asked and was given permission to revise and extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. REED of New York asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on tomorrow after the disposition of the legislative business of the day, I may be permitted to address the House for 25 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD by including therein an article by Mark Sullivan.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. CARLSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include therein a memorial from the Kansas Legislature regarding any agreement concerning the importation of livestock and its products from Argentina.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Under a special order of the House heretofore entered, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DOUGHTON] is recognized for 15 minutes.

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, while I appreciate very much the action of the House in giving me unanimous consent to talk today, I have decided not to occupy the time. I thank the House.

The SPEAKER. Under a special order of the House heretofore entered, the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. MARTIN] is recognized for 15 minutes.

THE IMPEACHMENT OF SECRETARY PERKINS

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, the cloak of congressional immunity thrown about Members of Congress, relieving them of outside accountability for their utterances and acts upon the floor of Congress, is not only a very necessary but an imperative protection of the representatives of the people in the discharge of their duties. If they could be so held accountable, Congress could be destroyed by the use and abuse of the outside accountability of Members of Congress.

It is to be regretted, however, that cases arise in which the cloak of immunity thrown about Members of Congress is not accompanied by the veil of secrecy similar to that investing grand jury proceedings for the initial protection of public officials from unjust and unfounded impeachment proceedings.

It is still more to be regretted when, after months of Nation-wide publicizing of unjust and unfounded charges against a public official, the final result is heralded by no blare of trumpets and is scarcely brought to the notice of the public, which for months and months has been fed with promises that a national public official would be shown to have been guilty of high crimes and misdemeanors and of betrayal of public trust, warranting the infliction of the official death penalty.

It is to be regretted that a case which thundered so long and loudly in the index has dwindled to almost less than a whisper in the text.

I refer to the impeachment proceedings against the Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, Commissioner of Immigration James L. Houghteling, and Solicitor Gerard D. Reilly, of the Department of Labor. I want to note at this point the final disposition of this famous case, a case in which the accused had already been tried ex parte on the charges involved in the impeachment proceedings by the Committee on un-American Activities, and the hearings before which committee furnished the material for the charges, as shown by the resolution of impeachment.

The final disposition of the case is to be found in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of Friday, March 24, page 3273. I quote:

> Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on the Judiciary, I present a privileged report upon House Resolution 67, which I send to the desk.
>
> The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.
>
> The Clerk read House Resolution 67.
>
> Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, this is a unanimous report from the Committee on the Judiciary adversing this resolution. I move to lay the resolution on the table.
>
> The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Alabama to lay the resolution on the table.
>
> The motion was agreed to.

That is all.

If any Members were present when the foregoing proceeding was had, and were sitting within earshot, they probably would not have known what House Resolution 67 was. They probably would not have known what was going on. Not that there was any irregularity about the proceeding. It was entirely regular. That is what I complain of, the entire regularity and propriety of the procedure, ending impeachment proceedings against three high officials of the Federal Government on charges of high crimes and misdemeanors, willful violation of their oaths of office, and betrayal of their official trusts.

It probably attracted about as much attention in the press as it did in the House. The acquittal of Government officials on charges of high crimes and misdemeanors is not news. Their conviction would have been front-page screamheads. Such a denouement, Mr. Speaker, I submit does not do justice to the victims of impeachment proceedings. If it were not for the rarity of such proceedings their repetition might well affect the dignity and integrity of the House of Representatives with regard to the public respect and confidence.

It is to be regretted, therefore, that there cannot be some thunder about the verdict as well as the indictment. There is, however, a report to which I wish to make some reference. It is the report referred to as the basis for laying the resolution of impeachment on the table. It is a unanimous report of the House Committee on the Judiciary.

The committee consists of 25 members, 15 Democrats and 10 Republicans. It is a conservative committee. It is a committee which can be charged with holding no brief or harboring no undue sympathy for the Secretary of Labor. No stronger proof could be adduced of the total collapse of impeachment charges than the unanimous report of such a committee.

That such action on the part of the committee was fully justified—not only that, but inescapable—is shown by an examination of the report. It will not be necessary to quote any of the charges made on the floor of the House against the impeached officials. The findings, or rather lack of findings, of the Committee on the Judiciary, sufficiently indicate what the charges were, and I shall only note these:

On page 1 of the report the committee states that it was directed to determine whether, in its opinion, the accused officials, Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor; James L. Houghteling, Commissioner of Immigration; and Gerard D. Reilly, Solicitor, Department of Labor, "have been guilty of any high crimes or misdemeanors which, in the contemplation of the Constitution, requires the interposition of the constitutional powers of the House." And that the committee, "after consideration, unanimously report the same unfavorably, with the recommendation that the resolution do not pass."

The report then proceeds to the specific charges against the accused, that they "were and are guilty of high crimes and misdemeanors in office in manner and form as follows, to wit":

> That they did willfully, unlawfully, and feloniously conspire, confederate, and agree together, from on or about September 1, 1937, to and including the date of the filing of this resolution, to commit offenses against the United States, and to defraud the United States, by failing, and neglecting, and refusing to enforce the immigration laws of the United States—> and that each of them have committed many overt acts to effect the object of said conspiracy—

And so forth—

And so forth. It then appears from the report that much of the investigation centered around the Strecker and Bridges deportation cases, as evidenced by the following quotation on page 4 of the report:

> The committee heard every witness indicated by any of the records or suggested by any person, carefully examined the record in the Strecker case, the files of the Bridges case, the report of the Dies committee, considered all of the evidence therein contained, as well as the testimony of the witnesses, and proceeded to consider the resolution and all the facts and circumstances adduced.

Then follows the findings. Beginning on page 5, I quote:

> After full consideration the committee certifies:
>
> 1. That there is no competent evidence to support the charge of conspiracy.
>
> 2. That there is no competent evidence to support the charge that the accused "unlawfully conspired to defer and to defeat the deportation of Harry Bridges," and there is no evidence to indicate that the taking of the Strecker case to the Supreme Court was for the purpose of delaying the Bridges case.

3. That there is no evidence that the accused conspired together to release Harry Bridges after his arrest on his own recognizance.

4. That there is no competent evidence to support the charge that the accused "have committed many overt acts to effect the object of said conspiracy."

Referring to an implication against the Commissioner of Immigration, growing out of certain letters, the report on page 7 states:

There is no evidence whatsoever to support this implication.

Further, on page 7, the report says:

The accused are not chargeable with any fault that may have been imputable to Mr. Cahill (then deceased), in the absence of evidence connecting them therewith. There is no such evidence.

The last paragraph on page 7, and carrying on to page 8, completely exonerates the officials handling the Bridges case of any dereliction whatever.

Further on page 8 the report says:

5. That there is no evidence that the appeal of the Strecker case to the Supreme Court of the United States was venal or not in good faith.

In my judgment, the next quotation, on page 9, is the most devastating refutation of a charge against public officials that could be condensed into so many words. They were charged with having made an insufficient showing of proof in the trial of the Strecker case. The report says:

From this (the record) it would appear that the immigration authorities in Washington sincerely attempted to do exactly what the author of the resolution now condemns them for not doing.

6. That there is no evidence from which a reasonable inference may be drawn that the accused have failed, neglected, or refused to enforce section 137, United States Code, against other aliens illegally within the United States.

The committee then states that it had investigated certain alien cases called to its attention by the author of the impeachment resolution in support of the charges, and states:

In none did the committee find any evidence of any disposition on the part of the accused to evade their responsibility to enforce the law, or of failing, neglecting, or refusing to enforce the law against any alien.

7 (and final). That, after a careful consideration of all the evidence in this case, this committee is unanimous in its opinion that sufficient facts have not been presented or adduced to warrant the interposition of the constitutional powers of impeachment by the House.

And yet, Mr. Speaker, for months the press and the air in this country were alive with charges that the Department of Labor was exerting its official powers to protect Communists and communism in this country, and was, in effect, in league with Communists and communism. Had this campaign of misrepresentation of the Secretary of Labor and the Commissioner of Immigration been deliberately designed to destroy the confidence of the country in that Department of government, it could not have been more intensively and effectively carried out.

The country had every reason to expect—it had been dinned into their ears day and night for months—that the result of these proceedings would be to convict Secretary of Labor Perkins, Commissioner of Immigration Houghteling, and Solicitor Gerard D. Reilly of charges that they were in league with subversive influences which are seeking to destroy this Government.

Justice could not be done these public officials merely by exonerating them. All fair-minded people should reprobate and condemn the campaign carried on against them, more pregnant with possibilities of danger to our institutions than even the subversive forces they were charged with being in league with. The mountain labored but did not bring forth a mouse. It is not to be wondered at that the now chief law officer of the Nation was branded with communism from the same source.

The word "finis" has been written on this abortive attempt to destroy the first woman ever to have the honor of a seat in the Cabinet. In the interest of history the report should be exhumed from the tomb of a million forgotten documents and embalmed in the imperishable pages of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. I deem it a privilege to perform this service. [Applause.]

Mr. STARNES of Alabama. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I yield.

Mr. STARNES of Alabama. Knowing the gentleman as I do and having a high regard for him personally, I know he does not want to leave an unjust and unfair and untrue imputation in his speech. I want to say to him, as a member of the special committee to which he referred, that at no time did the committee take any action on these impeachment proceedings, commendatory or otherwise. Other members of that committee are present and will bear me out in the statement that that matter was never discussed in our committee, and it in no wise reflects the sentiment or the attitude of that special committee.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I did not say the committee did take any action on these impeachment proceedings. I may say that a large part of the charges were made up of a certain letter. I have not mentioned any names, and I am not going to. All members know what those charges were made up of, and for months the press of the country was full of testimony that was going on before the Committee on Un-American Activities and statements issued thereon, not only smearing Governor Murphy of Michigan and Secretary of Labor Perkins, but other persons of prominence in the Government. Six of the eight pages taken up in the record by the impeachment charges consist of matter from the committee's hearings. Taking the hearings out of the charges, there is nothing left. They went as far as they could, by innuendo and indirection, to smear the President, whose appointees these officials are.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include the statement made by Secretary of Labor Perkins on these impeachment proceedings.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PACE). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, if I may be pardoned for the stereotyped statement, I hold no brief for the Secretary of Labor, and I may add that I have never met the Secretary and have no appointee in or under the Department of Labor. A reading of the brief synopsis in the report disposing of the impeachment proceedings is insufficient to show the utter lack of bases for the impeachment charges. In order that Members or others interested in the case may have a more complete picture, I am, under leave of the House, inserting in the RECORD the Secretary's statement to the Committee on the Judiciary. The bulk of this statement is devoted to the Strecker and Bridges cases, on which the charges against her rested. The statement is factual. As high lights of the statement I shall mention only two things which are characteristic, both from the standpoint of vindicating the accused and demolishing the case of the accuser.

One of the charges against the Secretary of Labor was that she appealed the Strecker case to the Supreme Court for the purpose of delaying the Bridges case. In her statement to the committee the Secretary said:

The United States attorney in the fifth court (circuit court of appeals) recommended that the so-called Strecker case should be appealed from the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to the Supreme Court of the United States. This recommendation was transmitted to the Department of Justice. In that Department the Solicitor General, after study of the case, determined to seek review. The petition for review was filed and was granted by the Supreme Court, thus indicating that in the Court's opinion, as in the opinion of Government counsel, the issues raised by the Strecker case were difficult and important and constituted a conflict of opinion in the lower courts.

So on that charge we find that the appeal was wholly handled by the Department of Justice, outside and beyond the jurisdiction of the Secretary of Labor.

Another serious charge was that the Strecker case was deliberately weakened by the accused. On this the Secretary says:

Neither I nor the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization nor the Solicitor's Office had anything to do with the presentation of this case * * *. My personal attention was not brought to the case until the decision of the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, since it was handled in the lower courts as a purely routine matter between the district director and the local United States attorneys. The district courts which first passed on the case apparently regarded the evidence as adequate to support the deportation order, since a writ of habeas corpus was not only denied by Judge Borah in the District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana (the order subsequently reversed), but also by Judge Martineau in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Arkansas.

Thus, step by step, the Secretary of Labor riddled the tissue of ignorance, prejudice, and misrepresentation which constituted the charges in this case.

One more quote from the Secretary:

The impeachment resolution states that the petition for certiorari (to the Supreme Court) in the Strecker case was drafted in the office of the Secretary of Labor. This is not true. The petition for certiorari was drafted in the Department of Justice and was never submitted to me for approval or disapproval.

But why continue? It would require review of every charge in the articles of impeachment, and all in the same category. Every member of a body which holds in its hands the power of life and death over executive heads of the Government should read both the report of the Committee on the Judiciary, Report No. 311, Seventy-sixth Congress, first session, and the very explicit and temperate statement of the Secretary of Labor.

STATEMENT OF SECRETARY OF LABOR PERKINS BEFORE THE HOUSE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1939

House Resolution 67, which is before your committee, charges that I, as Secretary of Labor; James L. Houghteling, as Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization; and Gerard D. Reilly, as Solicitor of the Department of Labor, have entered into a conspiracy to refuse to enforce the deportation laws of the United States—more particularly the act of October 16, 1918, as amended by the act of June 5, 1920—and to defraud the United States by not deporting one Harry Bridges.

At the outset I want to make it clear that whatever action has been taken in Washington by the Department of Labor in the Bridges and in the Strecker cases there has been no "conspiracy." The action has not been pursuant to an agreement, combination, or conspiracy. The responsibility for the action of the Department of Labor rests directly upon me and cannot properly be placed upon those whom the law makes subordinate to me—that is to say, Mr. Houghteling and Mr. Reilly.

In appearing voluntarily before you today I have three objectives: First, to state to you briefly the principles in the light of which I view my duty to enforce the immigration laws with respect to persons who engage in subversive activities; secondly, to state the precise facts with respect to the case of Harry Bridges, referred to in the resolution before you; and, finally, to state the precise facts with respect to the case of Joseph George Strecker, also referred to in the resolution before you and now pending in the Supreme Court of the United States.

The first point that I want to make clear is this: I believe that the Government should take immediate and effective steps against any person or any organization which offers a clear and present danger to the Government of the United States. Treasonable conduct in subversive action can evoke no sympathy, and I am certainly in favor of the punishment or deportation of anyone who engages in such conduct. And I think this is compatible with a truly American viewpoint in regard to freedom of thought.

I also wish to emphasize that I am not in accord with the principles of the Communist Party. I do not share the economic or political views of the Communists. I regard many of their tactics as an impediment to the efficient functioning of the Government as well as of society at large. I find in their insistence on party authority and their emphasis on class struggle, their conception of a dictatorship of one class, and their oft-repeated contempt for religion the negation of that individual liberty and that development of the human personality for which this country and every democracy must stand.

I turn now from these general remarks to a consideration of the nature of my duties under the immigration laws of this country. And I begin by reminding you of the solemn character of the task that has been entrusted to me. It is not commonly realized that the power which is vested in the Secretary of Labor under the immigration law is in many respects the most serious and the most drastic administrative power vested in any executive officer in our Government. While other officers and commissions are entrusted with the power of decision in respect to matters of property, the Secretary of Labor stands virtually alone among executive officers in his right to restrict personal liberty and freedom of individual action of human beings. The Secretary of Labor has the power, in certain specific situations, not even involving a crime, to issue a warrant for the arrest of any alien in the United States; he has the power virtually to imprison that person; and he has the power to order that person to be sent back to the country of his nationality even though he recognizes that in some circumstances this is tantamount to sending an alien to his death. The Secretary is investigator, prosecutor, jury, and judge. No court tries the case or can intervene except on application for habeas corpus, and then can only review the point of law involved; not the finding of fact.

This unusual and broad authority is exercised by the Secretary of Labor upon average people, not upon people of peculiar strength, power, or malevolence. It is a power which is susceptible of exercise without adherence to those elementary standards of due process of law that are at the heart of our Constitution. Indeed, the serious abuses which have occasionally existed in immigration deportations were reviewed only 7 or 8 years ago by President Hoover's so-called Wickersham commission. The testimony collected by that commission and the report written by it bear ample witness to the necessity of proceeding with restraint and with due regard for historic safeguards against executive absolutism in all cases where this tremendous power over human liberty and human life is exercised.

It is because of the scope of the power and the extent to which it has been abused occasionally that a person charged as I am with the enforcement of the immigration laws must proceed with a sense of the importance of the judicial duty cast upon him. I have imposed restraints upon the arbitrary use of this power and I have sought to build and maintain confidence in our institutions by proceeding in all cases with scrupulous fairness.

And now one more general word before I come to the specific details of the Bridges and Strecker cases. I have sworn to uphold the Constitution of the United States. I took that oath without reservation and I have carried it out to the best of my ability. I have tried to do justice both to citizens and aliens so far as in me lay. I have spent most of my adult life in the service of the people of my country working to improve their living and laboring conditions and at some sacrifice of personal comfort. I have done what I could in time to make this great country of ours a little nearer our conception of the city of God. For 18 years I have served in public office, where my record is an open book. I have consistently favored not only enforcement of law but also a firm adherence to the basic American standards of fair play. I feel confident that whether examined minutely or at large my record as Secretary of Labor will show a consistent purpose not merely to support the ideals of democracy, of orderly government, and of freedom, but a purpose to assure all persons subject to the Government, whether citizen or alien, that those ideals are being carried forward in actual day-to-day practice. I have applied this to my administration of the immigration law and to the case in point.

I turn now to consider the Bridges case and the Strecker case.

Bridges came from Australia to the United States on April 12, 1920. So far as I am aware, no suggestion was made until 1934 that he was subject to deportation under the immigration laws. In 1934, during the longshoremen's strike, some informal requests for his deportation did reach the Department, but these requests were not buttressed by any evidence. For the most part they did no more than ask for the removal from the American scene of a person believed by them to be an undesirable labor agitator. Our investigation showed that Bridges had led up to that time an uneventful life, without a police record, either here or in Australia. He was active in the International Longshoremen's Union beginning in 1934, but he had done nothing forbidden by law. On this state of facts no step could lawfully be taken to deport Bridges.

As I need hardly say to you, as Secretary of Labor I have no general commission or power to remove an alien merely because I believe him to be "undesirable," or because he is believed to be, or is in fact, a labor agitator. I can and am required to direct deportation upon certain grounds specified by Congress, such as that the alien involved has entered the United States unlawfully, or that he has become a public charge, or that he has been sentenced for a crime involving moral turpitude, or that he himself advocates the overthrow of the United States by force or violence, or belongs to an organization which so advocates. In 1934 there was no substantial evidence indicating that Bridges fell within these or similar categories.

Indeed, it appears from page 54 of the resolution which is before you that the author of the resolution does not suggest that the conspiracy which he believes exists occurred until long after 1934, to wit, in September 1937. However, I am trying to give your committee a full report and not a mere technical answer to the charge before you. Therefore, I am giving you my complete recollection of the Bridges case. On this basis of full disclosure I shall proceed.

Between 1934 and 1937 there were a number of inquiries directed to the Department of Labor with the purpose of finding out what the facts, so far as we knew them, were respecting Bridges. In connection with these inquiries, I asked the Immigration and Naturalization Service to prepare for me a memorandum setting forth the facts in our possession. Such a memorandum was prepared and material in it was used to compile a reply which went from this Department to any person who inquired about the Bridges case. The memorandum set forth that there was at that time no evidence that Bridges was a member of the Communist Party or that he believed in or advocated the overthrow of the Government of the United States.

It is entirely likely that Bridges may have seen one of these letters at some time as they were sent to anyone who wrote making inquiry, and several hundreds of such inquiries were received. The memorandum was not in any sense confidential but was prepared for general correspondence. This is the only information with regard to the content of the case that Bridges ever had.

R. P. Bonham, district director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service at Seattle, Wash., on September 22, 1937, made application to the central office in Washington of the Immigration and Naturalization Service for a warrant for the arrest of Harry Bridges on various grounds. Supporting this application there were four depositions which had been taken in Seattle.

When this application arrived in Washington the case was referred to the Solicitor's office for an opinion. The problem it presented was in many respects unusual. It is rare indeed that in a case where an individual is alleged to be a radical who seeks the overthrow of the United States by force or violence all the testimony comes elsewhere than from the alien's own mouth or from written documents which he has prepared or circulated. In the light of the nature of the evidence and of the sources from which it emanated, Mr. Houghteling, the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, felt the need of corroborative or documentry evidence. The solicitor of the Department of Labor, Mr. Gerard D. Reilly, and I after reviewing the depositions were in doubt if the deponents were trustworthy, and, if they were not, whether their testimony could be otherwise corroborated. The bitter factional fight between maritime unions on the Pacific coast had resulted in so many charges and countercharges of a derogatory nature that we thought caution indicated in the evaluation of this evidence. To determine these questions it seemed best to me to instruct Mr. Reilly to proceed to the west coast, there to interview the deponents.

Mr. Reilly did go to the west coast and there held hearings. He then returned to New York on October 18, 1937, to obtain a deposition from Bridges himself. This deposition while squarely denying some of the allegations of the depositions taken on the west coast did not put the matter at rest either in Mr. Reilly's or in my mind.

It was while the Department of Labor was reviewing the case following clues and seeking further evidence in an investigation by R. P. Bonham and others that the Senate Committee on Commerce, then considering general maritime legislation, became interested in Bridges.

On January 22, 1938, in response to an inquiry from a member of the committee, Senator ARTHUR H. VANDENBERG, of Michigan, I wrote a letter summarizing the course of the Bridges case up to that date. Then in February 1938 the solicitor, Mr. Reilly, and I testified with respect to the Bridges matter before the same Senate Committee on Commerce. I am told that at that time Mr. Reilly stated that under the decisions as they then were it appeared as though a prima facie case could be made out against Bridges.

Information as to what Mr. Reilly had testified before the Senate committee immediately became available to the public through newspaper channels. This prompted Bridges, on February 3, 1938, to ask for a specific bill of particulars of any charges we might make against him. To this letter I, of February 8, replied that it was our regular practice to set forth in the warrant the specific charges on which the proceedings in immigration matters are predicated and that we should follow our usual procedure.

On March 5, 1938, Leon R. Fouch, acting district director of the Baltimore district of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, in accordance with instructions from the central office, served upon Bridges a warrant for his arrest. Acknowledgment of that service was made by Bridges and the case was set down for hearing in San Francisco on April 25, 1938.

There is some suggestion, particularly at pages 19 and 20 of the resolution before you that Bridges threatened me and others in the Department of Labor with violence and showed us a want of respect, which led to our following a procedure out of the ordinary. As a matter of fact I have never heard of any threats of violence to myself or other officers of the Department of Labor in connection with the Bridges case, and I am quite unaware of any impertinence shown by Bridges to officials of the Department. I say this merely to indicate that neither through fear nor cowardice were any officials of the Department of Labor at any time swayed from their duty in connection with the Bridges matter.

There has been an implication that in the case of Bridges the accusations made against him not only charged membership in the Communist Party but also accused him of personally advocating the overthrow of government by force and violence. No evidence is cited in support of this, and, as a matter of fact, there is no such evidence. It is possible that the author of the resolution had in mind the same extracts from two or three affidavits which Congressman DIES drew to my attention in open letter on August 30, 1938. These consisted of certain uncorroborated remarks attributed to Bridges in private conversation by two or three of the affiants. These quotations consisted of a derogatory statement with respect to battleships, contemptuous remarks with regard to the President, threatening and intemperate remarks with respect to rival union factions, all of them falling far short of amounting to advocacy of the overthrow of the United States Government by force and violence.

Although the Department of Labor had planned to hold hearings in the Bridges case on April 25, there occurred on April 6, 1938, an event which was not foreseen when Mr. Reilly testified before the Senate Committee on Commerce. The United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, sitting in Louisiana, delivered its opinion in the case of Kessler v. Strecker. This opinion, by one of the Nation's most distinguished jurists, Judge Hutcheson, was to the effect that an alien who was acknowledged to have been a member of the Communist Party was not on that ground deportable under the immigration laws. I was advised by competent counsel that if Judge Hutcheson's opinion in that case was sound it would be impossible to deport Bridges or other Communists on evidence of party membership. Judge Hutcheson's opinion (taken together with recent rulings of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Herndon and De Jonge cases) led to serious doubt as to whether older cases under the immigration law were still a guide and whether they applied to the Communist Party as it now functions. In view of this, the legal advisers provided for me by law, the United States attorney in the fifth court (circuit court of appeals) and solicitor, recommended that the so-called Strecker case should be appealed from the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to the Supreme Court of the United States. This recommendation was transmitted to the Department of Justice. In that Department the Solicitor General, after study of the case, determined to seek review. The petition for review was filed, and was granted by the Supreme Court, thus indicating that in the Court's opinion, as in the opinion of Government counsel, the issues raised by the Strecker case were difficult and important and constituted a conflict of opinion in the lower courts. I might also point out that the decision of the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals was regarded by the press and public as an important opinion. Newspapers interpreted it as holding that Communists were not deportable under the immigration laws. Letters and telegrams were received from civic organizations and veterans' organizations urging an appeal in the Strecker case.

Despite the action of the Supreme Court in granting the application for certiorari the resolution before you impugns the good faith of the Government in seeking a review. The resolution makes certain insinuations which so far as I, who am not a lawyer, can, I should like to discuss:

(1) The resolution states that in the Strecker case the circuit court of appeals did not make a final determination in favor of the alien but merely directed that the case should go back to the district court with instructions to the district judge to hold a hearing de novo to determine what the nature of the Communist Party is. Therefore, the resolution implies that the case did not have to be appealed. But the truth is that the direction by the circuit court of appeals to the district court, far from being a reason for not appealing to the Supreme Court, was an additional reason for seeking Supreme Court review. The circuit court's order in effect transferred from an administrative agency to a Federal district court the duty of receiving evidence and determining the facts with respect to an alien and his deportability. District Judge Borah, to whom the order was directed, told the United States attorney his court had no jurisdiction to do this.

As the Government noted in its brief, this order seems to be contrary to the immigration statutes and seems to be a novel departure from the usual canons of administrative law. On that administrative law issue alone I am told that the case is of such moment that it should be appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States.

(2) The resolution implies that the Strecker case was not so definitely in conflict with decisions of other courts that the case should have been appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States. The Solicitor General of the United States takes a different point of view from the author of the resolution. He determined that a petition for certiorari should be filed with the Supreme Court, and it seems to me that the Supreme Court of the United States in granting the writ of certiorari has in fact agreed with the Solicitor General that there was a serious conflict between the circuits which required decision by the Supreme Court itself.

It is interesting to note that the considered opinion of the Solicitor General after his analysis of the case in determining that a petition for certiorari should be filed coincided with the views of the United States attorney at the time the circuit court of appeals handed down its decision, since he wrote to the Attorney General a few days later recommending the case be carried to the Supreme Court. In his letter he stated that while the circuit court of appeals had made an attempt to distinguish the case before it from the holdings of the seventh circuit and the ninth circuit, that a fair reading of those cases would show that the opinion of the Court was contrary to those holdings and therefore "it may be fairly said that there is a conflict between the circuits involved on the question of whether the Communist Party of America is an organization within the terms of the statute."

(3) The resolution implies that the Government of the United States, by failing to introduce certain so-called "stock exhibits" with respect to communism in this particular case, deliberately weakened the presentation of the issue to the Supreme Court. There are no "stock exhibits" used by the Department in the preparation of deportation cases where communism is an issue. This was apparently a phrase which the author of the resolution extracted from the solicitor's letter to the Attorney General but the resolution fails to quote what the solicitor went on to say, namely, that "I have analyzed the documentary evidence at some length in the foregoing cases in order to show that the proof advanced in these cases, to show that the Communist Party advocated forcible overthrow of the United States Government and circulated printed matter advising the same course of action, did not differ in any material degree from the documents which the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals may have regarded as insufficient." I think a comparison of the documents introduced as evidence in the Strecker case which are set out in pages 33 to 41 of the Government's brief in the Supreme Court with the documents quoted in appendix B of the brief (pp. 80 to 92 inclusive) will bear out the accuracy of this statement.

There was evidence presented before the Department in the Strecker case which showed the teachings of the Communist Party, inasmuch as that it included typical Communist documents containing language and phraseology which in the past has been regarded by the courts as an adequate basis for deportation. Even if additional evidence had been presented, it is doubtful whether it could be called other than cumulative testimony. In the end, the question is whether membership in the Communist Party is membership in an organization that teaches and advocates the overthrow of the Government by force or violence. And Judge Hutcheson's opinion in the Strecker case raises and discusses this point in such a way as to compel the attention of administrative officers determined to act lawfully.

As for the charge that the case was deliberately weakened, I should like to draw the attention of the committee to the following facts. The warrant for Strecker's arrest was issued on November 25, 1933, many years before the Bridges case began. The hearing on the warrant occurred on January 23, 1934, where evidence was presented showing that a Communist Party membership book had been issued to the alien, and that he had made certain admissions under oath to an immigration officer on October 25, 1933. The examining inspector recommended deportation. The board of review ordered the case reopened for introducing into the record exhibits or literature to show that the Communist Party advocated the overthrow by force or violence of the United States Government. At this second hearing the inspector, apparently preferring to present evidence bearing on the current teachings of the Communist Party rather than relying on historic documents which might have been challenged as obsolete, read into the record extracts from a magazine entitled "The Communist," dated April 1934, eighth convention issue, "A magazine of the theory and practice of Marxism, Leninism, published monthly by the Communist Party of the United States of America." Neither I nor the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization nor the solicitor's office had anything to do with the presentation of this case, and the deportation order was not brought to the Secretary's Office for signature until August 14, 1934. My personal attention was not brought to the case until the decision of the fifth circuit court of appeals, since it was handled in the lower courts as a purely routine matter between the district director and the local United States attorneys. The district courts which first passed on the case apparently regarded the evidence as adequate to support the deportation order, since a writ of habeas corpus was not only denied by Judge Borah in the District Court for the Eastern District of Louisiana (the order subsequently reversed) but also by Judge Martineau in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Arkansas.

Whether the case was the strongest possible case which could have been presented on the issue of the significance of Communist Party membership under the immigration laws is a question upon which I, since I am not a lawyer, cannot pass judgment. I can only say that the widely reported opinion of Judge Hutcheson certainly made it clear to me as an administrative officer that the ordinary interpretation placed upon the statute by the Department had been disapproved by his court on such broad grounds that it was impossible to continue to place such construction upon the statute in the fifth circuit and made it very dubious as to whether Communist Party deportations would be sustained in other circuits until the Supreme Court had clarified the issue. An administrative officer is in no position to select an ideal test case for the highest court. He can only obtain a Supreme Court ruling on cases still actually pending which have already run the whole gamut of administrative hearing, administrative order, district court review, and circuit court of appeals decision.

(4) The resolution states that the petition for certiorari in the Strecker case was drafted in the Office of the Secretary of Labor. This is not true. The petition for certiorari was drafted in the Department of Justice and was never submitted to me for approval or disapproval. I do not mean to say that I have any criticism of the Department of Justice's procedure in this regard, for the preparation of such a document does not fall within my duties or privileges.

(5) The resolution states that there has been a failure to present to the Supreme Court of the United States an important issue in the Strecker case which was particularly raised by the warrant of deportation signed by Turner W. Battle, assistant to the Secretary of Labor. That issue is whether Strecker is subject to deportation on the ground that he personally believes in and has advocated the overthrow of the United States Government by force or violence. As a matter of fact, the issue which is alleged to have been kept from the Supreme Court of the United States is squarely presented in the brief filed by the Government in that Court, pages 50 to 55. The Solicitor General, on behalf of the United States, there argues that "there was evidence in the record before the Secretary of Labor to support the finding in the deportation warrant that respondent (i. e., Strecker) believes in and advocates the overthrow by force or violence of the Government of the United States." The issue of membership in the Communist Party was raised particularly, as it was the one raising a conflict between circuit courts.

Summarizing the foregoing, I think it fair to say that there is substantial reason to believe that the Strecker case presents fundamental issues which arise in the interpretation of the Immigration Act of October 16, 1918, as amended by the act of June 5, 1920.

The resolution implies that Bridges and other similar cases should not have been postponed pending the decision of the Supreme Court in the Strecker case, even though the decision of the circuit court held that membership in the Communist Party was not legally grounds for deporting an alien.

This action in postponement was taken on the advice of competent legal advisers and it is the usual administrative practice in order to prevent unnecessary expense and effort in conducting litigation which may turn out to be useless or inadequately developed after the Court has made a decision in a case on appeal.

Also I want to point out to you that there is no hazard to our population or institutions involved in these postponements because of the fact that if Bridges or any other alien at any time takes any action to overthrow the Government of the United States by force or by violence, or if he commits any crime, he can and will be promptly arrested, tried, and punished or deported under the terms and requirements of law.

In this statement I have tried to explain clearly the principles upon which I have acted and the details of the administrative action in the Bridges and Strecker cases. The problems which the immigration laws present are serious, intricate, and of the highest public importance. They affect principally the lives of human beings rather than property. The administration of these laws, because so few restraints on procedure are imposed by law, calls for the most scrupulous application of the principles of fairness, justice, and impartiality inherent in our constitutional democracy. Any miscarriage of justice in human affairs which cannot be corrected is unendurable to the American mind. It is of the utmost importance to see that no such suspicion of injustice is possible. The immigration laws have peculiar significance to the future of our country and it is incumbent upon those who administer them to aim at certain important goals; to preserve for this country its institutions, its ideals, and its Government safe from any foreign forces which present a clear and present danger to the continuance of our way of living; to improve rather than harm the economic and social and moral stability of our population; to promote the assimilation or Americanization of such foreign-born people as lawfully become permanent residents; and to demonstrate to such foreign-born, who together with their families are likely soon to become our fellow citizens, that our American institutions operate without fear or favor and in the spirit of fair play, to the stranger within our gates as well as to the native born.

It is out of this demonstrated capacity of our institutions that is born that confidence, that hope, that self-discipline, that admiration which has resulted in the passionate love of country and devotion to its way of life which characterize both native and foreign-born Americans. The intensity and personal character of this devotion to our country is almost unique in world history and rests upon man's voluntary and almost consecrated association of himself with the ideals of fairness and respect for human personality which he experiences in daily realistic practices of our Government and our society.

It is because I share the confidence of other Americans in the capacity of our institutions to protect me against injustice that I have satisfaction in the consideration of these charges, and my denial of them, by this committee of Congress now considering them. I recognize the right of anyone who has valid evidence of wrongdoing to attack my record or my character and particularly in public office, and I have no resentment. This is also a part of our democratic method to safeguard against administrative absolutism. But I have entire faith and confidence in the capacity and intent of those who are in charge of the operation of our institutions, not only the courts, but the Congress and its committees, to protect me and to secure my rights and my reputation if I have done no wrong. Americans are sensible—steady people and have lively faith that no excitement and no political pressures and no questions of the popularity or unpopularity of a case can interfere with the operation of justice, and that only intelligence and faithfulness will move those persons who stand sworn to be for us, by our consent, judges an office fraught with a deep sanctity. This faith exists and must be confirmed daily by those of us who hold high office so that liberty may not perish from the land.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. PATMAN] is recognized for 30 minutes.

PRESENT ADMINISTRATION COMMENDED

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, I desire to commend the present administration, under the leadership of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, for the many great accomplishments during the past 6 years. I expect to mention before I conclude one problem that has not been solved.

In 1935 we adopted the Social Security Act. By reason of the enactment of that law millions of people are receiving checks monthly from the Government and from the various States. We cannot say too much in praise of the social-security law.

During this administration the farmers have been helped. They are being helped through the Farm Act of 1938 and preceding acts, as well as through the Farm Security Administration, through the Emergency Feed and Seed Loan, through the Production Credit Corporation, which has its associations all over the country; through the Federal land banks and other institutions; and, certainly we owe the administration a debt of gratitude for what it has done for the farmers.

The workers have also been benefited in many ways.

The people are being saved hundreds of millions of dollars a year on their electric charges, and eventually they will receive in benefits what will be equal to $1,000,000,000 a year of savings in electric rates by reason of the yardstick established by T. V. A.

S. E. C. ACT CONSTRUCTIVE

The S. E. C. has been very helpful. I have a neighbor who is a stockholder in an eastern concern. Just before the enactment of this law he received a notice from the company stating that this company—we will call it A—wanted to acquire the stock of company B. A beautiful picture was presented as to how it would help this company and how it would help this neighbor of mine, who was a stockholder.

He very quickly acquiesced and signed a statement that it would be satisfactory with him for company A to acquire company B. Soon after that the S. E. C. law became effective and the S. E. C. required a different statement to be sent out to these stockholders, the statement telling the truth about what would happen. This statement showed that company B was broke, and the president of company A was merely bailing out his brother, who was the owner of company B, and that it was injurious to the company and to my neighbor as a stockholder. The result was that the first questionnaire sent out to stockholders showed every stockholder voting in favor of the acquisition, while on the second questionnaire sent out every stockholder voted against the acquisition. That shows the work that the S. E. C. is doing, by compelling people to tell the truth. So the savings and investments of the people are being protected.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PATMAN. Yes.

Mr. GIFFORD. Before the gentleman leaves the T. V. A. will not you please put opposite the benefits received by the people just what happened to the investors in public utilities?

Mr. PATMAN. Of course I did not ask for this time to talk about the T. V. A., but I will ask the gentleman whether he can justify the billion dollars of overcharge per year to the users of electricity.

Mr. GIFFORD. I do not undertake to justify anything that happened, but what did happen to the millions of investors in public utilities?

Mr. PATMAN. I shall answer that in this way. It was in the public interest, and no one to my mind can defend the other side.

Mr. GIFFORD. And the gentleman feels that the weight of evidence is on his side?

Mr. PATMAN. Yes. Another thing we hear about is the W. P. A. Of course billions of dollars have been spent, and during the debate on the recent bill to appropriate more money for the W. P. A. you did not hear very much about the fine buildings that have been constructed in practically every county and city in America—the school buildings and the buildings of different types—for public purposes. You did not hear very much about the roads and highways and the many other good things done by W. P. A. So the W. P. A. has been worth while and has helped millions of people.

Take the C. C. C. camps. Approximately 3,000,000 young men have gone through these camps. They have come out better citizens by reason of the service that they have experienced. These young men are entitled to credit. Twenty-five dollars out of every $30 that they received each month they sent back home to take care of their loved ones. These young men are to be commended for not only taking advantage of every opportunity to become better citizens, but for helping their loved ones who were in need as well, and certainly the administration is to be commended for that great work.

Banks and insurance companies and railroad companies have been helped, but I shall not discuss them.

The home owners have been helped tremendously. Billions of dollars have been used of Government credit for the purpose of extending the time of payment for home owners and reducing the interest rates, as well as helping people build and purchase homes; and today, my friends, do you know that the average home owner who has a loan of $3,700 on his home will save $1,600 on that one mortgage from the time it was made until he has paid it—$1,600 each. One hundred and seventy-five thousand home owners have been benefited in that way on old construction, and 185,000 have been benefited that way on new construction; and that does not take into consideration the millions of home owners that have been helped indirectly by getting a lower rate of interest through the use of that yardstick which the Government has set up.

MONOPOLY NOT DEALT WITH

The problem that this administration has not dealt with is monopoly. The people in the United States have talked about monopoly for 100 years. We know of certain monopolies and monopolistic practices; we know the ones we should be after. Take, for instance, the patent monopoly. Others could be mentioned, as they are well known. Is there a doubt in anyone's mind about the patent monopoly being detrimental to the interests of the people? Not one Member of the House who would not so testify; and yet we do nothing about it. We talk about monopoly all the time. We want to investigate; we want to study. Why do that? I hope that my remarks will not be taken as critical of the Temporary National Economic Committee, because they are not so intended. That committee is doing a good work, a work assigned to it, and my remarks are not so intended.

Why continue to investigate and study this problem, when we know so many things that could be done to break up monopolies and give the average citizen a better chance?

CONCENTRATION OF MONEY

There is a tendency in this country toward concentration of money and credit. You would think the tendency would be the other way, but that is not so. The tendency is toward concentration. I have here a chart, and it is brought up to the end of 1936. I would have brought it up to the end of 1938, but it would show the same picture up to 1938 that it shows to 1936, so there was no reason why I should change it. In 1921 we had approximately 31,000 banks in this country. Those banks were scattered through the 3,072 counties, and they were able to serve all the people of the Nation; but the number of banks has been decreasing, going down and down, and down, until at the end of 1936 and at this time there are fewer than 16,000—in fact, about 15,000 banks. Most of them were forced out under the Mellon rule from 1921 to 1933. Notice the other line on the chart, which shows resources in millions. In 1920 and 1921, if you follow that line, you will see the resources per bank going up, so that the tendency has been fewer and fewer banks with greater and greater resources.

